

LIBRARY
OF THE
SAN FRANCISCO THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
SAN ANSELMO
CALIFORNIA

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2026

THE BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

FORTY-THIRD ANNUAL CUMULATION

MARCH 1947 TO FEBRUARY 1948 INCLUSIVE

EDITED BY MERTICE M. JAMES

AND DOROTHY BROWN

MANAGING EDITOR
GLADYS M. DUNN

Property of Graduate Theological Union Return to San Francisco Theological Seminary

NEW YORK
THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY

1948

Published 1948
Printed in the United States of America

PREFACE

The forty-third annual volume of the Book Review Digest contains information on approximately 4050 books, published in the United States during 1946 and 1947, with a few published in England and Canada. This is the largest number of books entered in the Digest since 1939. Altho no books of 1948 are included here, reviews for 1947 books have been excerpted from January and February, 1948, periodicals when available.

Due to the merging of The Chicago Sun and The Chicago Times the Chicago Sun's Book Week ceased publication as a separate supplement on September 29, 1947. The book reviews since appearing daily under the heading "Books in the Sun" have been used in the Book Review Digest.

One new publication has been added this year: Music Library Association Notes, published by Music Library Association, Incorporated.

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are made

- Am Anthropol—American Anthropologist. $6. American Anthropological Association, 13 E. 71st St, New York 21
- Am Chem Soc J—Journal of the American Chemical Society. $8.50. American Chemical Society, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.
- Am Econ R—American Economic Review. Paul T. Homan, managing ed. $5; free to members. American Economic Assn, Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill.
- Am Hist R—American Historical Review. Guy Stanton Ford, managing ed. $5; free to members of the American Historical Assn, Macmillan Co, 60 Fifth Av, New York 11
- Am J Psychol—American Journal of Psychology. $6.50. Morrill Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.
- Am J Pub Health—American Journal of Public Health and The Nation's Health. C.-E. A. Winslow, ed. $7. American Public Health Assn, 1790 Broadway, New York 19
- Am J Soc—American Journal of Sociology. Herbert Blumer, ed. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Am Pol Sci R—American Political Science Review. Frederic A. Ogg, managing ed. $6.60; free to members. American Political Science Assn, 450-453 Ahnaip St, Menasha, Wis.
- Am Soc R—American Sociological Review. $4 (to libraries $3) American Sociological Society, C. Taeuber, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D.C.
- Ann Am Acad—Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. Thorsten Sellin, ed. $5; free to members. 3457 Walnut St, Philadelphia 4
- Atlantic—Atlantic Monthly. $6. Atlantic Monthly Co, 8 Arlington St, Boston 16
- Book Week. See Chicago Sun Book Week
- Booklist—Booklist. $5. American Library Assn, 50 E Huron St, Chicago 11
- Bookmark—Bookmark. 50c New York State Library, University of the State of New York press, Albany
- Canadian Forum—Canadian Forum. Eleanor Godfrey, managing ed. $3. Canadian Forum, Ltd, 16 Huntley St, Toronto 5
- Canadian Hist R—Canadian Historical Review. $2. University of Toronto Press, Toronto 5
- Cath World—Catholic World. James M. Gillis, ed. $4. Missionary Society of St Paul the Apostle, 401 W 59th St, New York 19
- Chem & Eng N—Chemical and Engineering News. $4. American Chemical Society, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.
- Chem Eng—Chemical Engineering with Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering. $3. McGraw-Hill Pub. Co. Inc. 330 W. 42d St, New York 18
- Chicago Sun Book Week—Chicago Sun Book Week, 400 W. Madison St, Chicago, Ill.
- Christian Century—Christian Century. Paul Hutchinson, ed. $6. Christian Century Foundation, 407 S. Dearborn St, Chicago 5
- Christian Science Monitor (Atlantic ed)—Christian Science Monitor. $14. Christian Science Publishing Society, 1 Norway St, Boston 15
- Churchman—Churchman. Guy Emery Shipley, ed. $5. Churchman Co, 425 Fourth Av, New York 16
- Class Philol—Classical Philology. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Commonweal—Commonweal. Edward Skillin, jr. and Philip Burnham, eds. $6. Commonweal Pub. Co. Inc. 386 Fourth Av, New York 16
- Crozer Q—Crozer Quarterly. $1.50. Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa.
- Current Hist—Current History. D. G. Redmond, ed. $4. Events Pub. Co, Inc, 108-10 Walnut St, Philadelphia 6
- El School J—Elementary School Journal. R. W. Tyler and others, eds. $3. Dept. of Education Publications, University of Chicago, 5835 Kimbark Av, Chicago 37
- Eng N—Engineering News-Record. $6. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York 18
- Eng Hist R—English Historical Review. 40s. Longmans, Green & Co, Ltd, 43 Albert Drive, London, SW 19 ($10. International News Co, 131 Varick St, New York 13)
- Ethics—Ethics. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Foreign Affairs—Foreign Affairs. Hamilton Fish Armstrong, ed. $5. Council on Foreign Relations, Inc, 58 E 68th St, New York 21
- Geog R—Geographical Review. $5. American Geographical Society, Broadway & 156th St, New York 32
- Hibbert J—Hibbert Journal. 10s. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd, 40 Museum St, London, WC 1 ($2.50. Leroy Phillips, 178 Tremont St, Boston)
- Horn Bk—Horn Book. Bertha E. Mahony Miller, ed. $3. Horn Book, Inc, 248 Boylston St, Boston 16
- J Geol—Journal of Geology. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- J Home Econ—Journal of Home Economics. Helen P. Hostetter, ed. $3. American Home Economics Assn, 620 Mills Bldg, Washington 6, D.C.
- J Philos—Journal of Philosophy. $5. 515 W 116th St, New York 27
- J Phys Chem—The Journal of Physical and Colloid Chemistry. $10. Williams & Wilkins Co, Mt Royal & Guilford Aves, Baltimore 2
- J Pol Econ—Journal of Political Economy. William H. Nicholls and others, eds. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- J Religion—Journal of Religion. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Kirkus—Bulletin from Virginia Kirkus' Bookshop Service. Service basis, 38 Bank St, New York
- Library J—Library Journal. Karl Brown, ed. $6. R. R. Bowker Co, 62 W 45th St, New York 19
- Library Q—Library Quarterly. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Management R—Management Review. James O. Rice, ed. $5. American Management Assn, 330 W 42d St, New York 18
- Manchester Guardian—Manchester Guardian. 78s. Manchester Guardian, 3 Cross St, Manchester; Guardian Newspapers, Inc, 220 W 42d St, New York
- Mod Philol—Modern Philology. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Music Lib. Assn. Notes—Music Library Association, Inc. $3. Music Library Association, Inc., Library of Congress, Washington 25, D.C.
- Nation—Nation. Freda Kirchwey, ed. $6. Nation Associates, Inc, 20 Vesey St, New York 7
- New Eng Q—New England Quarterly. $4. H. Brown, Hubbard Hall, Brunswick, Me.
- New Repub—New Republic. Michael Straight, ed. $6. Editorial Publications, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York 17
- New Statesman & Nation—New Statesman and Nation. 32s 6d. 10 Great Turnstile, London, WC 1 ($7 International News Co, 131 Varick St, New York 13)

- N Y New Tech Bks—New York Public Library New Technical Books. 25c. N Y Public Library, Fifth Av & 42d St, New York
- N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R—New York Herald Tribune Weekly Book Review. $2. N Y Herald Tribune, Inc. Publisher, 230 W 41st St, New York
- N Y Times—New York Times Book Review. $2. N Y Times Co, Pub, Times Square, New York 18
- New Yorker—New Yorker. H. W. Ross, ed. $7. F-R. Pub. Corp, 25 W 43d St, New York 18
- Poetry—Poetry. Marion Strobel [and others] eds. $4. 232 E Erie St, Chicago 11
- Pol Sci Q—Political Science Quarterly. John A. Krout, managing ed. $5; free to members. Academy of Political Science, Columbia University, New York 27
- San Francisco Chronicle—San Francisco Chronicle. P. C. Smith, ed. $21. Chronicle Pub Co, 901 Mission St, San Francisco 19
- Sat R of Lit—Saturday Review of Literature. Norman Cousins, ed. $6. Saturday Review Associates, Inc, 25 W 45th St, New York 19
- School & Society—School and Society. $7; free to members. Society for the Advancement of Education, Inc, 15 Amsterdam Av, New York 23
- School Arts—School Arts. Pedro deLemos, ed. $4. School Arts, Printers Bldg, 44 Portland St, Worcester 8, Mass.
- School R—School Review. R. W. Tyler and others, eds. $3. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Social Educ—Social Education. $3. National Council for the Social Studies, 1201 Sixteenth St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.
- Social Forces—Social Forces. $4. Williams & Wilkins Co, Baltimore 2
- Social Studies—Social Studies. Arthur C. Bin- ing, ed. $2. McKinley Publishing Co, 809-811 N 19th St, Philadelphia
- Special Libraries—Special Libraries. $7. Special Libraries Assn, 31 East Tenth St, New York 3
- Spec—Spectator. The Spectator, Ltd. 30s. 99 Gower St, London, WC 1 ($7. International News Co, 131 Varick St, New York 13)
- Springf'd Republican—Springfield Republican. $5. The Springfield Sunday Republican, Springfield, Mass.
- Springf'd Union—Springfield Union. $9. Repub- lican Publishing Co, 32 Cypress St, Spring- field, Mass.
- Subscription Bks Bul—Subscription Books Bul- letin. $2. American Library Assn, 50 E Huron St, Chicago 11
- Survey—Survey Midmonthly. Paul Kellogg, ed. $4. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York 3
- Survey G—Survey Graphic. Paul Kellogg, ed. $4. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York 3
- Theatre Arts—Theatre Arts. Rosamond Gilder, ed. $5. Theatre Arts, Inc, 130 W 56th St, New York 19
- Time—Time. Henry R. Luce, ed. $6.50. Time, Inc, 540 N. Michigan Av, Chicago 11
- Times [London] Lit Sup—Times Literary Sup- plement. 17s 4d. Times Publishing Co. Ltd, Printing House Square, London, E.C. 4; $4.15. The Times (London), North American Office, 280 Broadway, New York
- U S Quarterly Bkl—United States Quarterly Book List. Joseph P. Blickensderfer, ed. $3.50. The Rutgers Univ. Press, New Brunswick, N.J.
- Weekly Book Review. See N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R
- Yale R n s—Yale Review. Helen MacAfee, managing ed. $3.50. Yale Review, 143 Elm St, New Haven 7, Conn.

In addition to the above list the book Re- view Digest sometimes quotes from Cleveland Open Shelf; Columbia Law Review; Harvard Law Review; Publishers' Weekly; Review of Scientific Instruments; Wisconsin Library Bulletin; Yale Law Journal; and other bulle- tins and papers.

Explanations

The descriptive note is separated from critical notices of a book by a dash.

The plus and minus signs preceding the name of the magazine indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the entire review.

In the reference to a magazine, the first number refers to the volume, the next to the page, the letters to the date and the last figures to the number of words in the review.

Publishers' Directory will be found at the end of this number.

Book Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Literature

Cumulation of monthly numbers March 1947—February 1948

AARONS, EDWARD SIDNEY (EDWARD RONNS, pseud). No place to live. 220p $2 McKay

47-12151

Detective story.

"There are enough tough characters in this story to people a five-foot shelf of tales of murder and mayhem." I. A.

N Y Times p10 D 28 '47 230w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 14 '47

60w

"Racy little number moves with commendable alacrity through pungent and exciting scenes to solution that doesn't quite jell."

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:28 D 20 '47 50w

Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 100w

AARONS, EDWARD SIDNEY (EDWARD RONNS, pseud). Terror in the town. 219p $2 McKay

47-1338

Mystery story

"An inconceivably silly and wild farrago of the more unreal cliches of the detective story." James Sandoe

— Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 30 '47 70w

"A frightening and suspenseful story." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p43 Mr 16 '47 150w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 16 '47

60w

"Grade B."

Sat R of Lit 30:30 F 22 '47 40w

ABBOTT, CHARLES CORTEZ. Financing business during the transition. (Com. for economic development. Research study) 141p $1.75 McGraw

332.742 Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S. Corporations—Finance 46-3931

"This research study analyzes the postwar requirements of business for funds, appraises the adequacy of present sources of funds, and suggests areas in which improved supply is necessary. . . The monograph points up the issues confronting the makers of financial policy. A contribution is made in stating the problems to be faced, the facts, and solutions proposed." U S Quarterly Bkl

Foreign Affairs 25:524 Ap '47 30w

Reviewed by M. D. Ketchum

J Pol Econ 55:369 Ag '47 1050w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:197 S '46 210w

ABBOTT, LEONARD DALTON, ed. Masterworks of government; digests of 13 great classics. (Masterworks ser) 754p $4 Doubleday

320.82. Political science

47-30714

Partial contents: The Republic, by Plato; The Prince, by Niccolò Machiavelli; Leviathan, by Thomas Hobbes; Treatise of civil government, by John Locke; Selections from "The Federalist," by Alexander Hamilton; The State: its historic role, by Peter Kropotkin; The State and revolution, by Nikolai Lenin; Addresses on the League of nations, by Woodrow Wilson.

Booklist 44:71 O 15 '47

"Information on translations used, and exact references to sections extracted would have improved the editing. Recommended for college and university libraries." Walter Hausdorfer

+ — Library J 72:1100 Ag '47 140w

ABBOTT, NABIA. Two queens of Baghdad. 277p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Khaizurān, queen of Bagdad. Zubaidah, queen of Bagdad A46-3799

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"There is much evidence of learning in the book, more than enough, anyhow, to have produced a good study of the subject, if only the principles of history had been honored and the trumpery methods of the modern, psycho-analytical biography avoided." William Thomson

Am Hist R 52:496 Ap '47 1350w

"Miss Abbott's book is one rather for the specialist, and it will be mainly of interest to students of the early 'Abbasid empire. . . Her work is well documented and its scholarship sound."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p159 Ap 5 '47 120w

"Scholarly yet very readable monograph. . . From the variety and the maze of available sources Miss Abbott has gleaned, sifted, and studied the many diverse references to these two startling queens until she has been able to reconstruct their lives so that they appear as real flesh and blood women."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:34 Mr '47 240w

ABEL, CHARLES. Professional photography for profit. 466p $5 Greenberg

770.69 Photography, Commercial 46-11840

"Analysis of photography as a profession. Practical book of instructions and detailed plan for establishing a photographic studio, equipment needed, and operation of various types of photographic studios—home, portrait, commercial, and general-purpose. Costs, records and laws considered. Illustrated. (Library J) Index.

ABEL, CHARLES—Continued

Booklist 43:129 Ja 1 '47
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1626 N 15 '46 70w

ABEL, HILDE. The lake. 175p $2.50 Dodd
47-2145

Psychological novel based on the unhappy relationship between four frustrated people spending a summer vacation at a small lake in Virginia. The four are a young Jewish teacher; her widowed landlady; and the old father and the young son of the landlady.

"This is a truly felt account of psychological relationships in America today." J. T. Farrell
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ap 6 '47
290w

Reviewed by Richard Match
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29
Mr 30 '47 450w

"The Lake' is but 175 pages long, and it is doubtful if the extreme tension, the constant emotional disturbance of the story, could have been sustained for many pages more. As it is, even in its brief course, 'The Lake' at times shows the strain." John Woodburn
N Y Times p12 My 4 '47 450w

"In spite of the fact that the book is written in a lucid and even simple style, the ordinary reader is apt to get a dismayed feeling of having missed something of the author's meaning. Almost everything in the brief narrative contributes to a very evident symbolism, but what the symbolism adds up to is not clear. In any case, a provocative piece of experimental writing."

New Yorker 23:106 Mr 29 '47 120w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 5 '47
310w

ABELARDE, PEDRO EMMANUEL. American tariff policy towards the Philippines, 1898-1946. 233p $2.75 King's crown press
337.91 Tariff—U.S. U.S.—Commerce—
Philippine Islands. Philippine Islands—Economic conditions 47-2368

"A study of the subject during the period of American control of the islands, with candid explanations of the commercial aspects of prohibitive tariffs or limitations on certain articles. Professor Abelarde was at the University of the Philippines before the war in the Department of Political Science. His comments cover a topic that will be much discussed in the future development of commerce between the islands and this country." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. C. Cook
Am Pol Sci R 41:1242 D '47 450w

"An exceedingly detailed and thorough study of the tariff relations between the Philippine Islands and the United States from their beginning to the present time. The author has also analyzed the American economic groups which exerted their influence upon Congress, and the degree of success which they obtained each time the tariff came up for debate. The result is an exhaustive, authoritative and impartial study of the subject." L. A. Mills

+ Ann Am Acad 253:231 S '47 340w
Current Hist 12:499 My '47 70w

Reviewed by A. E. Coons
J Pol Econ 55:477 O '47 1000w

ABELL, ELIZABETH F. Flow to the leaf. 217p
$2.75 Macmillan 47-11834

The Oliver family always "wanted to be somebody." But fate was not kind to this Ohio farm family, and one by one they faced failure.

Only Kit, the sister who ran away, found herself, and later rescued a young nephew from being a slave to the soil.

Booklist 44:134 D 1 '47

"A compassionate picture of the power of possessive feeling for land, the dark unhappiness of frustrations and ambitions, this has a heightened sensitivity for the pull of farming."

+ Kirkus 15:445 Ag 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by Helen Peerless
Library J 72:1192 S 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Anne Richards
N Y Times p33 N 23 '47 230w

"I feel that Miss Abell has worked intuitively and with great understanding, in the dark where the sources of this kind of story must lie. I would not have her do less than she has, or do it any other way. . . Miss Abell did move outward here and there, as in her all-too-brief studies of the sister, Kit, and the boy, Anthony. But the main drama does not flow easily to the leaf; it is submerged in the impersonal family roots." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 30:17 D 27 '47 450w

ABELSON, ANN. Angels' metal. 249p $2.50
Harcourt 47-2901

Novel based on the life in a Catholic college and a group of people who worked or studied there. The central character is Helen Bianchi, who worked her way thru college, and married the college doctor. The second half of the book develops the character of the social climber, Helen; and follows the course of her marriage.

"This is a story that has its faults of overwriting, but that bears evidence of sincerity, of sound understanding of feminine psychology—and that makes no bones about denominational bias."

+ — Kirkus 15:111 F 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by Mary McGrory
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23
Ap 27 '47 470w

"It is a first novel, skillfully written with sharp, sure attack and a vital, realistic style. The author, still in her twenties, gives a penetrating, unsentimentalized picture of the college, the jealousies and bickerings among the students, the inflexible serenity of the faculty. . . The picture of what happens after [Helen's] marriage is a corrosive dedication to a woman's calculated climb up. . . This seems the one flaw in an otherwise excellent novel. Miss Abelson has something to say and says it with individuality and an un-hackneyed viewpoint." Andrea Parke
+ — N Y Times p10 Mr 2 '47 450w

ABEND, HALLETT. The god from the West; a biography of Frederick Townsend Ward. 304p $3.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Ward, Frederick Townsend 47-11279

Biography of Frederick Townsend Ward, an American soldier of fortune who played an important part in the Chinese Taiping rebellion, who is still honored in some parts of China altho he was killed in action in 1862. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:105 N 15 '47

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 14 '48
550w

Kirkus 15:520 S 15 '47 110w

"Although much of the original source material has been lost, the author has done an admirable job in reconstructing his life. Recommended." A. J. Gaines

+ Library J 72:1464 O 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by Rodney Gilbert
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
N 2 '47 1200w

"The author's enthusiasm for his hero is so contagious that some readers will long be haunted by the impression that Ward's Shanghai campaign was the crucial point of the Manchu-Taiping struggle—whereas in reality it was just another local skirmish in the fifteen-year rebellion. But in a biography which does not claim to be definitive, which, moreover, is a fond memorial rather than a biography, such pronounced partiality has its points, too. It may not be fair to compare the dashing, but erratic Ward to the professional Gordon, but the temptation is forgivable. . . And if 'The God From the West' were not such an impassioned attempt to clothe a picturesque opportunist in the mantle of respectability, chances are that it might not have been one-half as interesting." J. G. Hitrec

+ N Y Times p37 N 9 '47 1050w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 23 '47 310w

ABRAHAM, GERALD ERNEST HEAL, ed.
Music of Schubert [Eng title: Schubert]. 342p
$3.75 Norton

780.92 Schubert, Franz Peter 47-30251

"Volume 2 of the series recently inaugurated under Gerald Abraham's editorship with The Music of Tchaikovsky. With the exception of the preface and chapter 7 this book was published in England under the title Schubert in the Music of the Masters series. A symposium of analyses with musical examples, an excellent selective bibliography, and a chronological list of the works which doubles as an index. No general subject index. Includes what is probably the first attempt in English to study the instrumental works in some detail. Material on the songs is arranged by poet." Library J

Booklist 43:289 My 15 '47

Reviewed by Felix Borowski

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Je 29 '47 290w

"Not easy reading. For the serious student." C. K. Miller

Library J 72:812 My 15 '47 120w

"A valuable reference book giving information about any particular work and enlightening us especially about the little-known church and operatic music, steering us through the perplexingly numerous songs." J. N. Burk

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 N 23 '47 700w

"A splendid collection of essays."

+ Theatre Arts 31:76 Je '47 20w

ABRAHAM, GERALD ERNEST HEAL, ed.
Music of Sibelius [Eng title: Sibelius]. 218p
$3 Norton

780.92 Sibelius, Jean Julius Christian 47-11886

Essays by English critics on the style of Sibelius and the various types of music he writes. Contents: Sibelius the man, by Ralph Hill; The symphonies, by Gerald Abraham; The miscellaneous orchestral and theatre music, by R. W. Wood; The chamber music, by Scott Goddard; The piano music, by Eric Blom; The songs, by Astra Desmond; The choral music, by Scott Goddard; Special characteristics of Sibelius's style, by David Cherniavsky. Chronology. Bibliography. Indexed list of compositions.

Booklist 44:146 D 15 '47

"They argue their case ably and interestingly, these writers, but I think that Mr. Wood, in the most extended chapter, lets the cat out of the bag when, discussing the Seventh symphony, he calls it a heroic failure because its ingenious technical plan does not conceal the weakness and unevenness of its thematic material. If Mr. Wood withdrew his reservations and applied this judgment to most of the material of the very best of Sibelius' compositions, I think I could go along with him." Moses Smith

N Y Times p9 D 28 '47 600w

ABRAHAM, DORIS CAROLINE (CARYL BRAHMS, pseud), and SKIDELSKY, SIMON JASHA (S. J. SIMON, pseud) Trottie True. 247p $2.75 Lippincott

47-11421

The Duchess of Wellwater, who had been Trottie True of the Gaiety chorus, recalls episodes from her own rise to fame and fortune as she assists at an English society trousseau tea and wedding. Real characters of Edwardian society and stage are part of the picture.

Booklist 44:172 Ja 1 '48

"Trottie compensates by her own vitality for the lack of plot, the inconsequential dialogue and, above all, for the shadowy existence of the other characters, friends and foes, who gather around her. In the final analysis, it is Trottie who in her own clever but not subtle way adds the glossy touch of neo-Wodehousian humor which always amuses but never convulses the reader." Louise Homer

+ N Y Times p16 D 7 '47 340w

Times [London] Lit Sup p625 D 21 '46 300w

ABRAHAM, WILLIAM MILLER. By the beautiful sea. 224p $2.75 Dial press

47-3615

Expensive Florida hotels and New York city form the background of this novel of marriage. Charles returned from the army expecting to find things much as they had been before. His disillusionment was swift and lasting. His siren wife, a Park Avenue beauty, leads him a wild chase, until he decides to leave her and settle down to writing a serious novel.

Reviewed by Clinton Textor

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Je 8 '47 270w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 116:28 Je 2 '47 200w

"There is considerable excellent writing in this book. Mr. Abrahams knows his blue sea, bougainvillea and barracuda. His descriptive passages show a talent for balanced, neatly styled prose. Unfortunately neither story nor characters are as good as the background. . . The behavior of all the characters in the book is disappointing, for in almost every case their first appearance offers promise." J. D. Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 My 11 '47 550w

"As a study of the ultimate in matrimonial desuetude, the book evokes a certain clinical interest. . . The author relieves this shadowy and trivial drama with an occasional flash of poetic symbolism, which bursts like a bolt of lightning in a dark forest and illuminates the landscape just long enough to show the characters how lost they really are. But then the story closes in again, and we are not sure that we care if any of them find their way out." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p18 My 25 '47 500w

"The author obviously intends to give satirical significance to the tensions and frustrations of these young people, but because he endows the couple with neither credibility nor wit, the sardonic worldliness that characterizes their relations with each other appears a little foolish."

— New Yorker 23:105 My 10 '47 70w

ABRAMS, CHARLES. Future of housing. 428p il $5 Harper

331.833 Housing 46-8659

Study of the whole problem of housing, home building, home ownership, housing projects, etc., which suggests specific remedies. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by M. A. Pond

Am J Pub Health 37:1192 S '47 230w

Reviewed by Joseph Cohen

Am Soc R 12:487 Ag '47 1700w

"Of all the recent books on housing which have given the public different viewpoints on the subject, this volume by Charles Abrams, a recognized authority, contains one of the most comprehensive and constructive approaches with a program for reform in the coming years. . . . The student of the problem can certainly glean much that is new, and the layman can find an interesting and thought-provoking treatise." H. M. Muller

ABRAMS, CHARLES—Continued

+ Ann Am Acad 250:170 Mr '47 440w

Booklist 43:163 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:4 Mr '47

Reviewed by Robert Lasch

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 9 '47 330w

Eng N 138:127 Je 12 '47 440w

"A book not only of value as a background book, but practical, challenging, and striking a sound middle of the road approach between planned housing programs and private enterprising."

+ Kirkus 14:411 Ag 15 '46 170w

Library J 71:1543 N 1 '46 20w

"Written by an authority for specialists but so logically and lucidly written it will appeal to many readers." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:530 Ap 1 '47 80w

"In the substantial portion of the book devoted to a discussion of the genesis and functioning of government in housing, none of the agencies escapes penetrating scrutiny and, more often than not, the malfunctioning of federal legislation appears in all its nakedness. . . . Sharp critical analysis of this sort often yields a purely destructive and negative result. But in this book it supplies important supporting evidence for the last hundred pages or so, which are devoted to solutions. And what makes this book so different from others that have recently appeared is that these recommendations are not general and vague but unusually detailed and concrete." J. P. Dean

+ New Repub 116:40 Ja 13 '47 1150w

"This is a highly readable book which has an appeal for practically any one who lives under a roof or would like to." C. G. Stillman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ja 19 '47 650w

"Here is a well-knit presentation of the nation's housing problem, with a rather comprehensive historical outline and a broad list of suggestions which the author believes might atone for our past 'failures' in this field. It is a timely book." L. E. Cooper

+ N Y Times p28 Mr 30 '47 700w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 7 '47 900w

"Without going 'erudite' or 'scholarly,' [Mr Abrams] leaves the reader with the conviction (and properly) that the book is a simple, factual story of what he has learned from extensive research and years of first-hand knowledge. . . . Most of the book is an examination of the facts. Only in the last seventy-five pages does he outline the ten-point solution he proposes. Few will find this part less than breath-taking." W. W. Wyatt

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 Mr 8 '47 1100w

Springf'd Union p8 Ap 18 '47 180w

"About the past of housing, Mr. Abrams has written an admirable and fairly exhaustive book. This is the first broad survey of the whole field of housing in the United States, as it has developed during the last quarter century. . . . But at the end, where Mr. Abrams seeks to lay a basis for the future of housing, his book becomes something of a disappointment; and the weakness of his program here is due to certain basic contradictions in his own thinking. . . . The fact is that he has concealed, even from himself, his underlying wish to have a fundamental change take place in housing and city development without any effort being made to produce a fundamental change in any other part of our economy. By sticking to the immediately 'practicable'—that which requires no large change of public purpose and policy—he has produced a program that is ultimately self-defeating." Lewis Mumford

+ Survey G 36:166 F '47 750w

Wis Lib Bul 43:50 Mr '47

ABZUG, MARTIN. Seventh Avenue story. 315p $3 Dial press

47-30431

This novel presenting a picture of life in the New York garment industry, tells the story of a young salesman who, when he is rejected by the Army in the last months of the war, goes into business for himself.

"Not an important book, but an interesting picture of a unique section of America." Anne Whitmore

Library J 72:1106 Ag '47 80w

"'Seventh Avenue Story,' in spite of its tough, accurate dialogue and concise form, reminded me less of recent American work of the same genre (dealing with mankind under economic pressure) than of novels that came out of Europe after the first world war and in the '30s. It places the same sympathetic and tragic values on people of exactly life size, with a corresponding and refreshing freedom from heroic self-pity or caricatured cynicism. One feels that Mr. Abzug's attention is directed less toward literary effect than toward a deep and just penetration of the individuals about whom he writes." Richard Spinney

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S 7 '47 550w

"I'm afraid this is just a plain bad book. . . . Mr. Abzug has unquestionably done a lot of research; he seems to know the industry, but his style is so turgid, so dull, so filled with clichés that it fails completely." Merle Miller

— Sat R of Lit 30:18 Ag 30 '47 270w

ADAMS, ABIGAIL (SMITH) (MRS JOHN ADAMS). New letters, 1788-1801; ed. with an introd. by Stewart Mitchell. 281p il $5 Houghton

B or 92

47-11763

These 141 new letters of the wife of John Adams were written to her sister, between the years 1788-1801. They cover the period of her husband's vice-presidency and part of his presidency, and contain much forthright comment on the people and customs of the times. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:150 D 15 '47

Current Hist 14:37 Ja '48 40w

"The distinctiveness of her correspondence does not lie in its mass, though it is considerable for an eighteenth century woman, but in the fact that it is fresh, frank and revealing. This well read daughter of a New England minister, who herself had had no formal education, was neither iconoclastic nor vitriolic." Dumas Malone

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 D 7 '47 1000w

"The letters are as delightful as they are revealing and informative. Though Abigail had no formal schooling, she was brought up in the best tradition of the Puritan clergy, had read much, quoted freely and wisely from the Bible and the English classics, and wrote a lively, informal prose. Her spelling would surprise and enhearten a college freshman. . . . and her grammar was occasionally ungainly. But she could express herself with facility, and gave vivid impressions of her feelings and experiences." John Lydenberg

+ N Y Times p12 N 23 '47 1300w

Reviewed by Adrienne Koch

Sat R of Lit 30:15 D 20 '47 400w

Wis Lib Bul 43:173 D '47

ADAMS, BROOKS. America's economic supremacy; with a new evaluation by Marquis W. Childs. 194p $2.50 Harper

909.81 Economic conditions. U.S.—Economic policy. U.S.—Foreign relations

47-31442

"A survey, written in 1900, of the international situation of those days, containing a reasoned and gloomy forecast of the crackup of Britain as 'the fortified outpost of the Anglo-Saxon world,' of the decay of France as a major nation, and of the rivalry of the United States and Russia for control of the world. Brooks Adams, who was strongly influenced in his political philosophy by his brother Henry, was convinced that America would eventually rise to great power but also felt that our democratic form of government was outdated and would be an inadequate match for an aggressive competitor. Marquis W. Childs has contributed a long interpretation of the chief prophetic points." New Yorker

Booklist 44:111 N 15 '47

Kirkus 15:453 Ag 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 165:421 O 18 '47 1050w

"Mr. Childs' 'evaluation' is suggestive, but it fails to correct the deficiencies of Brooks Adams' own way of looking at things. However, the evaluation enables us to see both Brooks and Henry Adams in gloomy perspective against the prevailing optimism of their times. And Brooks Adams' own estimate of inherent Russian weaknesses can help us to rethink our position of the moment." John Chamberlain

N Y Times p6 O 12 '47 1300w

New Yorker 23:126 O 11 '47 130w

"This kind of writing, which only came into existence towards the end of the nineteenth century, is bound to be developed a great deal more in the years just ahead. Mankind is appalled by the sheer novelty of its world-historical predicament, and the search for precedent, analogy, or any other possible clue to the riddle of human destiny will be pursued with anxiety. We may hope that the Brooks Adams revival can stimulate thought without increasing the mythology of the 'inevitable war,' but the cold steel of his conclusions gives little encouragement to such hope." Vincent Sheean

Sat R of Lit 30:23 N 8 '47 1200w

Reviewed by S. H. Walker

Survey G 36:706 D '47 600w

ADAMS, CASWELL, ed. Great American sports stories. 304p il $3 McKay 796 Sports [47-1720]

Collection of on-the-spot stories and pictures of events in the sporting world from 1908 to June, 1946. Includes some poems on sports, also.

Booklist 43:238 Ap 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '47

"Most of the great reporters of the Hearst papers are represented, and although some of the stories (going back to 1908), are a little dated, some of the pieces are exciting even today."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
Ap 6 '47 110w

"Readers who wish to mull over the 'Golden Era' of sports in the middle twenties will like this book. And those who can't tell a rain check from a trolley transfer will like it if they enjoy good writing." A. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ap 27 '47
200w

ADAMS, ELIHU. Operation homicide. 245p
$2.50 Mill

47-17702

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 2 '47
40w

Kirkus 14:627 D 15 '46 60w

"Mr. Adams's prose is at the pulp, or starting stage. Most frightful example of that in quite some time." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
Mr 16 '47 150w

"The story has good entertainment value even though it does grow exceedingly complicated toward the end." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p38 Mr 23 '47 190w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 9 '47
50w

"Fair."

Sat R of Lit 30:44 Mr 8 '47 40w

ADAMS, MRS EVELYN CRADY. American Indian education; government schools and economic progress; with an introd. by John Collier. 122p maps $2.25 King's crown press
371.975 Indians of North America—Education. Indians of North America—Government relations A47-1010

A brief history of the policies of education used for the Indians of the United States. Altho the study begins in Spanish, French, and English colonial days, the larger part is devoted to the period since 1870. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Read Bain

Am Soc R 12:247 Ap '47 500w

"An interesting introduction by John Collier of the U.S. Indian Service describes this book as 'a carefully factual, a perceptive, and a devoted beginning' in the study of Indian education. This is precisely what it is." Kathleen Coburn

+ Canadian Forum 27:117 Ag '47 550w

"All her information is hearsay. It is not valid. This book reminds me of a bitter remark made about another book written about a river, of which the critic said: 'There is not a drop of water in it!' Of 'American Indian Education,' I, too, can only say: 'There is not an Indian in it!'" M. D. Luhan

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Ja 26 '47
270w

School & Society 65:183 Mr 8 '47 20w

"An interesting, if undocumented, survey." W. W. Brickman

School & Society 65:315 Ap 26 '47 160w

"Mrs. Adams' book is a worthwhile study in its own right. The book is well-written." C. C. Qualey

+ Social Educ 11:141 Mr '47 200w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:53 Mr '47 200w

ADAMS, HAROLD S. Milk and food sanitation practice. 311p il $3.25 Commonwealth fund

614.3 Milk. Food supply. Sanitation 47-4689

"General information on milk and restaurant sanitation for health officials. It appears to have been written for and accomplishes the purposes of giving administrators basic information in these branches of environmental sanitation for which there has been need. The views expressed are fairly representative of modern practice. The eleven appendices contain much additional material in the form of references, information about field equipment and tests, and an outline of a course for the instruction of food handlers." (Am J Pub Health) Index.

"Well written and practical." W. D. Tiedeman

+ Am J Pub Health 37:1347 O '47 100w

"Helpful food-handling information for restaurateurs and health workers."

+ Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

ADAMS, HENRY. The formative years; a history of the United States during the administrations of Jefferson and Madison; condensed and ed. by Herbert Agar. 2v 1067p maps $10 Houghton

973.46 U.S.—History—1783-1865 47-1312

A condensation of the author's nine volume History of the United States, 1801-1817, first published 1889-1891. "Altogether the original history has been reduced to about one-third its size. This has been achieved by dropping out many chapters entirely, cutting out numerous paragraphs, and omitting practically all quotations from source material." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Index.

ADAMS, HENRY—Continued

Booklist 43:257 Ap 15 '47

"It is a dangerous thing to tamper with a classic, and Mr. Agar has unquestionably tampered with one. Yet the classic is still available, and if this abbreviation brings new readers to it, that much is pure gain. But what of the editing itself. This is not, let it be said at once, and with relief, a 'condensation,' a digest, a rewriting. Mr. Agar has omitted but he has nowhere condensed." H. S. Commager

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 16 '47 1450w

Reviewed by Perry Miller

N Y Times p4 Mr 16 '47 900w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 20 '47 90w

Reviewed by R. E. Spiller

Sat R of Lit 30:11 F 22 '47 3800w

Reviewed by H. H. Wagner

Springf'd Union p17 Je 27 '47 190w

Time 49:108 Mr 17 '47 390w

"Mr. Herbert Agar has made it possible for the intelligent general reader not versed in historical techniques to read comfortably Henry Adams's 'History of the United States'. Although I do not care for the title of this revision—other decades were equally 'formative'—Mr. Agar's version seems to me a model of historical condensation and literary tact."

H. M. Jones

+ Yale R n s 36:725 summer '47 350w

ADAMS, HENRY. Henry Adams and his friends; a collection of his unpublished letters; comp. with a biographical introd. by Harold Dean Cater; il with photographs. 797p $7.50 Houghton

B or 92

47-335

"There are about 650 letters in this collection, written to a hundred different people, and they date from 1858 to 1918. The most important are those to his niece Mabel Hooper La Farge, to his closest life-long friend John Hay, and to Rebecca Gilman Rae and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by W. G. Leland

Am Hist R 52:738 Jl '47 1300w

Booklist 43:183 F 15 '47

Reviewed by Walter Johnson

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 F 9 '47 320w

"The hundred-page introduction . . . is the most interesting part of this volume and, for the time at least, the most valuable. Till a definitive biography appears, this introduction will serve as the most informative biographical sketch that we have. . . The documents, now given to the world, fill in gaps in our knowledge at various points, but do not greatly alter our concept of the man. In fact, their bulk is out of all proportion to their interest. There are, of course, many attractive and entertaining letters, especially those which picture life in Washington and in Europe and others which give impressions of travel in many places. There is a good deal of wit, though often wit of a wry and sour sort; and something of wisdom, though wisdom confined within a pretty narrow cycle of ideas. But there is also a wearisome amount of repetitiousness, for Adams (especially as he grew older) was wont to write the same things to different correspondents or to the same correspondent in letters of different dates, and often in practically identical phrase." S. C. C.

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 3 '47 600w

"He mocked at religion, calling himself a 'Conservative Christian Anarchist,' and immersed himself in the great ages of the Faith and evolved a cult of the Virgin. These very contradictions were what made the man lovable to a circle of friends such as few Americans have had. Together with a charming playfulness, a classic felicity of phrase, the ability to write as he talked, and a first-class mind which never stopped trying to educate itself more fully, it is this contradictory temperament which makes this book a constant delight and stimulant." Mason Wade

+ Commonweal 45:470 F 21 '47 2600w

Current Hist 12:239 Mr '47 70w

"There are tender notes, whimsical notes, affectionate notes. And always a sense of a full circle of friends. Good reading for those who enjoy letters."

+ Kirkus 14:292 Je 15 '46 220w

"Excellent biographical introduction stressing Adams' great capacity for friendship and giving details of some of the major friendships which resulted in these brilliant and charming letters. Invaluable contribution to our knowledge of Adams. Of little popular interest, but will be welcomed by all students of Adams, the Adams family and American history. Recommended for larger libraries." George Wakefield

+ Library J 71:1046 Ag '46 130w

"Most people who are familiar with the three volumes of Henry Adams letters already in print will agree with the compiler and editor of this one that no excuse is needed for publishing it. We can easily stand another volume of comparable quality, for this writer is good to read." Dumas Malone

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 F 2 '47 2100w

"Mr. Cater provides a long and informative introduction to the letters. He makes no attempt to probe the roots of Adams' morbid psychology or to estimate Adams' intellectual contributions. But he discusses the reasons for and the effects of Mrs. Adams' suicide in a healthy manner, avoiding the reticence which has hampered biographers and critics. And he deserves special praise for his success in breathing life into this outwardly cold Bostonian and in revealing the friendliness and human sympathy that underlay the cynicism and intellectualism for which Adams is best known. The letters give no final answer to the puzzle of Henry Adams; nor do they add anything material to our knowledge of his methods of work or his philosophy of history. But they are truly first rate, in the best tradition of the eighteenth century, and they will take their place in the front rank of American letters." John Lydenberg

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 19 '47 1500w

Reviewed by Hamilton Basso

New Yorker 23:103 Mr 29 '47 1800w

Reviewed by Edith Jones

San Francisco Chronicle p21 F 2 '47 350w

Time 49:102 Ja 20 '47 1100w

U S Quarterly Bk 3:144 Je '47 320w

Wis Lib Bul 43:36 F '47

"For 'Henry Adams and His Friends' Mr. Cater has written what I think is the best short study of Henry Adams as a person anywhere to be found. . . In private life Henry Adams was doubtless an amiable gentleman, but the total impression of these letters read as a book is that he was a very 'ornery' person, indeed. One is also depressed by the narrow social circle in which Adams moved, and one longs for some sign of contact with a dirt farmer, a labor leader, a rancher, or a ward heeler to bring health and simplicity into this group of precisians. Of course, there are both wisdom and reflection in these pages. Comment on public issues is frequently wise; and Adams's remarkable insight, amounting to a sense of prophecy, appears here as elsewhere." H. M. Jones

+ — Yale R n s 36:726 summer '47 500w

ADAMS, JOEY. From gags to riches. 336p il $2.50 Fell

B or 92 Vaudeville

46-3224

A mixture of autobiography and jokes, written by a night-club and vaudeville entertainer, whose progress has been from Brooklyn, thru the Broadway vaudeville houses, to a suite at the Waldorf-Astoria. Illustrated with cartoons and line drawings.

"There is a note of sincerity behind the quips and clowning in these pages. . . 'From Gags to Riches' is strictly from ham, but Joey Adams knows how to slice it."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21
Ja 12 '47 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p5 D 1 '46
50w

ADAMS, ORVILLE L. Diesel operation and maintenance. 366p il $5 Prentice-Hall 621.436 Diesel engines 46-8199

"Practical book useful for the layman or as a text in trade schools and technical institutes. Covers basic principles and procedures, including methods and techniques of maintenance operation and repair of Diesel engines. Includes inspection methods and guides to trouble-shooting. Contains instructions on diagnosing fuel oil and lubricating problems. Lubricating oil specifications, tables, and formulas." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:388 Mr 1 '47 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:7 Ja '47

ADAMS, SAMUEL HOPKINS. Banner by the wayside. 442p $3 Random house 47-1795

The story of Durie Andrews, founding, and Jans Quintard, ex-Harvard student, who belonged to a theatrical troupe touring the Erie Canal country a hundred years ago.

Booklist 43:255 Ap 15 '47

"The Erie Canal and its borders during this swaggering decade have been exploited in fiction before: in several books by Walter D. Edmonds, and in 'Canal Town' by Adams. But the picture of strolling players in New York State is fresh and authentic and makes the book a worthwhile addition to the literature of American historical fiction." Robert Halsband

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Mr 9 '47
900w

"Unusual material this, but Mr. Adams has been so carried away by the fascination of his decor that his plot emerges second best. . . Plenty of incident but very little suspense for a story whose claim to fame (in the record of Samuel Hopkins Adams) lies in the faithfulness to regional and period details."

Kirkus 15:38 Ja 15 '47 250w

"Highly readable, it will be popular. Has permanent theatre value. Recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:387 Mr 1 '47 80w

"Mr. Adams can make the days of the Erie Canal as contemporary as last week and as exciting as the prospects of Saturday night in Brooklyn. The adventures of Jans Quintard and Endurance Andrews make a story which will enchant any one, and it has a way, as it rolls along, of throwing an oblique and penetrating light on one of the surging periods of American expansion and development. It has the same relation to reading that ice cream has to eating—rich, healthful, tasty and appropriate at any time for anybody." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Mr 16 '47 1250w

"Possibly more of interest than the plot is the setting, a labor of love, research, humor and picaresque imagination. . . Mr. Adams has created a zestful version of the life on both sides of the footlights. Where the data gives out, his fancy more than fills in." Catharine Brody

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 16 '47 270w

"A satisfactory and very readable mixture of breezy, old-fashioned plot and humor, set against a solid historical background."

+ New Yorker 23:117 Mr 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 30:57 Ap 12 '47 330w
Wis Lib Bul 43:82 My '47

ADAMSON, JOHN WILLIAM. Illiterate Anglo-Saxon, and other essays on education, medieval and modern. 168p il $2.75 Macmillan

370.4 Education—Great Britain. Education, Medieval 47-3861

"Some of the book relates to the education of the Middle Ages, but a large part is relevant to modern times." School & Society

Reviewed by Angela Cave
+ Cath World 166:181 N '47 650w

Reviewed by D. H. Moseley
Commonweal 46:147 My 23 '47 420w
Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 24 '47 240w
School & Society 65:213 Mr 22 '47 20w

"This reviewer found chapters IV-VI the most interesting, possibly because they are not the most erudite." W. W. Brickman

+ School & Society 65:315 Ap 26 '47 120w

"Professor Adamson seeks to combat the 'readiness to belittle the attainments of former generations' and so to emphasize the contribution of earlier scholars and earlier institutions to the modern educational system. He has provided a readable introduction to a complex subject which is seldom made attractive to those who are not specialists, and his book should be read by all teachers, by all who aspire to be teachers and by all who claim to be interested in the development of culture and learning."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p138 Mr 29 '47
950w

ADDAMS, CHARLES SAMUEL. Addams and evil; an album of cartoons; with an introd. by Wolcott Gibbs. $2.75 Random house

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 47-31259

A collection of cartoons, many of them from the pages of the New Yorker, picturing the adventures of nightmarish humans living in a world of terror and evidently having a good time of it.

"If there is social significance in 'Addams and Evil,' the only thing to do is shudder and laugh it off. This can be done simultaneously. In a superb gallery of contented cretins, Charles Addams has gone about as far as imagination and wit can travel artistically in this direction—hovers diabolically on the macabre brink." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7
D 7 '47 230w

"It is all part of an inverted world, where African medicine men sneak sulfanilamide into their ritual, while modern physicians use jungle masks. . . Somewhere Charles Addams foresees the end of his and our crazy world, and he prepares for it accordingly. . . It is a fitting ending for an apostle of doom, and his inexplicably, wonderfully amusing book." W. G. Dooley

+ N Y Times p16 O 5 '47 550w

Reviewed by Allan Worth
San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 30 '47
150w

"Gothic has gone to the artist's head, and a rash of drawings of a haunted castle inhabited by a sinister half-breed, a ruined and haggard beauty, a child with six toes and a shambling gorilla-giant of a servant is the result. Mr. Addams is strongly attracted to witch-doctors and witch brews prepared on midnight heaths under a gibbous moon, and he can disturbingly convey the impression that, lunatic and monstrous as everything undoubtedly is, it is yet close to twentieth-century earth, and that Nightmare Lane leads directly into Fifth Avenue."

Times [London] Lit Sup p592 N 15 '47
240w

ADDISON, HERBERT. Hydraulic measurements; a manual for engineers. 2d ed rev & enl 327p il $5 Wiley

532.5 Hydraulics. Stream measurements [46-22988]

"This work is a well-known manual of the methods and instruments for making such hydraulic measurements as depth, head, pressure, weight, velocity, and rate of discharge. It is intended chiefly for engineers. The author makes no claim of substantial changes in this second edition; nevertheless enough material has been added throughout the book to necessitate resetting the type and to increase the number of pages by twenty-six over the first edition published in 1940. The bibliography has also been revised to include books and papers published since 1939." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

ADDISON, HERBERT—Continued

Booklist 43:293 My 15 '47
N Y New Tech Bks 32:10 Ja '47

ADE, GEORGE. Permanent Ade [his] living writing; ed. by Fred C. Kelly. 347p $3 Bobbs 817 47-30391

These selections from Ade's works include many of the Fables in slang, some other stories and essays, and two plays: Marse Covington, and The Sultan of Sulu.

Booklist 44:65 O 15 '47
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 24 '47 60w

"Mr. Kelly was certainly right to include 'Effie Whittlesy' in what he calls 'the living writings' of George Ade. I'm not so sure about the essays or the plays. As an essayist, George can be almost tiresome. His plays are of interest only to the literary historian. But 'Effie Whittlesy' sings. . . . He is at his best in the fables. They satirize not only manners and customs, but the enduring foibles of human nature. The moral lines, with which they end, often detonate with power." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 22 '47 800w

"Ade's style is as fresh and vigorous as though he had written yesterday. His works, though largely out of print, are still in steady demand. Recommended." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 72:1104 Ag '47 80w

"Ade, forty-odd years past the peak of his tremendous vogue, comes off rather well. His 'Fables in Slang,' apart from their eccentric capitalization have an economy of characterization, and crispness of narration, and a satiric bite that puts the moderately indulgent reader in mind of Mark Twain." Russell Maloney
+ N Y Times p6 Ag 24 '47 280w

"The Permanent Ade' is not one of the most satisfactory of the recent volumes of selections from the work of American writers. . . . The specimens of Ade's non-slang writings are probably representative, but they seem rather feeble today. One would rather have had an omnibus collection of the various series of Fables, all now, it appears, out of print." Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 23:80 S 6 '47 1800w
Wis Lib Bul 43:150 N '47

ADLAM, THOMAS NAPIER. Radiant heating. 472p il $6 Industrial press 697 Heating 47-1027

"First comprehensive manual on radiant or panel heating as applied both to domestic and industrial buildings. Information on basic principles involved and design and instructions in installation of all types of systems, based on American and European practices. Other applications of radiant energy are covered in chapters on use of heating coils for snow melting and radiant cooling and air conditioning. Drawings, charts and photographs." Library J

Eng N 139:135 J1 10 '47 80w
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:225 F 1 '47 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:9 Ja '47

ADLER, CYRUS, and MARGALITH, AARON MORRIS. With firmness in the right; American diplomatic action affecting Jews, 1840-1945. 489p $4 Am. Jewish com, 386 4th av, N.Y. 16

296 Jews—Political and social conditions. U.S.—Foreign policy 46-6072

"This book appeared originally under the title 'American Intercession on Behalf of Jews in the Diplomatic Correspondence of the United States, 1840-1938,' and was published as Volume 36 of the Publications of the American Jewish Historical Society, in 1943. In the present enlarged edition, two new chapters are added. The first is an introductory chapter which discusses the main principles that guided American foreign policy in the subjects treated in the book; it also gives a summary review of the whole subject matter according to countries. The second new feature is the last chapter which deals with the years 1938 to the conclusion of the United Nations Conference on International Organization held in San Francisco in 1945. In this chapter geographical treatment was discarded in favor of treatment by subject." (Pref) Index.

"The authors present the facts surrounding each diplomatic action simply and clearly, and they quote extensively from the state papers themselves. The method of presentation is very effective; the record speaks for itself more eloquently than extensive commentary could possibly have spoken for it." W. J. Ronan
+ Am Pol Sci R 41:379 Ap '47 300w

Reviewed by James Burnham
Ann Am Acad 251:210 My '47 400w

"This is not propaganda but a well documented scholarly history."
+ Christian Century 64:178 F 5 '47 100w

"The historian will here find much valuable material, and the general reader will want to refer to these pages for clarification of much that has been done as well as of much more that is not being done these days in realizing the dream of the Jews for a homeland in Palestine." K. M. Chworowsky
+ Churchman 161:19 F 15 '47 260w

Reviewed by I. G. Matthews
Crozer Q 24:273 J1 '47 750w
Current Hist 12:237 Mr '47 20w
Foreign Affairs 26:224 O '47 20w

"The volume is hard going, in a sense. Page after page of documented misery numbs the brain. For this reader the most pointed lesson lay in the expressions of wonder that such barbarisms were possible in so enlightened an age as the nineteenth century. Read by the light of fires from the still smoldering German Goetterdaemmerung, they possess an irony that lies too deep for tears." Thomas Lask
+ N Y Times p16 F 16 '47 470w

ADLER, MORTIMER JEROME, and others. Works of the mind. See Heywood, R. B., ed.

ADSHEAD, GLADYS L., and SHAPIRO, GEORGE. Seventeen to sing; pictures by Decie Merwin. 48p $2.50 Oxford 784 Children's songs

"Seventeen songs for little children. . . . The chief feature is twofold: little children can easily sing them and they are worth singing. Subjects are within the scope of four-year-olds and will not be outgrown by the tenth year: Valentine's Day, choosing a pumpkin for Halloween, sights and sounds of early spring, bees buzzing, kittens purring, the wind that can make a little child think he's flying, a small bird singing, babies in snow-suits catching crystals on their mittens. For every song [there] are pictures in pink and gray, acting it out. The book was tried out on the North Shore Country School in Winnetka, Ill., a city from which much has come for school children, and already the whole of this lower school, from four years up, has it by heart." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Booklist 43:192 F 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 9 '47
230w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 29 '47
210w

"The music is well adapted to the voices of young children in kindergarten and primary grades, while the words and pictures will shed sweetness and light in schools and homes."

+ Horn Bk 23:117 Mr '47 80w

Kirkus 15:30 Ja 15 '47 190w

"Recommended as a luxury item for children's libraries." B. W. Bell
+ Library J 72:229 F 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
F 23 '47 150w

"A collection ranging from good to doubtful numbers. As no suggestions are given as to what songs have been found best for what ages the user must make her own experiments. This is made difficult as the music many times is mature for the accompanying words. In some instances both the words and music seem beyond the understanding of the usual sixth grader." Lois Palmer

N Y Times p29 F 16 '47 190w

AFFELDER, PAUL. How to build a record library; a guide to planned collecting of recorded music; with a foreword by Sigmund Spaeth. 256p $3.50 Dutton

789.9 Phonograph records. Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation 47-11504

"A non-critical, annotated catalog of phonograph records arranged in order of increasing 'difficulty.' Notes are of the appreciative-program variety devoted only to the music and not testing worth of the recordings as such. Chapter headings ('Starting an Adventure,' 'Accent on Rhythm and Melody,' 'Music for the Experienced Listener,' and 'On Your Own' indicate method and structure. There are useful suggestions for a basic library and chapters on the manufacture and care of records." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:129 D 1 '47

"Paul Affelder's book is a crystal-clear job, distinguished by a healthy absence of pretense." Studs Terkel

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 N 2 '47
140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

"A valuable guide book for adventures in listening, for all pocketbooks and tastes."

+ Kirkus 15:495 S 1 '47 120w

"It is worth noting that although author is a Columbia man, Victor records are listed with apparent impartiality. This is not one of those books of music appreciation issued under the silent sponsorship of one or the other of the two companies that we have suffered in the past." Leonard Burkat

+ Library J 72:1611 N 15 '47 130w

"Unfortunately the author has forgotten to grade his remarks, and this diet is also accompanied by musical baby talk. Much of the commentary is merely odd. . . At other times it is both odd and repulsive, as when he says that the D Minor of Franck is a 'magic' symphony and that its 'soaring melodies and rich, almost haunting harmonies have a wonderful inspirational quality about them, producing an exhilarating effect.' The last quotation will serve as a fair example of Mr. Affelder's prose. For the rest it may be said that he has neither secure taste nor sound judgment." Ralph Bates

— + Nation 165:566 N 22 '47 330w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 14 '47
120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:171 D '47

AGUS, JACOB BERNARD. Banner of Jerusalem. 250p $3 Bloch

B or 92 Kook, Abraham Isaac Ha-Cohen 47-518

"The subtitle of this book is 'The Life, Times, and Thought of Abraham Isaac Kuk, the late Chief Rabbi of Palestine.' . . The subject of the book was born in the small Jewish town of Grieve in the border province of Kurland, northwestern Russia, in 1865, and died in Jerusalem in 1935. He lived and died an orthodox Jew. . . The life of this eminent rabbi almost spanned the time from the rise of the modern Zionistic movement to the violence of the Jewish radicals of Palestine who are now attempting to get by force from Britain what they have been unable to secure by persuasion." Crozer Q

Christian Century 64:81 Ja 15 '47 100w

"An exceedingly instructive study of modern Judaism in general, but of Zionism in particular. . . Rabbi Kuk was evidently a man of great strength of character and the deepest piety. The several chapters of the book dealing with his mystical experience remind one of the inward spirituality and tenderness of many of the psalms in the Old Testament. They should be of interest to any student of mysticism. The fact that the thought moves in the vocabulary of the cabala does not obscure its essential features. The biographer presents Kuk as the first Jewish literary mystic, which may be relatively true, but I would suggest Philo of Alexandria as a notable predecessor." S. V. McCasland

+ Crozer Q 24:177 Ap '47 1000w

AHL, FRANCES NORENE. Audio-visual materials in the high school; with special applications to the social studies. 165p $2.50 Christopher 371.335 Moving pictures in education.

Visual instruction. Social sciences—Study and teaching 46-8175

"Deals with general problems and their correction if the program is to be developed in the schools." School & Society

School & Society 65:446 Je 14 '47 20w

Social Studies 38:96 F '47 20w

AIKEN, CONRAD POTTER. The Kid. 34p $2 Duell

811 Blackstone, William—Poetry 47-31193

"In William Blackstone, a forgotten 17th century New Englander, Aiken has found what he considers 'the true prototypical American.' Blackstone's spirit is in the pioneers who wanted freedom and privacy in a country big enough to hold them and his same spirit is in those 'who struggle for it in the darker kingdoms of the soul.' Into this long poem, a ballad in strange disguise, come visions of Audubon, Johnny Appleseed, Kit Carson and Billy the Kid; Melville, Whitman, Henry Adams and Emily Dickinson." Library J

"The Kid may be somewhat disappointing in its final effect but it is the development of an interesting and ambitious theme set to lively music." Gerald MacDonald

Library J 72:1195 S 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by R. P. Blackmur
N Y Times p6 D 7 '47 900w

New Yorker 23:111 O 4 '47 90w

Reviewed by Alfred Kay
+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 28 '47
200w

"Throughout all the poems runs a quiet eloquence, a restrained rhetorical quality which at its best impresses by technical accomplishment and persuasive imagery but which often fails to communicate more than a surface meaning because of undue facility." David Daiches

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:60 D 6 '47 550w

AIR FORCE (periodical). Air force diary; sel. and ed. by James H. Straubel. 492p $3.75 Simon & Schuster

940.544973 World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations 47-4778

"111 stories from the official service journal of the USAAF" (Subtitle) grouped under the headings: One man's war; The missions; Blisters and water wings; From the ground up; Super stuff; World trolley; Shoptalk; Three years over Europe; Air war in the Pacific; Everyman's peace.

Booklist 44:65 O 15 '47

Reviewed by Serrell Hillman

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 J1 27 '47 230w

Kirkus 15:269 My 15 '47 120w

"The excerpts here collected are not fine literature. Some are poorly written; others lack point and polish. But the impact of this book is terrific. It is highly recommended for those who wondered how young men could find the courage to fly through flak to Berlin or over vast seas to Tokyo; and, although it deals with a war just ended, it speaks ominously of the future." J. A. Michener

+ — N Y Times p1 J1 20 '47 1750w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 31 '47 210w

AIRCRAFT year book for 1945; Howard Mingo, editor; official publication of Aeronautical chamber of commerce of America, inc. 27th ed 683p il $6 Lanciar

629.13 Aeronautics—Yearbooks (19-13828)

"The Aircraft Year Book, first issued in 1919 by the Manufacturers' Aircraft Association, has been a publication of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America since 1922, either under its own imprint or through another publisher. This is the second year of publication by Lanciar. Sponsorship, contents, and the inclusion of a large number of advertisements indicate that the Aircraft Year Book is primarily intended for those who make aviation a business. More than half of the volume consists of chapters reviewing various aspects of the previous year in aviation. Some of these deal with the war, and others with the activities of federal agencies and trade organizations. An account of the year's work of the various manufacturers with descriptions of many plane models comprises several chapters. About thirty pages of 'Flying Facts and Figures' follow the main text. This statistical section has been expanded considerably, as compared with other recent issues of the Year Book. In most of the statistical tables, figures are complete through 1944." Subscription Bks Bul

"The volume on the whole is well indexed. . . Its detailed information about manufacturers makes the Aircraft Year Book indispensable for business libraries. Other libraries will find in it a good collection of aviation statistics and a useful summary of aeronautical developments in 1944, particularly as they concern technical improvements in plane models. It is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 17:11 Ap '46 370w

AIRMAN'S almanac, 1945; ed. by Francis Walton. 512p $2; pa $1 Farrar

629.13 Aeronautics—Yearbooks (45-3244)

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"The conception of scope as the air age, not merely aviation, is illustrated by the inclusion of the standard chart of Basic English words. Such material is irrelevant from the library point of view, but not perhaps for the individual purchaser. . . . Precise evaluation of much of the material is not easy. Articles are unsigned and some bear the marks of careless compilation. Most of the articles on technical subjects such as meteorology seem to be so limited as to be of value only to small libraries which might not have more detailed information. . . . The index is extensive, but not without inconsistencies and omissions. . . . In spite of the shortcomings mentioned, the Airman's Almanac includes extensive information of popular appeal in convenient form and at modest cost. It will answer more general questions about aviation than will a single volume of the Aircraft Year Book, because of the latter's concentration on a single year. The Airman's Almanac is recommended for libraries as well as for individual purchase."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 17:12 Ap '46 600w

AISTROP, JACK CHARLES RICHARD. Lights are low. 231p $2.75 Farrar, Straus

47-4505

A novel based on life at the headquarters of a British control unit on the outskirts of Hamburg, one year after V-E day. It pictures the conditions of that life: the serving staff of Germans and displaced persons; the black markets; the hunger; and the barter.

"Lacking a definite focus, this is neither effectively documentary—nor tellingly dramatic—for all its feeling of authenticity."

+ — Kirkus 15:243 My 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by H. W. Hart

Library J 72:960 Je 15 '47 70w

"Apart from its fictional interest this is a novel that ought to be read by everybody who wants to get an idea of what life in post-war Germany is like. It is a sobering experience." Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 21 '47 300w

Reviewed by Stephen Stepanchey

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 O 26 '47 450w

"Mr. Aistrop's technique, which is original without being at all mannered, is a kind of narrative shorthand that strips the story of all but essential incident, letting dialogue carry the bulk of the action. But it must be admitted that such a method appeals chiefly to those for whom the obvious emotional fireworks are not necessary. 'The Lights Are Low' is, by its nature, a curiously unfulfilled work which achieves its power through purity of style and at the expense of formal completeness." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p12 Je 22 '47 470w

"Good though Mr. Aistrop's intentions are, in fact, he seems to have missed much of the imaginative point of his experience through the too prompt desire to make a book of it."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p137 Mr 29 '47 240w

AKERS, DWIGHT. Young Turkey; il. by Christine Chaplin. 208p $2.50 Putnam

47-4018

Story of a Lenape Indian boy living in the highlands along the Hudson river in the days before the white man arrived. Because he thoughtlessly killed a rattlesnake Young Turkey became involved in a series of experiences, partly real and partly unreal, as he strove to propitiate the spirit of Achgook.

"A book that makes a contribution to background reading; but I question boys' staying with it. . . . The story is a good one, but it is overbalanced by the scholarship."

+ — Kirkus 15:191 Ap 1 '47 150w

"Popularity of the book is questioned, for the average reader may find himself bogged down by too many details." Margaret Miller

Library J 72:1040 J1 '47 70w

"Reading this story of the boy whose name, as it begins, is Young Turkey is like listening to some ancient Indian storyteller passing on to another generation a tale more ancient than he. For Mr. Akers has so thoroughly identified himself with the Lenapes and their concept of the spiritual quality not only of human life, but of the life of all creatures, that complicated as this concept may seem when it is explained, he lets one sink into it and find it simple." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 J1 6 '47 330w

"The organization of this material will perplex most young readers, for the involved story veers from objective experience to dreams and visions, and back again without clearly marked transitions. Young Turkey himself seems almost as shadowy as the spirits and manitos he encounters. However, the nature descriptions are admirable, as is the flowing poetic style." N. B. Baker

N Y Times p20 J1 27 '47 150w

ALBERTY, HAROLD BERNARD. Reorganizing the high-school curriculum. 458p il $4 Macmillan

373 Education, Secondary—Curricula, High schools 47-3860

"This volume is designed to afford some help in the clarification of educational purposes and in the determination of appropriate learning activities. Since it is concerned with both purposes and the implementation of purposes, it may be regarded as having a bearing upon philosophy, curriculum, and methods. The author believes that there is an organic unity among these three concepts. . . . The volume is addressed to the administrator, the teacher in service, and the student who is preparing to teach." (Pref) Bibliographies. Indexes.

Booklist 44:45 O 1 '47

School & Society 65:446 Je 14 '47 20w

Reviewed by L. R. McDonald

School R 55:433 S '47 1100w

ALBRAND, MARTHA, pseud. See Loewengard, H. H. F.

ALBRIGHT, HARRY DARKES. Working up a part. 224p il $2.50 Houghton

792 Acting 47-11316

A manual for the beginning actor. Contains instructions on analyzing the part; rehearsing; and playing the part. Appendices include primers of stage directing and theatre aesthetics for the beginning actor; suggestions for study and memorization; a glossary and bibliography; and some drill selections. Indexes.

"Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:1471 O 15 '47 40w

"H. D. Albright accomplishes his avowed purpose of outlining a sound and practical approach for the beginner. This is good news for student actors, teachers of dramatics and the general public who attend amateur productions. . . . Mr. Albright avoids confusing the young actor with complicated theories and mystical methods. He handles his subject with clarity and concentrates on fundamentals." Dorothy Sands

+ Theatre Arts 32:63 Ja '48 450w

ALDANOV, MARK, pseud. See Landau, M. A.

ALDINGTON, RICHARD, ed. Great French romances; selected with an introduction. 632p $5 Duell

French fiction—Collections

Contents: The Princess of Cleves, by Madame de Lafayette (first published 1678. English translation by E. Griffith, 1777); Manon Lescaut by the Abbé Prevost (first published 1731. English translation by D. C. Moylan, 1841); Dangerous acquaintances, by Choderlos de Laclos (first published 1782. English translation by Richard Aldington, 1925); The Duchesse de Langeais, by Honoré de Balzac (first published 1834. English translation by Ellen Marriage, 1898).

Reviewed by Peter Quennell

New Statesman & Nation 32:136 Ag 24 '46 2000w

"Of these only 'Dangerous Acquaintances' is likely to appeal to any but students or at least amateurs of literature. The cold-blooded sex-play of the Vicomte de Valmont and the Marquise de Merteuil is still fascinating because it represents perfection in a pattern of behavior that is still seen in all its imperfections; but, from the point of view of popular taste, 'La Princesse de Cleves' is a period piece, 'Manon Lescaut' has for its hero a 'slave of love' whose sentiments strain patience, and 'La Duchesse de Langeais' is Balzac below his best. Aldington's introduction is informed and amusing, and demonstrates, among other things, his proud mastery of American slang." E. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 30:38 F 15 '47 180w

ALDIS, DOROTHY (KEELEY) (MRS GRAHAM ALDIS). Dark summer. 186p $2.25 Parnam

47-18541

Judy Burr, faced with the prospect of possible blindness in one eye, prepares for a miserable summer. But a resourceful mother, two kittens, and some understanding friends make it a very enjoyable holiday, instead. For older girls.

"Dorothy Aldis is concerned with a pattern for living. Inevitably her books present a charming design, founded on her own sound philosophy of life. And since she writes with wit and a kind of elfin humor, her gaiety is irresistible." R. K. O.

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 30 '47 270w

+ Kirkus 15:134 Mr 1 '47 120w

"Judy's courageous attitude toward her trouble should make the book appealing to girls of high school age." M. A. Johnson

+ Library J 72:532 Ap 1 '47 70w

"Dorothy Aldis writes with a light, easy style teen-agers will enjoy and with the kind of understanding that parents will respect." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p40 Ap 13 '47 220w

Spring'd Republican p18A O 12 '47 100w

ALEKSANDER, IRINA. This is Russia; il. by Andrei Hudiakoff. 112p $3 McKay

947 Russia—History—Juvenile literature 47-30534

A Russian-born author now living in America has written the history of Russia in story form for American boys and girls. The history is brought up to 1941.

Kirkus 15:69 F 1 '47 70w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 72:1197 S 1 '47 70w

Sat R of Lit 30:62 N 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 16 '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:134 O '47

ALEXANDER, BEATRICE, pseud. See Raymond, L.

ALEXANDER, SHEILA. Walk with a separate pride. (Itasca Press publication) 166p $2.50 Webb

47-20012

"A story of heart-breaking loneliness and stubborn courage, the story of a young Army wife—who traveled alone the fear-shaded path of first pregnancy and childbirth to real maturity." N Y Times

Reviewed by Robert Halsband

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Mr 30 '47 500w

"In her writing, Sheila Alexander has ignored the usual halo cast around motherhood and attacked her subject with great honesty, simplicity and poignancy. Though practically devoid of conventional plot, her story is nevertheless studded with suspense. In addition, she has brushed in her words with freshness and the delicate colorings of a poet, and she has

ALEXANDER, SHEILA—Continued
that rare quality of making a literate distinction between a character's thoughts and his conversation. The total result is a work of glowing strength and quality." Florence Crowther

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 6 '47 550w

"Mrs. Alexander, who is possessed of a lively imagination, an absorbed interest in every obstetrical detail, and a poetic cast of mind, almost certainly does not speak for the typical expectant mother. It is possible, though, that she has pioneered a rich field that almost any lady author in search of a subject can make her own."

New Yorker 23:113 Ap 19 '47 90w

ALGREN, NELSON. Neon wilderness. 286p $2.50 Doubleday

47-772

Collection of realistic stories about the nightmare lives of the lost and broken people of the Chicago slums.

"It takes a writer of Algren's skill and tenderness and poetic imagination to make the reader care about what becomes of his characters, but he does it magnificently. Beneath each sordid and brutal recital beats the comprehending and compassionate heart." Jack Conroy

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 F 2 '47 550w

"As a collection, 'The Neon Wilderness' has its mountains and valleys: it is both monotonous and uneven. There is so little light here, one story throwing its thick shadow on another, that some of the individual impact is lost. But a few of the stories rise strongly above the monotone and leave a scar on the memory. The best of these, in my opinion, is 'Design for Departure.' . . . I wish Mr. Algren had not fallen in love with the compound adjective 'pavement-colored,' and did not strive so hard for arresting titles. But, uneven as this collection is, it shows Nelson Algren's power, the magnificent anger and indignation with which he articulates the lives of these ruined and invalidated people." John Woodburn

N Y Times p16 F 2 '47 500w

"Mr. Algren is a definite apostle of amorality. Either through environment or inheritance his people are completely devoid of any ability to recognize, let alone live by, conventional standards of so-called good citizenship. Conditioned by struggle, their instincts are all for the end, without even a passing nod to the means. The e. e. cummings trick of no capital letters seems a slight irritant to me. The sometimes special phrases of prize-fighting or of the gangster world make for effortful reading. However, after the initial shudder, the staccato precision of the writing must be read, remembered, and admired." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 F 8 '47 700w

ALLAN, DENISON MAURICE. Realm of personality. 249p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

137 Personality 47-872

"Attempts a synthesis of concepts of philosophy, psychology and religion to explain the nature of man." Cleveland Open Shelf

Christian Century 64:1240 O 15 '47 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '47

ALLAN, FRANCIS K. Invisible bridge. 185p $2.50 Reynal

47-11749

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week N 21 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:611 N 1 '47 170w

"Honesty compels us to state that Charles, whose innards appear to be the main interest, is no Raskolnikov, and that this is no worse than lots of other 'suspense novels.'" Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 D 14 '47 110w

"Detectives, amateur and professional, play a negligible part in the tragic outcome." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p52 N 23 '47 130w

"An interesting job, but far too floridly written."

+ New Yorker 23:140 N 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p30 N 23 '47 100w

"Terrifying portraits of maladjusted personalities, sharp vignettes of New York scenes, good—if strident—writing and generally depressing atmosphere."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 22 '47 50w

ALLAN, GLENN. Little Sorrowful. 256p $2.50 Curl

46-11842

A collection of lively stories of the South Carolina swamp country. The stories are human interest tales, told with humor. All have appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

Booklist 43:132 Ja 1 '47

"All of Allan's stories follow a careful formula. It's a fairy-tale formula, one that lets Mr. Chinnus do such things as wake up from a drunken crap game to find he's won a railroad, or join the Navy in disgrace and come back home the friend and confidant of admirals and the like. It may not be life, but it's fun." Clinton Textor

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 D 29 '46 230w

"The stories are filled with the hopelessness of poverty, superstition, ignorance, treated with understanding and a kindly humor."

Kirkus 14:555 N 1 '46 150w

Reviewed by Margaret Miller

Library J 72:230 F 1 '47 70w

"The people of Little Sorrowful—cracker-barrel philosophers, happy-go-lucky shad fishermen and their alternately nagging and loving wives, wild bucks and purty gals—are quaint, folksy and free-wheeling. In the tradition of the backwoods American humorous tale, theirs is an independent, irreverent attitude toward the wonders of the outer world and a complacent satisfaction with their own. It is a point of view that has produced a Mark Twain—and a Gene Talmadge." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 12 '47 380w

Wis Lib Bul 43:82 My '47

ALLEN, EDWARD FRANK. Dictionary of abbreviations and symbols; over 6000 abbreviations and symbols, commonly used in literature, science, art, education, business, politics, religion, engineering, industry, war. 189p $3.50 Coward-McCann

421.8 Abbreviations 46-8225

"Restricting himself to the principal abbreviations found in the general literature of the English-speaking peoples, Mr. Allen has contrived a fact-filled guide for the reader of the morning paper and the space-cramped letter writer. . . . The metric system, university degrees, citations for valor and liturgical abbreviations can be found in their alphabetical equivalent. Even L. A. W., the League of American Wheelmen, is not slighted. Some symbols have but one meaning, some as many as forty and not necessarily allied. . . . Although he has avoided mathematical formulae and those used in special sciences, Mr. Allen has included symbols used in medicine, commerce, proofreading and auto driving. One of the most useful sections is devoted entirely to the multi-lettered departments of the New Deal." N Y Times

Booklist 43:268 My 1 '47

N Y Times p40 D 8 '46 230w

"This dictionary should be valuable on the desk of anyone who does any writing at all, in almost any field." O. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 5 '47 110w

ALLEN, FREDERICK LEWIS. I remember distinctly. See Rogers, A., comp.

ALLEN, IDA COGSWELL (BAILEY) (MRS W. B. CHAPMAN). Food for two. de luxe ed 339p $2.50 Garden City pub. co.

641.5 Cookery 47-31076

"An intelligent guide for the beginner or the reader who has always cooked haphazardly, since efficiency is the keynote of this cookbook. Emphasizes the use of packaged and prepared foods." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 44:46 O 1 '47

"Filled with cold, uninteresting basic information that is undoubtedly useful; but since it is for young couples who may be just starting to cook, it should have been attractively and excitingly written. Instead, the thorough dullness of the book is enough to drive beginners out to restaurants." H. L. Mason

— N Y Times p56 N 9 '47 70w

ALLEN, IDA COGSWELL (BAILEY) (MRS W. B. CHAPMAN). Pressure cooking. de luxe ed 403p il $2.50 Garden City pub. co.

641.58 Cookery, Pressure 47-30214

Instructions for cooking all kinds of foods with the pressure cooker. Includes recipes; sample meals to show how time can be saved; menus for kitchenette cookery; and ideas for garden suppers and holiday dinners. Indexes.

Booklist 43:249 Ap 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

Reviewed by Lois Palmer

N Y Times p28 My 25 '47 170w

ALLEN, JAMES STEWART. World monopoly and peace. 288p $3 Int. pubs.

338.8 Trusts, Industrial. Economic policy. 46-11969

"The special concern of the study is monopoly capitalism and imperialism, and their past and probable consequences for peace and for national policies. Chapters on monopolies or cartels and their influence in Germany, Japan, the United States, and Britain, with details of the struggles among them for world economic domination, are followed by a favorable interpretation of the Soviet economy and its rôle in world affairs." Am Pol Sci R

"Many remarks and phrases will readily indicate the character of the book and the predilections of the author. 'Monolithic unity of the Soviet system' is a badge of identification. And the statement: 'Soviet society consists of only two basic classes, the working class and the collective farmers, in non-antagonistic and friendly relation to each other.' For that matter, Mr. Allen indicates his position frankly and clearly; and he organizes capably the carefully-chosen material." J. W. Robinson

Am Pol Sci R 41:142 F '47 600w

Reviewed by Wendell Berge

— Ann Am Acad 249:202 Ja '47 360w

Foreign Affairs 25:696 Jl '47 20w

ALLEN, JOHN ROBINS, and others. Heating and air conditioning. 6th ed 667p il $5.50 McGraw

697 Heating. Air conditioning 46-7984

"Designed as a textbook for engineering students or personal study. This edition includes a new section on panel heating and odor-removal apparatus, with numerous revisions in the general text to bring material up to date. Some new illustrations." Booklist

Booklist 43:188 F 15 '47

Eng N 139:135 Jl 10 '47 80w

Library J 71:1051 Ag '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:61 O '46

ALLEN, MERRITT PARMELEE. Spirit of the eagle; decorations by Avery Johnson. 234p $2.50 Longmans

Bonneville, Benjamin Louis Eulalie de— Fiction 47-4699

Adventure story for older boys. Thorp Mason, only survivor of an Indian attack, is tortured, and tattooed with an eagle, and allowed to escape. He joins Captain Bonneville and the Mountain men, and stays with them three years, during which he grows from a green farm boy to an experienced mountaineer.

Booklist 44:52 O 1 '47

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 30 '47 210w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:363 S '47 90w

"There's an immense amount of excellent background material on the exploration by fur traders west of the Rockies, but unfortunately the author sometimes lets his story bog down in his detailed descriptions of the hardships and his extended comments. . . A let-down after Red Heritage—but still well above average of its kind."

+ — Kirkus 15:310 Je 15 '47 120w

"Mr. Allen has introduced to our young people, in biographical fiction more than one hero of the stupendous process of our country's expansion. Now he takes his readers into the midst of one of the most remarkable episodes of our history, makes them friends with a leader unique in our annals, the many-sided Bonneville, and puts them at their ease with heroes who were in their own time almost legendary and are now looming large on the line between folklore and history—the Mountain Men. . . It is the course of the expedition and the character of Bonneville that give the book its high value." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O 19 '47 550w

"If you know an older boy who craves the excitement of pioneering, you will want to earmark a copy of this book for him. . . This is a fine story. The author's historical research has been thorough and accurate." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p27 Ag 24 '47 170w

"This is a good book for today's reading. America's wealth and prosperity were not easily won. Through such a story one realizes the suffering and sacrifice that went into its making."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 S 6 '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:134 O '47

ALLEN, ROBERT PORTER. Flame birds. 233p il $3.50 Dodd

598.34 Spoonbills 47-4360

Account of the author's study of the roseate spoonbill, one of the rarest birds in the United States. He spent twenty-two months in the swamps and lagoons of Florida and Texas, observing the habits of these birds, and attempting to learn how to increase their numbers. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 44:5 S 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '47

ALLEN, ROBERT SHARON. Lucky forward; the history of Patton's Third U. S. army. 424p il maps $5 Vanguard

940.542 U.S. Army. Third army. World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles. Patton, George Smith 47-30945

Detailed history of the exploits of the Third army, during World war II, and a biography of its leader, General George Patton. The author was Patton's G-2 operations executive in the ETO campaigns. Index.

Reviewed by Sherman Miles

Atlantic 180:156 D '47 360w

Booklist 44:103 N 15 '47

Christian Science Monitor p16 S 24 '47 300w

ALLEN, R. S.—Continued

"Sure of heated and bitter argument among the military sets but the average reader will enjoy it for its fine picture of our most picturesque general of World War II."

+ Kirkus 15:417 Ag 1 '47 180w

"Tactics employed in the capture of Metz, the Battle of the Bulge and the crossing of the Rhine are vividly described, but with far too many terms and abbreviations for the layman." Joseph Borome

Library J 72:1187 S 1 '47 110w

"Allen's book is a warm, hard-hitting, partisan story of 3d Army's activities, written by an avowed protagonist who believes, as did many 3d Army men, that he fought with 'the best damned field army in the world.'" R. E. Merriam

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 N 9 '47 1400w

"Since Colonel Allen is a professional writer, the book happily avoids many of the pitfalls of military histories. It is a painstaking and detailed chronicle without being dull. Although Colonel Allen had some noteworthy experiences—including being wounded and losing an arm—he accomplishes the miracle of eschewing the 'I' key on his typewriter entirely." Gladwin Hill

+ N Y Times p6 O 5 '47 650w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 12 '47 750w

"The chapter 'Brains and Guts,' a pen-portrait of Patton, is almost worth the price of the book. Though Allen is no stylist or psychologist, he gives a vivid, two-dimensional, sharply etched, blunt portrait of a fantastically colorful figure who loved war and was honestly and passionately dedicated to the profession of arms." S. K. Padover

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 O 18 '47 900w

Time 50:104 S 29 '47 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:174 D '47

ALLEN, ROBERT SHARON, ed. Our fair city [by Louis M. Lyons and others; introd. by Robert S. Allen]. 387p $3.50 Vanguard

352 Municipal government. Cities and towns—U.S. 47-30142

"The politics of 17 cities of the U.S. described, except in one case, by a resident of the city. As a whole the book is an indictment of the so-called good citizens who refuse to take part in their own government and thus allow themselves to be exploited. The cities discussed are: Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Miami, Birmingham, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, Memphis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver, Butte, Seattle, San Francisco, and Los Angeles." Booklist

Reviewed by A. M. Lee

Ann Am Acad 254:222 N '47 440w

"The main trouble with Our Fair City is that—with the exception of the pieces on Cleveland and San Francisco—it's dull." G. R. Leighton

— Atlantic 179:150 My '47 1100w

Booklist 43:216 Mr 15 '47

"Unlike most symposiums, this book hangs together, the writing is evenly paced and the analyses uniformly penetrating—no mean achievement in itself." J. P. Lash

+ New Repub 116:37 Mr 17 '47 1150w

"Timely and entertaining story. . . 'Our Fair City' is as fresh as tomorrow morning's newspaper." T. L. Stokes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 9 '47 950w

Reviewed by H. J. Bresler

N Y Times p7 Ap 13 '47 650w

Reviewed by Gordon Pates

San Francisco Chronicle p11 F 23 '47 500w

Reviewed by Duncan Aikman

— Sat R of Lit 30:14 Ap 26 '47 950w

Wis Lib Bul 43:64 Ap '47

ALLER, PAUL, and ALLER, DORIS. Build your own adobe. 110p il $3 Stanford univ. press

728.63 Architecture, Domestic. Adobe. Building A47-99

The authors built their own house of adobe brick and here describe the process, from making the bricks to the wiring and plumbing. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 43:219 Mr 15 '47

"The book is a technical manual, if one wants to take it that way. But the ambitious amateur builder should be warned in advance that, if he wants as good a house as the Allers built, he has a real job on his hands, measured in terms of mechanical skill, artistry and solid hard work." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 64:433 Ap 2 '47 280w

"A readable, beautifully presented book." Betty Kean

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 D 28 '46 500w

ALLEYNE, MARGARET. Pig who was too thin; il. by Clifford Webb. 71p $1.50 Warne

Story of the little pig who ate too fast and always stayed thin. He ran away from home when the farmer threatened to send him to market and in the course of his travels learned some valuable lessons. For ages four to six.

"The format of the book is most attractive, with large print and illustrations by Clifford Webb. Children from 4-6 will like it read aloud and third- and fourth-graders will read it for themselves." N. L. Rathbun

+ Library J 72:1380 O 1 '47 70w

"This may not be strictly true to pig-lore, but it provides a happy ending to a comfortable, well-written story which, if not highly original, has the bonus of fine pictures in color and sensitive line by Clifford Webb." E. L. E.

+ N Y Times p27 S 28 '47 130w

Springf'd Republican p8B D 21 '47

90w

ALLGOOD, MARY BROWN. Demonstration techniques. 147p il $3; to schools $2.25 Prentice-Hall

641.07 Home economics. Lectures and lecturing 47-1360

"Presents fundamental principles for conducting successful lecture-demonstrations. The material used is limited to equipment and food-demonstrations only." (School & Society) Index.

"Extension workers, home economists with commercial organizations, and teachers will welcome this book on lecture demonstrations, recognized as one of the oldest and most effective forms of visual education. . . Chapter 8 is somewhat confusing. Preparation of the many foods suggested would exhaust demonstrator and audience. The check list for demonstrations and the score card for judging food demonstrations will interest teachers." M. C. Shepard

+ J Home Econ 39:363 Je '47 220w

School & Society 65:166 Mr 1 '47 20w

ALLIS, MARGUERITE. Water over the dam. 376p $3 Putnam

47-1829

In the 1820's the people of Connecticut were all interested one way or another in the building of the Farmington, Connecticut, canal. Among the interested ones whose whole life became bound up in the project, was young Titus Todd, an orphan boy employed as a clerk in Mt Nebo's general store. This historical romance follows the course of the ups and down of Titus' fortunes as well as those of the canal.

Reviewed by Helen Long
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 24 '47
360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '47

Kirkus 15:10 Ja 1 '47 180w

"Fresh material on a little known period of Connecticut history and a good story besides. Generally recommended." L. M. Kinloch

+ Library J 72:319 F 15 '47 80w

"Quite possibly the records of Connecticut towns might yield up, in one place and another, people and episodes such as those in 'Water Over the Dam.' Here, however, the fiction seems to float unconvincingly apart from the fact. The background of the book is far more interesting than its foreground." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
Mr 16 '47 550w

"Two beautiful girls who look confusingly alike are such a stock source of melodrama that the personal conflict is not very convincing. But whenever the emotional situation gets too dour, the story turns to the more realistic complications of building and running the canal, which engrossed Titus and much of that countryside for many years. These parts, together with details of daily life in New Haven and Mount Nebo and of work on the locks and the boats, are as graphic as memoirs." C. B.

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 16 '47 360w

Springf'd Union p11 My 5 '47 240w

ALLPORT, GORDON WILLARD, and POSTMAN, LEO JOSEPH. Psychology of rumor. 247p il $3.50 Holt

301.15 Rumor 47-4786

"Head of Harvard's psychology department and assistant present first unified and coherent account of rumor, a primary phenomenon of social behavior. A basic textbook reporting on their controlled, experimental investigations and including all relevant information pertaining to rumor—a subject which has had little previous systematic treatment." Library J

"Despite its shortcomings, this volume is probably the most comprehensive and best single work on rumor now available. But what is needed is more field research—empirical data with which the multitude of theories, some with brilliant insights, may be tested." Tomatsu Shibutani

+ Am J Soc 53:319 Ja '48 1450w

Booklist 44:62 O 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 24 '47
90w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 16 '47 600w

"The book is most intelligible to persons familiar with theoretical discussion on the subject, although the listing of old wives' tales that spread like wildfire in times of crises, make interesting reading for the uninitiated." George Streater

+ Commonweal 46:458 Ag 22 '47 500w

"Though scholarly, it is easy and interesting to read. All too little is known concerning this area of social psychology which grows more important as social intercourse broadens and communication increases. This book is essential to any library which accepts the social obligation of furthering human good by encouraging understanding." Harold Lancour

+ Library J 72:1100 Ag '47 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 30 '47
800w

"If you want to know how rumors start, travel, and can be recognized, this book will give you the answers. In it Prof. Gordon W. Allport, and Prof. Leo Postman make an important contribution to our existing knowledge of rumor in peace and wartime." E. L. Bernays

+ Sat R of Lit 30:22 Ag 30 '47 650w

School & Society 65:446 Je 14 '47 20w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 36:488 S '47 1550w

ALMAN, DAVID. Hourglass. 208p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

47-1998

Three Southern white men rape a young Negro woman. The far-reaching consequences of that act are traced in this sympathetic novel.

"At no time does the town—somewhere in the Deep South—come alive, nor the people seem more than stock characters. Occasional fine writing cannot save it."

— Kirkus 15:139 Mr 1 '47 180w

"David Alman is already, at twenty-eight, a novelist of real stature. He has a gift for quiet and effective understatement. His characterizations are subtle. Best of all, he refuses to exploit the sensational elements in his story. The result is a novel of slow absorptive power, somber but honest and compelling." Hiram Haydn

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
My 11 '47 900w

"This is not, at the moment, a fresh theme, but so long as any Negro has difficulty in obtaining justice it is a valid theme of concern to us all. Unfortunately it cannot be said that Mr. Alman, however worthy his subject, has been able to do a great deal with it. He shows once again that race prejudice batters on ignorance and stupidity. He shows how easily it can lead to violence and crime. But he has not been able to present this evident truth in terms of convincing characters who move in a plausible narrative." N. K. B.

N Y Times p20 Jl 13 '47 360w

"No solution to the problem is advanced, but there is the merest hint that a dent is being made in the consciousness of those citizens to whom color is a synonym for hate. The hint is fragile, but it's there." Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Je 29 '47
320w

ALSCHULER, MRS ROSE (HAAS), and HATTWICK, MRS LA BERTA WEISS. Painting and personality; a study of young children. 2v il $10 Univ. of Chicago press

135.7 Child study. Children as artists 47-2399

Considers the possibility of analyzing the emotional reactions of the young child by a study of his or her paintings, done at an age when expressions in words are rare. Includes 120 reproductions in color of the paintings of the children studied. Index.

"These volumes are not stodgy, academic, esoteric studies for the instruction and guidance of psychologists and psychometrists. Nor are they case histories of interest and value to the analyst alone, though certainly Edward Liss, to whom the authors give credit for suggesting the study, must be greatly pleased at the contribution this work makes to his own field. On the contrary, they are extremely readable and interesting volumes concerning the development of the normal child." G. E. Gardner

+ Atlantic 180:124 Jl '47 490w

Reviewed by S. I. Hayakawa

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Jl 13 '47
360w

"This looks like a very large inverted pyramid of erudition precariously balanced upon a very small apex of data. The defenders will say that it is the other way—a body of practical and useful conclusions resting on a solid foundation of scientifically observed facts and tapering to a fine theoretical point. For the present, we leave these two schools of thought to argue it out."

Christian Century 64:832 Jl 2 '47 280w

Reviewed by R. D. Erickson

El School J 47:598 Je '47 800w

Kirkus 15:72 F 1 '47 170w

"This is an important study of young children, an investigation carefully conducted over a considerable period, whose findings are set down in columns like those of an actuary, but it is also a human document planned, like Wordsworth's perfect being, 'to warn, to comfort and command,' though the second feature may not be as immediately apparent as the other two."

ALSCHULER, ROSE H.—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p40
 My 11 '47 450w

"The authors have based their conclusions on their own broad professional experience supplemented by the knowledge of specialists in medicine, dietetics, psychiatry, primitive symbolism and education. This book is fully documented and beautifully illustrated with 120 silk screen full color reproductions." Katharine Parker

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 25 '47
 420w

School & Society 65:237 Mr 29 '47 40w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 66:331 O 25 '47 360w

"The study is well organized and clearly presented, should be of wide general interest, and of particular help to teachers and child therapists."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:180 Je '47 280w

ALSOP, GULIELMA FELL. April in the branches; decorations by John Shayn. 257p $3.50 Dutton

635.9 Gardening 47-2312

Some years ago the author, who has been the college physician at Barnard college since 1917, and a college professor friend, bought an abandoned Connecticut cottage, fixed it up, and planted a garden. The book traces the seasons of the year in this country sanctuary.

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 3 '47
 800w

"A definite appeal for the indefatigable garden book reader, in the Beverley Nichols' tradition."

Kirkus 15:116 F 15 '47 110w

"Present, past and future gardeners will take pleasure in the keen and accurate observations of the orderly sequence of the flowers, their mystical color and shape, their mergence with the life of the fluttering air about them.' Slight and casual horticultural information. The emphasis is on the contemplation of the sensuous delights." B. B. Libaire

+ Library J 72:526 Ap 1 '47 120w

"'April in the Branches' is a welcome contribution to that choice set of country books by those who, having gardened well, can write about it delightfully." Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
 Ap 20 '47 450w

"It makes delightful reading. There are a few precious passages, but for the most part the doctor's science keeps her warm appreciation from bubbling over. And there are flashes of particular beauty and understanding." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 6 '47 500w

"With the exception of a few passages where the charm is laid on so thickly that a suggestion of preciousness creeps in, the journal is nature writing at its best." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 11 '47
 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:65 Ap '47

ALSOP, GULIELMA FELL. Deer Creek; the story of a golden childhood. 310p $3 Vanguard
 B or 92 Med47-1909

Reminiscences of the author's childhood in the 80's and 90's of the last century. Part of her time was spent in a Brooklyn rectory; but her most poignant memories were of her grandmother's Pennsylvania farm.

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '47

Kirkus 15:231 Ap 15 '47 200w

"A distinctly feminine book, 'Deer Creek' is best enjoyed when read gradually—a piece or two at a time. Each vignette is complete in itself. The fragrance of that childhood carries through to the end and remains long afterward." Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
 S 28 '47 700w

"The author's method of dramatizing the tender past is not without artifice and suffers from too many sugary phrases. . . But most of her contemporaries, especially those who come from close and happy families like her own, very likely will not balk at the book's excessive sentimentality. As for the rest who have never known a childhood so flawless and must strain even to imagine it, they, at any rate, will be instructed by Dr. Alsop's occasional needle-sharp insights into the emotions of the young." E. B. G.

N Y Times p24 S 7 '47 500w

"Written with an entire absence of art, this simple record of a day when the world's peace and the individual's dignity seemed equally inviolable makes a really lovely book."

+ New Yorker 23:63 Ag 2 '47 60w

"Deer Creek is by no means this year's version of life with father. Miss Alsop writes with great charm of city life in Brooklyn and country life in Pennsylvania, of the place that the church and religion had in the life of half a century ago. Readers will find a rounded picture of a full and satisfying kind of U.S. family life that is rapidly dying out."

+ Time 50:91 Jl 7 '47 700w

AMBERG, GEORGE. Art in modern ballet [1909-1945]. de luxe ed 115p 202pl $15 Pantheon bks.

751.75 Scene painting. Ballet 47-1398

"Not the least of the many changes in ballet is the growing tendency to treat music, décor, and choreography as an integrated whole, and in a brief text, Dr. Amberg traces the course of this development. The major part of the book, however, consists of illustrations of décor and costume designs—by everyone from Chagall to Dalí—which show how much imaginativeness and artistry modern painters have contributed to the ballet theatre. A roster of over eight hundred modern ballets, with the production data on each, is included." New Yorker

"Certainly the most comprehensive and authoritative work on modern ballet to appear in this country. George Amberg of the Museum of Modern Art was highly qualified to assume this necessary chore and has succeeded brilliantly in his task. . . Highly recommended for theatre, dance, and art collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:162 Ja 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by B. H. Haggin

Nation 165:265 S 13 '47 80w

"There has long been a need for an authoritative work dealing with modern art in ballet and this new volume provides a thoroughly satisfactory and beautiful answer." Arthur Todd

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21
 F 2 '47 600w

New Yorker 22:130 N 23 '46 100w

Reviewed by Cecil Smith

Theatre Arts 31:66 Mr '47 600w

"The collection contains a number of really beautiful designs, as well as a good deal that is fashionable and frivolous."

Times [London] Lit Sup p376 Jl 26 '47
 480w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:226 S '47 300w

AMBRUSTER, HOWARD WATSON. Treason's peace; German dyes and American dupes. 438p $3.75 Beechhurst press

338.8566 Interessengemeinschaft farbenindustrie aktiengesellschaft, Frankfurt-am-Main. Chemical industries 47-2293

Summarizes the author's findings in his years' long investigations of the machinations of the German chemical and dye cartel, known as I. G. Farben, its influence in American industry and big business, and its relations to two World wars.

"This is a timely, terrifying book." S. D. Kirkpatrick

Chem Eng 54:257 N '47 750w

Columbia Law R 47:1257 N '47 80w

Reviewed by Max Fischer

Commonweal 46:606 O 3 '47 190w

"Everyone who is familiar with the higher economics of the chemical industry is aware that Mr. Ambruster has for many years carried on a one-man crusade against I.G. . . It is, however, precisely this quality which accounts for some rather obvious defects in the book itself. His perspective is foreshortened, with the consequence that he imputes more than is necessary or probable to the influence of I.G. . . Nevertheless, despite all the defects in style and the gaps in his reasoning, Mr. Ambruster tells a very important story in a bold and vigorous way." C. A. Welsh

+ Nation 164:746 Je 21 '47 550w

New Repub 116:32 My 12 '47 180w

"To the average reader Mr. Ambruster's violent retelling of long-past misdeeds of a prostrate enemy seems dated, confused and hard to focus on today's problems." Gerald Wendt

- N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 Ap 27 '47 800w

"If Mr. Ambruster's book were not documented down to the shortest sentence, it would be the most libelous work published in this generation. Since it is documented, it becomes an authoritative work as fascinating as a detective story and one that should be read by everyone interested in preserving the peace." Charles Hurd

+ N Y Times p6 My 11 '47 650w

New Yorker 23:107 My 24 '47 90w

Reviewed by L. L. Snyder

Pol Sci Q 62:591 D '47 950w

Reviewed by Irving Babow

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ag 31 '47 500w

"As a piece of crusading journalism and as an emotional appeal to the conscience of the nation 'Treason's Peace' is an excellent bit of writing. The author is, however, under too much compulsion to prove that I. G. Farben 'must' be recognized as a 'cabalistic' organization aiming at world conquest to make the book a well-balanced study. While the author's judgment may be questioned and his facts challenged, there can be no questioning of his sincerity, honesty, and zeal. However, he shows little discrimination in the valuation of authorities and no appreciation of what constitutes evidence." Joseph Prendergast

Sat R of Lit 30:14 Ji 19 '47 800w

AMERICAN ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION. Readings in the theory of income distribution; selected by a committee [William Fellner and Bernard F. Hiley]. 718p $4.25 Blakiston

339.3 Income, Economics 46-6895

Thirty-two essays by various writers including Lord Keynes, Joan Robinson, Oscar Lange, Lionel Robbins, F. A. v. Hayek, W. L. Crum, etc. The essays are grouped under the headings: Concept of income and distribution; Production function and marginal productivity; Wages; Interest; Profit; Rent. Bibliography.

"In its entirety, the volume is hardly for the general reader. For teachers and advanced students of economic theory, it will be a valuable handbook. The bibliography alone would make its purchase imperative. In general, the articles selected are representative of important modern thought in the field. As is inevitable in such a compilation, there is a certain disjointedness and overlapping. On the whole, however, the editors have performed creditably their difficult task of selection." J. F. Cronin

+ Ann Am Acad 249:198 Ja '47 360w

"There is no use disguising the fact that this is a book for scholars, and would seem but a genteel bedlam to the uninitiated. At the same time, not only the economist but everyone who presumes to speak of the workings of the economy, will find this a convenient and valuable compendium on the nature and distribution of income." Louis Wasserman

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 1 '46 320w

"Directed primarily toward the senior and graduate university student, but with the hope that the professional economist and intelligent layman may learn from it as well, the book makes available under one cover articles from numerous sources some of which otherwise might not be easily accessible. A classified bibliography of forty-seven pages on national income and distribution completes the volume. There is an author index to the bibliography, but no index to the volume itself."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 2:296 D '46 200w

AMERICAN FOUNDRYMEN'S ASSOCIATION. Handbook of cupola operation. 470p il $5.50 The association

669.8 Cupola furnaces

46-5630

"This manual describes in detail the construction, design and operation of the foundry cupola. The chapters covering each phase of the subject, have been prepared by committees representative of leading men in the field, and are based on a study of current practices and the literature of the subject. Chapter one deals in a general manner with the construction and operation of a typical cupola. This is followed by a study of the more specific aspects of the subject, such as the refractory lining, mechanical charging equipment, blowing and blast control equipment, gas analyzers, slag disposal, alloying elements, fluxes and fluxing, constitution and applications of cast iron. There is a twenty-one-page bibliography of the literature of the subject." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 71:1051 Ag '46 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:6 Ja '47

AMERICAN JEWISH CONFERENCE. Nazi Germany's war against the Jews. See Krieger, S., comp.

AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION. College and university libraries and librarianship; an examination of their present status and some proposals for their development; prepared by College and university postwar planning com. of the Association and the Assn. of college and reference libraries; William H. Carlson, chairman. (Planning for libraries) 152p pa $2.50 A.L.A.

027.7 Libraries, University and college

46-25136

"The purpose is not to lay down a blueprint or specific standards but to set forth fundamental principles with regard to collections, personnel, professional organizations, and administration. Broad vision in the special field and interrelations with the whole field of library work are emphasized throughout the study." Booklist

Booklist 42:292 My 15 '46

"An excellent review of the development and present status of college and university libraries and librarianship, together with concrete recommendations for action on the part of individuals or groups for their further development. For librarians associated with higher educational institutions it is 'must' reading. . . If you missed this book when it was first issued, or if you laid it aside for future reference, you owe it to yourself and to your library to spend the next free evening reading it." R. H. Logsdon

+ Library J 72:452 Mr 15 '47 290w

"As a readable, provocative statement of our major problems this report deserves the attention of all members of the profession. Its chief merit lies in the fact that it raises questions which need consideration and makes definite proposals which will stimulate discussion and serve as a guide to future policy. With some of the committee's recommendations—about fifty in all—librarians will doubtless disagree; to this writer a few of them appear little more than pious hopes, too vague to serve as a basis for action. Taken as a whole, however, they constitute a realistic, challenging agenda for the profession in the years ahead." A. J. Eaton

AMERICAN library association—Continued

+ — Library Q 16:351 O '46 2500w
School & Society 63:381 My 25 '46 50w

AMERICAN thought, 1947; with an introduction by Philip Wylie. 502p $3.75 Gresham press, inc, 11 Broadway, N.Y. 11

082.1 U.S.—Civilization, Philosophy, American (47-3187)

"The first volume of a projected annual series of symposia designed to round up the best of American thinking on a wide range of subjects: literature, physics, philosophy, music, electronics, the theatre, and so on. The writers [include] Robert Jackson, Christian Gauss, Max Lerner, Hanson Baldwin, Sidney Hook, and Milton Mayer." New Yorker

Reviewed by L. J. Lee
Am Pol Sci R 41:1048 O '47 850w

Reviewed by R. B. Nye
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Jl 27 '47 400w

"It cannot be said that this ambitious project has been wholly fulfilled. What this volume represents is not American thinking in general but those aspects of it which find expression in the better commercial and academic periodicals. Anybody who conceives some idea of genuine originality is more likely to write a book about it than to submit a five-thousand-word sketch of it for publication in a magazine. A number of the selections in this volume, moreover, appear to have been made on a basis of readability rather than of intellectual quality; and all of them are imbued with a generally liberal point of view." H. B. Parkes

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p38
My 11 '47 450w

"Very good in spots, not so good in others, Mr. Ivanovic's anthology on the whole is a fine book, amazingly generous in coverage, beautifully printed and beautifully bound. When it slips a little, who would be so unkind as to reach for a stone, since Mr. Ivanovic surely cannot offer more delectable fare than the land will grow and the people eat?" E. B. Garside

+ — N Y Times p6 Mr 2 '47 850w

"The book hardly justifies its all-embracing title, but it does cover a lot of intellectual ground."

New Yorker 23:118 Mr 15 '47 100w
SpringPd Union p7 My 1 '47 280w

AMICK, CHARLES L. Fluorescent lighting manual. 2d ed 318p il $4 McGraw

621.327 Electric lighting, Fluorescent 47-31161

"This manual has been revised to include information on new types and sizes of fluorescent lamps, auxiliary equipment improvements, and recent lighting techniques. New design data have been incorporated wherever possible, and sections have been added on lighting comfort. The second edition follows the original purpose, which was (1) to clear up the many misunderstandings and confusions which followed the introduction of fluorescent lamps and (2) to provide a ready reference source giving the various types of information necessary to design, sell, install, and service fluorescent lighting systems." (Pref) Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1942.

Booklist 44:112 N 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1613 N 15 '47 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:48 Jl '47

AMICUS CURIAE, pseud. See Fuller, E.

AMORY, CLEVELAND. Proper Bostonians. (American society ser) 381p $4.50 Dutton

917.4461 Boston—Social life and customs 47-1061

A study of Boston society and its first families from Colonial times to the present. The work is based on first family writings, legends, and conversations, and is enlivened with many witty anecdotes. The author himself could be classed as a 'proper Bostonian.' The volume is the first in a series to be called Society in America series. Bibliography. Index.

"The Proper Bostonians is written with enough impudence, accuracy, affection, and respect to make the First Families anxious lest there be a second volume. The material has been drawn together with fairly tenuous threads, and in it the parts are surely more entertaining than the whole. It will be read with mixed and perhaps ruffled feelings by the clan, but with chuckles by the foreigners, particularly those who have weathered at least one season in Boston." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic 180:160 N '47 1150w

"The story Mr. Amory has compiled will keep the Boston legend rolling around the world for a long time. He has delved deep into the family histories that have already been published—and there are some very good ones—and he has dredged up a remarkable crop of anecdotes. Sometimes he is wrong. . . But most of his stories are kindly. He is no debunker, really, but a hero-worshiper. He is seeking to explain the qualities of the remarkable dynasties which have always dominated Boston. . . It is a solid and authoritative book, although it brims with anecdote." E. D. C.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 O 10 '47 750w

"This book may be banned in Boston, but not for the usual reasons. Mr. Amory is guilty of lese-majesté toward the Proper Bostonians, and names names and tells tales out of school. . . Yet after all Boston may take this deliberately outrageous book quite calmly. Mr. Amory is a Proper Bostonian himself. . . A fuller index would be useful in a book as richly studded with anecdotal plums as a Christmas pudding." Mason Wade

+ Commonweal 47:74 O 31 '47 1700w

Kirkus 15:419 Ag 1 '47 170w

"It is weak on history but rich in anecdote, and written con amore. It is great fun to read for about half of it—any half. Thereafter this convention, like any other convention of local-color fiction, like Bret Harle's miners or Colonel Carter of Cartersville, when kept going too long, becomes repetitious and tedious." Perry Miller

+ — Nation 165:624 D 6 '47 950w

New Repub 117:28 N 10 '47 120w

"Many there are in the elder generation who will chuckle over his pages, for here are the stories they have been telling one another for half a century, but usually behind closed doors."

"Social history this book certainly is, but it contains only a facet of the truth. No doubt the anecdotes are authentic, and certainly the industrious author has been busy as a book-worm in the libraries and has gossiped like a gobbler with countless survivors of battles long ago. Nevertheless some mistakes have slipped in, and the impression he leaves should not go into the record as 'straight stuff.' . . It does not take too experienced a Boston eye to detect errors in the multitudinous facts which the author marshals as evidence. It is trivial to mention trifles but facts should be facts." Ellery Sedgwick

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O 12 '47 1300w

"Mr. Amory's account is amusing because it is rich in anecdote. . . His chapters on retail penury and wholesale charity illumine both the mores and the morality of the wealthy Bostonian—and it may be observed in passing that the term 'idle rich' has seldom been flung in their direction. But I think the chief contribution of the book (within the limits Mr. Amory has set himself) is several chapters devoted to the Boston matron. . . These are written with a dry and acid pen." H. M. Jones

+ N Y Times p7 O 19 '47 800w

Reviewed by M. B. Robbins
San Francisco Chronicle p30 N 30 '47
600w

"Cleveland Amory is right in spirit, even when he isn't always accurate in fact. He has done a good job of collecting Boston stories—though a few are slightly moldy with age—and several Boston homes are still quivering with the impact of the skeletons that fell out when the closet door was rudely snatched open." Doris Parkman

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:19 N 29 '47 950w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter
Springf'd Republican p10B N 30 '47
600w

Time 50:110 O 20 '47 700w

Wis Lib Bul 43:151 N '47

ANDERSON, CLARENCE WILLIAM. Tomorrow's champion; text and lithographs. [84p] $3 Macmillan

636.1 Horse breeding. Horse training
Agr47-69

Chronicle of the birth and upbringing of a thoroughbred horse, with many lithographs by the author-artist.

Booklist 43:172 F 1 '47

Horn Bk 23:115 Mr '47 60w

"Any Anderson book with horses as motif has a readymade market. This one has, I think, an even greater market than his usual book, for there's more variety in lithographs of colts and fillies than in a succession of portraits of famous champions."

+ Kirkus 14:390 Ag 15 '46 90w

"Recommended only for large libraries that need additions to their collections of books about horses." Elizabeth Johnson

Library J 72:85 Ja 1 '47 70w

N Y Times p31 Ja 26 '47 140w

"Mr. Anderson has thrown in several lithographs of older horses—a flattering portrait of Count Fleet as a two-year-old (actually, he is as plain-looking as Man o' War), one of Stymie that does not do him justice, and another, of Busher, that is a convincing likeness."

New Yorker 22:72 Ja 4 '47 100w

Sat R of Lit 30:43 Mr 8 '47 80w

ANDERSON, MAXWELL. Joan of Lorraine; a play in two acts. 138p $2.50 Anderson house 812 47-712

A play within a play in which a theatrical company is shown rehearsing for a production of a play about Joan of Arc.

Booklist 43:202 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 72:811 My 15 '47 30w

"One who has not seen Joan of Lorraine on the stage, but has read the reviews of the production, is led to believe that Mr. Anderson hasn't written much of a play, while Miss Ingrid Bergman is carrying it to triumph by her performance as Joan, a performance sometimes described as 'incandescent.' . . . A reading of the script shows plainly enough that Miss Bergman's opportunities to shine were carefully prepared by the dramatist, and if her scenes lift the heart—as they undoubtedly do—it is because they have a larger significance in the whole play and in Mr. Anderson's message to his fellows. It is very much of a play." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Mr 23 '47 430w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p12 Ap 6 '47 160w

ANDERSON, MAXWELL. Off Broadway; essays about the theater. (Anderson House bk) 91p $2.50 Sloane

792 Theater 47-30369

Ten essays, written during the past decade, on the problems of writing a successful Broadway play. Includes "Thoughts about the critics," "Poetry in the theater," "The essence of tragedy."

Booklist 43:356 Jl 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

"Recommended for all theatre and poetry collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 72:1471 O 15 '47 40w

"Even among the ten little pieces there is a good deal of difference in weight and importance, but they are all interesting as the opinions of a man who is obviously entitled to opinions on their subjects. The one on 'the critics' is as unsatisfactory as attempts at retaliation usually are. On the other hand, the little essay The Essence of Tragedy is one of the very few examples of the possibility of saying anything fresh on that subject." J. W. Krutch

+ — Nation 165:207 Ag 30 '47 270w

"Mr. Anderson discusses problems with an engaging mixture of arrogance, disingenuousness, and real innocence. His message, in the end, boils down to 'Patience and fortitude!' He believes in the theatre, believes in it with a passionate conviction that is heart-warming and occasionally a little alarming—as when he says, 'The theatre, more than any other art, has the power to weld and determine what the race dreams into what the race will become.' . . . 'Off Broadway' is a misleading title. The only time Mr. Anderson gets off Broadway is when he mentions Hollywood. . . . He ignores the experimental, non-commercial theatres now flourishing across the length and breadth of this continent." Russell Maloney

N Y Times p4 Jl 6 '47 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 2 '47
150w

"Almost all of the ten essays now printed under the title Off Broadway have been printed before, several of them printed and reprinted. And they are so much alike in their major thesis and its development that one can hardly avoid wondering why they should be brought together in this new form where their juxtaposition causes a certain loss of spontaneity. And yet it is good to see such a firm faith in the art of the theatre, and especially in the playwright's art, expressed again and again." E. J. R. Isaacs

+ — Theatre Arts 31:80 O '47 440w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:235 S '47 240w

Wis Lib Bul 43:149 N '47

ANDERSON, NEWTON H. Aircraft layout and detail design; with a foreword by C. T. Reid. 2d ed 437p il $4.50 McGraw

629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction, Mechanical drawing 46-8103

"More than one hundred pages of new material have been added in the present edition of this work. The single chapter on fabrication methods that appeared in the first edition has been expanded to form four chapters covering the design of forgings; sand, permanent mold and die castings; extrusions and sheet metal. Other added material includes information on mechanical properties of materials, plotting of bending-moment and shear diagrams, and new illustrations and problems. The book is designed as a text for advanced courses in engineering schools and for courses offered to men already at work as draftsmen in the aircraft industry. It emphasizes basic principles and practical procedures, rather than fabrication methods, but it contains considerable information on the latter that will be useful to aircraft designers." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 43:225 Mr 15 '47

N Y New Tech Bks 31:55 O '46

ANDERSON, RAYMOND W. Romping through mathematics; il. by Harry Zarchy. 152p $2.50 Knopf

510 Mathematics 47-4541

Simply written study of mathematics from the time of the early Arabians to the present

ANDERSON, R. W.—Continued
 day. Subjects covered are: arithmetic; algebra; geometry; logarithms; probabilities; trigonometry; analytic geometry; and differential and integral calculus.

Booklist 44:101 N 15 '47

"If anyone had ever told this reviewer that he would pick up a book on mathematics and read it with enjoyment—well, you can finish the sentence. At least, such a rash person would have been challenged: 'Prove it.' And that is exactly what Raymond W. Anderson has done with Romping Through Mathematics." D. M. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 26 '47 420w

"A pleasant refresher for those who know the way, for those unfamiliar, this will serve as a summary."

+ Kirkus 15:399 Ag 1 '47 110w

"Format is excellent, type distinct. Will stand hard usage. Not a must for high school libraries; can be used to good advantage as a review of mathematics." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 72:1199 S 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:43 Ja 1 '48 40w

School & Society 66:303 O 18 '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:156 N '47

ANDERSON, SHERWOOD. Sherwood Anderson reader; ed. with an introd. by Paul Rosenfeld. 850p $5 Houghton

47-11718

The material consists of over seventy selections from his work, grouped under such classifications as Regional, Lyrical, Pastoral, and Fantasy.

Booklist 44:148 D 15 '47

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 N 23 '47 650w

"A book that will be valuable for study courses."

+ Kirkus 15:346 Jl 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by F. W. Dupee

Nation 166:20 Ja 3 '48 800w

"I wouldn't say that this new book, though big and timely for his reputation, was the ideal tribute to Anderson. I think his friend Paul Rosenfeld, who died last year, was a little too lenient in his editing and a little eager to show all sides of Anderson's talent, so that he gave too much space to the weaker sides. . . Still most of the good stories are here, including several of the later stories that are available nowhere else, and the volume is a convenient summary of Anderson's work. It is also, in a sense, a memorial to Rosenfeld himself, that warm-natured, unhappy man with a gift for appreciation, a lack of professional jealousy and a willingness to help others when he couldn't always help himself." Malcolm Cowley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R pl N 9 '47 2350w

"One cannot read the book without the sense of its being momentous, for Anderson devoted his life to a spiritual mission, even though he was not adequate to it. And it is still impossible not to respond to some personal quality Anderson had, perhaps his desire to do and be right. But I found myself taking this less into account than I did when I last read through Anderson's work, on the occasion of his death." Lionel Trilling

+ N Y Times pl N 9 '47 2750w

"Mr. Rosenfeld did a wonderful job on this book. Since he was one of Anderson's oldest friends, and, as evidenced by the introduction to the volume, one of his most perceptive critics, there could not have been a better person for this particular task." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 23:129 N 15 '47 1100w

Reviewed by Robeson Bailey

Sat R of Lit 30:52 D 6 '47 700w

ANDERSON, WILLIAM. Federalism and intergovernmental relations; a budget of suggestions for research. 192p pa $2 Public adm.

353 Federal government. Public administration 47-1504

"This volume by the former chairman of the Committee on Public Administration and the Committee on Government of the Social Science Research Council has been long in gestation. It was begun some years ago by the first committee as one of its contributions to the stimulation of research. It has been built upon memoranda upon the subject prepared by various scholars. . . What is intended is to set in motion a great work of diagnosis, a thorough, searching, objective investigation of every important aspect of the relations among and between the national, state, and local governments." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography.

"The purpose of the work amply justifies the time, effort, and intelligence which have gone into it." Charles McKinley

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:561 Je '47 1050w

"So thorough a coverage in so few pages naturally results in a spotty group of questions. Occasionally, Professor Anderson rings the bell on a problem of resounding importance. In a few chapters the questions degenerate into the kind of study-stimulating quizzes which are inserted at the ends of chapters in textbooks. More frequently the questions fall between these two levels. They are useful to start thinking about a subject, but do not lead very far into preliminary analysis." G. C. S. Benson

+ Ann Am Acad 254:185 N '47 280w

ANDRADE, JORGE CARRERA. See Carrera Andrade, J.

ANDREAS-FRIEDRICH, RUTH. See Friedrich, R. A.

ANDREWS, MRS HENRY MAXWELL. See West, R.

ANDREWS, ROY CHAPMAN. An explorer comes home. 276p il $3 Doubleday B or 92 47-31134

A continuation of the author's autobiography, begun in Under a Lucky Star (Book Review Digest 1943). This chronicles the purchase of a farm in Connecticut, after Dr. Andrews' retirement, and the experiences of turning an old house and some magnificent woods and a pond into a real home in the country.

Booklist 44:66 O 15 '47

Christian Science Monitor p20 N 5 '47 550w

Kirkus 15:384 Jl 15 '47 110w

"Since he possesses a mind trained in scientific observation this adds considerably to the keenness of his enjoyment, and to the reader's as well. His scientific knowledge, familiarity with nature and his human interest in things happening in the natural world make this book more than just another journal about the thrills of country living." B. B. Libaire

+ Library J 72:1187 S 1 '47 140w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ag 17 '47 500w

"When Dr. Andrews drops his occasional self-consciousness and pedantry, he is a stimulating companion and guide." J. W. Chase

+ N Y Times p35 S 28 '47 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 9 '47 180w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 30:17 S 27 '47 470w

ANDREZEL, PIERRE, pseud. See Blixen, K. D.

ANDROS, GUY. Freddie, the owl; pictures by Garry MacKenzie. [32p] $1 Oxford 47-18373

Picture-story book about a little owl who longed to go out out at night and ski and skate with the other owls, but was so afraid of his own shadow that he did not dare. It was a field mouse who showed Freddie how to overcome his fear. For picture-book age.

"The imaginative, intricately detailed drawings are worth owning for themselves."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 My 25 '47 50w

"The story has originality, the drawings in black and white by Garry Mackenzie are amusing."

+ Kirkus 15:217 Ap 15 '47 90w

"An attractive book for the picture-book age. Entertaining pictures." Elizabeth Sussdorff

+ Library J 72:736 My 1 '47 60w

"This is a handy little fable to have around when children grow fearful, and one which grownups would do well to remember in these days. The prose is nicely gauged for easy reading and Garry Mackenzie, a newcomer in this field of illustration, has supplied some noteworthy drawings. These are very droll, chockful of the details which children love, and they endow Freddie and Timothy with charming personalities." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p33 Ap 20 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:83 My '47

ANGELL, RICHARD CHURCHILL. The long swim. 154p $2.25 Putnam 47-1595

Short novel describing the thoughts and feelings of a young merchant marine officer, who leaves his ship for a swim in the Mediterranean, is nearly lost, is rescued, and finally gets back to his base.

"The 'Long Swim' might have made a stirring short story or a valuable section of a novel; it is not a novel in itself. It is carefully padded to 154 pages, but it lacks both plot and character development and strikes no common chord of experience in the reader."

Clinton Textor

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 F 23 '47 230w

"Within its limits, well-done, but the market is conjectural."

Kirkus 15:10 Ja 1 '47 130w

"This very brief tale is quite well done, and at the same time, is quite unimportant." H. G. Kelley

Library J 72:319 F 15 '47 80w

"This is an interesting, and conceivably workable, idea for a story, but somehow it gets lost on the way. The odds against which the hero struggles are as nothing compared to those which confront the author; armed with little save an obvious enthusiasm for swimming, an addiction to trite phraseology, and some psychological insight, he has attempted to do a job that would give even the best-equipped writer pause for thought. It is an honest attempt; but its superficiality leaves the psychological impact negligible, and the stream-of-consciousness technique gives the reader no real knowledge or understanding of what makes the hero tick." R. B. Linscott

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Mr 2 '47 350w

"A completely successful tour-de-force, within its self-imposed limits—and a worthy shelf-mate for Jack London's classic 'To Build a Fire'... Even if you've never planned to swim six miles before lunch, or faced a phantom shark in the open sea, you'll find this Mediterranean Marathon with death well worth cheering—right down to its desperate finale."

James MacBride

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 2 '47 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ap 27 '47 100w

"Even on its most obvious level, as an adventure of a young man under stress, this is a book that must be seriously considered. Mr. Angell's use of the second person singular is sometimes irritating, and he is not consistently successful in his attempts to pull the reader into the stream of thoughts passing through the mind of the young swimmer. . . Except in a few places, where the author's narrative power breaks down, the tale does give you the feeling of being in the sea beside the swimmer, seeing eye-to-eye with him, sharing the incidents which affect him." F. K. Kelly

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 F 15 '47 850w

ANGLE, PAUL MCCLELLAND, ed. Lincoln reader; with an introduction. 564p il $3.75 Rutgers univ. press

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 47-30067

"A biography written by sixty-five authors. From their writings one hundred seventy-nine selections have been chosen and arranged to form an integrated narrative. Great names in Lincoln biography—Carl Sandburg, Ida M. Tarbell, Lord Charnwood, Albert J. Beveridge, William H. Herndon, John G. Nicolay, and John Hay—stand out; others, like James G. Randall and Benjamin P. Thomas, are better known to scholars than to the general public. Quite a few whose writings appear here have been forgotten by almost everyone, and at least two who wrote contemporary news stories which [are] included have never emerged from anonymity." (Foreword) Bibliography lists only works from which selections for the book have been drawn. Index.

Reviewed by R. S. Wilkins

Am Hist R 53:124 O '47 280w

"The idea of a coherent biography consisting of the best selections from a number of authorities dealing with each phase of the subject's career is, in itself, a bold conception. In the case of Lincoln, where the mass of available material is really stupendous, the task assumes terrifying proportions. Only a scholar of Mr. Angle's broad and comprehensive grasp could have succeeded in this undertaking. That he has succeeded is apparent to anyone after reading a chapter or two. Moreover, his success is achieved with an appearance of ease, as if—as was probably the case—he knew his material so thoroughly, and had already so assayed and assessed its comparative values, that the matter of choosing what to publish was no difficult affair."

+ Atlantic 179:134 F '47 600w

Booklist 43:183 F 15 '47

Bookmark 8:13 My '47

"No one could have done this job better than Angle whose specialty is the literature of Lincolniana." H. T. Williams

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 F 9 '47 460w

"Opinions on various points may vary, but the undeniable fact is that an ambitious project has been well completed by one of the best of Lincoln scholars. We like to linger upon the probability that this attractive and readable volume will bring many thousands into intimate contact for the first time with Abraham Lincoln, and will bring them under the spell of that unique and phenomenal personality." F. L. Bullard

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 F 12 '47 650w

"The 'Lincoln Reader' has the double attraction of being an excellent, moderate length biography for the ordinary citizen, and at the same time a Lincolniana tour de force for the critical delight of the many Americans who specialize in Abraham Lincoln as a hobby." Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 45:522 Mr 7 '47 1250w

Current Hist 12:239 Mr '47 30w

"This is a creative job of editing, for the editor has himself—in his selection, arrangement, balance, and annotations, brought into focus the extracts he has taken from the great mass of books written about Lincoln."

+ Kirkus 15:96 F 1 '47 130w

"Recommended." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 72:222 F 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by B. J. Hendrick

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 F 9 '47 3000w

ANGLE, P. M., ed.—Continued

"Surveying the whole body of Lincolniana, Angle has selected the articles which picture the man's life in the most readable yet most accurate fashion. . . And what makes it more emphatic is that Angle has not confined his selections to the work of the more gifted biographers, such as Carl Sandburg, Ida Tarbell, Albert J. Beveridge, Lord Charnwood and John Hay. These are represented importantly. But fifty-five other authors are included, too—excerpts from the works of politicians, newspaper reporters, special researchers, lawyers, containing descriptions of particular steps or episodes in Lincoln's life." Lloyd Lewis

+ N Y Times p1 F 9 '47 1000w

"The anthology is fairly well put together (writing about Lincoln is getting to be a profession in itself) and has many interesting illustrations. Aside from that, it is just another book about Lincoln."

New Yorker 23:99 Mr 1 '47 80w

"It is not surprising that Carl Sandburg has written of this book, 'The Lincoln Reader is today on score-card points the best all-round one-volume biography of Lincoln that can be bought, borrowed or stolen.'" J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 9 '47 700w

"Mr. Angle's latest contribution to Lincoln literature should be welcomed by the Lincoln legion, perhaps the country's most pertinacious booklovers. . . The epilogue from Lord Charnwood which concludes the reader is full of charm. I cannot help regretting, however, that Mr. Angle did not avail himself of President Wilson's magnificent passages at the Hodgenville dedication, the finest estimate I know of the change and growth of this child of the cabin who kept the Union whole." G. F. Milton

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 F 22 '47 1100w

Time 49:112 F 17 '47 460w

"The most completely satisfactory one-volume biography of Abraham Lincoln thus far to issue from the press, although objection will be made, and with some reason, that more than half the book is devoted to the pre-Presidential period."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:144 Je '47 280w

Wis Lib Bul 43:53 Mr '47

ANGOFF, CHARLES. When I was a boy in Boston; il. by Samuel Gilbert. 182p $2.75 Beechhurst press

B or 92 Boston—Social life and customs 47-4503

Reminiscences in semi-fictional form of life among the numerous members of a Russian-Jewish immigrant family in Boston in the early 1900s.

Booklist 44:148 D 15 '47

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 23 '47 600w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p56 D 7 '47 320w

"Charles Angoff respected his elders and remembers them as they doubtless were; earnest and hardworking, with quirks and foibles which the years have rendered understandable to him if not exactly spectacular. The result is an album of family portraits that is completely in focus. . . 'When I Was a Boy in Boston' is perhaps too low-pitched and solemn to be widely popular, but it reflects with fidelity and integrity a way of life which, for all its humbleness and simplicity was rich in wisdom." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 3 '47 430w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 10 '47 200w

ANSHEN, MRS RUTH NANDA (MRS RALPH HOWARD BRODSKY), ed. Our emergent civilization. (Science of culture ser) 339p $4.50 Harper

901 Civilization. Twentieth century 47-6365

"A synthesis by 14 noted specialists in the fields of philosophy, economics and sociology, including F. S. C. Northrop, R. M. MacIver, Julian S. Huxley and Jacques Maritain, woven into a volume on past, present and future progress in thought. This is Volume IV in the Science of Culture Series. Some of the chapters are directly concerned with the political problem of today—Russia versus the West. Some are mostly theoretical." (Current Hist) Index.

Current Hist 13:294 N '47 60w

Kirkus 15:328 Je 15 '47 170w

"This volume, though it omits sex and a few other items often regarded as important, will broaden the minds of all those who will read it carefully. It will not cure all diseases, but it will make the patient more comfortable; the headlines in any morning's newspaper will be a little easier to bear." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p6 O 12 '47 1400w

"Not all of the fourteen writers in this collection of essays are conservatives. Yet the volume as a whole may be regarded as an attempt, and a very serious one, on the part of conservative thinkers to prescribe remedies for the world's ills. . . The best in the volume is Julian Huxley's 'The New Evolution.'" Rushton Coulborn

Sat R of Lit 30:82 D 6 '47 800w

ANSPACHER, LOUIS KAUFMAN. Challenge of the unknown; exploring the psychic world; with an introd. by Waldemar Kaempffert. 327p $3.75 Current bks.

133 Psychical research 47-4286

"In this, his last book, the late Louis K. Anspacher, dramatist, poet and philosopher, scorns 'supernatural' as 'the laziest word in the vocabulary of ignorance.' . . It is natural, then, that he has collected a great deal of information about all kinds of psychic phenomena—and about such matters as unconscious mind and memory, dual personality, prodigies, and other assorted phenomena. He has also presented elaborate studies of the psychic element in artistic creation. . . He discusses the psychic element in science which now seems engaged in dissolving the materiality of matter, and he even approaches the Bible as a psychic document." N Y Times

Kirkus 15:208 Ap 1 '47 160w

"The weakest part of the book is the first, in which Mr. Anspacher argued that psychic research was a proper extension of science. . . But the citations from literature and art are impressive. . . A scientist must conclude that so pathetic a record of frail human wishes and dreams should not be called psychic research. But it does reveal that reliable, fact-finding psychological research is urgently needed to meet this poignant challenge." Gerald Wendt

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 S 7 '47 800w

"'Challenge of the Unknown' is an admirably clear-headed book on a very difficult subject. One need not go along with every one of the author's conclusions to pray that his open-minded spirit may take possession of all his readers." Edward Wagenknecht

+ N Y Times p10 Je 29 '47 500w

"At times, his efforts to bring the reader around to his way of thinking led him into nonsensical rhetoric, pseudo-statement and downright falsification. . . Because of flaws like these, it is doubtful that Dr. Anspacher's book will convert anyone to his own psychic theories. Discounting these flaws, however, his work is marked by charm, wit and considerable learning. It is generally persuasive and always interesting, and it should, if nothing else, create an attitude of open-mindedness in its readers toward psychic research." Arthur Foff

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 20 '47 600w

"While Dr. Anspacher's book has broad speculative implications, most readers are likely to feel that it has no more than rippled the surface in any direction. Much of the present material was originally presented in the form of lectures and one can easily imagine how effective Dr. Anspacher could make the last moments of Socrates or the psychic intimations of the poet Wordsworth, but one may inquire if this really advances an understanding of what psychical research has been able to accomplish since the task was first seriously undertaken in the eighties. . . . However, one must grant that the author has succeeded in making the subject both popular and significant, which more scientific evaluations have often failed to accomplish. His book expounds the ageless questions at the core of life and the universe, but leaves up to the reader practical methods of inquiry."

F. W. Leary

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:22 Ag 30 '47 550w

ANTHONY, NORMAN. What to do till the psychiatrist comes. 150p il $2.50 Duell

817

47-3400

A liberal debunking of the present trend for psychoanalytic jokes, complete with case histories, interpretations of dreams, a libido striptease, and diagrams.

Kirkus 15:117 F 15 '47 70w

"The humor is broad and pun-choked, and there are lively pictures by the author and fellow illustrators."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
My 11 '47 140w

"The approach is comic, the spirit full of spring, good living, and, no doubt, beans. . . . Mr. Anthony is funny only in flights. His style is of the manic-depressive type, and there is no trusting that sort of thing in the daylight." Lewis Nichols

N Y Times p28 Je 22 '47 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 Je 8 '47
110w

APPEL, BENJAMIN. But not yet slain. 183p $2.50 Wyn

47-31230

Novel based on life in Washington, D.C., since the end of the New Deal. The hero is a young government official who finds life so difficult that he takes to drink, quarrels with his wife and his best friend, and finally resigns from his position.

"A capable, convincing study of tension and crack-up."

+ Kirkus 15:403 Ag 1 '47 110w

"Mr. Appel draws a moving and timely portrait of a man lost in intellectual and emotional confusion and shame who seeks to forget what is happening to him in drink and sordid love affairs. A surprise ending gives meaning to the book's title." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 O 5
'47 360w

"Mr. Appel's latest book is a political novel, based on his own experience in wartime Washington, and it is unmistakably sincere. . . . It is hard to see why he has failed so strangely. His style is clean cut. His plot is plausible and beautifully adapted to his purposes, and so is his characterization. His dialogue is sometimes slogany, but always interesting." Donald Barr

N Y Times p18 O 5 '47 800w

"The author undoubtedly means his hero's renunciation to be a noble and momentous action, but the sonorous drumbeat of the inescapable clichés of liberalism that accompany the fellow's desperate wrestle with himself makes it appear commonplace and at times even silly."

— New Yorker 23:105 O 4 '47 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 4 '48
60w

"Breakdown caused by being lost in a political maze may be a definitive symptom of these times. Mr. Appel exhibits the maze and its victims with telling vigor. Not impersonally, of course. Mr. Appel, who has himself returned from service with the government agencies, plainly had not the stomach for a fine objectivity. This is his last hot backward glance, with a flash of optimism at the end that is not too convincing." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:25 O 25 '47 550w

ARAGON, LOUIS. Aurélien; tr. by Eithne Wilkins. 2v $6 Duell

47-3903

Novel translated from the French, recounting the love story of a veteran of World War I. The background is the French political, artistic and cultural life of the '20's.

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 15 '47
330w

"Despite a tendency to be diffuse and repetitive, Aragon has never before so arrestingly depicted the strange fascination and repulsion of Paris. . . . Aragon weaves the web of a passionate, frustrated romance into a woof of sordid business intrigues, and runs through both a shimmering satirical thread of comment on the aesthetic and cultural life of the city. The result is a fabric more fascinating than his story. There are full moments of mental probing, but many more of skillful insight. The novel is overlong, highly sophisticated (in terms not particularly apposite to American taste), and in final analysis, superficial and trivial. But that market which boasts of being at home in the circle of Picasso, Bakst and Poiré, which enjoys the highly sophisticated aura of Parisian promiscuities . . . will like this better than will the average member of the reading public."

+ — Kirkus 15:79 F 1 '47 260w

"These are not great lovers and two volumes are too much of them. Chief interest will center on the detailed picture (already familiar to Men of Good Will readers) of the cultural, social and political life of Paris between two wars. Needed only if French literature in translation is read." R. E. Kingery

Library J 72:638 Ap 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 16 '46
330w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Nation 164:747 Je 21 '47 900w

"[The book] is lively, witty, pictorial, even brilliant at times, with descriptions of family businesses, marriages, fortunes, houses and frequent divertissements on 'feminine zoology.' . . . To anyone with a taste for such detail it will have a fascination in itself, for the first volume at least, but it palls like a day dream. It is piled up without any discrimination or apparent purpose. The author is ironic, but never essentially critical. In fact, there is little evidence that he is not really infatuated with what he is pretending to criticize only as an excuse to write about it. Aurélien is not strong enough to hold all this together. He is not even capable of sustaining the interest he claims for himself." It might be his fault 'of not finishing anything, whether it was a thought or an adventure,' but this may equally prevent some readers from finishing his story in spite of its many charms and skills." John Farrelly

— + New Repub 116:32 My 12 '47 550w

Reviewed by Rayner Heppenstall

New Statesman & Nation 32:137 Ag
24 '46 900w

"In these pages Aragon has presented the whole pastry-cake of sex in the beau monde of Paris with artistry, understanding, and very great mercy." Milton Rugoff

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
My 11 '47 1050w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien

N Y Times p3 My 4 '47 900w

"Another case of ambition overreaching itself."

— New Yorker 23:102 My 24 '47 70w

Reviewed by Alfred Kay

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Je 1 '47
420w

ARAGON, LOUIS—Continued

"Here is a conventional story, told in conventional prose; a well-constructed tale, with substantial characters, interesting action, social depth, and a Parisian background, or foreground, that is brilliantly realized. Here, too, is eloquence; and that is a rarity just now." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:18 My 10 '47 1350w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

— Spec 177:176 Ag 16 '46 750w

Time 49:112 My 12 '47 390w

ARCHIBALD, ARTHUR CRAWLEY. New Testament evangelism; how it works today. 149p $2 Am. Bapt.

253 Evangelistic work 47-3764

"With realistic candor, the author gives his appraisal of professional evangelism as it relates itself to the well-being of the local church, and discounts the artificially stimulated fervor and the go-getter methods of mass evangelism for the purpose of constructively building the kingdom. Instead of the simulated enthusiasm and brassy fanfare which are calculated to sweep the unregenerate into salvation, Dr. Archibald proposes the quiet procedures of lay evangelism, depending on the personal testimony of humble Christians to convince the uncommitted that they have need of Christ and the fellowship of the church." Crozer Q

"There is a refreshing lack of professionalism in this book and there is sensible and much needed caution against clap-trap, cliché, 'preacher language, evangelistic lingo, holiness phraseology.' . . . Those who still believe that the Christian effort is basically a matter of enlisting men and women in the Christian following and fellowship will find in this discussion of the visitation technique much practical aid." E. M. Potat

+ Christian Century 63:1181 O 2 '46 800w

"This is not just another book on evangelism, but rather the book on evangelism for our present situation. . . . With this handbook and a score of consecrated lay people any pastor could engineer a spiritual ingathering, the resultant enthusiasm of which would be far more permanent than the tidal wave of emotional fervor whipped up by the processes of mass evangelism." M. C. Westphal

+ Crozer Q 24:91 Ja '47 230w

ARCHIBALD, JOE. Rebel halfback [il. by James McKell, jr]. 192p $2 Presbyterian bd. 47-31441

Football story for older boys.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 180:148 D '47 90w

Booklist 44:136 D 1 '47

Kirkus 15:434 Ag 15 '47 150w

"More than just a good, exciting football story all boys will like. . . . Recommended for boys 12 and up." G. E. Cartmell

+ Library J 72:1474 O 15 '47 40w

ARCHIBALD, MRS KATHERINE. Wartime shipyard; a study in social disunity. 237p il $3.75 Univ. of Calif.

331.76238 Shipbuilding. Woman—Employment. Groups (sociology) 47-5216

A graduate of the University of California, who worked for two years in an Oakland shipyard during the war, here discusses her observations and their implications. In her own words it is "the story of one academic liberal who went forth into the realm of social fact with the usual luggage of preconception and, in the course of the journey, found that one piece after another had to be discarded or lightened." (San Francisco Chronicle)

Reviewed by Gladys Dickason

Ann Am Acad 253:235 S '47 600w

Kirkus 15:234 Ap 15 '47 60w

New Statesman & Nation 34:358 N 1 '47 210w

"Mrs. Archibald has translated and interpreted with charm and clarity the sociological implications of her experiences during the two years she worked in one of the big California shipyards. . . . Mrs. Archibald's book has documentary value for the student of our social and economic problems, but, more than that, it is a book which should be read by officials in both the trade-union movement and management. Both could benefit by her penetrating analysis of their mistakes." E. M. Herriek

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 My 13 '47 1350w

Reviewed by A. D. K. Doughty

San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 16 '47 600w

ARISTOTLE. Politics of Aristotle; tr. with an introduction, notes and appendices, by Sir Ernest Barker. 411p $5 Oxford

888.5 Political science 47-692

A new translation of the Politics of Aristotle by the noted British political philosopher. "The introduction gives an account of Aristotle as educator and man of science, of the method pursued in the 'Politics,' and of the relation of the book to contemporary Greek political history. The appendices collect conveniently some of the main political passages from Aristotle's other writings. In the translation, by adding a phrase here and there in square brackets, Sir Ernest seeks to make the meaning clearer where Aristotle's own extremely compressed sentences are not self-explanatory." (Manchester Guardian)

Reviewed by J. G. Kerwin

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p49 D 1 '46 400w

"Sir Ernest Barker has made this translation for the benefit of readers who are not primarily students of the classics or philosophy, but of political and social theory. His edition is admirably designed for his purpose. . . . The translation reads well, but when a phrase as traditionally translated, such as 'man is by nature a political animal,' has become almost incorporated into our speech we wonder if anything is gained by translating it 'man is by nature an animal intended to live in a polis.'" D. M. E.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 23 '46 240w

"The 'Politics' is still a tremendous achievement of thought. It contains far more careful reasoning and far more basic common sense than any other political treatise in the world. But, in order to understand it, we must reconstruct not so much the development of Aristotle's thought as the process of his teaching; or else we must be taught by a skillful teacher. And that is why Ernest Barker's translation is quite invaluable. You do not read him. He teaches you—by a clear, strong, simple English rendering in which few Greek words occur, and some without explanation." Gilbert Highet

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 Ap 20 '47 900w

"Mr. Barker's book is everything that a translation should be. . . . He has prefixed to his translation a full and lucid introduction, which gives the reader just what he needs to know, in order to understand the 'Politics' properly: the historical and philosophic background, the stylistic peculiarities of Aristotle's works, the general contents of the 'Politics,' and, best of all, a brilliant discussion of Aristotle's terminology, which is so illuminating that it elevates the English reader almost to the level of the Hellenist." Eugene O'Neill, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:9 D 21 '46 1100w

"The scheme of the present work permits full scope for the employment of just those methods of which [Sir Ernest Barker] is an acknowledged master. The aim has been to produce an edition for readers who have not been trained in the classics. This has characteristically meant, for him, not only a readable translation (enough in itself to earn our gratitude), but one in which the reader is further assisted, at the points where most translations become puzzling, by the interpolation of additional passages designed to elucidate the course of the argument. . . This is a unique and important contribution, and all students, not excluding those trained in the classics, will find it very useful to have so much in one volume." Wilfrid Harrison

+ Spec 177:270 S 13 '46 750w

"For making so much good sense available to the English reader in so readily intelligible a form the student of politics has good cause to be grateful to Sir Ernest Barker."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p8 Ja 4 '47 3250w

ARMITAGE, ANGUS. Sun, stand thou still. (Life of science lib) 210p il $3 Schuman

B or 92 Copernicus, Nicolaus 47-11441

Study of the life and work of the astronomer, Copernicus. The author is one of the leading Copernican scholars. Index.

Kirkus 15:520 S 15 '47 160w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1613 N 15 '47 80w

School & Society 66:447 D 6 '47 20w

ARMITAGE, MERLE. Dance memoranda; ed. by Edwin Corle. 58p il $7.50 Duell

792.8 Dancing

"For more than thirty years Merle Armitage, a concert manager by profession, has watched and loved the art of the dance. In the 58 pages of modest text which introduce the spectacular array of dance photographs constituting the main bulk of this new volume, he looks back over a span of time stretching from Isadora Duncan to Martha Graham, and sets down his best thoughts about the dancers, choreographers and entrepreneurs he has seen and known. . . The photographs are . . . portraits and action pictures of dancers, present and past; scene and costume designs; and a wide variety of paintings, drawings and sculptures on dance subjects." Theatre Arts

Booklist 43:238 Ap 1 '47

"This should have a distinct place in the art book field."

+ Kirkus 15:186 Mr 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 72:466 Mr 15 '47 30w

"Merle Armitage's new and beautifully designed volume, 'Dance Memoranda,' is a testament of love and understanding of the art. Few such self-effacing books have been written on any subject. . . There are superb camera studies and action shots of both ballet and modern dancers now performing before the public, rare and evocative pictures of such historic figures as Nijinsky, Pavlova and Mordkin, a copious gallery of costumes and scene designs, and paintings, drawings and sculptures of the dance ranging from Egyptian wall reliefs to recent abstract art." Cecil Smith

+ N Y Times p34 Mr 16 '47 1100w

"An unusual and extremely good-looking book."

+ New Yorker 23:103 Mr 8 '47 100w

Reviewed by Spencer Barefoot

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 16 '47 500w

"Of such historic figures as Nijinsky, Fokine, Pavlova and Diaghileff, Mr. Armitage writes with infectious warmth and considerable penetration. After the end of the Diaghileff period, however, the art of ballet seems to have lost most of its immediacy for him, so that his treatment of its later aspects is sketchy and not always fully informed. His immense admiration for Miss Graham may account for his altered attitude. At any rate, his analysis of the integrity, economy and communicativeness of her dancing and choreography is one of the truest and most perceptive statements anyone has yet made."

+ Theatre Arts 31:76 Ap '47 280w

"It is a ballet lover's scrapbook, but it is more than that. The essentials and characteristics of the art, its historical development, its techniques are graphically presented—and by, perhaps, the best means since dancing can hardly be reduced to words."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:226 S '47 200w

ARMOUR, RICHARD WILLARD. Leading with my left; caricatures by Joseph Forte; with an introd. by Max Eastman. 60p $2 Beechhurst press

811

46-8223

A selection from the topical verses contributed by the author to The New Leader, the liberal-labor weekly, during the years 1941-45. Illustrated with caricatures by Joseph Forte.

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 F 2 '47 60w

Springfd Union p11 My 5 '47 10w

ARMOUR, RICHARD WILLARD. Writing light verse. 123p $2 Writer

808.1 Versification, Poetry—Technique

47-30318

A discussion of the technique of writing light verse. Selecting a subject, choosing a title, use of various metrical forms and finding a market, are some of the subjects studied.

Booklist 43:327 Je 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '47

"Though Mr. Armour's book makes a great deal of good sense, I do not believe that the writing of memorable light verse can be taught. . . There is a lot of merriment and sensible instruction in Mr. Armour's bright little text—but he is pouring things down a funnel instead of through a sieve." David McCord

Sat R of Lit 31:28 Ja 3 '48 700w

ARMSTRONG, HAMILTON FISH. Calculated risk. 68p $1.50 Macmillan

940.531444 Reconstruction (1939-)—Europe. U.S.—Foreign policy. United nations (organization) 47-12346

"A suggestion, by the editor of Foreign Affairs, for freeing the United Nations from the constricting Soviet vetoes, along with an analysis of the Marshall Plan and a plea for its support. Mr. Armstrong's idea is based on his conviction that the United States should renounce its right to veto any plan for collective action by the United Nations against an unruly member. This move, he believes, would encourage the other great powers to follow suit, would clear the way for action by uncomplicated majority rule, and would eliminate the delicate job of taking the Charter apart in order to get at the veto provision. The calculated risk, of course, is that the Russians might respond with a consummate display of temper." (New Yorker) No index.

"His proposals are as fresh as today's headlines; it is a safe bet that they will be in the headlines for months to come." Joseph Barnes

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 D 21 '47 1350w

"No one is better qualified to write 'The Calculated Risk' than Hamilton Fish Armstrong. As editor of Foreign Affairs, consultant to the State Department, special assistant to Ambassador Winant in London with the rank of Minister and Adviser to the United States delegation at San Francisco in 1945, Mr. Armstrong has the background which enabled him to distill within sixty-eight pages effective recommendations to assist us in meeting the problems of economic reconstruction and political security." C. M. Eichelberger

+ N Y Times p4 D 7 '47 2100w

"An arresting proposal, even if you don't share Mr. Armstrong's craving for a showdown in the United Nations."

New Yorker 23:141 D 13 '47 160w

Reviewed by F. R. Dulles

Sat R of Lit 30:11 D 27 '47 700w

Springfd Republican p10B Ja 4 '48 650w

ARNOLD, ELLIOTT. Blood brother. 558p $3
Duell

47-30174

"A history, in fiction form, of the Southwest, from the time of the Gadsden Purchase in 1856 until the end of the Indian wars, about 1870. Author has translated matter-of-fact historical incidents into thrilling episodes, following the adventures of Cochise, noted chief of the Chiricahua Apaches, and Tom Jeffords, famous peace maker and Indian agent, with great detail." Library J

Booklist 43:223 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by M. D. Luhan

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Mr 16 '47
850w

"Sympathetic and moving approach to a too often misinterpreted phase of our nation's growth. A book that all libraries will want, and that—if it gets the right sort of break in the press, should have a reasonably wide general sale."

+ Kirkus 14:600 D 1 '46 340w

"Sympathetic to the Indian cause. Important contribution to history of the Southwest. Well recommended." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 72:319 F 15 '47 80w

"It is virtually impossible for a competent writer to be dull on this subject. Mr. Arnold is dull only when he wanders from it, especially in his two improbable and unnecessary love stories. His two principal women behave in a most unlikely way. . . . Apart from the women, this book is good reading. It drags occasionally, when the ethnology gets the author down and he describes too much. In general, however, long as it is, the story holds a fast pace, and the events could not fail to hold a reader's interest." Oliver La Farge
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
Mr 30 '47 900w

"If the thesis of the book is the blood brotherhood of all men and all races, Mr. Arnold should have selected as an exemplar an Indian such as Joseph of the Nez Percés, or Wovoka, the Piute 'messiah.' The Apaches were the scourge of the Southwest for centuries before the white man came. . . . As a novel, 'Blood Brother,' will delight those who believe that all Indians were as noble as Hiawatha. As biography it is inaccurate; as history it is often distorted; as ethnology it is balderdash." Hoffman Birney
— N Y Times p20 Mr 2 '47 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 18 '47
900w

"Mr. Arnold has chosen a lofty theme, that all men are blood brothers. He has done a lot of hard and intelligent research. His materials are well organized and he writes with a quiet earnestness that carries the reader through more than 500 pages to the end of the book. But often one wishes for a little more color, a little more showing instead of mere telling of the tale. There are comparatively few pictures and far too many pages of naked dialogue. . . . Anyone interested in our Indian wars will enjoy this book, and will probably return to it for certain passages, like that recounting the Camp Grant Massacre." Stanley Vestal

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:17 Ap 26 '47 550w

Wis Lib Bul 43:117 J1 '47

ARNOLD, RALPH. Hands across the water.
235p $2.50 Macmillan

47-3394

Mr Retting, a native of a small Asiatic country often confused with Tibet, visits England ostensibly to study English country life. In reality he has been sent by the dying ruler of his own country to seek an unborn British baby who will enter the world in time to become the ruler's reincarnation. The various sides of English life from public schools to charity fêtes, teas and fox-hunting, are portrayed as they seemed to Mr Retting.

Booklist 43:347 J1 1 '47

"Idea of visiting foreigner is not new. . . . However, book is fairly fresh and amusing, certainly thoughtful and disillusioned. Mr. Arnold is a relative of Edwin Lester Arnold, author of that superb fantasy, Phra the Phoenician. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 72:886 Je 1 '47 80w

"All these characters are deftly manipulated, and only once or twice (as with the old schoolmaster) does the blade strike quite mercilessly. For the most part we are shown a group of people trying to match the old with the new—some bravely, some foolishly, some desperately, and almost all with shreds of dignity. The reader may be surprised that, except for occasional mentions of the 'first' world war and a petrol shortage, the background seems so familiar." James Hilton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 J1
6 '47 750w

"With a light touch and gently ironic attack, Ralph Arnold dissects an imaginary spot of English countryside along with its inhabitants much in the same way Angela Thirkell has done in her Barsestshire series." Anne Richards
N Y Times p12 Je 15 '47 320w

"A clever, amusing and affectionate little comedy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p413 Ag 31
'46 480w

ARPEE, LEON. History of Armenian Christianity from the beginning to our own time. 386p $3 Armenian missionary assn. of Am, 152 E. 34th st, N.Y. 16

281.62 Armenian church 46-778

"Although this is a centennial volume, in commemoration of the hundredth anniversary of Armenian Protestantism, it is concerned with the entire course of Armenian Christianity from its origin to the present time. Only two chapters are devoted to the Evangelical Movement. The book is a sympathetic history of the Armenian Church, its involvement in the political history of Asia Minor, its relationships with Rome and Constantinople, its leaders and martyrs, its theology, and other aspects of its complex life. It is written against a background of wide knowledge of the history of the Eastern Church." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

Am Hist R 51:741 J1 '46 40w

"Church historians have long felt the need for such a study as this in English. The book is well documented, and contains an appendix consisting of three important historical documents, and thumb-nail sketches of seven representative martyrs of the Armenian Church."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:184 S '46 220w

ARTHUR, JULIETTA K. Jobs for women over thirty-five. 253p $3.50 Prentice-Hall

396.5 Woman—Employment 47-11643

Advice for the older woman, without vocational training, who must earn a living. The book is organized according to type of work, and gives practical pointers on how to get jobs. There are brief sketches of women who have been faced with the necessity of working and have succeeded in their chosen line of work. Chapter bibliographies. There is a list of sources offering vocational help to women. Index.

Booklist 44:144 D 15 '47

Kirkus 15:521 S 15 '47 110w

"Excellent supplementary material for vocational counseling and reference purposes. Highly recommended." A. I. Bryan
+ Library J 72:1370 O 1 '47 140w

"Those who may be technically interested in the book will find that it is based on real research and experience." E. B. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 4 '48
250w

ARTHUR, MARY GRACE. Tutoring as therapy. 125p $1.50 Commonwealth fund 373.1 Children, Abnormal and backward
47-328

"Tutoring, as defined by Dr. Arthur, is individual teaching, for a limited time, of children who have the intellectual capacity to comprehend the school work demanded of them but are in need of more help than the school can give because of lack of adequate teaching at lower grade levels. . . . Dr. Arthur here analyzes each phase of the tutoring problem, beginning with the necessity of careful psychological examination before coaching begins." Publisher's note

"Of interest primarily to teachers and psychologists, this small readable book is provocative and enlightening to all workers in the field of family health, partly by reason of its indirect reemphasis on the values of agency cooperation." M. E. Mahin

+ Am J Pub Health 37:391 J1 '47 200w

"[A] lucid, concise, and exceptionally well-written little book." F. H. Allen, M.D.

+ Ann Am Acad 252:169 J1 '47 550w

"The scope of the book is limited to the author's experiences. She has relied on a variety of case studies to develop her thesis and give interest to the book. No illustrations, bibliographies, appendices, or index are included." R. D. Morley

J Home Econ 39:302 My '47 170w

School & Society 64:447 D 21 '46 10w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:269 S '47 240w

ARTHUR, PHYLLIS. Where the heart is. 224p
$2 Curl
47-30064

Love story of a California girl who marries a New Englander with a houseful of relatives and others depending on him for support. Independent herself, Sally cannot understand the situation, but the advice of her husband's aged paralyzed aunt solves the marital problem.

Booklist 43:186 F 15 '47

"Pleasant and plausible."

+ Kirkus 14:555 N 1 '46 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:37 F '47

ASHBURN, PERCY MOREAU. Ranks of death; a medical history of the conquest of America; ed. by Frank D. Ashburn. 298p $5 Coward-McCann

610.97 Medicine—History. America—Sanitary affairs. Public health—America
Med47-1546

An analysis of the influence of disease and health on American history. Begins with the earliest days of American civilization and brings the study up to the 1930's. The author, a member of the army medical corps, died in 1940, and the work has been edited by his son. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. H. Shryock

Am J Pub Health 37:1605 D '47 300w

Booklist 44:6 S 1 '47

Kirkus 15:182 Mr 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 1 '47
600w

"In places the text is fragmentary, and at times lacks continuity in presentation, but the work is an interesting, scholarly, and valuable contribution to an important subject."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:299 S '47 360w

"For condensing the immense amount of material which Colonel Ashburn left behind him, with references in six languages, and making it into a single thought-provoking volume, Frank D. Ashburn of the Brooks School deserves the reader's gratitude. If a 'giant of learning' ever arises to 'weave a massive tapestry of the influence of disease on all human history' he should look for help to 'The Ranks of Death' with its stimulating text and ample bibliography." B. C. Corner

+ Yale R n s 37:178 autumn '47 440w

ASHLEY, MAURICE PERCY. John Wildman, plotter and postmaster; a study of the English republican movement in the seventeenth century. 319p il $4 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Wildman, Sir John, Great Britain
—Politics and government [47-5563]

Biography of a seventeenth century plotter who among his other questionable activities planned the murders of both Cromwell and Charles II. He was imprisoned several times for complicity in plots of various kinds, but ended by becoming postmaster general to William III. After two years he was dismissed, but he ended his career a knight and one of the richest aldermen in London. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Arthur Barker

Canadian Forum 27:191 N '47 170w

"The book is a valuable addition to authoritative literature of the period. It shows the most painstaking research; and, by its integration of the history of the Republican movement, its presentiment of the dark and restless political undercurrent, and its relation of these to the main narrative, it opens up a new approach. And, in addition to the curious and significant figure of Wildman, it introduces us to the fascinating company of many other muffled and furtive actors in this drama of plot and counterplot." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 29
'47 600w

Current Hist 13:355 D '47 50w

"A notable achievement in historical biography. John Wildman, though he continually bobs up in fifty years of history, left few letters and no apologia; the retelling of his complicated and rather mysterious story is no mean feat of research and judgment."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 J1 1 '47 420w

"Actually what Wildman's career proves is neither his cunning nor his fanaticism, . . . but the absence of malignancy and vindictiveness in the various Governments which incurred his disapproval. A good deal less rope than he contrived to get for himself would have sufficed to hang him several times over almost anywhere but in England. The noisy little man owed his success in self-preservation and his conspiratorial perseverance to the strength of the Governments he tried to undermine and the sense of humour of the tyrants he proposed to murder. He was allowed to talk and write so much because they were never really afraid of what he would do. If any responsible person of his own time had seen as much significance in his career as Mr. Ashley does, his biography would have made a much shorter book." Kenneth Bell

Spec 178:436 Ap 18 '47 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p238 My 17
'47 3000w

ASKHAM, FRANCIS. Foolish wind. 280p $3
Macmillan
47-11464

"Morelia, a mythical country in Central Europe, is the scene of Hugh Percheron's quest for information concerning an obscure poet whose life story is something of a mystery. Intrigue, assassination, revolution and the final restoration of the monarchy, with a love theme thrown in for good measure make up [the] tale." Library J

+ Kirkus 15:405 Ag 1 '47 160w

"Unimportant." H. A. Carpenter

Library J 72:1193 S 1 '47 60w

"It is a continually interesting, vital story and suggests that the author got the material for [the] background at first hand." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 8 '46 270w

Reviewed by Rayner Heppenstall

+ New Statesman & Nation 32:385 N 23
'46 60w

Reviewed by Stephen Stepanchev

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 N
16 '47 470w

ASKHAM, FRANCIS—Continued

"At its best, Miss Askham's smooth, restrained prose is reminiscent of Storm Jameson's; understatement is her forte, and she uses it artfully in her best scenes." Nona Balakian

+ N Y Times p20 N 16 '47 1000w

New Yorker 23:134 O 25 '47 110w

"The story is in itself good, but what lifts it out of the genre of that kind of plot is the sensitiveness of the writing, the fine observation of the author and [the] controlled and lovely power of compassion." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 177:590 N 29 '46 110w

"An intelligent and exciting story. . . The writing is good, the dialogue apt and controlled, and [the] characters, down to the least important among them, engage our interest and often our sympathy. The background of revolutionary and counter-revolutionary politics is drawn with an exactness and proportion which compel such belief as is desirable in a work of fiction, and the tension throughout is admirable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p575 N 23 '46 360w

ASQUITH, LADY CYNTHIA MARY EVELYN (CHARTERIS). This mortal coil. 1st ed 245p $3 Arkham house

47-18968

Collection of nine stories, two of them of novelette length, all concerned with the weird and fantastic.

"All nine tales in this book seem similar and begin to get a little heavy if read at one sitting." N. O.

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ap 13 '47 110w

"This first collection of her own stories displays her creative fiction as literate, but conventional and wordy." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 4 '47 50w

ASSOCIATION OF VITAMIN CHEMISTS, INCORPORATED. Methods of vitamin assay. 189p $3.50 Interscience

612.015 Vitamins

Med47-1441

"Purpose of the volume is to promote and implement the standardization of vitamin methods, coordinating the widely scattered literature and reports of personal experience. Listing of apparatus. References." Library J

Reviewed by H. T. Scott

Am J Pub Health 37:1347 O '47 230w

Chem Eng 54:278 Ag '47 70w

Reviewed by L. A. Pales

Library J 72:1037 Jl '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:40 Ap '47

"The book is intended for the analyst, and its usefulness is limited to the six vitamins given comprehensive treatment; it does, however, make a definite contribution to the field of vitamin analysis."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:311 S '47 230w

ASWELL, JAMES R., ed. Native American humor; il. by Leo Hershfild. 396p $3.75 Harper

$17.08 Humor

47-30143

Selection of American humor from colonial days to Mark Twain. "The editor has gone back to Revolutionary days and searched through files of forgotten newspapers and weeklies, old almanacs, and out-of-print books to put together an anthology which indicates that the humor of our forebears had robustness, raciness, and vitality." (New Yorker)

Reviewed by David McCord

Atlantic 179:154 Ap '47 500w

Booklist 43:220 Mr 15 '47

"'Native American Humor' is a pleasant introduction to a highly entertaining field of American literature." William Peden

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 F 16 '47 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '47

Kirkus 14:617 D 1 '46 160w

Reviewed by C. C. Mish

Library J 72:222 F 1 '47 100w

"Since Mr. Aswell's anthology is something more than a mere collection of funny stories, aiming also to sample our native humor over the first century of our national life, there are certain omissions which are hard to forgive. . . Another, and rather serious weakness of the book, is its failure to indicate the source of any selection." W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Mr 9 '47 950w

"There are some excellent things in this book. Mark Twain's 'The Evidence in the Case' is a good satire, and in 1865 I should imagine it was even better. There is Bret Harte's 'A Jersey Centenarian.' But why not one of his Condensed Novels? I read, as a boy, 'Muck-a-Muck,' a parody on Cooper, and I never could read one of the Leather-Stocking Tales. Never have read one. I think that a reading of many of the pieces in the book will give pleasure—but why Orpheus C. Kerr (R. H. Newell) in prose, when much of his verse is good? Why lump Holmes, an authentic humorist in verse and prose, with the far from merry Whittier, Emerson and Longfellow?" F. P. Adams

+ N Y Times p22 F 23 '47 1100w

"Of course, the book isn't all good—certainly Edgar Allan Poe's effort is not. Of what is good, the early-nineteenth-century stuff is by far the best. Say almost a third of the book is funny; that is still a laudable percentage."

+ New Yorker 22:102 F 15 '47 140w

Springfld Union p3 Jl 1 '47 120w

Time 49:106 F 10 '47 700w

Wis Lib Bul 43:52 Mr '47

ASWELL, MRS MARY LOUISE (WHITE), ed. World within; fiction illuminating neuroses of our time; with an introd. and analyses by Frederic Wertham. (Whittlesey house publication) 376p $3.75 McGraw

Short stories—Collections 47-11764

"An examination, from both a literary and a medical standpoint, of some of the fiction of the past hundred years that most clearly reflects the psychic convulsions of Western society. Miss Aswell, who is the literary editor of Harper's Bazaar, starts off with 'The Story of Serapion,' by E. T. A. Hoffman, and an excerpt from Dostoevski, and finishes up, after ranging through selections from Chekhov, Proust, Kafka, and Henry James, with a number of modern stories—'The Door,' by E. B. White; Conrad Aiken's 'Silent Snow, Secret Snow;' and others—that have dealt incisively with the mysterious way stations of the mind." (New Yorker) Index.

Kirkus 15:556 O 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Frederic Wertham

New Repub 117:25 N 3 '47 2350w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit

N Y Times p61 N 23 '47 130w

"Each item is accompanied by Dr. Wertham's psychiatric analysis of its content and the editor's notes on its literary significance. The result is an ambitious project that falls a good bit short of its promise, mainly because of Dr. Wertham's rather circuitous comments."

+ New Yorker 23:137 N 15 '47 180w

ATHAS, DAPHNE. Weather of the heart. 276p $2.75 Appleton-Century

47-3621

Story of the adolescence of two sisters living at Kittery Point, and of the evil hold over them of Claw Moreau, a one-eyed French-Canadian youth living in the same town.

"This is a truly creative piece of fiction, a good and successful minor work. Daphne Athas is a first novelist who has the sense and integrity to stay within her range. One feels that the novel is written from her innermost experience, but that she can invent more. Her expressive capacity is powerful, especially in the staccato description of the storm, and her degree of intensity very great. And this makes up for a basic structural weakness in the plot, and for a complete lack of humor." Nancy Lenkeith

+ — Commonweal 46:245 Je 20 '47 450w
Kirkus 15:110 F 15 '47 110w

"The plot is not clearly executed and the characters are shadowy, possibly the author's interpretation of adolescence." M. P. McKay
Library J 72:808 My 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
+ Nation 165:50 J1 12 '47 1050w

"Except for an occasional preciousness of language, the author controls her means so deftly for such sure effects that she makes a reassuring claim as a deliberate artist and not just another young lady with a lyric gift musing over her childhood." John Farrelly
+ New Repub 116:29 Je 23 '47 180w

Reviewed by Helen Eustis
N Y Times p16 Je 22 '47 200w

"Miss Athas's touch is just delicate enough, just careful enough to get her little story out without shattering it to bits. She has handled this critical time of development with good taste; she has, despite a certain eagerness which, at times, destroys her mood, created strong, vivid characters." N. G. Chaikin
+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 J1 5 '47 310w

"The Weather of the Heart has its faults, mostly structural and obviously resulting from lack of experience. They will be forgiven easily by readers whose weary eyes have lately seen a lot of old formulas passing as new fiction."

+ — Time 49:107 Je 2 '47 400w

ATHERTON, WILLIAM HENRY. Conveyors and cranes; including continuous elevators, stackers, skip hoists, transporters and electric telfers. 357p il $6 Pitman

621.86 Conveying machinery

"British book, well illustrated, on the design of conveyors and cranes with comprehensive coverage of a wide field in application of conveyors for mechanical handling of material." (Library J) Index.

"Some design data and illustrations are of value to designers of this fundamental equipment. The information on cranes is limited and contains nothing on American equipment or practices."

Eng N 139:111 O 2 '47 80w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1111 Ag '47 30w

ATKINS, WILLARD EARL, and others. Regulation of the security markets. 126p pa $2 Brookings

332.6 Securities 46-7032

"The aim of this study is to present a brief but adequate analysis of the security markets and the probable importance of these markets and of their regulation in the postwar period. . . After an analysis of the postwar need for capital, there is presented an over-all picture of the capital market, including a description of the various institutions involved. Two historical chapters follow, dealing with the development of investment banking in America and the early efforts of most of the states to regulate security issues for the protection of investors. The remaining two chapters may be said to constitute the main body of the study. The major provisions of the eight Federal Regulatory Acts which have been passed since the beginning of 1933 are described and commented upon. Many questions or issues which have arisen under the operation of these laws are considered critically in the final chapter." U S Quarterly Bkl

Reviewed by O. F. Traylor
Am Pol Sci R 40:1212 D '46 550w

Christian Century 63:1065 S 4 '46 40w

"That the conclusions reached in the discussion of these problems are unsupported by sufficient evidence is not surprising, since the necessary knowledge is not available. But the result is that the generalizations set forth simply tend to reflect the biases and prejudices of the writers. The great need in this area is for a thorough and impartial study of the functioning of the long-term capital markets, so that principles and conclusions based upon adequate information can be achieved." J. F. Weston

J Pol Econ 55:377 Ag '47 1400w

"The book is written in clear nontechnical language, and should prove of interest to the intelligent lay reader as well as to the special student of the subject."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:297 D '46 240w

ATKINSON, BROOKS. See Atkinson, J. B.

ATKINSON, JUSTIN BROOKS. Broadway scrapbook; il. by Al Hirschfeld. 312p $3 Theatre arts

792 Theater—New York (city) 47-12086

"Seventy essays on the theatre, selected by Mr. Atkinson from among the articles he has written during the last twelve of his twenty-one years as a drama critic for the Times. Most of them are concerned with the refined suffering or enthusiasm that the author experienced while looking on at American productions, but there are also entries about the theatre in Moscow and Chungking during the recent war, plus some reflections on a gathering of the Drama Critics Circle and on other subsidiary activities of the theatrical world." New Yorker

Booklist 44:180 Ja 15 '48

Reviewed by Robert Pollak
Chicago Sun Book Week p6x Ja 4 '48 350w

"It used to be growled that nothing was deader than a dead play, excepting a dead review of a dead play. But this pleasurable 'Broadway Scrapbook' counters with proof that nothing can keep a good first-night more alive in a dozen years' memory than a good review of it by Brooks Atkinson." G. W. Gabriel
+ N Y Times p6 D 7 '47 900w

"Remarkably genial for a man who has sat through as many exasperating first nights as Mr. Atkinson has."

+ New Yorker 23:145 D 13 '47 120w

School & Society 66:519 D 27 '47 50w

ATKINSON, ORIANA (TORREY) (MRS JUSTIN BROOKS ATKINSON). Over at Uncle Joe's; Moscow and me; il. by Paul Galdone. 325p $3 Robbs

914.7 Russia—Social conditions, Russia—Description and travel 47-3740

The wife of Brooks Atkinson here describes her experiences among the Russians during her ten months' residence there, while her husband was Moscow correspondent for the New York Times. She presents only the personal side of life: housekeeping; dining out; the position of women; "everything for the children"; Russian cosmetics; etc.

Booklist 43:344 J1 1 '47

"There is nothing very profound about this book. It is light and enjoyable. Unless you are violently pro- or anti-Russian, you will enjoy it for what it is—a rambling, pleasant account of what the Russian people are like and why." H. K.

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 J1 27 '47 150w

"Oriana Atkinson has abundance of clever comment and vivid portrayal; but her propensity for translating most of her observations into the language of ridicule, not of the subtlest variety, can only appeal to those who crave light amusement regardless of what offense is being occasioned in the process." Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 21 '47 550w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
+ Horn Bk 24:68 Ja '48 80w

ATKINSON, ORIANA—Continued

Reviewed by Harrison Salisbury
Nation 165:107 J1 26 '47 650w

"This is an inelegant book. Furthermore, none of my political or social questions are answered. Of course, Oriana didn't want to be a Russian. Why should she? But why be so belligerently American among the Russian 'natives'?" Ernestine Evans

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
My 25 '47 1350w

"Mrs. Atkinson was guileless at the same time that she was genuinely interested in Russian life, and she saw a great deal, heard a great deal and learned a great deal. As a result, she has written enough of an impious and witty book that I feel I must warn the pedants off; but she has written so much of a warm and humane book that I feel equally I must invite everyone else in, from Yogi to commissar, and all the others (most of us) who have rattling about in their heads a great many bewildering and polemical statistics. . . Mrs. Atkinson's book won't win a Pulitzer Prize; it is not 'serious' or 'searching' or 'profound'; it is lacking in those high attributes that orthodox committees are forever on the lookout for. But it is serious enough; and it is a warm and human complement to the dozens of arid and analytic works that the existence of the Soviet Union seems to inspire." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p6 Je 1 '47 1000w

"Much of it is enlightening, but you may find the gay and sprightly style a trifle wearing."

New Yorker 23:125 Je 7 '47 110w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 4 '47
600w

"There is more common sense in this book than you could shake a balalaika at. The author went to Russia with an open mind and at least one hat that amused the Moscow populace. She does not identify copper plumbing with civilization or literacy with culture. Admitting that Russia is a land of contradictions, she forms judgments on the premise: 'There is always another side of the picture in the Soviet Union.'" A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 Je 21 '47 850w

Theatre Arts 31:69 S '47 80w

Time 49:106 Je 9 '47 650w

Wis Lib Bul 43:115 J1 '47

ATLANTIC MONTHLY (periodical). Atlantic harvest; memoirs of the Atlantic; comp. by Ellery Sedgwick. 682p $4.50 Little

810.8 American literature—Collections. English literature—Collections 47-31058

"An anthology of writings from the Atlantic Monthly, selected by a man who edited the magazine for thirty years. The material, almost all of which is first rate, is of magpie variety—literary, scientific, and philosophical essays, plays, stories, memoirs, and fragmentary pieces about the stage, religion, nature, and politics. The writers, who are similarly disparate, include Woodrow Wilson, Ernest Hemingway, Margot Asquith, and D. H. Lawrence." New Yorker

Booklist 44:48 O 1 '47

"Atlantic Harvest . . . provides valuable documentation for a survey of American literary taste (at what is generally considered the best level) from Mark Twain through Ernest Hemingway. Further, it contains a very beguiling preface in which Mr. Sedgwick opines and reminisces charmingly in familiar-essay manner and comments on his omissions and commissions as compiler. . . Readers will find that Mr. Sedgwick is still an editor whose judgment can be relied upon." Paul Dinkins

+ Cath World 166:372 Ja '48 300w

Christian Century 64:1240 O 15 '47 150w

"The 17 stories are skillfully picked for variety, ranging from Mary Webb's quiet masterpiece, 'The Prize,' and the even quieter 'The Queen's Twin,' by Sarah Orne Jewett, through Galsworthy's exquisitely told 'Buttercup-Night' to Geoffrey Household's outstanding 'The Salvation of Pisco Gabar' and Hemingway's 'Fifty Grand.' . . . A few of the notable names in their contributions, especially Edith Wharton, John Buchan, and Lord Dunsany. But the average of richness is remarkable and Mr. Sedgwick presents each contributor in the best light by a welcome that is witty or graceful or moving or all three." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 S 25 '47
600w

"This provides top grade reading, the perfect travel, bedside, or evening-at-home companion, of special interest to the many who enjoyed The Happy Profession."

+ Kirkus 15:384 J1 15 '47 110w

"The anthology has a real interest. . . It is a frankly personal collection by Mr. Sedgwick of pieces that continue to interest or please him, and as such it furnishes us with a kind of blueprint for the editing of a highly successful and even distinguished magazine of what might be called the intellectual arrièregarde. There is no doubt that Mr. Sedgwick very early hit upon an editorial formula that was to prove brilliantly successful in its appeal to a very considerable segment of the reading public, and this anthology gives us a compact view of how that formula operated." Newton Arvin

+ Nation 165:418 O 18 '47 1000w

"This pleasant mixture of elements is presented with the fresh informality of after-dinner chat. The personality of a magazine's presiding spirit pervades and lends character to the publication, just as the genius of a hostess gives a special distinction to her parties. For a full three decades the leading monthly of the United States has been a reflection of the tastes and enthusiasms, the venturesomeness and wisdom of Mr. Sedgwick. The anthology he has made testifies to the quality of his guidance." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S
28 '47 800w

Reviewed by H. M. Jones

N Y Times p3 S 28 '47 1200w

New Yorker 23:114 S 27 '47 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 D 7 '47
180w

Reviewed by James Gray

+ Sat R of Lit 30:27 O 25 '47 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 43:172 D '47

ATTEBERRY, GEORGE C., and others. Introduction to social science: a survey of social problems; foreword by Louis Wirth. abr 1 v ed 787p maps $4 Macmillan

300 Social sciences. Social problems

46-3105

"This one-volume edition of an earlier two-volume work [Book Review Digest 1942] provides an introduction to contemporary problems, social, economic, and political, that is designed for use in elementary college-survey courses in the social sciences." Social Educ

"Takes from the two volumes published in 1941 and 1942 the chapters dealing with the problems 'believed to have a peculiar relevance to our time.' Since this was given as the reason for the original selection, its use without some further criterion fails to explain why many of the problems analyzed in the larger edition are ignored. For instance, the chapter on 'Public Revenue and Taxation' is retained, but not the one on 'Public Expenditures.' . . . It was obviously easier to take whole chapters, revising them slightly, than it would have been to condense the discussion of every problem. Even this less arduous task was not too carefully done." Howard White

— Am Pol Sci R 40:832 Ag '46 230w

"The organization of material within the chapters is adequate; they are lucidly written and contain comprehensive background material. Unfortunately information is often outdated and thus misleading. There seems to have been little attempt to revise figures and statistics from the previous edition, although many facts true of the war period have been altered since the conclusion of hostilities. Mention is even made of 'incomplete' census returns of 1940. The bibliography should have been revised to include more recent sources."

W. G. Tyrrell

+ — Social Educ 11:187 Ap '47 300w

ATWATER, MONTGOMERY MEIGS. Hank Winton, smokechaser; il. by E. Joseph Dreany. 210p $2.25 Random house

47-4722

A story for boys and men. Hank Wilson, a college boy enamored with the Forestry service, joins up and meets with excitement and adventure during the first months of apprenticeship.

Booklist 44:20 S 1 '47

"A good adventure tale."

Kirkus 15:239 My 1 '47 90w

"Recommended for ages 12-16." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 72:1114 Ag '47 80w

"In our mechanized and urban generation, the Forest Service perhaps provides the last frontier. Boys who love the out-of-doors and ask for danger and excitement with their day's work, may find that this book suggests a career they had not thought of previously." Creighton Peet

N Y Times p25 JI 20 '47 170w

"This is, in our opinion, one of the best adventure stories of 1947."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:35 S 6 '47 140w

ATWOOD, JESSE HOWELL. The racial factor in Y.M.C.A.'s. 194p pa $2.25 Assn. press
267 Young men's Christian associations, U.S.—Race question

47-1846

"The National Council of the Young Men's Christian Association, representing all local member Associations, recommended that all existing and new Associations and branches 'be administered on an inclusive, nonsegregated basis.' Recognizing that the practice of excluding Negroes from local 'white' Y.M.C.A.'s fell far short of this high resolve, the National Council authorized a study of Negro-white relationships in Y.M.C.A.'s in twenty-four cities to determine how they might become inter-racial. . . . Among the Associations studied, special attention was given to those where some improvement in Negro-white relationships was indicated. This report represents a summary of the material gathered in 249 interviews conducted and reported by Dr. Atwood." Ann Am Acad

"Probably the outstanding deficiency of this report is the failure to identify the Y.M.C.A.'s studied. . . . As a result of this anonymity of each 'Y' and its community and the spottiness of the study, the report lacks cohesiveness. While this limits the usefulness of the study to Y.M.C.A. leaders, it does not detract from the value it will have for the general reader interested in learning some of the typical problems faced by agencies desiring to eliminate race discrimination from their activities." W. K. Hefner

+ — Ann Am Acad 252:161 JI '47 650w

Reviewed by M. C. Hill

Social Forces 25:462 My '47 750w

AUBRY, OCTAVE. Private life of Napoleon; tr. from the French by Elisabeth Abbott. 432p il $5 Lippincott

B or 92 Napoleon I, emperor of the French

47-2209

A popularly written biography by a French historian and novelist, who devoted a great part of his life's labor to work on the times and career of Napoleon. In his Preface the author says: "My purpose in writing this particular book on Napoleon has been twofold. In the first place I have tried to emphasize his character, to develop his psychology as it was revealed in the course of his daily life. But above all I have sought to show the influence which the sentiments of that man, who was a son, a brother, a husband, a father and a lover, had on the orientation of his political career."

"Pleasant as this detailed and loving record of the amorous dalliance of an Emperor may be, it adds little or nothing to the essential story of Napoleon, and indeed by its overemphasis on carnal delight as a factor in imperial ambition and by the silken ease of its style it casts an effeminate atmosphere about stern and terrible events. . . . M. Aubry's book falls between the stools of scholarship and popularity with something of a thump." J. G. E. Hopkins

— Cath World 165:284 Je '47 270w

"This biography presents Napoleon fully and clearly, without the hindrance of political and military events, for our fuller understanding. Few readers will want to miss it." R. B. Nye

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Mr 30 '47 1200w

Kirkus 14:617 D 1 '46 170w

"Book definitely detracts from the stature of its hero. Not recommended." R. P. Tubby

— Library J 72:157 Ja 15 '47 90w

"The Private Life of Napoleon" displays the author's technique at its best and worst. Plot, motivation, historic truth are all twisted and out of focus. The spotlight leaps across a decade or by-passes a battlefield to probe Napoleon's sentimental fancies and tedious amours. Almost the only statistics the book contains are the lavish sums the Emperor bestowed upon his friends and mistresses. Those who delight in the private details of a great man's life will find them here . . . but they will not find the secrets of mind and character that made him great. . . . This volume is such an episodic, two-dimensional monument . . . it might almost be dubbed a statue in tinfoil. Yet such is Aubry's charm of style, so lively, amusing, uninhibited, and human are his characters, so swift and sharply drawn his parade of vignettes, and so powerful the magic of Napoleon's name, that "The Private Life of Napoleon" will doubtless delight a host of not too critical readers." Geoffrey Bruun

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 My 4 '47 1800w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

N Y Times p4 My 4 '47 1050w

New Yorker 23:119 Ap 12 '47 140w

Reviewed by Roger Peck

Sat R of Lit 30:64 Ap 12 '47 500w

AUCHINCLOSS, LOUIS (ANDREW LEE, pseud). Indifferent children. 424p $3 Prentice-Hall

47-4137

A novel of "high society" in New York, Panama, and London during the years from 1941 to 1944. Among others it follows the adventures in love and war of Beverley Stregelinus, a well-born, charming dilettante, from the day he is fired from his job in an art gallery, thru his services in the Navy, to his death on a London street corner.

"Andrew Lee, in writing 'The Indifferent Children,' may present a study of futile persons, but has by no means produced a futile book. The characters do mill about a great deal, the chief of them does remain a dilettante up to the last chapters and then, even while achieving belated maturity, does it for no particularly worthy object. Yet as social satire, unsentimental but not unsympathetic, this novel by a young New York lawyer can best be described as presented in the well-known and distinguished tradition of Edith Wharton, supreme analyst, during the first quarter of the century, of New York's upper circles."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 28 '47 700w

Kirkus 15:197 Ap 1 '47 150w

"Well-written first novel. Recommended." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 72:809 My 15 '47 80w

AUCHINCLOSS, LOUIS—Continued

"This portrait of the New York dilettante as a young drone—he lives in idleness, has no sting and gathers no honey—is complete and precise in irony without being a caricature. . . . We do not know what prompted the masking of [the author's] identity, for 'The Indifferent Children' is a first book of which its creator should be honestly proud." Lisle Bell
 + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17
 Je 29 '47 600w

"The implicit comparison with James and Wharton will not bear inspection. Mr. Lee, who has quaintly hidden his true identity beneath a pseudonym, has a long way to travel and observe before he approaches the psychological magnitude of James or the trenchancy of Wharton. . . . Unlike so many current works of fiction, 'The Indifferent Children' is, [however] a true novel, not an expanded short story or a series of disjointed incidents thrown under one cover. Having granted the premises of its subject, one cannot quarrel with its effect, which is more knowing than any single portrait in the book—a tribute to Mr. Lee's skill as a true creator of fiction." B. V. Winebaum
 + — N Y Times p13 Je 1 '47 800w

"Mr. Lee has a photographic eye and an unerring ability to set down the sort of high-class gossip that falls just short of wit, but once you have admitted, long before finishing the book, that the author can describe his art-gallery set and his wartime bureaucrats' offices with terrifying clearness, you are inclined to let it go at that."

New Yorker 23:78 My 31 '47 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 22 '47 320w

"Beverly never seems quite real; some of Mr. Lee's minor characters, Sylvia, for example, the quiet, introspective fiancée, and Audrey, a familiar and not especially attractive ambitious woman, are much clearer. Mr. Lee has attempted to portray a rather unimportant minority in American life, and there are moments of brilliance in what he has done, but, as one of his characters says, ' . . . I found I had nothing to say that Mrs. Wharton hadn't said better.' I'm inclined to think that is true of Mr. Lee, too." Merle Miller

Sat R of Lit 30:22 Je 14 '47 360w

Springf'd Republican p10B O 5 '47 180w

AUDEN, WYSTAN HUGH. Age of anxiety; a baroque eclogue. 138p $2.50 Random house

821 47-5022

"[A long poem in which] the setting is a bar on Third Avenue, New York City, later an apartment on the West Side, the time an All-Souls' Night during the late war. The characters, a woman and three men, two in uniform, speak in alliterative verse." Publisher's note

"The integration of the poem is even more impressive than the magic of its many incidental gems. The themes conclude on an other-worldly note, but leaving aside the rather late entrance of theology, The Age of Anxiety is very much of this earth. While rejoicing the admirers of his purely poetical abilities, Mr. Auden has, at the same time, woven the patterns in the world-spirit of uneasiness into an argument the logic of which may be nearly irrefutable to anyone who has felt 'modern' anxieties in his heart." Walter Elder

+ Atlantic 180:126 S '47 480w

Booklist 44:65 O 15 '47

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy

Cath World 166:182 N '47 300w

"Mr. Auden forced me, as he will most readers, to submit to his formal experiment, his rhythm and alliteration because, quite soon, it became obvious that I was reading a poem of deeply varied interest and beauty. 'The Age of Anxiety' is not the work of a man playing with an archaic form and depending for effect on the contrast between the barroom and the pastoral, the formal language and the contemporary characters. This is a noble poem—its thought is wise, charitable, extraordinarily varied. It is hard, at a first reading, to correlate the dark, the bright fragments. As in life, each moment in this poem is clear, or, as in life, confused. As in life, it is the prosaic one can summarize, the event, the statement as a statement; but the poetic, or the spiritual, never." C. G. Paulding

+ — Commonweal 46:485 Ag 29 '47 850w

"This is very good Auden, and all Auden lovers will admit it and want to read it. Nevertheless, it is utterly dull, dreary and dispiriting."

Kirkus 15:389 J1 15 '47 250w

"Auden, with his keen intelligence and mastery of techniques, has found a subject in which his full power as a major poet gains expression." Gerald MacDonald

+ Library J 72:1196 S 1 '47 100w

"The worst thing Auden has written since 'The Dance of Death.' . . . Auden was, and is potentially, one of the best poets on earth; if it weren't for this 'The Age of Anxiety' would be worth neither indignation nor dismay, but only a line or two of indifferent dismissal." Randall Jarrell

+ — Nation 165:424 O 18 '47 750w

Reviewed by George Mayberry

New Repub 117:28 J1 14 '47 650w

"This poem is so rich, has so many facets, that no brief review can be just to its meaning or technique. It appears, at first reading, to be one of the splendid poems of our language: it convinces, it moves, it dazzles. It is hardly time to quibble with this work, and I doubt that it will ever be. One does not quibble with 'The Waste Land,' whatever one's ideas, and this is another such case." M. L. Rosenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 J1 20 '47 700w

"We have in this eclogue a morality play showing us the route to hope and health; a deep and fearless piece of work, matched by a mechanics of consummate virtuosity." Marianne Moore

+ N Y Times p5 J1 27 '47 1100w

"Auden has now reached a middle period, in which it is difficult for any poet not to indulge in self-repetition or self-parody. He has largely managed to dodge both these traps. His inventive powers, both in language and form, are still enormous, and it is delightful to watch him go about the task of revivifying old rules. Assonance, consonance, alliteration, an ancient, closely stressed rhythm—all these poetic procedures he frees from the books of rhetoric, so that they again function in living poetry and can be enjoyed." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 23:64 J1 26 '47 750w

Reviewed by William Elton

Poetry 71:90 N '47 1200w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 17 '47 250w

"This newest work is a distinct advance beyond 'The Sea and The Mirror' and 'For the Time Being,' to both of which it is related by themes and method. Some current appraisals of Auden to the contrary, his imagination is not that of a dramatic poet. He is a superb rhetorician, but he neither creates character nor sets up dramatic action. His figures are devices to express effective meditation. This characteristic is most marked in his present work. . . . This in no way impugns Auden's deservedly distinguished position in English poetry; it suggests only that his incursions, since the early thirties, into semi-dramatic forms tend to disperse his major powers. 'The Age of Anxiety' is the more successful precisely because it is an eclogue, a form germane to ideas talking." Kathleen Sutton

+ Sat R of Lit 30:18 J1 19 '47 650w

Time 50:98 J1 21 '47 900w

AUER, JOHN JEFFERY, and EWBANK, HENRY LEE. Handbook for discussion leaders. 118p $1.75 Harper

374.24 Discussion 47-3416

Introduction to the method and forms of discussion—"a step-by-step procedure for planning, organizing, and leading private and public discussions." Index.

Booklist 43:305 Je 1 '47

"It is a source book of useful information for discussion leaders in both adult and youth groups. Some procedures set forth should be of value to teachers who use the discussion method in guiding students toward the solution of problems in personal and family living." A. K. Banks

+ J Home Econ 39:660 D '47 170w

Kirkus 15:152 Mr 1 '47 150w

"Recommended." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:729 My 1 '47 80w

Management R 36:501 S '47 50w

"This small volume is highly practical and should aid timid college teachers in weaning themselves from overdependence on the lecture method." W. W. Brickman

+ School & Society 66:251 S 27 '47 90w

"This little handbook offers discussion leaders a professional introduction to all the techniques they need to get results." E. A. F.

+ Springf'd Union p4 Je 9 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:113 Jl '47

AULT, WARREN ORTMAN. Europe in modern times. 859p il maps $5 Heath

940.2 Europe—History 46-7696

College textbook covering European history from the "emergence of modern Europe" at the close of the Middle Ages, thru the Second World War.

"A fresh and excellent manual of European history from the Renaissance to the conclusion of the Second World War, highly to be recommended on two major counts: first, since the author is convinced that 'the student should not be taught more than he can think about,' there are not too many facts, theories, and ideas presented; and secondly, the space devoted to politics, wars, economics, social and religious phenomena is well proportioned." W. P. Hall

+ Ann Am Acad 253:220 S '47 280w

"At the end of the book are detailed genealogical tables and suggested readings for each of the chapters. There are a good many illustrations and maps. Though carefully chosen, they are no better than those of most texts from the standpoint of analysis and interpretation. The style is generally clear and readable. The most important strengths are the author's ability to see liberalism as something more than political, and his willingness to relate European developments with world problems. This is an outstanding contribution to our textbook literature." R. A. Brown

+ School & Society 66:143 Ag 23 '47 650w

"An exceptionally fine textbook." D. C. Babcock

+ Social Educ 11:279 O '47 650w

Social Studies 38:192 Ap '47 30w

AVERILL, ESTHER. School for cats; il, by [the author]. 31p $1.50 Harper

47-30683

Story of a timid little cat sent to a school for cats while her master was at sea. At first she was terrified of a tough firehouse cat, and ran away. But later she was sorry, returned to school, and made a place for herself. For ages five to eight.

"The world that Miss Averill shows us is as fresh as a May morning, she sees it with a child's directness and single-heartedness and her drawings have the spontaneous fun and delicate humour of the text." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 S 30 '47 240w

Commonweal 47:157 N 21 '47 70w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:441 N '47 60w

"Humorous and sympathetic listening reading for the nursery school and primary grade set."

+ Kirkus 15:336 Jl 1 '47 80w

"A charming story. . . Can be read by third-graders and will be enjoyed by younger children and some older ones." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 72:1380 O 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 S 7 '47 270w

"Deftly handled, nicely proportioned, this story has the sense of reality which is the earmark of good fantasy. Five to 8-year-olds who have their own problems of adjustment in school will rejoice in Jenny's moral triumph. The pictures, drawn with a sophisticated simplicity, are a perfect complement to the text." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 31 '47 180w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:146 D 6 '47 50w

Reviewed by J. H. Cole

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 16 '47 210w

"There are grace and humor in this little story. It is illustrated with a series of amusing drawings printed in black with a touch of bright red."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:53 N 15 '47 180w

AVERY, KAY. Wee willow whistle; il, by Winifred Bromhall. [31p] $1.50 Knopf

47-30144

Four-year-old Ellen goes for a walk with Grandpa, over the snowy roads of a country village. They find a clump of willows and Grandpa fashions a whistle with which Ellen delights man and beast for the rest of the day.

Booklist 43:228 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 24 '47 180w

"Charming country life pictures in color, for the three-to-five-year-old."

+ Horn Bk 23:108 Mr '47 80w

"This is such a pleasant looking book—with its excellent format, large clear type, well-drawn uncomplex pictures in line and two colors by Winifred Bromhall—that we wish we could like the text better than we do. . . There's nothing here to start the pulses pounding—might do for a small convalescent."

Kirkus 15:98 F 15 '47 100w

"Recommended." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 72:392 Mr 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 23 '47 180w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer

N Y Times p33 Ap 27 '47 120w

Sat R of Lit 30:36 Ap 19 '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:56 Mr '47

AVERY, MADALYN. Household physics; a textbook for college students in home economics. rev ed 470p il $4.50 Macmillan

640 Physics. Electric apparatus and appliances, Domestic 46-8438

Revised edition of a book which first appeared in 1939 (Book Review Digest 1939). "Written for college home economics students with little technical background. . . Reverse cycle heating, solar heating, quick freezing, and fluorescent lighting are among recent developments presented. No reference is made to frequency modulation radio, although the principles of radio transmission are briefly discussed. The section on electricity is particularly good for its simplicity and clearness and for keeping rather well to material which is either basic or related to the household. Several topics, such as the weather and optical instruments, might be omitted. . . Study questions and problems follow each chapter. A subject matter index and a short appendix of weights, measures, and mathematical formulae are included but no bibliography." (J Home Econ)

"This book is a useful text and a helpful reference for the uninitiated. The revision shows improvement in organization and selection of material. . . The book is well illustrated with line drawings, some photographs, and a few color charts." Kathryn Philson

AVERY, MADALYN—Continued

+ J Home Econ 39:364 Je '47 160w

"It is intended as a college text, but might well serve as a handbook for any homemaker who is reasonably well educated. . . . This text is not one for physicists who are academically minded only, but the easy transition from theoretical to applied physics is a conspicuous characteristic. Thus it does seem to the reviewer to accomplish its stated purpose." E. M. C. Morgan
+ R of Scientific Instruments 18:246 Ap '47 650w

AXELRAD, JACOB. Patrick Henry, the voice of freedom. 318p $3.75 Random house

B or 92 Henry, Patrick 47-31133

A biography of Patrick Henry, which is a study of his life and times. In his preface the author says "I have attempted to weave the career of Patrick Henry into the fabric of the Revolution, for he was one of those who both helped create it and who was created by it. The War of Independence might have occurred without him . . . but it is quite certain that he at least hastened its inception and contributed mightily to its success." (p.v) Maps on end papers. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:49 O 1 '47

Reviewed by R. B. Nye
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 S 21 '47 420w

"This biography is not going to answer the questions of scholars about the complicated workings of Virginia politics, nor about Henry's participation in land speculation. It is not a definitive biography in terms of research and scholarship; but it is a fascinating and essentially accurate biography of a colorful and often contradictory personality. As such, it will appeal to a wide audience and will merit the approval of the general reader." R. A. Brown
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 24 '47 600w

"A pedestrian, impersonal biography. . . . The author uses copious quotations from Henry's letters and speeches, but in large part depends on secondary sources, and fails to inform his portrait with the vitality and passion of the man. He covers the long span of Henry's life competently enough."
+ Kirkus 15:357 Jl 1 '47 120w

"By far the best popular biography of Henry. Scholars will find little that is new or provocative, but the general reader will find both entertainment and instruction. Recommended for public libraries." G. W. Wakefield
+ Library J 72:1100 Ag '47 90w

"Mr. Axelrad has done well by Patrick Henry. Nobody has done better and probably nobody could do better while maintaining any respect at all for the facts; for Henry can stand only a limited build-up." G. W. Johnson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 2 '47 810w

"This book concerns itself with the rather neglected period of Henry's war Governorship. It resists the temptation arising from the antagonism between Henry and Jefferson to write a tract against the latter. But the author's somewhat less than perfect comprehension of Henry's western interests and of Virginia politics is possibly the chief reason why he has little or nothing to add to the previous biographies of Patrick Henry." W. B. Hamilton
N Y Times p4 S 7 '47 750w

"A rather porous biography of the Virginia lawyer and orator, Mr. Axelrad has tried hard to animate the man, but the attempt is fairly inconclusive. However, his review of the events in which Patrick Henry had a part . . . is very ably done."
+ New Yorker 23:102 S 20 '47 80w

"There are mistakes in Axelrad's biography—George Wythe could not have taught Jefferson at William and Mary, since he did not become law professor there until 1779—but these are unimportant. On the whole, we can be thankful for a popular and readable biography of a remarkable figure, about whom too little has been known—a biography which is at least stimulating." Courtlandt Canby

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:25 O 4 '47 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:150 N '47

AXELROD, GEORGE. Beggar's choice. 244p $2.75 Howell, Soskin

47-30593

A farcical tale. A young novelist and his wife, in order to live until the success of the novel pays dividends, hire out as chauffeur and cook in the home of a wealthy and eccentric leader of an anti-vice committee.

Reviewed by Serrell Hillman

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ag 17 '47 230w

Kirkus 15:317 Je 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 31 '47 360w

"Mr. Axelrod has chosen [a] time-worn stencil . . . but even the most captious reader must admit that he has told it gaily. So gaily, in fact, that the uninitiated may be bowled over by the breeze." James MacBride

N Y Times p17 Ag 17 '47 280w

"The jacket blurb said: 'Beggar's Choice will remind some people of Thorne Smith, others of Eric Hatch, still others of H. Allen Smith,' and this reviewer kept waiting. Nothing happened." J. G. F.

— San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 31 '47 400w

AXLINE, VIRGINIA MAE. Play therapy; the inner dynamics of childhood; [under the editorship of Leonard Carmichael] with an introd. by Carl R. Rogers. 379p il $3.50 Houghton

136.7 Play. Child study 47-5183

"A practical presentation of the application of nondirective therapy techniques to play therapy. Indexed." (School & Society) The author is an instructor in psychology at the University of Chicago.

"A volume of special interest to teachers and others whose work is in guiding the childhood development of tomorrow's citizens."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Jl 13 '47 50w

School & Society 66:31 Jl 12 '47 20w

"The procedures outlined here deserve a good deal of reflective thought. The photographs of children in action are more than decorative." W. W. Brickman

+ School & Society 66:332 O 25 '47 220w

AYRES, MILAN V. Instalment mathematics handbook; with working formulas for all types of transactions. 267p $10 Ronald

658.883 Instalment plan 46-4627

"Based on the formulas developed by the author during his fifteen years' active work as analyst for the National Association of Sales Finance Companies and its successor, the American Finance Conference. The formulas are organized and classified into groups according to the nature of the transactions involved." Special Libraries

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:345 Mr 1 '46 50w

Special Libraries 38:51 F '47

B

BABBITT, HAROLD EATON. Sewerage and sewage treatment. 6th ed 692p il $6.50 Wiley

628.2 Sewerage. Sewage disposal 47-2758

"In the preparation of the Sixth Edition stress has been laid more on problems of design, methods of treatment, and the operation of plants than on construction. Data in the book have generally been brought up to date, discussion of the rational method of determining runoff has been revised, the chapter on hydraulics has been almost completely rewritten, and, in the field of sewage treatment, discussion of high-rate filters, contact aerators, and other changes in practice have been added. Practically all problems in Appendix I have been changed, and many new problems have been added." (Prof) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1922. Bibliography. Index.

"Of particular interest is the extensive increase in references to current literature, numbering some 527, which increases the value of the textbook materially for advanced students and those in the field who need more detailed information than a textbook ordinarily can supply." Willem Rudolfs

+ Am J Pub Health 37:1054 Ag '47 220w
Booklist 43:332 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:78 Ja 1 '47 70w

BABCOCK, LISA, il. See Stein, M. Daddy and me.

BABCOCK, RUTH, Julie. 280p $2.75 Coward-McCann
47-30659

Love story of a poor young architect, and a mysterious, beautiful girl, Julie, whom he meets casually in a Greenwich Village restaurant. Reluctantly Chad takes on the responsibility of Julie, and their relationship grows into love. Then for fear she will hamper Chad's career Julie makes a difficult decision.

Booklist 44:50 O 1 '47

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Chicago Sun Book Week p2 S 14 '47 250w

"It is the quality of Miss Babcock's writing that raises this book above the ordinary novel. Its fresh writing, its individual style, its subtle and wise characterization, its tender love story make it a delight to read and to acclaim." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 S 7 '47 360w

"Despite the New York setting, city life does not come into focus, remaining as cloudy and half-visible as Julie herself. Perhaps this is because of Miss Babcock's laudable desire to understate, but if so, she has overreached her mark, leaving unfinished many details of background and character. Had these been better developed, the story of Julie might have been more substantial and, ultimately more important." Judith Paige

N Y Times p24 S 21 '47 360w

"Mrs. Babcock tries to make Julie as fascinating to the reader as she is to the bemused Chad, but she hardly succeeds. Julie is just plain vague, stupidly heroic, and irritating. . . What could have been a poignant story of love and renunciation, of one human being's influence on another's life, becomes in Mrs. Babcock's book a sentimental glorification of neuroticism." S. H. Hay

— Sat R of Lit 30:27 S 6 '47 700w

BACAL, JACQUES W., and SLOANE, LOUISE, ABC of divorce, 128p $2 Dutton
392.5 Divorce 47-1905

"A source of information for those wishing to inquire into the legal aspects of a judicially recognized separation. Basic laws applying to divorce in each of the 48 states are outlined in a lengthy appendix." Chicago Sun Book Week

Booklist 43:236 Ap 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Mr 16 '47 80w

Kirkus 15:87 F 1 '47 100w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Mr 9 '47 180w

N Y Times p28 N 2 '47 330w

BACHHOFFER, LUDWIG. Short history of Chinese art. 139p il pl $8.50 Pantheon bks.
709.51 Art, Chinese 47-952

"This book is a coherent picture, supplemented by 129 photographic illustrations, of the author's ideas about the orderly development of form and technique in Chinese art. Covering the changes and developments in the pottery, the bronzes, sculpture, and painting from Neolithic times through the 18th century, Ludwig Bachhofer sees these changes as a logical and organic evolution. Mr. Bachhofer, a professor at the University of Chicago, has used in the preparation of the volume material which he gathered while investigating special problems with which he has dealt over the past 13 years. Being a 'short' history, the book is neither exhaustive nor lengthy." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by Dorothy Odenheimer
Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 9 '47 450w

"Should any be led by the title to expect comprehensiveness they may be disappointed. . . Yet no serious student should miss this provocative book. Free from pedantry, it is pleasant to read, and it raises a host of problems. Though theoretical conclusions are often stated as if they were established facts, time may again prove the author right, as it has in the past." W. P. Y.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 S 23 '47 240w

"The text of this book may present difficulties to the ordinary reader, for though it is brisk and concise, it demands some knowledge of Chinese art to be fully understood. The hundred and twenty-nine illustrations in halftone, however, are so admirably selected that they alone would make the volume worth while."

+ New Yorker 22:95 Ja 18 '47 70w

"It is scholarly (even though the author's 'developmental' ideas are controversial) and yet readable, with straightforward descriptions. The author shows a fully developed perceptive ability which makes his descriptions exceedingly worthwhile." W. E. Parker

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 2 '47 280w

BACMEISTER, MRS RHODA (WARNER). Growing together. 325p $3.50 Appleton-Century

136.7 Child study 47-1639

A series of chapters dealing with problems of the care and management of children at various periods of their growth and development and as they are affected by the growth and development of family life itself. Some of the material was first published in Parents' magazine.

Booklist 43:235 Ap 1 '47

Bookmark 8:3 My '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 23 '47 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '47

Kirkus 14:634 D 15 '46 110w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ap 27 '47 180w

"Good workable suggestions." P. L.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ap 6 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:77 My '47

BACON, MARTHA (MRS PHILIP OLIVER-SMITH). Things visible and invisible. 56p $2.50 Coward-McCann

811 47-2233

Collection of new poems by the author of Lament for the Chieftains (Book Review Digest 1942). "Several influences are apparent in the work of Martha Bacon, notably Elinor Wylie, certain of the Elizabethans, and the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood. She likes the exquisite, the finely-drawn, the rich trappings of legend, the classic formality of the courtly and disciplined phrase, the mysticism and the metaphysical imagery." (Sat R of Lit)

BACON, MARTHA—Continued

Canadian Forum 27:215 D '47 70w

"Skillfully turned lyrics, showing depth and delicacy of feeling, but not sufficiently original in statement or diction to be distinguished."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 26 '47 90w

"Her talent owes little or nothing to professional instruction or outside influence. She sings naturally and spontaneously, informing her lines with the passion and integrity of the direct vision. The fury of the ancient bards is in her, along with a keen and sensitive (and at times ironic) awareness of the world around her." Gustav Davidson

+ N Y Times p16 Je 29 '47 360w

"Miss Bacon's poetic gift is deepening and maturing, and in the best of the poems in her new collection, 'Things Visible and Invisible,' the words and the music are her own. Her poetry is subjective, disciplined; the emotion tempered and restrained." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 30:33 My 31 '47 650w

BADER, LOUIS, and PICKER, SIDNEY. Marketing drugs and cosmetics. 342p $5 Van Nostrand

658.9 Drugs. Cosmetics 47-3410

"Practical book on problems of the manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer covering marketing operations of the entire drug and cosmetic industry. Information on present day methods, financing, trade practices, merchandising policies, sales plans, dealer cooperation, package designing, displays, advertising, export market and government regulation." (Library J) Index.

Chem Eng 54:268 Jl '47 70w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:890 Je 1 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:32 Ap '47

BAECK, LEO. The Pharisees, and other essays. 164p $3 Schocken

296 Jews—Religion 47-6559

Collection of studies of comparative religion and culture by a leader of European Jewry. The essays are taken from two books published during the 30's: Paths in Judaism, and Out of Three Thousand Years. The essays deal with such subjects as: Pharisaism, Jewish mysticism, Greek and Jewish preaching, and the influence of Judaism on Christianity.

"The work as a whole is brilliantly and persuasively written, but one must call attention to the implications of certain ideas. If there is one lesson which the experience of our generation has underscored, it would seem to be the danger inherent in any program of separatism. Yet the title essay constitutes an apology for an historic program of this kind." R. M. Weaver

+ — Commonweal 46:484 Ag 29 '47 550w

"These essays reflect profound scholarship of the European variety, thorough and painstaking. It is a book which will be of more interest to Jewish and Christian theologians than to the man in the street."

+ Kirkus 15:539 S 15 '47 170w

N Y Times p34 O 5 '47 800w

BAER, MARIAN E. Experiments without fire [and More experiments without fire] il. by Frederick T. Chapman; small drawings by the author. 114p $2 Rinehart

500 Science—Juvenile literature 47-11060

The first part of the book appeared as Without Fire (Book Review Digest, April 1947). The second part: More Experiments Without Fire, contains more safe experiments showing the principles of sound, light, heat, and pendulums. For grades three to six. Index.

Booklist 44:93 N 1 '47

"A collection of some fifty-odd, simple, safe experiments on Sound, Centrifugal Force, Pendulums and Light. Clear, easy to follow directions, and good coherent organization are evident throughout."

+ Kirkus 15:429 Ag 15 '47 120w

"Will appeal to boys and girls 8-12. Recommended." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 72:1542 N 1 '47 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 25 '48 60w

"An interesting book." R. C. Benét

+ New Yorker 23:153 D 6 '47 80w

BAER, MARIAN E. Without fire; a book of experiments; il. by Frederick T. Chapman. 48p $1.25 Rinehart

500 Science—Juvenile literature 47-30032

A series of experiments, simply described for six to ten year olds. The experiments require neither fire nor use of a knife. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:173 F 1 '47

"Entertaining series of experiments clearly described." Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p26 N 24 '46 70w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:46 Ja '47 40w

"This book shares the weakness of many young science books in that it makes almost no attempt to relate the experiments to everyday activities of the child. The science minded youngster will follow through, but the casual reader will not be tempted to try." Kirkus 14:423 S 1 '46 120w

"Gravity, balance and evaporation are explained wonderfully well through experiment. Simple tools are suggested. . . Illustrations by Frederick Chapman in black and white are lively and interesting." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 71:1807 D 15 '46 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:56 Mr '47

BAGBY, GEORGE A., pseud. See Stein, A. M.BAILEY, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. Honour among thieves. 191p $2 Doubleday

47-30904

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:350 Jl 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 S 14 '47 130w

"Not too engrossing, even if you're an admirer of the hero."

— New Yorker 23:108 S 20 '47 80w

"There are those who regard Joshua Clunk as an indescribable hypocrite, a hymn-singing busybody, a British Bible-belter of the worst sort. Them's our sentiments, too. We loathe Clunk. But let's face it. When H. C. Bailey starts spinning a Clunk pattern you're invariably in for some rare entertainment after the British fashion. This one is no exception." E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 14 '47 100w

Sat R of Lit 30:32 S 20 '47 50w

BAILEY, JAMES OSLER. Pilgrims through space and time; trends and patterns in scientific and utopian fiction. 341p $5 Argus

808.3 Fiction—History and criticism 47-31052

Historical and analytical survey of science-fiction written over a period of the last three hundred years. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. W. Chase

N Y Times p6 D 28 '47 550w

New Yorker 23:68 Ag 30 '47 150w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 21 '47 100w

"Pilgrims Through Space and Time" is obviously the product of well-organized, painstaking research. The writing, though often angular and unharmonious, is clear and thoughtful. Mr. Bailey has succeeded in providing a bastard literature with the legitimacy of a past. In so doing he not only gives it an additional dimension, but what is more important, dignity." Edwin Fadiman, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 S 13 '47 800w
Time 50:110 S 8 '47 470w

BAILEY, RALPH EDGAR. Argosies of empire. 263p il $2.75 Dutton

47-31328

Fictionized accounts "of the great sea captains who have opened up the trade routes of the world, from 1200 B.C. down to the beginning of the sixteenth century. [The book] is indexed and illustrated [by James MacDonald] with interpretative drawings." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 44:174 Ja 1 '48

Kirkus 15:398 Ag 1 '47 110w

"Well written. Useful for supplementary reading for junior high school students." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 72:1693 D 1 '47 90w

Sat R of Lit 30:61 N 15 '47 40w

BAILEY, ROBESON. Techniques in article-writing. 272p $3; text ed $2.25 Appleton-Century

029.6 Authorship. Journalism 47-30253

"As an aid to students and teachers, eleven writers and a teacher of writing have collaborated in presenting this book which gives practical information on magazine-article composition." School & Society

Booklist 43:286 My 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47

School & Society 65:318 Ap 26 '47 30w

BAILLY, EDWARD CASHMAN. Art of flight instruction; foreword by Wolfgang Lange-wiesche. 222p $3 Harper

629.1307 Airplane — Piloting — Study and teaching 47-2286

"Author works with an appreciation of the student's problems because of his understanding of the pupil's mental functioning. With long experience in teaching air force and private pilots he has presented with simplicity, showing his ability as instructor and pilot, a book written to aid pilots and those who may want a career as flight instructor. General descriptions of flight instruction is followed by standard flying curriculum from instructor's point of view." (Library J) No index.

Booklist 43:268 My 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:530 Ap 1 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:26 Ap '47

BAITSELL, GEORGE ALFRED, ed. Science in progress, by Frank B. Jewett [and others] fifth series. 353p il $5 Yale univ. press

504 Science (39-14778)

Ten papers in which the authors report on recent advances in scientific research. Contents: The interior of the earth, by J. B. Macelwane; Development of betatron and applications of high-energy radiations, by D. W. Kerst; Contact catalysis between two world wars, by H. S. Taylor; Fundamentals of oxidation and respiration, by L. Michaelis; Complement: immunity intensifier, diagnostic drudge, chemical curiosity, by Michael Heidelberger; Genes and the chemistry of the organism, by G. W. Beadle; Concerning the cancer problem, by Peyton Rous; Plant diseases are shifty enemies, by E. C. Stakman; Living cells in action, by C. C. Speidel; Recent advances in our knowledge of the anterior pituitary hormones, by H. M. Evans. There is an introductory chapter on The future of scientific research in the postwar world. Index.

"The book is well bound and well printed with the further attraction of 151 helpful figures. It will be valuable to scientists in several fields and also of interest to the intelligent section of the general public." H. N. Holmes

+ Chem & Eng N 26:62 Ja 5 '48 500w

"The biologist and the physiologist will perhaps find themselves at home in most of the chapters. But even the layman can read that opening chapter and he can also, without too great difficulty, follow the eminent Jesuit seismologist, J. B. Macelwane, in his very interesting paper on the interior of the earth. The whole is a remarkable anthology of the newest science on its highest levels."

+ Christian Century 64:145 S 24 '47 170w

Current Hist 13:228 O '47 40w

Kirkus 15:381 Jl 15 '47 50w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 72:1187 S 1 '47 140w

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p38 D 7 '47 220w

BAKELESS, JOHN EDWIN. Lewis and Clark, partners in discovery. 498p il maps $5 Morrow

917.8 Lewis, Meriwether. Clark, William. Lewis and Clark expedition 47-12243

A combined biography of Meriwether Lewis and William Clark, and an account of the exploration of the Northwest which they carried out under orders from Thomas Jefferson. Index.

Booklist 44:148 D 15 '47

Kirkus 15:526 S 15 '47 110w

"The jacket of Mr. Bakeless's book says that he 'brings fresh insight and much new material' to his study of Lewis and Clark, and this time the blurb is right. The amount and the importance of the new material he has dug out must instantly impress any one who has worked in the field, and he has enormously lessened the labors of whoever may work in it hereafter. He has worked so tirelessly at the job which to all students has seemed endless that, so far as biography goes, one of those students is here willing to call it ended." Bernard DeVoto

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 D 21 '47 2000w

"The expedition is, of course, the author's main concern and rarely has it been so interestingly narrated; yet that is by no means all of this book. The personalities and achievements of the 'partners in discovery' are thoroughly established before the great adventure begins, and Mr. Bakeless follows them and their comrades to their graves. It is one of America's most dramatic stories, superbly told." J. K. Howard

+ N Y Times p3 D 28 '47 1500w

"Mr. Bakeless has done more than warm over the old story; the book shows evidence of considerable research, and the material is very ably handled."

+ New Yorker 23:146 D 13 '47 80w

"Mr. Bakeless has somehow succeeded in being both scholarly and popular in this book—an achievement which should earn him the warm gratitude of every American who likes to read of his country's fine, large years of expansion." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 23 '47 850w

"We have had to wait a long while for a good book on Lewis and Clark, and now at last we have one. . . . It is a pleasure, too, to report that Mr. Bakeless lends no credence to the sentimental nonsense about Sacagawa. Nobody else, so far as I am aware, has dealt intelligently with the sexual history of the expedition. If there is any real weakness in this book, within the terms of what it was Mr. Bakeless set out to do, it is perhaps some deficiencies in background with respect to Indians and Far Western exploration." D. L. Morgan

+ Sat R of Lit 31:8 Ja 17 '48 430w

BAKELESS, J. E. —Continued

"Bakeless has written a readable account of their journey, told as an efficient military operation. Their personalities emerge dimly; readers may grow confused about what happened to Lewis and what happened to Clark. The poetry and wild enthusiasm of their own journals is missing from this book."

Time 50:111 D 1 '47 700w

BAKER, CHARLOTTE. Nellie and the mayor's hat; story and pictures by [the author]. 96p $2.50 Coward-McCann

47-2899

"A sequel to 'Necessary Nellie' [Book Review Digest 1945] this tells how Antonia, Leopoldo, Julio, Alberto, and Rosita tried to arrange an adoption for Nellie's five puppies. The mayor seemed the best prospect—but the mayor refused to take them. When Nellie rescued his hat—a gift from the mayor of Monterey—he changed his mind." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 43:349 J1 1 '47

"Charlotte Baker tells the story with humor and perception, accompanied by zesty pictures in black and red. Fourth-grade children who loved the earlier book will love this."

A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:214 My '47 80w

Kirkus 15:365 J1 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by E. F. Clift

+ Library J 72:736 My 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Ap 13 '47 320w

"Once again the author and illustrator of 'Necessary Nellie' has constructed a story in which children, dogs and adults behave with sense and gaiety. The pictures are lively and good-humored. For children 6 to 10." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p33 Ap 20 '47 140w

"A jolly story filled with dogs, children, parades, and local color. Many drawings as amusing as the story."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:37 Ap 19 '47 60w

BAKER, DENYS VAL, ed. Modern British writing. 359p $3.50 Vanguard 820.8 English literature—Collections

A collection of present-day stories, poetry, criticism and essays, selected from the British "little" reviews. Bibliography.

Kirkus 15:615 N 1 '47 160w

"The bibliography of magazines with all historical detail is almost as valuable as the creative material. Libraries that emphasize history of literature and those that have students and writers as borrowers should buy this." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:1608 N 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 118:29 Ja 19 '48 750w

"This anthology of recently written British poetry, fiction and criticism is a painfully faithful reflection of current British life: drab, grey, intelligent, courageous."

Time 50:112 D 1 '47 450w

BAKER, DENYS VAL. White rock. 216p $2.50 Appleton-Century

47-2431

Study in morbid psychology, told thru the reactions of a normal small boy who is led to the brink of death by his devotion to a deranged, slightly older sister. The scene is the north coast of Wales, where the children, Powys and Margiad, go to live with their father and Auntie Sian and Uncle Emrys, after the death of their beautiful mother. The story is built up piece by piece, as Powys tries to reconcile his love for Margiad, and his desire to live a more normal life.

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Je 1 '47
500w

"This novel, while aiming for psychological subtlety with pipings of mystery, never gets beyond the hinting stage—and consequently, we grope about as much as the characters."

—Kirkus 14:625 D 15 '46 110w

"In 'The White Rock,' Mr. Baker goes boldly into the territory of morbid psychology, but with the beauty and terror of art rather than the aura of the clinic. The book is sensitively and closely written. It is a tour de force to have created through the mind of a normal and wholly credible small boy not only the extraordinary web of circumstance that surrounds the children but also the figures of the adults—their parents, the school teacher and the rest. Both for its matter and for the skill with which the author has told the story this is a haunting novel." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Mr 9 '47 600w

"There is obviously a good deal of Freudian symbolism in all this, though Mr. Baker himself seems not particularly concerned with it. More important than so-called 'psychological insight' is the honest emotion of the author. Mr. Baker makes Margiad's tortuous, tormented world seem, at least momentarily, real. For a first novel 'The White Rock' is markedly successful in conveying feeling and character." Patricia Page

N Y Times p12 Mr 23 '47 330w

"Like most romantics, Mr. Baker has been interested in sustaining a single, overwhelming, atmospheric effect. He does—with a style that is frequently sensitive, but too often overcharged, too often blurred. Let me add that the mist he throws up is not unpleasant; once having ceased to peer for the clear signs and the right road, you can wander at will and enjoy the Welsh landscape." Harold Tager

Sat R of Lit 30:29 Mr 15 '47 400w

BAKER, FRANK. Before I go hence; fantasia on a novel. 248p $2.75 Coward-McCann 47-1532

"Mr. Baker's theme is a novelist trying to bring to life a man whose presence he feels in a derelict farmhouse visited on a summer afternoon in 1943. The original twist is to make the novelist's presence also haunt his victim in the past. The victim is an Anglo-Catholic priest, the novelist an Anglo-Catholic pacifist and a musician." New Statesman & Nation

"It's a bit unconvincing to use the supernatural in order to supply a rationalization for man's earthly existence. For this reason, and because the talk of the people is often more earnest than profound, Before I Go Hence is better read as a literate mystery story than as a philosophical novel." Mary Pinchot

Atlantic 179:162 Ap '47 330w

Booklist 43:223 Mr 15 '47

"[This] book can be accepted as an example of 'what might be.' As such, it is both absorbing and stimulating, and its underlying themes provocative of much further thought." Dorothy Sparks

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Mr 9 '47
450w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Johnson

Commonweal 46:18 Ap 18 '47 470w

Kirkus 14:581 N 15 '46 300w

"The fragile wisps of plot are held together by expert characterization, intelligent and delicate writing. The book is definitely not for those who seek adventure tales, but it is adult, interestingly imaginative and different. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:76 Ja 1 '47 80w

"In less expert hands the consideration of this ancient and fundamental puzzle would slip into scholasticism and pedantry. Mr. Baker makes it as exciting as the bombs which fall on London during the course of the action. It provokes and stimulates the mind, but purely as a yarn for a winter evening it stands with the best. Such a combination is rarely encountered." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
F 16 '47 800w

"It's unfortunate that Mr. Baker has not resolved his conflict dramatically; the last half of his novel is much too weighty with 'cold philosophy' that breaks the spell he has so artfully built. Carrying his argument on a political plane, he not only assumes a tone of dogmatic reaction, but mars the artistic wholeness of his novel." Nona Balakian
+ N Y Times p10 Mr 9 '47 650w

Reviewed by Rayner Heppenstall
New Statesman & Nation 32:232 S 28
'46 270w

New Yorker 23:97 F 22 '47 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ap 6 '47
200w

"If the theme is fantastic, the treatment is soberly realistic. Granted the premise, the reader feels that this is how it must be. Mr. Baker's equipment is adequate to his exacting task, and two of his characters are very well done: Hilliar, the self-tortured and torturing artist, his spirit torn by what he must write, and the fine old man Fenner Doble, with his powerful questing mind locked up inside an aged and broken body. This is a novel worth reading both for its content and its workmanship."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p425 S 7 '46
480w

BAKER, MRS LAURA NELSON. Red mountain. 121p $2 Webb

46-8460

"In [this] little book, Laura Nelson Baker follows the progress of 7-year-old Myles Piper through an unusually severe year of existence. A sensitive, unworldly and introverted child at best, Myles—between his seventh and eighth birthdays—is brought face to face with a cascade of emotional disturbances, birth and death, poverty and degradation, separation from his father, schoolboy bullying and physical fright, to tick off the highlights." N Y Times

"A very sensitively written piece of fiction. . . Myles is not a common type of child, neither is he too rare, but the author who produced this piece of work may be a very rare type of mother. She has a nine-year-old son. It is as interesting to speculate about her life thoughts as a mother, as it is to speculate on the future of young Myles. This little book should impress adults with the variety and intensity of experiences that crowd the life of a child and remind them that the protection of that native awareness and sensitivity should be regarded as much a responsibility as keeping the child clean and nourished." Blodwen Davies

+ Canadian Forum 26:262 F '47 140w

"The handling of each episode is so restrained and delicate that the end result is rewarding reading. One wishes, moreover, that Myles could be happy sometime—if only at Christmas. But no, his nasty little cousins ruin even that tinsel-strung day for him by splintering his illusions and his toys. The author knows there is magic in childhood and she captures some of it—the rest slips away in the heavy mist of adult perspective. The little pilgrim of 'The Red Mountain' could take a lesson in protective emotional coloring from the innocent voyagers of 'High Wind in Jamaica,' as could his creator from Richard Hughes." Florence Crowther

N Y Times p14 N 10 '46 200w

BAKER, MORRIS B. Airline traffic and operations; prepared under the supervision of Publications division of the Academy of aeronautics, La Guardia field, New York. 430p il $4.50 McGraw

387.7 Aeronautics, Commercial. Aeronautics as a profession 47-11554

"Deals with the domestic air transport industry in the U.S. Many of the jobs concerned are described. Presents interline ticketing, air freight rates and types of cargo planes, and the Seever's plan for a nation-wide air-mail pick-up system. Written in nontechnical language." (Library J) List of visual aids. Index.

Booklist 44:167 Ja 1 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1376 O 1 '47 50w

BAKER, MRS NINA (BROWN). William the Silent. 271p $2.50 Vanguard

B or 92 William I, prince of Orange—Juvenile literature 47-6615

A biography of William of Orange, who spent much of his life in the struggle to free the Lowlands from the hold of Spain. For junior and senior high school readers. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:188 Ja 15 '48

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 15
'48 260w

"One of our preferred authors of biography has given us a readable, simply told story of probably the best-loved character in Dutch history. . . Recommended for ages 13 and up." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 73:49 Ja 1 '48 260w

"This is the most strikingly written of Mrs. Baker's biographies for young folks of high school age. . . History seen from a contemporary point of view, crowded with picturesque detail, the book is hero-literature of decided appeal." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
Ja 11 '48 280w

"'William the Silent' has drama and balance; there is no distortion of history and no editorializing, and when, rarely, Miss Baker points out a parallel to other, later times, it is neither forced nor arbitrary. The personalities are always real and human, within the boundaries of sixteenth century thought and action, though sometimes, most hearteningly, they transcended those boundaries." M. F.

+ N Y Times p43 N 16 '47 160w

BAKER, OLAF. Bengey and the beast; il, by Victory J. Dowling. 243p $2.75 Dodd 47-2100

Bengey was a young English boy, one of the Wortleys of Wulpington, who lived in an old manor house near a great forest. The lonely boy wandered in the woods and made friends with the animals and humans living there, but had the misfortune to make enemies of the local squire and his gamekeeper. The story is of Bengey's happy days in the forest and of his final triumph over his enemies.

Booklist 43:260 Ap 15 '47

"The story sounds like the remembered childhood of the author himself. Detailed accounts of manor house life, fox hunting, life in the villages, and many fascinating facts about animals and forest life are blended with highly imaginative events which seem entirely credible. Occasionally the author loses the child's viewpoint and speaks to the adult reader. He uses many big words and his phrasing is sometimes involved but the movement of the story is never lost. Every detail from Bengey's first meeting with Skoma to the last blood-curdling cry of the Gunderbust will hold the reader." Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 2 '47
370w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 10
'47 270w

"Humor and suspense add to the charm of this unusual story, delightfully illustrated by Victor Dowling, for the unusual child." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:212 My '47 220w

"Delightful account of a small boy's association with the animals and humans of the Far Forest. Bengey's friendship with Skoma, the fox, is delicately drawn and kept well within the bounds of reality." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 72:466 Mr 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr
30 '47 330w

BAKER, OLAF—Continued

"This is a curious story, disjointed, blending realism not altogether successfully with a kind of mystic approach to nature. Yet at its best it is both beautiful and wise, as well as exciting. Imaginative readers of 10 and up who can overlook Mr. Baker's verbosity and his occasional embarrassing cuteness will find it an oddly compelling tale." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 2 '47 230w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:151 D 6 '47 70w

"It is not possible to classify this book, even loosely, according to age. A mature reader recognizes in it an unusual and deeply convincing atmosphere, original characters, and writing that makes every page a joy to read. In spite of Gunderbust and his evil magic, it is not a fantasy. It is founded upon a knowledge of and feeling for the wild creatures of an English forest. Their integrity is never weakened by qualities that make them men, not animals. To this reviewer, this is one of the most original and interesting of the books of 1946. It may not be for the many. It certainly is for the 'real readers.' One puts it down with a sense of deep satisfaction."

M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:60 N 9 '46 330w

Wis Lib Bul 43:71 Ap '47

BAKKE, EDWARD WIGHT. Mutual survival; the goal of unions and management. 82p $1.50 Harper

331.1 Employment management. Trade unions

"Bakke addresses himself to the problem of unions and management when facing each other as organized groups—not as aggregations of individuals in interpersonal relations. He concludes, after analyzing interviews with 'sixty each of leading representatives of management and organized labor. . . ' that 'free unions, free management, free enterprise, and a free society will survive or go under together.' Hence, 'mutual survival' is the goal of unions and management—meaning survival of each in their present form and function and not in the sense of a collusive agreement between them at the public's expense." Am J Soc

Reviewed by Robert Dubin

Am J Soc 53:148 S '47 1350w

"This slim 80-page report is well worth reading not once but several times. If the experience of the reviewer is at all typical, other interested readers will find themselves looking back again and again to reconsider some of the many observations and insights contained in its pages. This represents industrial relations research at its finest—suggestive, provocative, stimulating; research with definite use-value that should aid both unions and management to understand more clearly the nature and significance of their own policies and practices and their effects upon one another." R. K. Burns

+ Management R 36:118 F '47 1050w

BAKSHY, ALEKSANDR, ed. Soviet scene; six plays of Russian life; tr. in collaboration with Paul S. Nathan; with an introd. by [the editor]. 348p $4.50 Yale univ. press

891.7208

A46-6139

Six plays translated from the Russian, chosen as a cross section of Soviet dramatic tastes from the revolution of 1917 to World war II. Contents: Lyubov Yarovaya, by Konstantin Trenyov; The chimes of the Kremlin, by Nikolay Pogodin; Father unknown, by Vassily Shkvarikin; Far Taiga, by Alexander Afinogenov; The square of flowers, by Vassily Ilyenkov; Twelve months, by Samuel Marshak. The book contains an introductory essay on the Soviet drama by the translator.

"Brilliant introduction by one of the most resourceful historians of modern Russian drama. . . Recommended for drama collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:1713 D 1 '46 80w

"It has to be said: these plays make dull reading even to the comparative few who, like myself, are in the habit of reading plays. It is conceivable that such a play as Marshak's 'Twelve Months' (1940) would make pleasant reading in the original Russian. In English it lacks the lightness of touch that is essential to a fairy tale." Eric Bentley

N Y Times p27 F 2 '47 1050w

"As a cross section, U.S. readers may find them interesting. But as drama they are flat, stale and unprofitable. All but one are marked by an iron-bound propriety of theme that is fatal to both their humor and their excitement."

— + Time 49:94 Ja 6 '47 900w

BALAKIAN, ANNA (MRS S. NALBANTIAN). Literary origins of surrealism; a new mysticism in French poetry. 159p $2.75 King's crown press

841.09 French poetry—History and criticism. Surrealism in literature 47-3452

The author's "motive in exploring once more the pathways leading from Romanticism to Baudelaire, and from Baudelaire to Lautréamont, Rimbaud and Mallarmé, down to the nihilism of Dada, is to attempt to show that these writings have contributed not so much to each other as to one general revolution in poetic mysticism; that this change, finding expression in a fusion of poetry with prose, has not only affected the form of art but has developed a new philosophy of reality which has been shaping around materialism the mystical propensity of a considerable number of twentieth-century artists." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

"Miss Balakian's book is a reassuring demonstration of an oft-observed truth: that doctoral dissertations can be written with zest and charm, can combine sensitiveness with scholarship, freshness and richness of personality with accumulation of knowledge. One might have wished fewer quotations in foreign languages, now and then greater clarity of thought and writing, and a bolder statement of the results of an admittedly acute analysis. These minor blemishes (not excluding a number of misprints) do not impair the quality of this book, one of the most enlightening devoted as yet to Surrealism." Henri Peyre

+ N Y Times p14 My 11 '47 900w

"According to all the academic features of Miss Balakian's book—its extensive and even conscientious research, its noble assumption that the Surrealists are 'serious' and a normal ingredient of tradition—according to these features, it would appear that this book, subtitled A New Mysticism in French Poetry, does a service to the reputation of its subject, the Surrealist contribution to literature. . . However, a scrutiny of the book's contents quite dissolves this framework of appearance and expectation. The sort of energy, to speak plainly, which Miss Balakian has competently employed here is that post-mortem zeal (the movement is historically traced only to 1920) which one may have in speaking of an interesting corpse. . . The suspicion that Miss Balakian is not in the least interested in the content of Surrealist literature, or of its 'origins' as these foreshadowed Surrealism, gains ground as the book proceeds." Parker Tyler

Poetry 70:282 Ag '47 1050w

"Despite its title this volume manages to plod through practically all French poetry of note since 1870. This kind of extension of the meaning of surrealism confuses the issue considerably, but at least it enables the author to discuss poets like Baudelaire and Rimbaud. An attempt to analyze the romantic background of the movement comes off rather poorly, and the two closing chapters, which deal to a large extent with the 'philosophy' of surrealism come off even worse." A. F.

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 20 '47 100w

"I find the book's conclusion too pessimistic, but Anna Balakian has done a stimulating, badly needed job which might have been helped by a closer study of surrealist painting as a corollary force." J. T. Soby

+ Sat R of Lit 30:27 Je 28 '47 120w

"The book is addressed to the literary and scholarly reader, but should be of interest to the general reader as well. . . In a field which has received little impersonal criticism, this work is a definite contribution."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:129 Je '47 150w

BALDRIDGE, CYRUS LE ROY. Time and chance. 432p il $7.50 Day

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-12242

The life story of an American artist. In it he incorporates the story of his travels through many lands: Africa; China; India; Japan; the Middle East; and Europe; and he illustrates the account with many of his own drawings.

"One of the privileges of being a book-critic is the opportunity to read—under the guise of work—such books as Cyrus LeRoy Baldrige's 'Time and Chance.' Beautifully illustrated with examples of the artist's work, exceptionally well-written, it is loaded from cover to cover with stimulating and challenging reflections of the world in which we live." Emmett Dedmon

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 N 30 '47 350w

"Facile line of magazine illustration and calendar art style, excess wordage concerning the Baldrige travels. Index would be useful; book is diverting but not essential." A. S. Plaut

Library J 73:40 Ja 1 '48 90w

"He is never dramatic. But a growing excellence and suavity, and always a respect for people, mark his work through the years. The hundreds of illustrations here, sketchbook of a lifetime, are less important than the book itself, though Baldrige's crayons and palette are key to his comings and goings, the way of his livelihood, his special passport to strange places." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 N 30 '47 1200w

"The book is written in a modest, pedestrian sort of way that is redeemed for interesting reading by an unassertive but genuine sympathy for the people of the world. As an artist he is an excellent journalist, and many of his drawings are sure, candid notations of the picturesque." W. G. Dooley

+ N Y Times p4 D 28 '47 900w

"He writes of his wanderings and adventures in an easygoing and amusing manner, and his book is crammed with his accurate, often cold, but more often engaging drawings."

+ New Yorker 23:146 D 13 '47 130w

"Baldrige writes in a rambling, easy style, as if he were chatting by a fireside, with a humor not for loud laughter but for chuckling over. His book is long, not one to read in a hurry, but delightful for those who like to travel in leisurely and informed fashion across the world, seeing people not as strange and quaint but sympathetically, as members of a world family. There are generous illustrations." Eleanor Breed

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 21 '47 950w

"In the streets of Peking, where the rickshaw coolies nickname their customers, Mr. Baldrige was 'Tall-Picture-Fellow-with-Big-Feet.' In this freehand, wide-ranging autobiography he appears as an artist with a liking for people of every creed and color and with an endless curiosity about their lives. These qualities warm the hundreds of drawings in this handsome book, and they give a three-dimensional reality to his life story. It is a story of a restless American who acquired a cosmopolitan grasp of the world. And it is equally a story of people in the streets of Peking, the bazaars of Baghdad, and the jungle clearings of Africa." Walter Havighurst

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 D 13 '47 1000w

BALDWIN, FAITH. Sleeping beauty. 250p $2.50 Rinehart

47-1630

The love story of a strikingly beautiful young nurse and a doctor she had known all her life.

Booklist 43:224 Mr 15 '47

"Glamorous, amorous, assured."

Kirkus 15:13 Ja 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 Ap 6 '47 100w

BALDWIN, THOMAS WHITFIELD. Shakspeare's five-act structure; Shakspeare's early plays on the background of renaissance theories of five-act structure from 1470. 848p $20 Univ. of Ill.

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Technique 47-2919

"To refute those 'of our most eminent scholars' who 'at this late day argue that Shakspeare did not write his plays in acts' seems to be the chief purpose of this bulky study. It also exemplifies the movement to put Shakespeare in the setting of his age, rather than to consider him merely 'for all time.' The study attempts to review the deliberate use of five acts from the time of Terence—and to some extent from that of the Greeks—to 1591, the date the author assigns to Romeo and Juliet." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The title of his new work promises less than it performs. . . While assiduous over detail Professor Baldwin makes use of surmise with such happy results that the printed page, like the violin of a virtuoso, vanishes at times and the happy reader seems to be pushing his way into the Blackfriars to see the genius-guiding plays of Lyly for himself. New evidence is brought forward and old evidence is newly presented to the enrichment of our knowledge of Shakespeare whatever theories may be held."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p189 Ap 26 '47 5150w

"The detail of treatment in this study often obscures its intention. Valuable details can, however, be gleaned from the volume by well-trained, critical and patient readers."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:231 S '47 240w

BALINSKA, IRENA. Secret camp; il. by Marthe Rajchman. 245p $2.50 Morrow

47-3260

Adventure story for older boys. The scene is a New England town in vacation time. Two boys discover a lake and a cave not far from their home, and decide to keep it a secret from their gang. Before long their secret is discovered and Mike's map drawing and Bill's exploring tendencies get them mixed up with something more sinister than their gang.

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '47

Kirkus 15:217 Ap 15 '47 80w

"Well written and entertaining. However, there is a great deal of technical talk about map drawing that might detract from the story interest in some cases. Recommended for older boys." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 72:962 Je 15 '47 70w

"This is a book for boys; if I could have seen it when I was ten or so it would have been mine, for it is about things such as log rafts, totem poles and paterans. . . It is an adventure story, but its most interesting feature is maps." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Je 15 '47 290p

"The plot is convincing, the action is fast and the characterizations are well drawn. The illustrations, the detailed, easy-to-follow descriptions of how Bill and Mike make their maps and the manner in which map-reading becomes essential to the development of the story—all make this an unusually effective 'how to do it' story." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p25 Jl 13 '47 180w

BALINSKA, IRENA—Continued

"This is a good story, with convincing and interesting characters. The volume is also a guide to cartography."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 S 6 '47 190w

Springf'd Republican p5B S 14 '47 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:121 J1 '47

BALL, JOHN. Records for pleasure. 214p $2.50 Rutgers univ. press

789.9 Phonograph records

Advice on building a record library. Contains information on such subjects as points to watch for when buying records and the care of records. There is an annotated list of 200 recordings which are easily obtainable; a glossary; a brief list of agencies for hard-to-get records; and an index.

Booklist 44:146 D 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 N 23 '47 20w

"Where resources are limited, to be preferred to the Affelder: How to Build a Record Library, and generally very useful. . . Recommended wherever there is local interest in music." Leonard Burkat

+ Library J 72:1781 D 15 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:171 D '47

BALL, JOHN MCNICKLE. Reclaimed rubber; the story of an American raw material; with a foreword by William Welch; and an epilogue by Fred. E. Traffet. 248p il $5 Rubber reclaimers assn, inc, 250 W. 57th st, N.Y. 19 678 Rubber waste 47-4868

"At the wish of the Rubber Reclaimers Association, this well illustrated treatise has been prepared to present the history of the rubber reclaiming industry. It also includes material on the commercial aspects and technical processes of the industry today, as well as its wartime contributions." (Chem Eng) Bibliography. Index.

Chem Eng 54:276 S '47 70w

"Primarily a very good history but half of book is devoted to reclaiming processes, scrap rubber, current practices, mechanical treatment, properties, uses and statistics." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:1037 J1 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:57 J1 '47

BALLARD, WILLIAM R. There is no mystery about patents. 120p $2 J. M. Barrett corp, 220 E. 42d st, N.Y. 17

608 Patents 47-107

"This primer is a good exposition of our present patent system. Basic facts, simply and convincingly presented concerning the fundamentals of the American patent system indicating how the system works to accomplish its intended purpose. E. B. Jewett, President, National Academy of Sciences says author 'has performed a distinct public service.'" Library J

"The presentation is clear and justifies either the actual title or the alternative suggested here. The essentials of the patent system are discussed briefly in such readable terms that understanding is little or no effort. The arguments for retention of the present system are simple, logical, and convincing. However, it is regrettable that these two themes could not have been kept separate in the book. Nevertheless, while the intermingling proved an unwelcome distraction to this reviewer, the value of the book is great as an information source and a basis for effective action by the scientist-citizen." D. O. Myatt

+ Chem & Eng N 25:632 Mr 3 '47 320w

"The title of this book sounds a false keynote. Instead of performing the sorely needed function of dispelling the aura of mystery which surrounds patents and patent law in the minds of laymen and a large segment of the legal profession, Mr. Ballard's brief work emerges as an unconvincing defense of the present patent system. Thus, the 'uninformed' in patent law, to whom this book is addressed, should approach it with more than the proverbially required grain of salt."

— Columbia Law R 47:173 Ja '47 140w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:78 Ja 1 '47 50w

"The subject of patents needs more exhaustive consideration than Mr. Ballard was able to give it in a small book of which a third is devoted to a statement of the law and excerpts from the testimony taken by Congressional committees. But within limits Mr. Ballard has presented the case of the conservatives ably and cogently, even if he has not removed this ex-patent lawyer's conviction that the patent system needs to be changed in the light of new social exigencies." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p34 Mr 2 '47 500w

BALLOU, ROBERT O. History of the Council on books in wartime. See the Council

BALZAC, HONORE. Hidden masterpiece. See Picasso, P. Forty nine lithographs

BANKS, POLAN. Carriage entrance. 280p $2.75 Putnam 47-2393

Romantic tale of love and revenge, the background of which is the aristocratic Creole society of New Orleans in the 1890's.

Reviewed by H. T. Kane

— Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Mr 30 '47 290w

Kirkus 15:44 Ja 15 '47 110w

"Buy for readers who want romance with just a touch of scandal, some intrigue, suspense and a happy ending." Margaret Owen

+ Library J 72:462 Mr 15 '47 40w

"Polan Banks prints New Orleans society in the '90s in full color, somewhat at the expense of his characters, done in black and white with no depth or shading. The contrasts are sharp, but not subtle, and overheated passions leave one cold. Pride and perfidy, compassion and cruelty, are manifested with such machinelike precision that the conflicts lose emotional validity. There is too much mumbo jumbo in Mr Banks's Creole gumbo." Lisle Bell

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ag 3 '47 90w

"Those who are more than willing for coincidence and ambulant characterization to lift a narrative over the rough spots should enjoy Mr. Banks' gilt and plush roman en papillote." N. K. Burger

N Y Times p20 Ap 13 '47 400w

BANNING, MRS MARGARET (CULKIN). Clever sister. 275p $2.50 Harper 47-1879

Nell and Hester Evans were brought up in genteel poverty in a thriving midwestern city. Hester made a career of herself and marriage. When she drove her first husband to financial ruin and suicide, she marshalled her forces and found herself a wealthy man. Nell was the career girl, who held a fine job, got into politics, and in the end had to admit that she wanted a husband, too.

Booklist 43:241 Ap 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 F 23 '47 180w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 22 '47 500w

Kirkus 14:622 D 15 '47 150w

"A book by this author always has a large following among readers of light fiction. Recommended." Mary Clark

+ Library J 72:319 F 15 '47 70w

"Having read most of her work, we do not hesitate to appraise this as her best performance—incisive, sympathetic and stimulating. . . Mrs. Banning has found room for everything, but her book is neither cluttered nor talk-heavy. It is wise without malice, crisp and civilized." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Mr 16 '47 650w

Wis Lib Bul 43:68 Ap '47

BANNING, NINA LLOYD. Pit pony; il. by Farrell R. Collett. 167p $2 Knopf 47-31031

A Welsh boy and a pony he loved are the chief characters in this story for grades four to eight. The pony is sold to become a pit pony and the boy rediscovers him when he goes to work in the same mine. The story is of the boy's efforts to protect the pony and the results.

Booklist 44:74 O 15 '47

"Happy the ten-year-old who gets this one for Christmas." B. J. Thompson
+ Cath World 166:236 D '47 70w

"A good story, but not easy reading for American children, to whom the life of the child miners and the pit ponies will seem strange and terrible."

Kirkus 15:503 S 15 '47 80w

"Well written. Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 72:1380 O 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by N. B. Baker

N Y Times p36 O 12 '47 140w

+ Sat R of Lit 30:54 N 15 '47 40w

Wis Lib Bul 43:134 O '47

BANNING, WILLIAM PECK. Commercial broadcasting pioneer. 308p il $3.50 Harvard univ. press

621.384193 Radio broadcasting. New York (city). Radio station WEAf 47-811

"Subtitled 'The WEAf Experiment, 1922-1926,' this book gives a detailed account of how the American Telephone and Telegraph Company came to set up radio station WEAf as a test of commercial broadcasting, and how the present-day network system of broadcasting was established." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by John Crosby

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17
Mr 9 '47 1050w

"This is not a book for the general reader, but those in the radio industry will be delighted with its rich documentation, its method of presentation, and above all, its splendid index." E. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 2 '47 160w

"In presenting the idea of 'toll broadcasting' and its development into network broadcasting, Mr. Banning has striven for accuracy and objectivity, supporting his account with much valuable material from the American Telephone and Telegraph Company records. The volume should find a place in the largely unwritten history of radio."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:163 Je '47 200w

BANNON, LAURA MAY. Baby Roo; pictures by [the author]. 28p $1.50 Houghton 47-30787

Picture storybook about a baby kangaroo who was sent from her own country and placed among some self-satisfied farm animals. Never having been away from the farm they were most unpleasant to Baby Roo until the kindly and more intelligent farm dog explained things.

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week O 18 '47 130w
Kirkus 15:465 S 1 '47 110w

"Unfortunately, [the author's] approach has been self-conscious. Not only is the text disappointing, but the heavy lithographs lack the charm we have come to expect from Laura Bannon. It may have some appeal, however, because of its simplicity and its good intentions." Mary Strang

— Library J 72:1276 S 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O
26 '47 270w

Sat R of Lit 30:38 N 15 '47 40w

BANNON, LAURA MAY. Patty paints a picture; story and pictures. [48p] $2 Whitman, A. 47-366

Patty takes her kitten to the children's art class at the city art museum to pose for its picture. At the end of the class the kitten has disappeared and there is a great commotion. Picture-story book for grades two to four.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 179:128 Je '47 50w

Booklist 43:192 F 15 '47

"An enchanting book telling the story of a very young artist." Martha King
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p8 D 22 '46 250w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 24 '47 180w

"Little children who like to make pictures will enjoy both illustrations and story."

+ Horn Bk 23:107 Mr '47 50w

"Large, clear type and gay illustrations by the author. Recommended for little girls 7-9." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 70:228 F 1 '47 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:39 F '47

BARBEAU, CHARLES MARIUS. Alaska beckons; il. by Arthur Price. 343p $4.50 Caxton printers

979.8 Alaska—Antiquities. Alaska—History. Indians of North America—Alaska 47-3626

"A detailed summary of the myths and legends of the Déné, Tlingit, Tsimshyan and other tribes of the Aleutians, Alaska and western Canada. Uses these myths and legends to reconstruct the early migrations from Asia. Considers totems, amulets and art work in relation to the myth and legend." (Library J) The author is a Canadian anthropologist. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 44:10 S 1 '47

"There are better books on Alaska."

Kirkus 15:118 F 15 '47 80w

"Interesting in stretches but overpowering in total effect. Needed only in special anthropological collections. Not geared to present popular interest in the Territory." R. E. Kingery

Library J 72:634 Ap 15 '47 90w

"'Alaska Beckons' is essential to the library of anyone who would know Alaska in the epochs before the Russian traders and the British mariners came. . . This book, too, explodes many old notions. Totem poles are not ancient at all, writes Dr. Barbeau. Most of them are less than a hundred years old." R. L. Neuberger

+ N Y Times p17 Je 1 '47 330w

Reviewed by Ernest Gruening

Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ag 2 '47 50w

Spring'd Union p6 Jl 12 '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:115 Jl '47

BARBER, WILLETTA ANN, and SCHABE-LITZ, RUDOLPH FREDERICK. Drawback to murder. 292p il $2.50 Scribner 47-3786

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
Ap 20 '47 140w

"Sherry's story of how Kit solves the mystery has a little too much of the 'had I but known' element, but on the whole it serves to point out what her husband sees in his sketches and what Mary contributes toward the solution." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p34 Ap 20 '47 230w

BARBER, W. A.—Continued

"Admirers of the Storms should find this up to par."

New Yorker 23:100 Ap 26 '47 90w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 27 '47 100w

"Enjoyable."

Sat R of Lit 30:30 Je 14 '47 50w

BARBOUR, NEVILL. Palestine: star or crescent? [Eng title: Nisi dominus]. 310p $3 Odyssey 956.9 Palestine—Politics and government.

Palestine—Jewish-Arab problem. Zionism
47-3000

"It is Mr. Barbour's aim to record in compact form all the essential steps which have led to the present tragic conditions in Palestine. He summarizes the Jewish connexion with the country from Abraham to Bar Cocheba, touches lightly on the following seventeen centuries of exile during which 'Zionism' was no more than the mystical or messianic yearning for the nation's restoration to Zion at the end of time, and then describes the growth of the movements in east Europe which, after about 1860, transformed this yearning into something practical, something which might somehow mitigate the existing ills of exiled Jewry. Together with this, Mr. Barbour sketches the history of Palestine's native population." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

"If the book cannot be classified as 100 per cent objective, the fault lies with the topic and not with the author. No book on Palestine can be objective, unless it would limit itself to mere description of conditions or uncommented assembling of data. Mr. Barbour's work is no exception to that rule. Since he rejects the idea of an all-Jewish state in the Holy Land, he cannot be expected to put as much emphasis on the Jewish as on the Arab arguments. The difference is slight, but it is there and it will give the Zionists an opening for their probable attacks against the book." E. S. P.

Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 26 '47 550w

"The historical presentation is shallow and warped; Jewish achievements in Palestine are discounted, Jewish personalities usually presented with a certain amount of nastiness. This bit of propaganda adds nothing of value to the immense literature on the subject." J. A. Maynard

— Churchman 161:19 My 1 '47 90w

"The story and most of the arguments have worn rather threadbare, and it cannot be said that the book is illuminating about a solution to the present troubles. What is distinctive is the scholarly approach to the history of the Jews and the Arabs in Palestine through the ages and of the beginnings and development of Zionism. Mr. Barbour is an accomplished student, he knows the Middle East by living in it, he knows Hebrew as well as Arabic, he has mastered the literature, and, lastly, he has a skilful if bitter pen. . . It is when he comes to most recent times . . . that he is turned to the partisan." N. B.

— Manchester Guardian p3 O 29 '46 300w

"Mr. Barbour's book has the outward appearance of careful scholarship, but it contains many statements . . . which are in conflict with the facts as the Committee of Inquiry found them. His book does, however, point up the desperate need for a definitive American policy not only in relation to Palestine, but to the entire Middle East." B. C. Crum

Nation 164:549 My 10 '47 600w

"Barbour's book is replete with inconsistencies. When it suits the purpose, the Zionist movement is described as if it were a single-minded, united organization; at other times, it is declared to be splintered and disunited. . . No effort is made to describe the political structure of the Arab community, the nature of the Arab nationalist movement, or the concentration of political power in the hands of a small circle." Jay Hurewitz

Sat R of Lit 30:12 My 17 '47 700w

"A sort of lawyer's brief, burdened with ex parte citations running back to a few millenniums before Christ in order to analyze the opposing claims to Palestine of Jews and Arabs, to the Arab's advantage." Blair Bolles
— Survey G 36:309 My '47 310w

"Mr. Barbour struggles to preserve due balance and objectivity, but he is hampered by wholehearted sympathy for the Palestinian Arabs and enthusiastic faith in a revived Arab civilization. Thus, while little is omitted in the rehearsal of the essential arguments for the Jewish and the Arab causes, he yet goes out of his way to appeal for charity towards the vagaries of the Mufti, to minimize the guilt of the Iraqi Arabs in massacring the Assyrian Christians . . . to justify the relative scant recruitment of Palestinian Arabs in the late war, and to argue that the fruitfulness of the Esdraelon Valley was quite as great under Arab as under Jewish cultivation."

Times [London] Lit Sup p447 S 21 '46
300w

BARDIN, JOHN FRANKLIN. Last of Philip Banter. 198p $2.50 Dodd

47-17699

Mystery story.

"The tale is an excruciating ingenuity decked out with psychiatric terminology and a repellent cast that is thrust on a stage and jerked about rather idly." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 F 23 '47 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 F 16 '47 280w

N Y Times p31 Mr 30 '47 200w

"All very involved, but an improvement over 'The Deadly Percheron,' the author's first mystery."

New Yorker 23:99 F 22 '47 100w

"Promising start; but lackadaisical plotting and verbose self-analysis by all characters make a book which is neither good nor bad, but plain dull." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 2 '47 110w

"Actions of neurotic lot of characters hold interest despite ponderous pages of palpable psychiatric padding. Even doctor 'detective' seems slightly nuts."

Sat R of Lit 30:26 Mr 1 '47 40w

BARDON, MINNA. Blood-red death. 255p $2 Phoenix

47-18599

Detective story.

"It is a dreadful mess all around until a detective known as Giant explains everything in the final chapter. Or perhaps one should say that he explains everything that can be explained. We should like to know just how Uncle Tim grew those marvelous tomatoes." I. A.

N Y Times p24 My 25 '47 70w

— Sat R of Lit 30:68 Ap 12 '47 40w

BARKE, JAMES. The wind that shakes the barley. 348p $3 Macmillan

Burns, Robert—Fiction

47-2788

A novel based on the life of Robert Burns. Beginning with William Burns, Robert's father, arriving at Alloway some years before the birth of his oldest son, the book covers the time up to the elder Burns' death, when Robert was in his middle twenties. This is the first in a proposed series of novels about the poet's life.

Booklist 43:290 My 15 '47

Reviewed by J. F. Macdonald

Canadian Forum 26:237 Ja '47 230w

Reviewed by A. J. Green

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 My 25 '47 270w

Christian Century 64:715 Je 4 '47 100w

"The degrading side of the man is emphasized, as the reader is taken from one farm to another, introduced to the 'pretty lasses' and made acquainted with episodes and incidents in Burns's life which no person of sound judgment and discrimination would care to read. The language is coarse, cheapening, and witless. . . [The novel] adds nothing to what has been written about Burns, other than inconsequential chatter in the way of conversation—and the conversation is about as natural as a paper flower. It is in the vernacular, true, and shows familiarity with the dialect. But its contents—trivial, dull, and unworthy of the subject." W. W. C.

— Christian Science Monitor p11 J1 26 '47
420w

"Written out of a thorough familiarity with Burns' poetry and letters, with scholarship, and also with a feeling for eighteenth-century Scotland. . . Fictional biography at its best, this recaptures much of the hardship—and the beauty—of his youth, with an authentic accent."

+ Kirkus 15:175 Mr 15 '47 90w

"Story is largely in Scottish dialect and at times difficult to read." E. H. Crowell
Library J 72:732 My 1 '47 80w

"It is robustly done; Scottish words are effectively used; William the father is a well-drawn character. . . There is excess of incident and no austerity of manner; the brevity of some of the chapters strengthens the cinematographic impression." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 21 '46 120w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
My 25 '47 130w

"The Wind That Shakes the Barley" would still be a good story, even if the hero were named Jock Campbell and all the allusions to Burns' poetry were removed. It brings Scotland to life as convincingly as did Sir Walter Scott himself. And it leaves one wondering, again, why Hollywood has never thought of using Burns as the subject for a movie." DeLancey Ferguson

+ N Y Times p5 My 11 '47 650w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 29 '47
250w

"Mr. Barke uses dialect as he chooses, but even unfamiliar Scots words are not hard to find meaning for in their proper context. The dialect serves to give flavor; to this reviewer at least it is rightfully there. The book is a thorough pleasure to read." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 Je 21 '47 900w

"Recent scholarship has made the circumstances of Burns's life familiar to all students of the poet; but there must be many who honour Burns in annual dinners, and love him for a few of his poems, who yet know little about him except that he was a ploughman and a poet. To such, Mr. Barke's work should do a good service and make a strong appeal. He writes out of a thorough familiarity with Burns's poems and letters, and with the work of scholars like De Lancey Ferguson; to this he adds a wide knowledge of conditions in eighteenth-century Scotland, and a great feeling for the Scottish countryside."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p329 J1 13
'46 600w

Wis Lib Bul 43:97 Je '47

BARKER, GEORGE. Love poems. 79p $2 Dial press

821

47-4364

Four cycles of love poems by an English poet.

Reviewed by H. P. Lazarus

Nation 165:290 S 20 '47 270w

"To juxtapose personal emotion and the impersonal abstractions by which it is nowadays ringed, requires an eye for telling detail and a precisely scaled vocabulary. It is not accomplished by hurling incongruities at each other. More and more, I feel, this is what Mr. Barker is coming to rely on." Lloyd Frankenberg

N Y Times p18 Je 8 '47 260w

"It would be well, since Mr. Barker is obviously not a toy-maker, if he were to discard certain playthings: the too surprising distortion of language, the quaintness too arch, all the bizarre paraphernalia which were better left to the use of a Kenneth Patchen or a Gil Orlovitz. He is too valuable a poet to be spending so much time in the nursery." Dudley Fitts

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:34 Ag 2 '47 550w

BARKER, RICHARD HINDRY, ed. The fatal caress, and other accounts of English murders from 1551 to 1888; with a pref. by Anthony Boucher. 210p $3 Duell

364.3 Murder. Crime and criminals—Great Britain 47-31029

A collection of English murders, dating from 1551 to 1888, taken from contemporary pamphlets, chronicles, old books, etc. The title piece is an excerpt from De Quincey's On Murder Considered as One of the Fine Arts.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p35 O 17 '47
100w

Kirkus 15:451 Ag 15 '47 160w

+ New Repub 117:31 S 22 '47 90w

"Each case is presented with very little embroidery, and unless you happen to have rather special antiquarian tastes, you may think the book monotonous."

New Yorker 23:107 S 20 '47 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 14 '47
60w

"Most readable collection of its kind to date. Mostly 'new' material—all reeking with evil. Editor's sententious forewords are little gems. Worth owning."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 S 13 '47 50w

BARKER, ROGER GARLOCK, and others. Adjustment to physical handicap and illness; a survey of the social psychology of physique and disability. 372p pa $2 Social science research council

301.15 Disabled. Social psychology 47-5513

"Under headings of physical size, crippling, tuberculosis, auditory impairment and acute illness, Adjustment to Physical Handicap summarizes and comments upon the general scientific knowledge available and the related important studies made. In each section, an attempt is made to present as full a picture as is justified by current knowledge of the behavior patterns characteristic of each disability, in the hope that these reviews will provide a background for more adequate methods of dealing with the disabled and as an impetus to further research. Closely related to recent discussion in the pages of this journal is the section 'Employment of the Disabled' which reviews employer practices, summarizes work records and suggests personnel procedures to improve the present lot of this group. Comprehensive bibliographies covering the above-noted headings complete the text." Library J

"The title of this book does not prepare one for the wealth of material contained between its covers. The insight of the authors in dealing with the psychosomatic approach to many problems of the handicapped should make this a valuable reference for the medical and allied professions regardless of each one's special interest. . . The book is well organized and comprehensive, yet written in an interesting style, and completely indexed. The extensive bibliography is most inclusive." M. P. Ladd

+ Am J Pub Health 37:927 J1 '47 450w

"The authors have . . . amassed and critically scrutinized many pertinent studies in the field, and, by thus minimizing the preliminary work, they have provided a short cut to future research. By their practical suggestions, they can help medical practitioners, therapists, employers, and others who deal with disabled persons." S. K. Weinberg

+ Am J Soc 53:239 N '47 950w

Reviewed by L. G. Brown

Ann Am Acad 252:168 J1 '47 500w

BARKER, R. G.—Continued

"Although sections of this report are heavy with psychological jargon, the main outlines of the review can be seen without special knowledge. In its pattern, this publication would seem to suggest a possible application to the current literature and problems of librarianship." R. E. Klingery

Library J 72:524 Ap 1 '47 500w

"Those engaged in vocational rehabilitation will need this book for reference." Gabriel Lasker

+ Social Forces 26:111 O '47 720w

BARKINS, MRS EVELYN (WERNER). The doctor has a baby; il. by Burmah Burris. 230p $2.50 Creative age

817 47-2384

Light-hearted, semi-fictional account of how the author and her doctor husband went thru the first throes of parenthood.

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 My 4 '47 450w

Reviewed by Phyllis Liapes

San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 11 '47 410w

Wis Lib Bul 43:77 My '47

BARKSDALE, LENA, ed. Treasure bag; stories and poems; il. by Maurice Brevannes. 159p $3 Knopf

47-31032

A collection of fairy tales, nursery rhymes, and other poems, and riddles, for ages four to seven. Illustrated in color.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:440 N '47 80w

"Good family collection of stories, poems and riddles. . . I like most of the illustrations, but now and again there's a grotesque grimness, a distorted humor, that I found distasteful."

+ Kirkus 15:501 S 15 '47 160w

"An unusual and interesting collection of fairy tales. . . The modernistic illustrations by Maurice Brevannes are gay and colorful and full of interesting detail." N. L. Rathbun

+ Library J 72:1380 O 1 '47 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ja 4 '48 270w

"For 5, 6 and 7 year olds Lena Barksdale has filled an imaginary bag full to overflowing with stories and poems until every child will feel rich in reading treasure." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p19 Ja 4 '48 150w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:147 D 6 '47 60w

BARLOW, RUTH C. Lisbeth Holly; il. by Rodolphe La Rivière. 209p $2.50 Dodd

47-31033

Story of a quiet, happy summer vacation spent by the Holly family in a cottage on the shores of Lake Michigan.

"The neighborhood is lovingly described and the children who appear in the story are a natural, likable group." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:442 N '47 80w

"Recommended for grades 5-6." Helen Kremer

+ Library J 72:1473 O 15 '47 70w

N Y Times p20 Ja 11 '48 150w

Reviewed by Dorothy Bridgwood

San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 16 '47 240w

Wis Lib Bul 43:132 O '47

BARNE, KITTY (MRS ERIC STREATFEILD). Musical honors. 207p $2.25 Dodd

47-11174

Story of a musical family living in England and what happened when the father of the four musical Redland children came back from

World war II with the idea that music alone could not make a decent living for them.

Booklist 44:137 D 1 '47

"Whether you are enthusiastic about music or not, you will find that Kitty Barne, in her incomparable way, has written an entrancing story about life in England today during rationing and reconstruction." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 D 18 '47 300w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:39 Ja '48 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 D 21 '47 700w

"A good picture of English family life with special appeal for aspiring musicians of 10 to 14." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p42 O 19 '47 180w

"A good story, fresh and humorous, with a happy ending."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:56 N 15 '47 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p636 D 6 '47 60w

BARNES, GLADEON MARCUS. Weapons of World war II. 317p il $7.50 Van Nostrand

623.8 Ordnance. World war, 1939-1945—U.S. 47-30344

"Part played by America in World War II in the development of ordnance material, the building of the armament vividly and authentically told by Major-General Barnes, Chief of the Research and Development Service until 1945 who reveals the development, designing, standardizing and quantity production of 1,000 major weapons. Detailed information on small arms, machine guns, artillery, aircraft, armament, bombs, tanks and other weapons, their characteristics, uses in the field and results. Profusely illustrated." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:354 Jl 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:890 Je 1 '47 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:30 Ap '47

San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 21 '47 170w

BARNES, MARGARET CAMPBELL. Within the hollow crown. 359p $3 Macrae Smith co. Richard II, king of England—Fiction

47-11910

Historical novel based on the life of Richard II of England. It begins when Richard was fifteen and closes with his murder.

Booklist 44:151 D 15 '47

Kirkus 15:553 O 1 '47 210w

"Mrs. Barnes takes some pains to show that Richard was a nicer fellow than Shakespeare made him out to be. But when all the sword-play is over, her Richard seems a little too good to be true. And not only that: Mrs. Barnes' paeon to Richard is so breathless that she drops her literary guard and all sorts of furies swarm in upon her. Her book, as a consequence is sentimental and imprecise."

— N Y Times p17 D 28 '47 500w

BARNES-AUSTIN, EDGAR HAROLD SPED-DING (E. WYNTON-LOCKE, pseud). Mark Eminence. 343p $2.75 McBride

47-2061

Romantic novel of England during the reign of Charles II.

"Fairly well-written. Not recommended for permanent collections, even though it has definite Hollywood possibilities and if made into a movie will be in demand." H. P. Boman

Library J 72:320 F 15 '47 110w

"The plot is meticulously tangled and elaborately unraveled, and the style—for all its vigorous epithet and Restoration vapors—far from rousing." Lisle Bell

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
Ap 6 '47 120w

Spring'd Republican p10B S 28 '47 90w

BARNETT, ALBERT EDWARD. New Testament, its making and meaning. 304p $2.50
Abingdon-Cokesbury

225.6 Bible. New Testament—Introductions
46-5640

"Some eight years ago the late Principal H. Wheeler Robinson in England offered a volume to the public on The Old Testament, Its Making and Meaning. The book was not an introduction. It was the publication of a series of lectures on a few broad currents of Hebrew thought and religion as illustrated in the Scriptures. Dr. Barnett's work seems to have been meant by the publishers to be a companion volume to the earlier book. But apart from the similarity of names the comparison ends. For the author of The New Testament: Its Making and Meaning has written a short introduction to the twenty-seven books of the Christian Testament and shaped it to serve as a convenient handbook for students." Crozer Q

"For the most part the views Dr. Barnett sets forth are, as he hoped they would be, 'sufficiently representative of the judgments of competent scholarship in the field to deserve the attention of students.' His is a useful book which provides in modest compass a large amount of conveniently assembled facts. My principal criticism would be that the invariable arrangement of chapters with the same sixfold divisions, with the repetition of the same questions, takes away from its readability, at times gives it the appearance of being a machine-gun barrage of facts." M. S. Enslin

+ — Christian Century 63:1120 S 18 '46
1200w

Reviewed by R. O. Kevin
Crozer Q 24:74 Ja '47 700w

"The scope of this book is more limited than that of other introductory textbooks. . . There is no effort to convey a unified impression of the historical or theological development of the Christian movement. . . The accent is placed not on whetting the reader's appetite or encouraging his subjective appropriation of faith but on providing him with objective historical data and with Dr. Barnett's inferences from those data. Consequently, the chief use of the book will be as a text and reference book, to be nibbled in small bits whenever the hunger for such data appears." P. S. Minear

J Religion 27:145 Ap '47 500w

BARNETT, GRACE TRELEVEN, and BARNETT, OLIVE ELIZABETH. Mystery in Mission valley [il. by the authors]. 171p $2.50 Oxford

47-31183

Mystery story for teen aged readers.

"Good suspense and a nice family feeling, plus a fine ending."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7A N 19 '47
140w

"It is not an outstanding book, but more sincerity and effort have gone into it than into the ordinary run-of-the-mill book of this type." M. B. Snow

Library J 72:1474 O 15 '47 60w

BARNOUW, ERIK. Handbook of radio writing; an outline of techniques and markets in radio writing in the United States. rev ed 336p $3 Little; student's ed $2.25 Heath

791.4 Radio authorship 47-4716

"A revised edition of one of the standard books on radio writing, recommended by Corwin, Oboler, Wishengrad and used as a text for many courses in radio. One section is given over to the script of a thirty-minute condensation of Macbeth which illustrates both the wonder and the horror of radio." Theatre Arts

Kirkus 15:118 F 15 '47 170w

"Far and away the most practical book in the radio field. It is essential for any library regardless of size because everywhere today people are attempting to write for radio. Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:1471 O 15 '47 50w

Theatre Arts 31:74 Ag '47 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:137 O '47

BARON, SALO WITTMAYER. Modern nationalism and religion. 363p $5 Harper

291 Nationalism and religion 47-11474

"This volume contains the Rauschenbusch lectures delivered at the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School. . . It is a scholarly work in which the author traces the development of nationalism in the principal countries of the world and the relation thereto of Catholicism, Protestantism, and Judaism." Kirkus

"Baron's sincere discussion of organized religion's faults should prove a service to religion itself. A word of commendation should be added on the notes, which not only supply references but frequently additional details on the question involved."

+ Current Hist 13:226 O '47 1000w

"Students of social ethics, and religious leaders of whatever creed should find this a valuable and thought-provoking addition to their libraries."

+ Kirkus 15:534 S 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by L. R. Miller

Library J 72:1541 N 1 '47 140w

"Because of the complexity of both nationalism and religion, the book itself tends to be complex. It is, however, not complicated. Instead, out of the tangled histories of both strong motives, the author has drawn a clear outline to substantiate his conclusions and to give at least possibility to his hopes. While some of the material used in building the argument would not immediately have been considered by the casual student, it is seen to be germane when Professor Baron sets it in place." G. R. Stephenson

+ — N Y Times p29 Ja 11 '48 550w

School & Society 67:47 Ja 17 '48 10w

BARR, MRS ISABEL (HARRISS). Ship of glass. 75p $2 Press of James A. Decker

811

A collection of short poems, and one long one: Deldre in Alba, a retelling of the story of the Irish queen.

"Under her polished, agreeable, civilized, well-tailored verses there is also an echo of the many waters of that great stream of wonder, that river which went out of Eden and which, as Charles Morgan said in The Fountain, 'is in men a tiny rivulet, but in God is a mighty river, bearing the whole commerce of the divine mind.'" Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 46:361 Jl 25 '47 260w

"Miss Barr has a shrewd estimate of her own talents and, within her lyric range, is a skilled craftsman and effective story-teller." A. M. Sullivan

+ Sat R of Lit 30:27 Jl 26 '47 180w

BARRETTO, LARRY. Great light. 282p $3 Farrar, Straus

47-31132

Character study of Dirck Ericson which spans two wars in time. It is the story of a man seeking spiritual peace, who lives an apparently normal life, but at times escapes into a strange mystical land of dreams.

Kirkus 15:476 S 1 '47 170w

"Interesting and provocative. Recommended." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 72:1268 S 15 '47 80w

BARRETTO, LARRY—Continued

"Mr. Barretto has a philosophy, but it comes through somewhat vaguely. It is undefined, mainly because Dirck remains vague and unreal. He never reaches the stature of spiritual greatness indicated by his quest. . . . Strangely enough, or perhaps because he is dealing with recognizable people, Mr. Barretto is highly successful with the secondary characters of the book, particularly with Archer Paine, the novelist, and Nevius Brooks, the psychiatrist." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
O 12 '47 550w

"Repeatedly the author protests the very special character of Dirck's personality—and, through the medium of Archer Paine, tells us that he is an extraordinary and sensitive person who is seeking for absolute beauty. Unfortunately, however, he succeeds in bringing Dirck to life primarily in those scenes where his conduct is anything but saintly." J. B.

N Y Times p22 O 19 '47 500w

BARRIE, SIR JAMES MATTHEW, bart. Letters; ed. by Viola Meynell. 311p $3.50 Scribner

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-30928

A collection of the letters of James M. Barrie, which cover a period of about half a century. The first was written in 1884 to Sir Alexander Jeans, manager of a Liverpool paper; the last was written to his faithful valet, a few days before his death in 1937. Index.

Reviewed by R. M. Gay
Atlantic 180:154 D '47 420w
Booklist 44:47 O 1 '47

Reviewed by B. L. Conway
Cath World 166:377 Ja '48 200w

Reviewed by Harry Sylvester
Commonweal 47:308 Ja 2 '48 490w

"Recommended for literature as well as drama collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 72:1472 O 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 165:508 N 8 '47 290w

"They are lively, human, gossip letters, mainly written to intimate friends and fellow authors, and for that reason there is a pleasing absence of 'literariness' in them. . . . Miss Viola Meynell's selection can be warmly recommended, not only for its intrinsic readability but as an addendum to the excellent biography by Denis Mackail that came out a few years ago." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1
S 14 '47 1200w

"Miss Meynell has thought it best 'to present an uninterrupted idea of separate friendships as they occurred to the detriment of a more general chronology.' This provides awkward reading as one must jump back and forth over the many years as one goes along and the faint outline of Barrie's life and development given in the letters fades dismally in the process. It is very nearly a Barrie book with Barrie left out. . . . Here and there one detects a flash of the Barrie magic, for example, in his letters to Mrs. Pat Campbell and again in those to Mrs. Thomas Hardy, but letter-writing evidently was not one of Barrie's major talents." T. Q. Curtiss

N Y Times p22 S 28 '47 700w

"A pleasant autobiographical sketch of a humorous and engaging man who did not overestimate his literary importance. . . . and who had a real admiration for what he considered literary excellence in others."

+ New Yorker 23:102 S 20 '47 80w

"The collection of letters as a whole seems to throw out bright shoots from all the Barrie books and plays. To read them is like seeing a well-loved friend again after a long absence." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 26 '47
350w

"In a letter to Mrs. Thomas Hardy, written shortly after Hardy's burial, J. M. Barrie wrote, 'I should like you to know that it was not merely the greatness of the man that made him wonderful to me. Suppose he had been just an everyday person—I should still have thought him one of the most lovable human beings I have ever known.' Any understanding reader of these enchanting letters will be inclined to make the same comment about J. M. Barrie. . . . The most noticeable feature of the letters and the loveliest is their equality of approach. They are all personal, all most exquisitely tuned to each correspondent; none is casual or merely matter of fact." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 S 20 '47 850w

BARRY, JOE, pseud. See Lake, J. B.

BARTH, KARL. The only way; how can the Germans be cured? 122p $2 Philosophical lib.
940.5314443 Reconstruction (1939)—Germany 47-11371

"The famous Swiss theologian whom Hitler dismissed from the University of Bonn, presents in this work an article originally written for England, and his lecture The Germans and Ourselves published (1945) in Switzerland. Two German letters responding to that lecture and Barth's replies are integrated in this book which is a deeply penetrating analysis of the German mind and problem. Almost unequivocally condemning German Weltanschauung and historical trends, author nevertheless proposes unselfish friendship toward German people as the only way to help them start afresh in a new spirit." Library J

"More than idealistic blueprint, book is highly recommended for all interested in problem." Kurt Schwerin

+ Library J 72:1535 N 1 '47 140w
San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 30 '47
200w

BARTLETT, RUHL JACOB, ed. The record of American diplomacy. 731p $6 Knopf

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. U.S.—History—Sources 47-5391

A selection of over 300 documents: treaties, instructions to ambassadors, and public addresses, chosen to trace the course of American foreign relations from colonial days onward. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:45 O 1 '47

"The completeness of the documents on most subjects is impressive. But in view of the importance of Russia to American foreign policy today, Dr. Bartlett seems strangely sparing in his entries on that country. One looks in vain for a group of citations covering the relations with Russia since the 1917 revolution. One misses, too, a group devoted to Japan which might have eliminated the necessity of foraging around for this supremely important subject in the general Far Eastern chapters." Henry Sowerby

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 O 14 '47
600w

"The work of collecting and editing the material—treaties, memoranda, diplomatic instructions, interpretations, and laws—had to be highly selective and because the selection was judicious the book attains a substantial degree of value to both student and researcher."

+ Columbia Law R 47:1256 N '47 140w

"What will strike the general reader is not what has been omitted but the remarkable amount of valuable materials which the editor has brought together. The 700 pages of documents cover virtually every phase of our foreign relations, and they are arranged so as to appeal to almost every type of reader." G. A. Craig

+ N Y Times p7 O 5 '47 1100w

"Bartlett's volume is sure to be welcomed as a textbook in a field hitherto largely devoid of such a collection, but it will be a pity if circulation does not extend far beyond the college classroom." L. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 D 21 '47
400w

Reviewed by N. D. Palmer
Social Studies 39:36 Ja '48 650w

BARTON, WILLIAM HENRY, and JOSEPH, JOSEPH MARON. Starcraft. (Whittlesey house publication) 2d rev ed 250p il $2.75 McGraw

523.8 Astronomy. Stars 46-7707

"Second revised edition. . . Gives information and charts on the positions of the stars, stories of the constellations, instructions for making your own sky maps and charts and how to view the heavens with opera glasses and telescopes. The revision is in the navigation material. Final chapters give the lives of famous astronomers." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1938. Chapter bibliographies, Index.

Booklist 43:191 F 15 '47

"An excellent book on astronomy for young or old. . . Recommended for all libraries." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 72:86 Ja 1 '47 70w

BARTRAM, WILLIAM. Travels; ed. by Mark Van Doren. 414p $3.75 Dover

917.5 South—Description and travel

"A new, unabridged edition of a Philadelphia Quaker's once famous travel journal, dealing with his trips through the Carolinas, Georgia, and Florida in the late eighteenth century. Bartram was a botanist. . . He was also a good storyteller, who took a lively interest in the Indians and their way of life. This book made a profound impression on Coleridge and Wordsworth when it first appeared, and supplied the inspiration for several of their poems, as well as for Coleridge's youthful dream of founding a Utopia of intellectuals in this country." New Yorker

Reviewed by L. J. Cappon
Am Hist R 53:184 O '47 280w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 21 '47 110w

"This journal is the earliest successful description of any considerable part of the American natural scene, and its interest is increased by the fact that the author possessed both scientific knowledge and poetic imagination. The journal remains today a remarkable and fascinating volume." N. K. B.

+ N Y Times p26 Jl 13 '47 550w

"It is easy to see why the book created such enthusiasm, for Bartram was a writer who could bring to life what he described, and this country must have indeed been beautiful in those days."

+ New Yorker 23:117 My 17 '47 160w

"Bartram's work, praised by his contemporaries as being one of the most delightful and authentic travelogues of the period, furnished Coleridge and Wordsworth backgrounds for many of their poems." D. C. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 13 '47 200w

BASS, STEPHEN. Plastics and you. 190p il $2.75 Eastwood-Steli co, 1440 Broadway, N.Y. 18

668.4 Plastics 47-2023

"This book attempts to explain to the average man what plastics are, how they are made and molded into useful and decorative articles, and how they will affect his way of living. A good deal of the story is necessarily left out, but the material that has been included is interesting and easy to read. In addition to the main story, there is a brief discussion of employment opportunities in the industry and what technical training is necessary to qualify for them. A short list of manufacturers and trade names completes the volume." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:530 Ap 1 '47 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:14 Ja '47

BATCHELDER, MARJORIE HOPE. Puppet theatre handbook; with drawings by Douglas Anderson. 233p $3.75 Harper

791.5 Marionettes. Puppet plays 47-30105

"Briefly summarizing the history of the puppet stage, it plans a show and then describes—with careful diagrams and directions—every type of shadow, hand and rod puppet; the offshoot 'humanette'; the marionette; the materials from which the types are made and the various methods of control. The importance of costing is emphasized and illustrated; stages from the simplest to the professional are presented with advice on scenery, lighting and properties. Suggestions on choosing a play and directions for producing it with the professional touch close as useful a book for its purpose as one is likely to find. The author is associate professor of fine arts at Ohio State University." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Bibliographies.

Booklist 43:201 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:7 My '47

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 30 '47 130w

"This is designed for serious advocates of the puppet theatre—professionals and amateurs with the desire to have a professional touch."

Kirkus 14:614 D 1 '46 160w

"Eminently readable, it is also eminently practical. If you take only one book on the subject, take this one. . . Highly recommended."

+ Library J 72:162 Ja 15 '47 40w

"A sizable special literature has gathered around puppets and marionettes, with volumes on every phase of their construction and operation, on the plays they perform and the audiences to which they appeal, but of all the single volumes in which an encyclopedic treatment of all these matters is attempted this one comes nearest to perfection in actual use. It is interesting enough to start an interest in the subject and detailed enough to supply information all along the line of its development."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly BK R p10 F 9 '47 240w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 13 '47 110w

"Miss Batchelder's work on puppet techniques fills a long-felt want, for it treats each point on an elementary and advanced level as no book has before. . . There are 69 plates and diagrams drawn by Douglas Anderson in a clear and sometimes humorous presentation." Paul McPharlin

+ Theatre Arts 31:70 Ag '47 210w

Wis Lib Bul 43:51 Mr '47

BATCHER, RALPH R., and MOULIC, WILLIAM. Electronic control handbook. 344p il $4.50 Caldwell-Clements, inc, 480 Lexington av, N.Y. 17

621.38 Electronics. Control equipment

46-2977

"Wide use of electronic systems are discussed, also fundamentals of electronic control principles and applications in industry and essential data needed to accurately appraise value and specify an electronic device. Sections cover basic elements of control, conversion elements, electronic modification circuits, activation elements and control applications. Charts, tables, diagrams, drawings and photographs." (Library J) Selected bibliography. Index.

"The publisher and the authors are to be congratulated for an excellent contribution to this field." R. H. Müller

+ Chem & Eng N 25:562 F 24 '47 370w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:226 F 1 '47 50w

BATES, HERBERT ERNEST (FLYING OFFICER X, pseud). Cruise of the Breadwinner. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 112p $1.50 Little

47-30203

The Breadwinner was a dirty little fishing boat engaged on coastal patrol off the English shore during the recent war. The action takes place on a day when the Breadwinner picks up two pilots, one English and one German. As they make for the shore they are raked by enemy fire and the engineer and both pilots are killed. The two remaining members of the crew manoeuvre the ship to shore.

Booklist 43:241 Ap 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 9 '47 130w

"One of the pieces of really good writing that have come out of the war."

+ Christian Century 64:495 Ap 16 '47 60w

"A fine piece of realistic writing, grim in the extreme yet still manifesting an artistic restraint, and profoundly convincing. It is not a book for the squeamish; but it is a magnificent piece of writing. The prose is tense and forceful, stripped of every unnecessary word; the narrative and characterization are brilliant." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 14 '46 390w

"Bates can write. His audience will want this little book. But the fact that it is again a war incident will cause hesitancy on the part of a public that does not want war books."

Kirkus 15:75 F 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 J1 12 '46 180w

Reviewed by Rayner Heppenstall

+ New Statesman & Nation 32:53 J1 20 '46 120w

"One could easily raise the question of whether this little book is a novel, or a short story masquerading between boards. I don't think the answer would mean much. Whatever we happen to call it, it is a complete thing in itself—a tiny splinter of experience which the author, by his selectivity and insight, to say nothing of the vigor of his writing, makes symbolize the whole horrible impact of war." Jennings Rice

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Mr 9 '47 330w

"A superb conversation piece with death." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p36 Ap 27 '47 240w

"The cruise takes less than a day, and the unpretentious story less than an hour to read, but the book contains a sense, rarely communicated by current fiction, of the dignity of the human race."

+ New Yorker 23:98 Mr 8 '47 80w

"Although it is a short book it is a sharp and vivid presentation of the pity and terror of war. Mr. Bates has narrowed down his field to three men, and then five in a boat. And he fulfills excellently his intent which is to examine, in little, some of the fundamentals of war." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 27 '47 500w

"Mr. Bates has fashioned his story with great care to avoid over-sentimentality. At the same time he has described his characters with deep feeling and understanding for the emotions of men under severe strain. One will not easily forget the men of the Breadwinner—these are the little men who fought the war for freedom all over the world." R. A. Allen

+ Sat R of Lit 30:54 Ap 12 '47 480w

Springf'd Union p3 My 14 '47 130w

Time 49:104 Mr 10 '47 330w

"There is not a great deal more in the story than the reiterated sense of the pity of war. Mr. Bates is restrained in manner, although in trying to fill in his sketches, more particularly of the big-bellied captain and the boy Snowy, his touches seem to be a little arbitrary. Altogether the tale has an effect of truthfulness without stirring emotion in the reader at all deeply."

Times [London] Lit Sup p329 J1 13 '46 300w

BATES, HERBERT ERNEST (FLYING OFFICER X, pseud). The purple plain. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 308p $2.75 Little

47-12350

The scene is Burma in wartime. It is the story of a young British pilot who wanted to die. Then he met a beautiful Burmese girl and the will to live was born in him anew.

Booklist 44:172 Ja 1 '48

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun Book Week p7X D 21 '47 320w

"The strong sense of drama, of duress, overlaid by the lyricism of Bates' writing, gives this its distinction as well as its predictable popularity."

+ Kirkus 15:555 O 1 '47 160w

"An outstanding, beautifully written novel which surely will be popular. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1777 D 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by H. I. A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p3 D 5 '47 250w

"The new H. E. Bates novel mixes expertly the best features of two contemporary forms of fiction, the English popular novel and the American slick magazine serial. The result is a story which will keep the periphery of your mind ruffled without disturbing its interior. With a great show of realism and large doses of suffering 'The Purple Plain' achieves pleasant entertainment. . . Mr. Bates is a skillful story-teller and an excellent writer. With no more than the desire to do so he could fashion finer fiction." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 D 21 '47 550w

"Mr. Bates' sense of form is faultless. But, though his hero meets and loves a beautiful Burmese refugee, and eventually rises above his neurosis, Forrester seemed quite as misty to this reader as he turned the final page." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p5 D 14 '47 430w

New Yorker 23:93 D 20 '47 120w

"It is difficult to describe a novel of this superior quality but with a theme so commonplace as that of the British or American soldier and the native girl without giving it an appearance of triteness. . . It is Mr. Bates's gift for creating flesh-and-blood characters, his evocation of the nuances of human behavior and feeling through accurate speech, his sharp sense for color and form and telling imagery, that set this book apart from other war novels." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 D 13 '47 1300w

"Few of those who went to India or Burma to spend their war service have returned and written a book which is as good as The Purple Plain. I should class it without hesitation as one of the four or five really distinguished English novels published in the past year." Robin King

+ Spec 179:782 D 19 '47 470w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter

Springf'd Republican p10B Ja 4 '48 370w

Time 51:88 Ja 12 '48 240w

"Mr. Bates is a romantic writer who compels our admiration by the limpid beauty of his prose and by a gift for sustained dramatic narrative which reminds us at times of Conrad. Human nature and the inner current of life are not his forte. He is at his best, therefore, in the kind of novel like the present, which is really a long short story constructed round a single dramatic experience. Grim and horrifying enough in detail, it is in essence a lyrical exposition of the qualities of courage and endurance in the human soul."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p625 D 6 '47 650w

BATES, JOSEPH D. Spinning for American game fish; drawings by Milton C. Weiler. 247p $4 Little 797.12 Fishing

Agr47-391

A study of the technique of spinning, a form of angling which has been in use in England for some time, but was introduced into this country about fifteen years ago. The book describes tackle and technique, illustrating the author's points with some of his own experiences. Contains diagrams, descriptive drawings, and photographs.

Kirkus 15:525 S 15 '47 80w

New Yorker 23:139 N 22 '47 90w

+ Springf'd Republican p10B N 23 '47 550w

BATES, NANCY BELL (FAIRCHILD) (MRS MARSTON BATES). East of the Andes and west of nowhere; a naturalist's wife in Colombia. 237p il $3.50 Scribner

918.6 Colombia—Description and travel

47-11063

The author and her husband spent several years in Colombia, where he had a laboratory sponsored by the Rockefeller foundation for the study of tropical diseases. Mrs Bates, who is the daughter of the botanist, David Fairchild, acted as her husband's assistant. She describes field trips, pets, and laboratory work, but does not give many details of home life.

Booklist 44:88 N 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '47

Kirkus 15:423 Ag 1 '47 170w

"Throughout, the Bates treatment is vigorous. Her insets of wild-life are fascinating and become uncannily real. A sketch map would have been helpful in following her journeys in this little-known corner of the earth for even the ancient town of Villavivencio does not appear on the map unless the authoress decided to change the name of the town she lived in to analyze the better its worthy citizens. With her we peep into their kitchens and daily lives, but she treats them all with kindness." W. F. Horsey

+ Sat R of Lit 30:39 N 8 '47 290w

Social Studies 38:380 D '47 20w

BAUDELAIRE, CHARLES PIERRE. Eugene Delacroix, his life and work [tr. by Joseph M. Bernstein]. 94p il $5 Lear; for sale by Crown

759.4 Delacroix, Eugene

"One of Baudelaire's best pieces of art criticism is the appreciative and much-quoted essay he wrote on Delacroix just after the painter died, in 1863. It is here published for the first time in an English translation, accompanied... by a selection of Delacroix's drawings in various media." N Y Times

"If Joseph M. Bernstein's translation had been accompanied by an introduction, it might have been said there that the book observes the centennial of the completion of Delacroix's major work, the murals in the library of the French Chamber of Deputies, executed in the style which Delacroix, after Géricault, so largely created... Except for some of the pen and ink sketches, which come off rather spotily, the drawings look well here on water-marked paper which simulates the texture of drawing material." MacKinley Helm

Atlantic 180:134 O '47 240w

Library J 72:1541 N 1 '47 100w

"The essay itself furnishes a model specimen of art writing, being rich in perception and analysis, and at the same time colored throughout by the original emotion generated by the works of art themselves. The only objection one can raise is that Baudelaire grants Delacroix everything and omits mention of the 'indispensable' faults that lay behind his virtues, and of which the writer himself, to judge by the still completely vivid accuracy with which he describes the impression made by Delacroix's art, must surely have been aware." Clement Greenberg

+ — N Y Times p7 S 21 '47 1050w

"Baudelaire's criticism, which is in the old-fashioned, 'grand' style, may seem a little rhetorical to modern readers. He makes some excellent points about Delacroix's art, however, and the sixty drawings and water colors that serve as illustrations are reproduced with precision and clarity."

+ — New Yorker 23:88 Ag 16 '47 60w

Reviewed by Hubert Buel

San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 30 '47 80w

BAUDELAIRE, CHARLES PIERRE. Flowers of evil; with translations by Geoffrey Wagner and an intro. by Enid Starkie. (New classics ser) new ed $1.50 New directions

841

48-126

A new translation of a selection of Baudelaire's poetry. The French text and the translation are on facing pages.

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16

Je 29 '47 160w

"Enid Starkie, the English Baudelaire scholar, contributes an excellent short introduction to the volume. But the disparity in quality between Miss Starkie's prose and Mr. Wagner's verse is so great that it is a puzzle how the two came together into book form. Granted that certain insuperable obstacles to a feasible translation of Baudelaire into any language exist, it is still a disappointment to find Mr. Wagner making the most elementary blunders in choice, in tone, and in detail. The volume is, moreover, oddly lacking in the ordinary aids to the reader; it has no pagination, no table of contents, no notes, and no index." Louise Bogan

+ — New Yorker 23:114 My 3 '47 650w

Reviewed by V. Sackville-West

Spec 178:596 My 23 '47 1650w

BAUDELAIRE, CHARLES PIERRE. Intimate journals; tr. by Christopher Isherwood; introd. by W. H. Auden. 128p il $3 Rodd

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.

This translation of Baudelaire's intimate journals was first brought out in England in 1930. It is here brought to America for the first time; translated by Christopher Isherwood, and with an introduction by W. H. Auden.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun Book Week p8a D 3 '47 50w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 23:105 N 1 '47 950w

"The merit of the journal lies in the suggestiveness of the brief comments on art, religion, love, and politics. Their sincerity is obvious and their irony makes the gentle diaries of Amiel and Senancour seem as pallid as a dolly done in 1890." C. F. McIntyre

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 9 '47 450w

Time 50:106 N 3 '47 450w

BAUDELAIRE, CHARLES PIERRE. One hundred poems from Les fleurs du mal; tr. by C. F. MacIntyre. 400p il $5 Univ. of Calif.

841

47-6625

Based on the arrangement of the second edition (1861) Les Fleurs du Mal, the last overseen by the poet. The English and French versions are on pages facing each other. The editor and translator has restored the six poems dropped from the 1861 edition, and has included a brief biographical and critical introduction. Bibliography.

BAUDELAIRE, C. P.—Continued

"The translations—which face the French originals in a volume of genuine typographical distinction—seem to me surpassingly good."
J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 29 '47
110w

"In order to justify the task he set himself—an almost complete translation of Baudelaire—Mr. MacIntyre is forced to insist on something which no one has yet been able to prove: the architectural structure of 'Les Fleurs du Mal'; incapable of making a perfect translation of a single poem, he strategically spreads out his mediocrity over the whole. . . The most interesting part of the book consists of sixty-three pages of finely printed notes, translated and rewritten from the standard Crépét and Dantec editions, and interspersed with anecdotes and cute personal remarks." R. B. Ross

+ Nation 165:232 S 6 '47 1000w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
Je. 29 '47 160w

"Here, at last, is a good modern version of this important book. Mr. MacIntyre, by the use of off-rhymes and a loose rhythm, does a remarkably successful job of keeping Baudelaire's form reasonably intact while retaining his force and meaning."

+ New Yorker 23:72 J1 19 '47 120w

"For any reader who wishes to become acquainted with the poetry of Baudelaire Mr. MacIntyre's volume cannot be too highly recommended." Arthur Foff

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 17 '47
550w

BAUER, WILLIAM WALDO. Stop annoying your children. 272p il $2.75 Bobbs

649.1 Children—Management 47-30387

Advice on how to bring up children based on the principle that, perhaps, many of the problems to be faced are due to the faults of the parents and not the children. The author is director of the Bureau of health education of the American medical association and associate editor of Hygeia.

Booklist 44:63 O 15 '47

Reviewed by Jim and Dorothy McGuinn
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 17 '47
500w

Christian Science Monitor p4 N 22 '47
90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '47

"An excellent short bibliography and sources for obtaining help on special problems make the book useful for reference purposes. Highly recommended." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 72:1101 Ag '47 80w

"We'll concede the point that most of the child-raising advice offered here is sound and well-worth heeding, but it is not new, not well-presented and never as startling as the author continually warns you it will be." Eugene MacHamus

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 3 '47
120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 2 '47
50w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 66:329 O 25 '47 450w
Wis Lib Bul 43:137 O '47

BAUME, ERIC. See Baume, F. E.

BAUME, FREDERIC EHRENFRIED. Ponty Galler. 250p $2.50 Dodd

47-4813

A young English officer, fast becoming a drunkard, goes out to Australia when the war is over, is entrapped in a marriage with a barmaid, goes with her to New Zealand, and there in a little town full of good folks is saved from degradation and death.

"This story is too black and white, good and evil, not subtly enough drawn." Anne Whitmore

— Library J 72:1032 J1 '47 110w

"Eric Baume writes vigorous prose, and his knowledge of Maori customs adds authentic color to his novel, but there is nothing uniquely remarkable in antipodean alcoholism." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15
S 7 '47 140w

BAX, ROGER, pseud. See Winterton, P.

BAXTER, BATSELL BARRETT. Heart of the Yale lectures. 332p $2.50 Macmillan

251 Preaching. Yale university. Lyman Beecher lectures on preaching 47-30918

"For more than seventy-five years the most notable lectureship in America in the field of homiletics has been the Lyman Beecher Lectureship on Preaching. Known to many as the Yale Lectures by virtue of the fact that they have been given at Yale University, this series originated in the mind of Henry Ward Beecher. . . The lectures, named for Dr. Beecher's father, have been given annually since that time, with the exception of four widely separated years. Sixty-six volumes of lectures in this distinguished series are in existence today, several lectures having gone unpublished. Recognizing that few ministers have access to all these volumes, Professor Baxter, head of the department of speech and homiletics at David Lipscomb College in Nashville, Tennessee, has gathered the choicest fruits of these many volumes into one, thereby making them readily accessible to all." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

"The book will be welcomed by men long in the ministry as well as by those who have only recently heard the 'call.' Despite its amazing number of quotations, or because of them, this book is stimulating and abundantly rewarding. No minister can read it and fail to be strengthened and inspired by the wise counsel of four generations of the world's greatest preachers. We are in Dr. Baxter's debt for recovering their words for us." I. E. Lunger

+ Christian Century 64:1177 O 1 '47 700w

"The author is concerned with the art of preaching rather than with its content, but has completely covered the technique in a fashion which will be helpful to all preachers who are still desirous of improving their preaching." W. L. C.

+ Churchman 161:17 D 15 '47 90w

"This book contains a 'gold mine' of experience and advice. Ministers and theological students will find a careful study of it profitable." J. H. Ivey

+ Crozer Q 25:79 Ja '48 700w

Kirkus 15:535 S 15 '47 250w

"The book is an almost invaluable one, since few men in the ministry can purchase and find time to read more than a few scattered volumes of this long series, which is everywhere considered the most outstanding contribution on the subject of homiletics yet produced in America." O. J. Aldrich

+ Spring'd Republican p18A O 12 '47
210w

BAXTER, EDNA DOROTHY. Approach to guidance. 305p $2.50 Appleton-Century

371.422 Personnel service in education 47-94

"A book for teachers in service and for those who are preparing to enter public-school teaching. Written in two parts—the Story and the Story Interpretation. The story technique used in the first part presents facts and suggestions in a most readable and interesting manner. Well indexed." (School & Society) Bibliography.

"Should prove helpful to all public-school personnel."

+ School & Society 64:367 N 23 '46 90w

"The volume is an excellent source of information for guidance workers, teachers, parents, and lay persons interested in the work of the schools. In addition, it can be used as a textbook in teacher-training courses and in guidance and counseling courses for students in the secondary schools." W. I. Murray

+ School R 55:183 Mr '47 900w

BAYER, OLIVER WELD, pseud. of ELEANOR (ROSENFELD) BAYER and LEO G. BAYER. Brutal question. 190p $2 Doubleday

47-11091

Mystery story.

Booklist 44:135 D 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week O 24 '47 50w
Kirkus 15:482 S 1 '47 80w

"Incoherent, on the whole, but pleasantly disenchanted about the radio business."

+ — New Yorker 23:115 N 1 '47 90w

"Entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 O 18 '47 40w

BAYER, OLIVER WELD, pseud. of ELEANOR (ROSENFELD) BAYER and LEO G. BAYER, ed. Cleveland murders, by Howard Beaufait [and others]. (Regional murder ser) 249p $3 Duell

364 Murder 47-11300

The sixth in the series of regional stories of actual murders. The Cleveland murder cases in this volume number seven, and cover in time from 1870 to 1938.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week O 31 '47 180w
Kirkus 15:595 O 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
O 19 '47 170w

"Many of the pieces are based on good material, but the treatment of few of them is better than routine; 'The Kagy Case,' by Charles and Dorothy Bodurtha, is the best of the lot."

New Yorker 23:136 O 25 '47 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p27 O 19 '47
100w

"Competently written accounts of variety of solved and unsolved homicides. Another interesting, though generally unspectacular chapter in metropolitan American crime."

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:45 N 1 '47 50w

BAYKOV, ALEXANDER. Soviet foreign trade. x,100,[25]p $2 Princeton univ. press

382 Russia—Commerce A47-343

The purpose of this book is "to describe the Soviet system of foreign trade in force on the eve of the Second World War, to analyze the actual development of foreign trade in the USSR in the past, and to stress facts which seem likely to influence the development of Soviet foreign trade in the postwar period." (Am Pol Sci R)

"The author's previous work, The Development of the Soviet Economic System, is unquestionably the most scholarly treatise on the subject, its obvious shortcomings notwithstanding. In contrast, the brief essay under review falls short of its stated purpose." Charles Prince

Am Pol Sci R 41:601 Je '47 260w

"Mr. Baykov writes in a cautious and scholarly vein, and English is not his native tongue; so the volume reads somewhat less smoothly than it might. More important, however, is the fact that Mr. Baykov's caution restrained him from incorporating into his chapter on prospects of Soviet foreign trade many straws in the wind which were already evident at the end of 1945 when he was still writing the book. . . . Despite the minor criticisms raised above, this volume, like the author's earlier Development of the Soviet Economic System, is an essential work for all interested in the field who cannot use or do not have access to the primary sources upon which Mr. Baykov draws." Harry Schwartz

+ — Ann Am Acad 250:150 Mr '47 280w

Current Hist 11:511 D '46 50w

Foreign Affairs 25:374 Ja '47 30w

Reviewed by J. D. Coppock

J Pol Econ 55:367 Ag '47 450w

"Illustrated throughout by statistical tables and appendices, this book may appear forbidding to the layman, but should be recommended to him, none the less, for those passages recounting our commercial relations with Russia, and particularly as background for an understanding of the current debate on the granting of U.S. credits to the Soviet Union. For these latter reasons its inclusion among library purchases is decidedly timely. Highly recommended." Toby Cole

+ Library J 71:1460 O 15 '47 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p340 Jl 5 '47

600w

Yale R 36:535 spring '47 140w

BAYLISS, MARGUERITE FARLEE. Earth eagles; drawings by Norman Reeves. 53p $2.50 Holt

47-22233

A tale of two sister fillies, bred for racing, whose unusual affection for each other makes the turning point of this brief story.

Booklist 43:347 Jl 1 '47

"The story is set in a strangely mannered frame, highly stylized. The story would be better without it."

Kirkus 15:140 Mr 1 '47 120w

"You can read it in an hour, but will want to re-read it aloud to your friends. Beautifully printed. Strongly recommended for all libraries and as an ideal gift book." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:808 My 15 '47 70w

BEAN, CHARLES EDWIN WOODROW. On the wool track [new ed, with footnotes pointing out more important recent changes]. 210p $2.50 Scribner

636.3 Sheep. Frontier and pioneer life—Australia 47-4077

Based on articles which appeared in the Sydney Morning Herald, this book is the first American printing of a book which appeared in Australia in 1910 and was revised in 1925. It is an account of the life on the great sheep ranches of the Australian frontier. No index.

Booklist 44:12 S 1 '47

"Heartily recommended." Edward Littlejohn
+ Commonweal 46:148 My 23 '47 300w

"It is written in a fine prose style. Will have limited appeal to American readers." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 72:634 Ap 15 '47 100w

"Mr. Bean is to be congratulated on producing so vivid a picture of the older life, the background of so many of those lean, hard-bitten fighters who made history from Gallipoli to New Guinea." Harry Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
My 4 '47 750w

"An informal but most instructive account of the vast wool industry in the 'outside' of Australia. . . . Furthermore, the very intelligent author has made it a study of Australian geography in relation to the habits of the people. This will be valuable for commentators and historians. Also, being descriptive and well written, it is very good reading apart from its informational value." H. S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 My 31 '47 110w

Springf'd Republican p8A S 21 '47 150w

"No better book on Australia could be made available to American readers." R. H. Gabriel
+ Yale R n s 36:742 summer '47 180w

BEARD, WILLIAM. Government and liberty; the American system. (Halcyon house publication; New home lib) 362p $2 Garden City pub. co.

342.73 U.S.—Politics and government—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 47-5159

A description of the government of the United States, written by a son of two American historians: Charles and Mary Beard. It is not only a textbook on American civil government, but "it aims to indicate how Americans may participate more actively in the conduct of government. It also endeavors to portray the framework of conflicting forces in which our Government arose." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

Booklist 44:3 S 1 '47

"This book has not dimmed the bright glow of the Beard name. It lacks some of the sweep and verve of some books on America by the elder Beards, but the nature and aim of this work make that seem appropriate. 'Government and Liberty' is mainly descriptive. . . A reader gets the impression from the book that the American system is good, that it is working pretty well, that it faces danger and can continue to function only if most Americans individually do their part." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 18 '47 480w

"There are textbooks in American Government aplenty, but this is a book designed to give a simple account of the American Government for the average American citizen. . . Fast-moving and highly concentrated, the book needs more specific illustrations to lend it vivacity and vitality. Bland in temper, it duly treats but plays down bossism, the antics of politicians, graft and corruption, the flagrantly disproportionate weight given rural over urban electorates, the well-nigh impossibility of amending some State constitutions, the often decisive power exerted by special interests." W. G. Carleton

+ — N Y Times p13 Ag 31 '47 950w

Reviewed by W. G. Tyrell
Social Studies 38:327 N '47 400w

BEASLEY, NORMAN. Knudsen; a biography; with an introd. by William S. Knudsen. (Whittlesey house publication) 397p $3.75 McGraw

B or 92 Knudsen, William Signius 47-3624

A biography of William S. Knudsen, who came to this country from Denmark in 1900. His first job in this country was as janitor's helper at fifteen dollars a month; in 1940 he left a $300,000 a year job to become Director of war production for the government. The story of Knudsen's life in the United States keeps pace with the rise of the American automotive industry, and frequent mention is made of Henry Ford with whom Knudsen both worked and disagreed.

Booklist 43:358 Jl 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 22 '47 180w

"Mr. Norman Beasley's book is more a history of the automobile industry than a biography of Knudsen; and, in places, more an apology for Big Business than a history. As a consequence, Knudsen emerges as a model representative rather than an individual and his life as a pattern of success rather than a unique career." M. M.

— Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 2 '47 600w

"For all its emphasis on the expert, industrial side, this does not neglect the very human qualities of this rag-to-riches life, and though with a bias, does manage a believable sincerity."

Kirkus 15:206 Ap 1 '47 110w

"Much of book is written in dialogue which gives essence, no doubt, to actual conversations. . . Good businesslike biography which will probably be widely read. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:729 My 1 '47 130w

"The author has captured the flavor and recorded many of the special Knudsen stories and comments, which help in a way to preserve an authentic American legend. Some, like that of Ford's 1921 financial crisis, throw new light on the coming of age of the automobile. . . From poor, Danish immigrant boy to fame and fortune in Detroit—the storyteller allows a familiar pattern to guide him. But when his hero migrates to Washington and becomes a temporary bureaucrat, treatment of the saga is more difficult and the book bogs down. . . Unfortunately Mr. Beasley has adopted an unworthy device for treatment of those whose judgments differed from Mr. Knudsen's. Some belittling incident is recorded to make each opponent seem ridiculous or vicious, and no credit is given for any worth-while contributions to the general effort." Leon Henderson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Jl 13 '47 800w

Reviewed by Russell Porter

N Y Times p6 My 25 '47 800w

BEATTY, HETTY BURLINGAME. Topsy; pictures by [the author]. (Nursery bks) [20p] $1 Houghton

Picture-storybook for the very young, telling about Topsy, a yellow dog, and her animal friends, and on the final page showing Topsy and her puppies.

Kirkus 15:237 My 1 '47 50w

"An interesting concept to present to older children but the nursery school youngsters for whom the book is intended seem quite oblivious of the implications." M. E. Snow

Library J 72:893 Je 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Je 22 '47 70w

BEAUMONT, CYRIL WILLIAM. Ballet design, past and present. 216p il $10 Studio 792.8 Ballet 47-5554

A combination and extension of the author's Five Centuries of Ballet Design, and Design for the Ballet (Book Review Digest, 1939 and 1937). It consists largely of pictures, with brief text, and shows the evolution of ballet stage settings and costumes from the sixteenth to the twentieth centuries.

"A basic book for any dance or theatre collection. Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:811 My 15 '47 30w

"A beautiful and invaluable record. . . Though the contemporary examples are somewhat preponderantly English, Mr. Beaumont nevertheless ranges all over Europe as well as America; and in the record of the past, particularly the flowering of the art in France, his selections are superb. A comprehensive history in twenty pages introduces 200 pages of plates, more than fifty of which are in color."

+ Theatre Arts 31:81 N '47 120w

"The book is a combination and enlargement of Mr. Beaumont's previous books on the décor of ballet, and contains an authoritative historical essay, which makes it a valuable work of reference as well as a delight to the eye."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p362 Jl 19 '47 110w

BECHDOLT, JOHN ERNEST. Fairy kittens [pictures by Decie Merwin]. 40p $1.50 Oxford 47-2897

Ginny was eight and she was the only one in her large, serious family who had any belief in fairies. The day Ginny found the old man who sold her some pussy willows a train of events started which brought her what she really wanted: a kitten.

Booklist 43:312 Je 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 My 25 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:238 My 1 '47 110w

"A delightful spring story. . . Recommended for ages 5-8." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 72:817 My 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Je 1 '47 150w

"This is a fine story for those 5 to 8-year-olds who steadfastly maintain their belief that anything might happen, even in this realistic day." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p25 Je 29 '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:83 My '47

BECHDOLT, JOHN ERNEST. Trusty; the story of a police horse; il. by Decie Merwin. 191p $2.50 Dutton

Horses—Legends and stories 47-5700

Trusty was born on a Connecticut farm, but was sold and trained to be a police horse. The training of both men and horses for the New York city mounted police forms the background of this story for junior high schools.

Kirkus 15:396 Ag 1 '47 130w

Reviewed by A. M. Wetherell

Library J 72:1620 N 15 '47 70w

Sat R of Lit 30:55 N 15 '47 50w

Wis Lib Bul 43:134 O '47

BECK, HUBERT PARK. Men who control our universities. 229p pa $3 King's crown press

378.11 Colleges and universities 47-30526

"The economic and social composition of governing boards of thirty leading American universities." (Subtitle) "There is shown here the occupation, major business offices, income, age, sex, residence, state of birth, education, political orientation, family and religious ties, clubs, and other miscellaneous information for each of the 734 trustees of the thirty institutions, sixteen of which are privately controlled, and fourteen of which are state universities." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"Subject to the limitations of his material, Mr. Beck has made a definite contribution in this restricted but important field. His study substantiates and documents the oft-repeated observation that the same men who run the banks and factories and operate the railroads of the United States also control and direct the institutions of higher education." Scott Nearing

+ Am Soc R 12:728 D '47 700w

"Special note should be taken of the final chapter, which is not a mechanical repetition of the data, as too often is the case, but a careful analysis of the laboriously-acquired information in terms of implications for higher education and social policy. Also included are rational suggestions for democratizing university control. The appended statistical tables, notes and index make this book valuable as a tool of reference." W. W. Brickman

+ School & Society 65:489 Je 28 '47 600w

"The study itself offers an informative and challenging plea for more representative direction in higher education."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:270 S '47 200w

BECK, WARREN. Pause under the sky. (Swallow press bk) 346p $3 Morrow 47-3350

This novel follows the thoughts of a young American aviator during a three day leave he is spending with his fiancée before going back to the front. A mysterious radio broadcaster who interrupts the blatant advertising of the commercial stations, rouses the interest of the young couple and they seek out his hiding place in the mountains just before his end comes.

"It is good to have books with such sincerity of purpose as 'Pause Under the Sky.'" Robert Halsband

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 18 '47 370w

"None of it makes much sense—much of it is sentimental. Beck writes easily enough, but hasn't enough to say."

— Kirkus 15:138 Mr 1 '47 120w

"'Pause Under the Sky' is an extremely uneven though on the whole interesting performance." F. H. Bullock

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29
My 11 '47 850w

"Mr. Beck's lovers are thoroughly sympathetic characters, sensitive and intelligent. And the skeletal idea of his novel is a dramatic one. . . But Mr. Beck has not been quite enough of a novelist, enough concerned with sensibility, imagination and dramatic projection. A good half of the book is made up of thinking, not thinking as it actually occurs characteristically in different minds, but thinking rephrased, rhetorized by the author in a manner that sounds much the same whichever character is thinking it." R. G. Davis

+ — N Y Times p18 My 18 '47 600w

"A vigorous, unsentimental book, deeply imbued with sentiment."

+ New Yorker 23:104 My 10 '47 160w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 29 '47 70w

"Less foggy moralising and philosophising in the characters' stream of consciousness and a greater clarity as to the philosophical framework within which they live and move would have made a better book." D. S. Savage

Spec 179:378 S 19 '47 260w

"Mr. Beck tends to flow on in the manner of Thomas Wolfe, though without his picturesqueness and vigour. If he had displayed a higher degree of selectivity he might have driven his point home. As it is the reader is left chiefly with a feeling of thankfulness for the refined oligarchy of the B.B.C."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p477 S 20 '47 360w

BECKER, BERIL. Whirlwind in petticoats. 374p $3.75 Doubleday

Martin, Victoria (Clafin) Woodhull—Fiction 47-31240

"A fictionized biography [which] tells of an early feminist, faith-healer, financier and free-lover—a shameless, driven woman who spiritualizes Commodore Vanderbilt, tangles with Boss Tweed, seduces Henry Ward Beecher, battles Susan B. Anthony, and accomplishes similar whole-cloth feats of public foolishness. No one will be surprised to hear that Vicki was married at 15, had a family of at least two at the end of ten years; then, more beautiful than ever, she abandoned her drunken, weak doctor of a husband and took to the lecture platform." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"A spirited, and sensational biography of one of the outstanding figures in the feminist movement. . . A colorful biography of an equally colorful personality, for a woman's audience."

+ Kirkus 15:416 Ag 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
S 28 '47 750w

"If the book were not so badly written, hurriedly hashing goblets of undigested political sentiment on shopgirl sentimentality, I should suggest that it be sampled as a prime example of an unpalatable type." B. V. Winebaum

— N Y Times p29 S 28 '47 290w

"Dispensing with notes and bibliography, Mr. Becker writes a fictionized biography of Victoria Woodhull that has all of the dynamite and drive of a best-selling, popular novel." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 9 '47 850w

BECKER, EDWIN JOSEPH. Coble Hill. 251p
$2.50 McBride

47-3822

A cruel, vengeful woman is the center of this short novel. Lucy Blanton was wealthy and lived in a beautiful Maryland home, but her nature was warped, and nothing was sacred to her but her own will. Gradually her plans for the domination of others backfired, but her tragic death opened the way for a new life in the town once ruled by Blantons.

"Although this is a short novel, Edwin Becker finds room in it for an elemental display of cruelty, jealousy, revenge and diabolical hatred of appalling ingenuity. The exhibit would be depressing if it were not for the saving grace of exaggeration. Some of his characters are so worn down by their own wickedness that they lose their evil potency, but this is still a tense and tingling yarn." Lisle Bell

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
Ap 20 '47 150w

"What might have been a good novel about a rich, old lady whose jealous and domineering personality yields a sinister influence, reads like a bare plot outline. Mr. Becker has failed to develop his characters and storyline and if his people do not fade into nothingness before the book's end, it is only because they never had any substance in the first place."

— San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 29 '47
70w

BECKER, ESTHER R. Secretaries who succeed; foreword by Glenn Gardiner. 121p $2 Harper

651 Secretaries, Private 47-4843

Information, suggestions, and practical pointers for the secretary who wants to make good. The author is herself a secretary and uses real experiences to illustrate the points made. Index.

Booklist 44:6 S 1 '47

Kirkus 15:298 Je 1 '47 170w

"Recommended reading for the secretary who conceives of her work as more than just a job. Employers may wish to place this text in the hands of their own secretaries and of young office workers who have the necessary technical training but lack the all-important 'secretarial sense.'"

+ Management R 36:500 S '47 90w
Wis Lib Bul 43:148 N '47

BECKER, HOWARD. German youth: bond or free. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 286p $4 Oxford

943.085 Youth—Germany. Reconstruction (1939-)—Germany 47-3653

"An analysis of German youth movements—from the Roamers of the Kaiser's time to the Hitler Jugend and the anti-Nazi Edelweiss, by means of which the author, a sociologist who did Intelligence work for the Army during the war, tries to chart the German character." New Yorker

Reviewed by Paul Honigsheim

Am J Soc 53:159 S '47 750w

Reviewed by Dorothy Blitzen

Am Soc R 12:361 Je '47 650w

"Dr. Becker uses a somewhat unorthodox conglomeration of writing techniques—impressionistic fiction ('the illusion of fiction, but sober truth'), re-created conversation, sociological analysis, straight historical narrative, and highly personalized footnotes. He now and then drops into sociological doubletalk. The finicky reader may be a bit disturbed by the author's tendency to introduce paragraphs with such staccato stop-and-go signs as: 'Enough.' 'Proviso.' 'Outcome.' 'Tantamount.' 'Specimen.' Others will be more intrigued by the vivid footnotes. . . . But these are minor faults and really do not detract from the value of a keen, stimulating, admirable analysis of a serious problem." L. L. Snyder

+ Ann Am Acad 252:164 J1 '47 440w

"The author's outlook on the future, stern but not hopeless, is underscored by fictitious, yet true to life, interviews with typical Germans of all walks of life. These interviews are indicative of the dramatic style of the book, which is both a piece of fine literature and a treasure chest of information." Arthur John

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 1 '47
270w

Foreign Affairs 26:227 O '47 50w

"This study rescues from obscurity a segment of German life, completely unknown to most of us, and reveals its wide political and social ramifications." Richard Plant
N Y Times p6 F 23 '47 850w

"The book was written before the end of hostilities and some of it is not, therefore, very timely, but the material, including pictures from German youth publications, is fascinating (in a repellent way) and is undoubtedly of historical value."

+ New Yorker 22:102 F 15 '47 60w

School & Society 65:253 Ap 5 '47 20w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 66:514 D 27 '47 260w

"At a time when our policy in Germany may determine the course of European history for generations to come, a calm, well-informed answer to the question 'German Youth, Bond or Free?' would be welcome indeed. Unfortunately this book does not provide the answer." Hans Rosenhaupt

— Survey G 36:359 Je '47 750w

BEDFORD, DONALD F. pseud. of DONALD FRIEDE. H. BEDFORD JONES and KENNETH FEARING. John Barry. 418p $3 Cre-ativ age

47-31391

Historical novel of four years in the development of California: 1846 to 1850. During that time John Barry, a young man from Maine, began as a clerk, made and lost a fortune, helped in the rescue of the Donner party, joined in the mining of gold, and helped in the development of San Francisco.

Booklist 44:151 D 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 O 19 '47
50w

"Replete with actual historical figures and events, Barry's story is almost overshadowed by the city and its giants."

Kirkus 15:475 S 1 '47 170w

"Style weak, but book is worth reading as first rate historical fiction. Recommended for general purchase." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 72:1269 S 15 '47 110w

"The episodes are more like notes to be expanded later, the dialogue is in today's speech, the sequence like a chain of montage shots, and the hero is so much where things happen that he is like Rollo among the Argonauts. If no sense of immediacy lifts from his tale, the writers do know their history texts." Idwal Jones

N Y Times p24 O 19 '47 450w

New Yorker 23:106 O 4 '47 120w

Reviewed by James Eden

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 30 '47
100w

BEDICHEK, ROY. Adventures with a Texas naturalist; il. by Ward Lockwood. 293p $3.50 Doubleday

574 Natural history—Texas. Naturalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-31272

Meditative chapters by an eastern Texas naturalist, describing his observations on the birds and animals, flowers, trees and shrubs, and customs of nature in general in his section of the United States.

Reviewed by David McCord

Atlantic 181:126 Ja '48 480w

"We have been lacking for a long time a Thoreauvian from, say, the southwest. We lack no longer. We now have this book by Roy Bedichek, Texan educator, outdoorsman, and contemplative. . . . Altogether a rewarding book, this, nature-wise and human-wise," Alan Devoe
+ Commonweal 47:178 N 28 '47 360w

"Of a definite appeal to the contemplative reader with an interest in the outdoors."
+ Kirkus 15:449 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Roy Bedichek has produced an absorbing, informative and thoughtful book. . . . It meanders. But it meanders pleasantly and the reader soon begins to know that each new turn will unfold something of interest." E. W. Teale

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 S 28 '47 950w

"Writing of this specialized genre has permanent value only if it suggests much more than it literally says. The knack is to see a lot in a little, to convey an understanding of birds, beasts and plants as exemplars of nature's grand design and lawfulness. Mr. Bedichek can do this quite well. He does not meet a Fabre's standard of conscience, nor can he handle language like a Hudson, but his attack is certainly competent." E. B. G.

+ N Y Times p33 S 28 '47 500w

"'Adventures with a Texas Naturalist' provides occasion for noting that the great tradition of nature writing is not dead. Those who are concerned for our literature might take heart at the increasing small stream of fine nature writing, which lacks only the public importance that depends on major critical acclaim. . . . This book is so rich in the scope of its contents that a full-length magazine article would seem inadequate to review it." L. J. Halle

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 S 27 '47 1000w

BEEBE, ELSWYTH THANE (RICKER) (MRS WILLIAM BEEBE) (ELSWYTH THANE, pseud). Light heart, 341p $2.75 Duell

47-30164

The fourth volume in the author's series of historical novels about the Spragues and the Days of Williamsburg, Virginia. The heroine this time is Phoebe Sprague, who became engaged to her cousin Miles just before her departure for England to attend the coronation of Edward VII. There she met the man she really loved. The book closes after a raid on London during World war I.

Booklist 43:224 Mr 15 '47

"A most readable tale, written in the high romantic tradition of the old-fashioned novel." A. E. Gasaway

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Mr 16 '47 450w

"'The Light Heart' has special fascination for readers who have already become acquainted with the Days and the Spragues, the Murrys and the Campions. Family sagas have not only their own merit to their advantage, but also the momentum given them by their predecessors. 'The Light Heart,' however, is a complete unit and wholly intelligible to readers who do not already know 'Dawn's Early Light,' 'Yankee Stranger,' or 'Ever After.'" W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 14 '47 600w

"Pleasant reading."

+ Kirkus 15:7 Ja 1 '47 260w

"At the end, the threads of the plot are so neatly tied together to insure a happy outcome for all concerned, that the story lacks the conviction of realism. Recommended chiefly for rental collections." R. P. Tubby

Library J 72:225 F 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 Ap 20 '47 250w

"As the continuing chronicle of a Williamsburg (Va.) family the story is necessarily cluttered with dozens of relatives and complicated cousinships, but as a picture of the early Nineteen Hundreds it is much more successful than its immediate predecessor in the series. It makes entertaining reading, a readable rather than a distinguished novel." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 16 '47 230w

"The author is given to a good many clichés; and her characters, somehow, never arouse much sympathy. I must say here, too, that Phoebe's return to the States and a half-hearted marriage, at the expense of her deep love for Oliver, was never very convincing. . . . Nevertheless, if you are willing to wade through an incredible number of blood-relations, and lesser characters, and suspend a good deal of disbelief, you are likely to find, in this novel of significant years, some fairly absorbing reading." N. G. Chaikin

— + Sat R of Lit 30:26 Mr 29 '47 270w

BEEBE, LUCIUS MORRIS. Mixed train daily; a book of short-line railroads; with photographs by C. M. Clegg, Jr., and the author; and six original oil paintings by Howard Fogg. 368p $12.75 Dutton

385 Railroads

47-30951

"Photographs and text tell the story here of every narrow gauge now in operation in this country, over 300 lines in all. The short line, hero of Mr. Beebe's story, is not a branch of a main-line railroad, but a complete railroad in its own right, with motive power and rolling stock bearing its own name. The short lines usually connect and trade traffic with a main line, though sometimes their commerce is exclusively with other connecting short lines." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 44:99 N 15 '47

"Unquestionably the railway action photographs that 'Mixed Train Daily' offers in such generous profusion are unequaled anywhere for sheer artistry and present a unique and valuable pictorial record of a distinctive phase of American life. Furthermore, there is a vast amount of informative detail scattered throughout this luxurious volume." Richard Overton

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 S 28 '47 450w

Kirkus 15:414 Ag 1 '47 80w

"To the librarian with courage enough to face a hole in her budget for the boys and their fathers who will pore over its pages, Mixed Train Daily is heartily recommended." Mary Strang

+ Library J 72:1280 S 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1376 O 1 '47 60w

"The text is a nostalgic, romantic, and at times hilarious account by one who obviously loves his subject and has spared no effort to get the whole sad and sometimes preposterous story of the little ones into one big book. The photographs are so good as to preclude any critical appraisal by a layman." S. H. Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S 14 '47 750w

"Beebe repeats himself; his chapters read like pieces written for separate and various publications put unreviewed into a book. He is addicted to verbal flourish. . . . Often his writing has too much bounce and bombast: you feel he's straining too hard to get the verbal freight over the hump. But at his best, when he is truly moved, he puts aside his 'columnnese' and writes with insight and grace. . . . There is precious freight aboard this book. Beebe's first chapter is a beautiful testament of feeling, a moving statement of the imaginative value of his subject; and again and again his response to the varieties of the life of which he is writing moves one with the pathos of old shakily things." Horace Reynolds

+ — N Y Times p14 O 5 '47 600w

"A nice mixture of anecdote, nostalgia, information (more or less), humor (mild), and classical reference, and a neat demonstration of what a couple of good men can do with a camera."

+ New Yorker 23:135 N 8 '47 120w

BEEBE, L. M.—Continued

"It's a beautiful book and you need be neither a railroad bug nor a homesick poet to enjoy it immensely." Allen Worth
+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 S 21 '47 550w

"The text is extremely good. Part historical and part narrative, it catches the spirit and speech of the backwoods regions. The style, of course, is in Mr. Beebe's recondite and florid manner, but is heightened by a gentle irony which has been absent from most of his previous books. And he lets the characters, general managers, locomotive engineers, conductors, station agents, and brakemen tell the stories of their little roads in their own dialect." E. L. DeGolyer

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 O 25 '47 500w

BEELER, NELSON FREDERICK, and BRANLEY, FRANKLYN M. Experiments in science; il. by Ruth Beck. 116p $2 Crowell

507.2 Science—Juvenile literature 47-4767

Simple experiments which could be performed at home with very simple equipment. The authors are the science editors of Young America, in which the chapters ran serially.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 180:150 D '47 90w

Booklist 44:20 S 1 '47

"A good science book for the junior high school level, but weakened by haphazard organization and dull illustrations."

+ Kirkus 15:166 Mr 15 '47 180w

"Suitable for ages 9-12 and usable in both public and school libraries." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 72:1040 J1 '47 80w

"The Messrs. Beeler and Branley are true scientists, and all on the children's side. They never flinch or turn away, although when making coke from coal they suggest, 'you better hold your nose when you do this because the smell is awful.' However, most experiments are innocent enough, and all are entertaining. 'Experiments in Science' should prove a god-send to any teacher or parent faced with the problem of holding a pack at bay during a rainy afternoon." Creighton Peet

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 3 '47 190w

Sat R of Lit 30:57 N 15 '47 50w

BEER, THOMAS. Mrs Egg and other Americans; ed. and with an introd. by Wilson Follett. 531p $5 Knopf

47-31162

A collection of twenty-nine of the short stories of Thomas Beer. Three of them are here published for the first time; most of the others appeared originally in the Saturday Evening Post. There is a critical introduction by the editor.

Kirkus 15:516 S 15 '47 110w

"As the reader of these stories will inevitably discover, Thomas Beer's America is a kind of never-never land, all dimity and innocence, prevalently benign and almost without shadows under eternally smiling skies. Other writers among Beer's contemporaries—Sinclair Lewis, H. L. Mencken, Scott Fitzgerald—were actuated by a patriotism no less passionate, an idealism no less exacting than his; they were, for that reason, compelled to bitter denunciation of an America that had failed to achieve its traditional dream. Beer, instead, sought refuge in the past and in the dream itself." Lloyd Morris

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 O 19 '47 1050w

"No one who bought The Saturday Evening Post in the Twenties to read Thomas Beer's short stories ever forgot the flavor of such passages. Complicatedly and rather falsely plotted in the conventional slick-story patterns, they had a marvelously leisurely, loving, observant appreciation of the details of family life, and a painter's eye for light and movement and the relation of figure to ground. . .

The plots are elaborately perfunctory, and yet the actions which compose them are brilliantly seen." R. G. Davis

+ N Y Times p28 O 5 '47 1100w

"Mr. Beer's stories are as pleasantly entertaining as stories of this sort can be. That, however, is about as far as they go. Mr. Follett's contention that they are 'a searching commentary on American life' is somewhat overenthusiastic. . . The best thing that can be said about Mr. Beer as a short-story writer is that he is a more polished, a more dexterous O. Henry." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 23:120 O 11 '47 480w

"This is an admirable selection, and Mr. Follett's prefatory remarks constitute both an introduction to the stories and a critical essay on Thomas Beer himself. . . If you ever read a Thomas Beer story in the 15 years during which he sold them regularly to the Post, then you won't need to be told to get hold of this collection." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 23 '47 750w

"Thomas Beer is an entertaining storyteller, and it is good to have his stories accessible once more. But it is impossible for this reviewer to agree at all with Mr. Follett's conclusion that Beer's stories are 'more important, more real, more enduring' than his literary studies or that in them the author was 'writing an indispensable chapter of the true saga of America.'" William Peden

Sat R of Lit 30:12 N 15 '47 1100w

BEERBOHM, SIR MAX. Mainly on the air. 142p $2 Knopf 824

47-847

Six urbane essays and six broadcasts by the author of Zuleika Dobson. The subjects range from memories of London in the 1890's to an elegy on the passing of the top hat.

"A charming little book for any booklover, and not the least of its charms are the typography, paper, and binding which preserve so tastefully the spirit of its originator." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 179:128 Mr '47 450w

Booklist 43:182 F 15 '47

Bookmark 8:8 My '47

"[The essays] are dated and are characteristic 'Max' with a postured weariness that hides zest, and a delicate whimsy that cannot fail to delight those readers who like thoughts that have been duly burnished before they reach the printed page. The book is a trifle, but for those spiritually akin to Beerbohm distinctly a worth-while trifle. It has his own rare and familiar flavor."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 F 23 '47 180w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 5 '47 420w

"One puts down the book with a conviction that we have no other stylist in English his equal. Yet at the same time a feeling of dissatisfaction remains. What has this sensitive medium ever conveyed but the sort of trivia contained in this book? Are all his operas to remain minor ones? Where is the large effort? the stretch toward the philosophic end?" Charles Duffy

Commonweal 45:404 Ja 31 '47 600w

Kirkus 14:615 D 1 '46 120w

"Recommended for university and large public libraries." George Freedley

Library J 72:322 F 15 '47 50w

"Perhaps there is something of a pose in these nostalgic reminiscences of a golden age, but how skilful they are, how light in their touch, how gentle in their satire! No other living writer can do this sort of thing so well. . . All are worth reading for pleasure and all worth studying for profit. If Sir Max Beerbohm's essays, like peaches, owe something to their rarity, they are still very, very good." J. M. D. P.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 18 '46 260w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 164:338 Mr 22 '47 190w

Reviewed by Conal O'Riordan
+ New Statesman & Nation 32:303 O 26
+ '46 1850w

"There is a little sketch of persons, stories, places, and of pictures of persons at windows. 'Fenestralia' is one of the most delicate and subtle aesthetic forays Max ever made. To read his essay on why we remember people speaking or merely looking out of windows is to learn a good deal about the value of 'frame' to a picture, to learn a good deal about art, to learn a good deal about—Max. For all life seems to Max to be views caught from a window, inside which he is looking out and speaking. He speaks quietly, with perfect distinction and modulation, and, as he says of people once seen at a window, you never forget him. . . Well, Max has certainly not been a failure with either pen or pencil, and he will certainly have to be favorably mentioned in any history of English prose." Irwin Edman
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
Ja 26 '47 1050w

"What this little book proves despite its nostalgic backward look, despite its regret for things lost and dead, is that Beerbohm is no gallant anachronism. His quality is ageless. If you must be convinced read 'Speed,' 'The Top Hat' and 'Fenestralia.' Then, for an example of the highest wit, 'that pierces without leaving a wound,' make the acquaintance of 'T. Fenning Dodworth,' worthy to join the gallery of Beerbohm's now immortal 'Seven Men.'" Frances Winwar

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 26 '47 650w

Reviewed by Louis Kronenberger
Sat R of Lit 30:9 Je 21 '47 3800w

"Charming little book." C. E. Vulliamy
+ Spec 177:244 S 6 '46 650w

Theatre Arts 31:75 Je '47 80w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p426 S 7 '46
1900w

BEGEMAN, MYRON LOUIS. Manufacturing processes. 2d ed 626p il $5 Wiley 671 Metal work. Machine shop practice
47-17601

"Broad coverage of industrial processes including pattern and foundry work, casting, plastic molding, heat treating, welding, and lathe work. Brief explanation of processes under each broad subject. Not intended to be complete in detail description but the coverage is good. Four new chapters and revision bring it up to date. Many illustrations." (Booklist) Chapter bibliographies. Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1942.

Booklist 43:257 Ap 15 '47

"Well-written book intended primarily for engineering students." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:78 Ja 1 '47 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:13 Ja '47

BEGUIN, ALBERT. Léon Bloy; a study in impatience; tr. by Edith M. Riley. 247p $2.75 Sheed

B or 92 Bloy, Léon

Four studies of the works of the French Catholic prophet of the Absolute, Léon Bloy. They are studies heading up to his themes of the Trinity, the Earthly Paradise, Our Lady, and the coming of the Holy Spirit. The introduction is a historical sketch of the life and work of Léon Bloy. Bibliographical note.

Reviewed by J. T. Clune
Cath World 165:280 Je '47 300w

Reviewed by Nancy Lenkeith
Commonweal 46:219 Je 13 '47 390w

Reviewed by Albert Guérard
Nation 165:262 S 13 '47 380w
New Statesman & Nation 34:156 Ag 23
'47 170w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My
18 '47 800w

Reviewed by Arthur Boyars
Spec 179:310 S 5 '47 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p149 Ap 5
'47 6250w

BEIM, JERROLD. Andy and the school bus; il. by Leonard Shortall. [46p] $2 Morrow 47-30835

Story of a small boy who could not believe he was too young to go to school. Every day, in rain, shine, or snow he hopefully hailed the school bus until eventually his patience was rewarded.

Booklist 44:20 S 1 '47

"This is a wonderful book to read to the 5-year-olds and an equally good book for first readers to tackle themselves. The pictures swing into every mood of the story." Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 14 '47
150w

Kirkus 15:465 S 1 '47 80w

"A read-aloud book. Recommended." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 72:1276 S 15 '47 50w

"The usefulness of this picture story will not last long, for its audience is limited to children who do not as yet go to school, but during this period it has special interest." M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O
19 '47 230w

Springf'd Republican p14B N 2 '47 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:132 O '47

BEIM, MRS LORRAINE (LEVEY). Benjamin Busybody; pictures by Violet La Mont. [59p] $2 Harcourt 47-30208

Picture-story book about one day in the life of a very busy little boy who was a great help to his mother, but remained a very real little boy at the same time. Ages three to five.

Booklist 43:243 Ap 1 '47

Kirkus 15:127 Mr 1 '47 90w

"Recommended." S. J. Robinson

+ Library J 72:531 Ap 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap
13 '47 250w

"Written with the cooperation of a nursery school, this book has all of the earmarks of a small fry favorite, simplicity, familiar material, mild suspense, repetition and large, softly colored illustrations. And, happily, it is bound stoutly enough to survive the enthusiasms of the lollipop crowd, who will undoubtedly claim Benjie and his dog, Happy, for their own." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p40 Mr 30 '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:69 Ap '47

BEIM, MRS LORRAINE (LEVEY). Sugar and spice. 215p $2.50 Harcourt
47-31310

Story of a fine seventeen-year-old girl who had supposed that when she finished high school she could go on to college. It was a shock to learn that college was out of the question while her older brother was there. The story is of Ann's facing of her problem. For older girls.

Churchman 161:17 D 1 '47 40w

"The story attacks some vital problems in a vital way, and there's enough romance and high school detail to carry occasional tendencies to get talky."

+ Kirkus 15:549 O 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
N 16 '47 360w

BEIM, L. L.—Continued

"Colorless characterization and undistinguished style weaken the impact of the story, and Mrs. Beim has not fully presented the masculine side of the problem but she has given older girls a good deal to think about and given them courage, too." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p31 Ja 25 '48 210w

Wis Lib Bul 43:156 N '47

BELIVEAU, KATHRYN JEAN. Strike for the heart, 222p $2.50 Doubleday

47-31154

"This is primarily the story of Fran Di Mazio, a teen-aged girl who lives in an industrial town near New York, and of her bewilderment in the face of her changing religious and social concepts." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Kirkus 15:374 Jl 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by Peggy Thomson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 O 12 '47 400w

"To this reader, 'Strike for the Heart' emerges not as a direct, compelling story but as a rather confused picture of a confused heroine, Fran, in spite of the author's diligence, seems merely the symbol of a girl trying to find the answers to life—with the author as her mouthpiece. The writing is uneven; constant, elaborately withdrawn contemplations stand in sharp contrast to the fresh, easy handling of surface scenes." Anne Richards

+ — N Y Times p22 S 21 '47 270w

BELL, AUBREY FITZGERALD. Cervantes, 256p il $3 Univ. of Okla. press

863 Cervantes Saavedra, Miguel de

47-30789

A critical study of the works of Cervantes, marking the 400th anniversary of his birth. The author is an English scholar, an authority on Spanish literature and a life-long devotee of Cervantes. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:47 O 1 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 17 '47 450w

Reviewed by Ralph De Toledano

Commonweal 49:230 D 12 '47 900w

"The frank purpose of the book is to fill the reader with something of the author's deep love for Spain, her spirit and her greatest writer. But his love is a jealous love, which regards with cold fury anyone who dares to look upon the country of his dreams and the proudest product of its culture, with any pretensions of his own. The result is a happily cantankerous book, a vividly heartfelt tribute filled with scorn and contempt for those who may rival his love for the Spanish spirit and for Cervantes." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 117:28 S 15 '47 1550w

"Mr. Bell's present reading is a product of profound Hispanic and Cervantine scholarship and of a lifetime of ever more melancholy contemplation of the days of his own generation. His study of Cervantes is more a series of meditative and interpretive essays than a formal biography." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ag 17 '47 2250w

"On the occasion of the Cervantes quadricentenary, it is fitting that a volume (the successor to several volumes on Spain and her literature which have come already from Mr. Bell's pen) should appear to do yet more honor to one of the greatest of all Spain's sons. Happily, the present volume is no inanimate list of dates, no soulless stringing together of facts, no warmed-over mass of commentary, but, instead, something alive and attractive, informative and penetrating, scholarly and, at the same time, human—a persuasive analysis of what Cervantes means to an enthusiastic devotee." T. R. Ybarra

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 17 '47 950w

Reviewed by A. Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p21 D 14 '47 200w

Reviewed by Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 30:7 Ag 9 '47 900w

School & Society 67:47 Ja 17 '48 20w

Time 50:88 S 1 '47 650w

BELL, BERNARD IDDINGS. A man can live, 128p $1.50 Harper

248 Christianity

47-31184

"In this volume there are brought together lectures given in recent years in teaching missions held all over the country. It deals in turn with the questions: What is man like? His hunger and his destiny; What is God like? What is the redemptive adventure? What is the highest morality? All that he has to say proceeds from four basic convictions: (1) Contemporary civilization is an indescribably desperate state; (2) The current decay is due to the common belief that all men have to live for is the satisfaction of carnal greeds and of an appetite for power; (3) Our only hope is in the rediscovery of a design for the world and for the individual, and (4) That hope for the world and the individual lies in discovering how to live with oneself and with one's neighbors, how to satisfy the ultimate 'meaning of things.'" (Kirkus) Index.

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 162:17 Ja 1 '48 360w

"A Man Can Live is far from Dr. Bell's best. . . . In spoken form [these lectures] undoubtedly were useful and popular, for they speak to man's condition. The author's familiar idiom of sophisticated common sense at a rakish angle and his compelling directness and charming eclecticism enable him to deal with profound problems in everyday language with dignity and reverence. . . . In the public forum, these exhortations must have been quite effective. But, alas, in cold type they simply do not stand up. In fact, to this reviewer, here is an appalling abdication of Christian responsibility." Maynard Cassidy

+ Crozer Q 25:30 Ja '48 800w

"Although Dr. Bell is an Episcopalian of the High Church wing, his is a message and a mission that speaks to all Christians with the forthright incisiveness which marks him as one of the true prophets of our day."

+ Kirkus 15:534 S 15 '47 170w

"This book on Christian living in an 'insane' era contains more than a suggestion that Canon Bell has shifted his position on what is salvable in contemporary civilization. In his widely read earlier works, while he was no less severe than now on the evils of both the individual and society, his hope for personal and social salvation was almost equally distributed. In this book, so far in his estimation has the world declined in its perception of the nature of man, the doctrine of the Remnant looms large in his thinking. Consequently, his appeal is ever more and more to personal religion, to ethical Christian living by the individual." G. R. Stephenson

N Y Times p50 N 9 '47 500w

BELL, ERIC TEMPLE (JOHN TAINE, pseud). Magic of numbers. (Whittlesey house publication) 418p $3.50 McGraw

510.1 Numbers, Theory of. Mathematics—History. Mathematics—Philosophy 46-8012

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Booklist 43:237 Ap 1 '47

Chem Eng 54:272 O '47 20w

Reviewed by Rufus Oldenburger

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Mr 9 '47

400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '47

N Y New Tech Bks 31:63 O '46

"Dr. Bell, in attempting to bring his discussion to the widest audience, has succumbed here and there to the usual—almost inevitable—defects of popularized science: overstatement, oversimplification and overwriting. But in spite of his wit and colorful language and amusing anecdotes, the essentially recondite argument will still remain over most of its readers' heads." Donald Barr

N Y Times p37 Mr 30 '47 650w

Spring'd Republican p18A O 12 '47 130w

"The style is nontechnical, lively, and the book is addressed to the general reader interested in the history of ideas."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:105 Mr '47 320w

BELL, GEORGE KENNEDY ALLEN, bp. Church and humanity, 1939-1946. 252p $2.75 Longmans

940.53152 World war, 1939-1945—Religious aspects 47-4152

A collection of speeches delivered by the Bishop of Chichester in the House of Lords during the war, with some other essays and addresses. Some of the speeches, notably that on obliteration bombing, were much discussed at the time.

"Most of the problems he discusses are still timely, and these addresses should give courage to those who, with the author, are still brave enough to believe in the Golden Rule." W. L. Caswell

+ — Churchman 161:17 N 15 '47 130w
Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 9 '47 90w

Reviewed by John Midgley
New Statesman & Nation 33:77 Ja 25 '47 370w

"The speeches of the Bishop show a generous and bold spirit, and represent a clearly held point of view which will carry conviction to many Christian people." Marcus Knight

Spec 177:712 D 27 '46 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p94 F 15 '47 550w

BELL, JANET, pseud. See Clymer, E. L.

BELL, THELMA HARRINGTON (MRS CORYDON BELL). Mountain boy: with drawings by Corydon Bell. 40p $2 Viking 47-30604

Randy, a small boy living in the southern mountains, could read all the signs of clouds, sky, and animal footprints, but when his mother tried to teach him reading and writing he just said "I can't." Then his mother told him a story, in which he himself was the hero, and Randy changed his mind.

Booklist 44:53 O 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 7 '47 230w

"The way his mother finally taught him reading and writing and 'rithmetic, and the meaning behind it, makes a good story, grounded in real American humor." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Ag 26 '47 190w

"A full sense of outdoor lore, southern mountain life, [make] a real-life type of story for the older ages in this group. The illustrations by Corydon Bell have the directness of the story."

+ Kirkus 15:427 Ag 15 '47 80w

"Excellent style and characterization. Ages 8-10, also good for reading aloud to younger children." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 72:1276 S 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 N 16 '47 270w

"The moral is presented simply, quietly. Children would probably remember it longer if the story had a bit more drama, but it has humor and a sense of the mountain background, which is also repeated in the illustrations." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p25 Ag 10 '47 140w

Sat R of Lit 30:36 O 18 '47 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:132 O '47

BELLAMY, FRANCIS RUFUS. Blood money; the story of U. S. Treasury secret agents. 257p $2.75 Dutton

341.53 U.S. Foreign funds control. Enemy property. Trading with the enemy 47-2639

An account of the United States treasury department's Foreign funds control division and its work as a counter-espionage service during the World war. The author has drawn on official sources for his study of the T-men in action, and their part in putting a stop to the enemy's attempts to get money and materials from the United States to carry on the war.

Booklist 43:324 Je 15 '47

Kirkus 15:154 Mr 1 '47 160w

Reviewed by Edward Angly

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 J1 6 '47 550w

"Mr. Bellamy is obviously concerned with his subject. He spins his yarns expertly, and, one must assume, accurately. He also takes occasion to offer, following the main section of his book, a series of observations on possible future developments in the sphere of international financial intrigue. His words are not encouraging, and at the same time they are somewhat confusing. The author is a first-rate descriptive writer, but he should not assume the mantle of the economist merely because he has so doggedly traced the uneven path of power finance. And he is hardly being as objective as his more astute contemporaries when he dismisses Bretton Woods with a nod." James Lyons

+ — N Y Times p25 Je 22 '47 900w

"There seems to be some discrepancy between Mr. Bellamy's claim that the Treasury was chiefly responsible for the prevention of enemy espionage in this country and Look's claim that it was the F. B. I."

New Yorker 23:107 My 24 '47 120w

"A book as thought-provoking as it is absorbingly melodramatic." A. B.
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 22 '47 150w

"'Blood Money' is a once-over-lightly treatment of an important part of the fight against the Axis." Merle Miller

Sat R of Lit 30:18 Ag 9 '47 380w

BELLINI, GIOVANNI. [Paintings and drawings] by Philip Hendy and Ludwig Goldscheider. (Phaidon press bk) 34p il 122pl $6.50 Oxford

759.5 Paintings, Italian. Drawings A46-15
For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Bookmark 8:7 Mr '47

"The plates are large and amply reinforced with details, and those in colour are admirable. A further volume is promised 'for the less innocent reader.' But innocence is relative and this first volume will surely turn a good many innocents into potential students." E. N.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 6 '47 120w

"The long-awaited Phaidon Bellini, announced as long ago as the autumn of 1945, has at last made its appearance on the book-stalls. So admirably produced a volume on so great a painter deserves a heavy sale. . . There are some detailed photographs of great beauty which have never before been assembled between the covers of a book, and the generous scale of each reproduction—larger, we are told in the Foreword, than any made from Bellini's work before—goes some way towards explaining his monumental stature to anyone who cannot claim an intimate acquaintance with his work, profusely scattered as it is over Europe and America. I find myself in disagreement with some of Mr. Hendy's statements in his introduction. . . But the great merit of this book is that it leaves Bellini's art to speak for itself, and some hint of his fevered response to the spectacle of nature rises from the leaden page." Benedict Nicolson

+ New Statesman & Nation 33:280 Ap 19 '47 650w

BELLINI, GIOVANNI—Continued

"The issue by the Phaidon Press of a volume devoted to Giovanni Bellini is a matter for congratulation. The greatest Italian nature-poet and one of the supreme painters of the quattrocento, Bellini reveals a capacity for development unique among the artists of the fifteenth century. . . . The fact that a number of the paintings illustrated are almost certainly not by Bellini is no doubt due to the conviction of the editors that 'ultimately a picture's authorship must depend largely upon whether it adds to the painter's oeuvre or takes away from it,' perhaps the strangest heresy ever to have been advanced by the director of a public gallery."

+ — Spec 178:378 Ap 4 '47 290w

"An excellent picture-book, the more valuable in that such large reproductions of the works of Giovanni Bellini are not available in other publications. There is also a lively and original essay on the development of Giovanni Bellini's art as a whole, but in other respects the merit of the book can hardly be judged until its companion volume comes out."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p335 J1 5 '47 650w

BELLOW, SAUL. The victim. 294p $2.75 Vanguard

47-12088

Asa Leventhal held a position on a New York trade journal, and had won a certain security, but a few sultry weeks while his wife was away almost wrecked him. The remembrance of his insane mother, and the constant harrying of a Gentile friend, who insisted that Asa had ruined his career, brought him to the verge of insanity.

"A fragmentary presentation without force, about which is woven a plot of nightmare quality. . . . A story of New York today, in general introspective, thought provoking, but with the focus on the idea rather than the people, who are little more than lay figures."

Kirkus 15:604 N 1 '47 150w

"Graphically written." J. E. Cross

Library J 72:1610 N 15 '47 80w

Nation 166:24 Ja 3 '48 1200w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:26 D 8 '47 800w

"'The Victim' rates as a subtle and thoughtful contribution to the literature of twentieth-century anti-Semitism." Richard Match

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 N 23 '47 600w

"The novel is at once overcontrived and undercontrived, as if Mr. Bellow had not quite determined what kind of novel he was writing. . . . The parallel development of the stories of the dying child and the bloodsucking Allbee is skillfully handled, the climax . . . in each arriving as patly as in an Elizabethan play. But so much contrivance in a realistic novel is acceptable only if it contributes to an understanding of what the novel is about. It is never clear what 'The Victim' is about." A. S. Downer

+ — N Y Times p29 N 30 '47 550w

"Despite a poor and ineffectual ending, the book is an excellent one."

+ — New Yorker 23:139 D 13 '47 130w

"On the surface, this is a competent little story about a solemn and touchy Jew accused by a fantastic Gentile of having ruined him. But, until a disastrously out-of-key final chapter, it has troubling depths of meaning which make it unusual among new novels."

Time 50:111 D 1 '47 440w

BELSHAW, HORACE, ed. New Zealand: chapters by W. T. G. Airey [and others]. (United Nations ser) 329p 11 maps $5 Univ. of Calif. 919.31 New Zealand 47-31349

"A symposium on the history, natural features, economic and social aspects, culture, politics, and government of New Zealand. Contents: Discovery and exploration, by J. C. Beaglehole; Physical and cultural geography, by Andrew H. Clark; Maori and Pakeha, by

I. L. G. Sutherland; New Zealand in evolution, by W. T. G. Airey; Economic organization, by H. Belshaw; The farming industries, by W. M. Hamilton; Industry and industrial policy, by Samuel Leatham; Labor legislation and organization, by D. W. Oxnam; Social legislation, by W. B. Sutch; Education, by A. E. Campbell; Literature and the arts, by A. R. D. Fairburn; Politics and administration, by L. C. Webb; International and commonwealth relations, by J. C. Beaglehole. Selected bibliography." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 44:65 O 15 '47

"It is most successful as a reference work, since the practice of dividing the subject among a number of specialists, while undoubtedly increasing the authority of the book, does not give that continuity of style and thought which makes for smooth reading. The editing, however, is skillful and the book is well organized, with repetition and conflict kept to a minimum." Harry Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 N 2 '47 180w

"Professor Belshaw has done a very necessary job." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y Times p26 Ja 25 '48 600w

"Though sometimes wordy or repetitious, the contributors have put together a penetrating and objective picture of this small but vigorous Pacific power." P. L. Soljak

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 5 '47 500w

BEMELMANS, LUDWIG. Dirty Eddie. 240p $2.75 Viking

47-30570

A farcical story about Hollywood, its actors and actresses, writers, producers, and hangers-on. The titular hero is a small black pig which, playing an important role in a moving picture, pulls down an enormous salary, nearly ruins the picture, but is the eventual cause of its success.

"This is not the book to end all books about Hollywood. The narrative lacks the scope, the technical curiosity, and the poignancy which gave such promise to the novel which Scott Fitzgerald left unfinished at his death. But Bemelmans, master of the bizarre, has caught to perfection that half of our strangest community." Edward Weeks

Atlantic 180:120 O '47 600w

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 17 '47 360w

Kirkus 15:294 Je 1 '47 260w

"Since Bemelmans does not take himself seriously as a writer, he is unable to take his subject seriously. In his attempt to confine himself to a whimsy that does not disturb anyone, he corsets his personality by remaining curiously passive toward the novel; he does not bear down; it is all too easy for him. I do not intend to make a plea for solemnity, but I do think that true satire can only spring from highly serious perception and that Bemelmans does not have. His characters, therefore, seem, for all their brittle distinctiveness, merely odd functions of his whimsy." Irving Howe

— Nation 165:205 Ag 30 '47 650w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 117:28 Ag 18 '47 2300w

"It was inevitable that Bemelmans should go to Hollywood where the truth is incredible and the fantasy all too true. . . . The movie which he helped to create was a dismal flop. But this book is not. It is the funniest, most ridiculous, truest, craziest, sharpest satire on the motion-picture world to be presented to the other half since George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart wrote 'Once in a Lifetime.'" Richard Mealand

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 17 '47 600w

"Whether this is a completely accurate story of life in Hollywood is quite beside the point. As a satirist, Bemelmans is entitled to a few liberties—among them being the fact that no studio would put a $5,000-a-week pig to work without at least one stand-in. But then, Dirty Eddie is really the least of the book. Bemelmans is the best of it, and Bemelmans rarely has been in better form than here." Frank Nugent

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 17 '47 650w

New Yorker 23:77 Ag 23 '47 130w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 18 '47 750w

"Rated as a novel, even an intentionally humorous-satirical novel, it is obvious that Mr. Bemelmans has not been entirely successful. It goes from one scene to the next by fits and starts; the order of the chapters could be changed without damage to the whole in many sections. It is also obvious that the ghosts of all those four- or five-thousand word articles he once wrote about the Hotel Splendide for The New Yorker are still haunting him." Harrison Smith

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:12 Ag 16 '47 1050w

Time 50:86 S 1 '47 500w

BENCHLEY, MRS BELLE (JENNINGS). Shirley visits the zoo; photographs by G. E. Kirkpatrick. [64p] $1.50 Little

590.74 Animals—Juvenile literature 46-6357

Photographs and brief text describe the visits of a little girl to the San Diego zoo, and the animal friends she meets there. The author is director of the Balboa Park zoo in San Diego.

"Children will enjoy this book and from it they will learn to be patient and gentle in dealing with wild creatures. Miss Benchley writes easily and simply, in short sentences and familiar words so that 5- and 6-year-olds are going to listen eagerly and also remember more than a little about the animals' lives and habits. I cannot think of a better introduction to the animal world." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 Ja 14 '47 210w

Kirkus 14:429 S 1 '46 40w

"Too much about Shirley and not enough about the animals in the book's chief fault. . . To be read aloud to children 6-8." Claire Nolte

Library J 71:1334 O 1 '46 70w

BENCHLEY, ROBERT CHARLES. Benchley—or else! with drawings by Gluyas Williams. 273p $2.75 Harper

817

47-31131

Seventy-one brief selections from the writings of this American humorist who died in 1945.

Kirkus 15:383 Jl 15 '47 80w

"The present collection includes pieces which have not only appeared in periodicals, but have been in other Benchley collections. It is an agreeable cross-section, however, a sort of definitive Benchley omnibus. You will not find therein, unfortunately, the classic piece about bridge-building, but you will find among the selections a lot of the other old favorites." Russell Maloney

+ N Y Times p14 O 5 '47 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 5 '47 170w

BENDICK, MRS JEANNE. Electronics for young people; il. by [the author]. (Whittlesey house publication) 175p $2 McGraw

621.38 Electronics—Juvenile literature

47-30319

A revised edition of the author's Electronics for Boys and Girls (Book Review Digest 1944). "New material on radar, atomic energy, and nuclear power has been added." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:335 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:269 Jl '47 30w

"Much improved is this revised and enlarged edition of Electronics for Boys and Girls. Most mechanical errors, such as spelling and alphabetizing, have been corrected. Rewording, qualifying statements and a few additional diagrams clarify meaning, although some explanations are poor, e.g., voltage, and a few misleading conceptions remain, e.g., positive atom. New material, largely on radar and atomic energy, brings the book up to date. Better organized index includes terms most used in these new fields. Recommended for beginners as a popular, non-mathematical presentation of a difficult technical subject." F. L. Morrison

+ Library J 72:963 Je 15 '47 130w

Sat R of Lit 30:57 N 15 '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:122 Jl '47

BENDICK, MRS JEANNE. How much and how many; the story of weights and measures. (Whittlesey house publication) 188p $2 McGraw

339 Weights and measures

47-11403

The story of weights and measures: what they are, and their origins. The author describes measurements in such fields as shipping, building, printing, medicine, navigation, cooking, photography, etc. Illustrated with line drawings. Bibliography. Index.

"It's fun and it's interesting, and should prove a blessing in disguise to unmathematically-minded youngsters." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 180:150 D '47 50w

Booklist 44:116 N 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p8a N 19 '47 200w

"Many line drawings make graphic the fund of information in this book, which will be valuable for reference and of great interest to the practical minded of any age." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:48 Ja '48 80w

Kirkus 15:549 O 1 '47 80w

"A subject that could be dry comes alive in the author's clever drawings and bits of historical background. . . In spite of small-child silhouettes in dedication and words spelled out for pronunciation, should be useful for general science for ages 10-14. F. L. Morrison

+ — Library J 72:1693 D 1 '47 70w

"I don't know a book of general information more likely to be read more eagerly by children than this one." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 23 '47 140w

"This book may be for children, but a lot of adults are going to sneak it away onto a shelf for future reference. The tables in the back are particularly useful." C. P.

+ N Y Times p46 N 16 '47 140w

Reviewed by F. C. Sayers

San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 19 '47 30w

BENDURE, ZELMA, and PFEIFFER, GLADYS (BENDURE). America's fabrics. 688p il col pl $10 Macmillan

677 Textile industry. Textile fabrics

46-6888

"Story of all basic fibers used in about 1,000 modern fabrics from heavy asbestos fire curtains to gossamer synthetics showing the origin, characteristics, uses, finishes, dyes, testing, standards, processes and printing. Illustrated with 12 color plates, 500 photos, and many line drawings." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:164 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:6 Ja '47

"Little of the information is new to the textile student and specialist; much is too technical for the consumer. In an effort to be all-inclusive, the authors—one experienced in merchandising and the author of many sales manuals, the other a homemaker, consumer, and writer—have brought together a vast amount of material never previously assembled in one volume. However, the reader is left with the feeling that the writers should have discriminated between essential information and that which is supplementary but interesting. They would have done well to screen the material and write two books—one for the textile student, the other for the consumer."

BENDURE, ZELMA—Continued
B. V. Morrison

J Home Econ 39:43 Ja '47 250w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1626 N 15 '46 60w

BENDZ, WALDEMAR I., and SCARLOTT, CHARLES A. Electronics for industry. 501p il $5 Wiley

621.38 Electronics 47-2250

"A practical, non-mathematical explanation of the fundamentals of electronics. Types and functions of electronic tubes, the fundamentals of rectifiers, amplifiers and oscillators, basic control circuits, and the application of high-frequency for induction and dielectric heating are discussed. Emphasis is placed on the principles as applied to industrial equipment." (Special Libraries). References at end of each chapter. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:226 F 1 '47 70w

"Since it emphasizes the explanation of principles it will give the person who has to use these devices a good understanding of what is behind them." James Stokley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21
My 18 '47 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:8 Ja '47

Special Libraries 38:54 F '47

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:211 Je '47 160w

BENEDICT, OTIS. Manual of foundry and pattern shop practice. 361p il $3.25 McGraw 621.74 Foundry practice. Pattern making

47-4433

"The discussion of materials includes not only principal materials, but, also the adhesives used in making laminated wood for use in pattern making. Processes such as preparing a mold for a simple casting are described step-by-step. So much detail in a small book has been accomplished by making the discussions brief and strictly to-the-point. There is also some material on foundry record-keeping." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 44:6 S 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1714 D 1 '46 50w

"This very good, introductory text is outstanding for its detailed descriptions of tools, materials, and methods. Tools, down to the most commonplace, are not only described but illustrated."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:31 Ap '47

BENESCH, OTTO. Venetian drawings of the eighteenth century in America. 41p 61pl $15 Bittner, H.

741.945 Drawings 47-4117

Sixty-nine drawings, many previously unpublished, representing the works of 18th century Venetian artists, selected from American collections. Contains an introduction and descriptive notes.

"This is a book that has been intelligently put together, is intelligently conceived, and becomes one more shaft of understanding into the last glow of Venice." Jerome Mellquist

+ N Y Times p9 J1 6 '47 950w

"Since this book is concerned exclusively with American-owned drawings, you don't always get the best examples of the artists' work. But the selections are extremely good, in any case, and the sixty-nine handsomely reproduced illustrations give a rewarding insight into baroque composition."

+ New Yorker 23:127 Je 7 '47 90w

"Forty-five of these sixty-nine illustrations on fifty-seven plates are published for the first time. Their variety of media and subject matter, as well as the author's comments on both, make the book lively and instructive, but the uniform strong black ink of the plates too often falsifies originals of golden brown or cool gray ink."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:227 S '47 280w

BENET, LAURA. Is morning sure? poems. 64p $2 Odyssey

811 47-5061

A collection of short poems, chosen by the author herself, to represent her work. Most of the poems have appeared originally in periodicals or anthologies.

"Well-written and imaginative verse which seems, however, built of other literature rather than of life. Both approach and diction are too derived to allow any stamp of distinction. Pleasant reading for those who ask no more."

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 16 '47 60w

"Mrs. Benet is seen to best advantage in those of her short lyrics which deal in simple language with things seen at first hand and emotions closely felt. Her longer poems—chiefly legends and parables—give her too much opportunity to indulge in the conscious, explicit moralizing to which she is unhappily given." Milton Crane

N Y Times p10 Ag 3 '47 320w

"This volume, perhaps not so even in quality as Laura Benet's three earlier books of poetry, nevertheless goes deeper in its best work. There are some very fine poems here." L. T. Nicholl

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:14 Ag 9 '47 410w

BENET, LAURA. Thackeray, of the great heart and humorous pen. 382p il $3 Dodd

B or 92 Thackeray, William Makepeace—
Juvenile literature 47-11195

A biography of the great English author and caricaturist written for junior and senior high schools, but suitable also for adults. Bibliography.

Booklist 44:136 D 1 '47

Commonweal 47:155 N 21 '47 70w

"Young people can find here a fortunate introduction to the great novelist, and those who have previously read some of the books will be delighted to discover how many of them are colored by Thackeray's own experiences." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:43 Ja '48 100w

Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 72:1693 D 1 '47 70w

"More thoroughgoing than many of the biographies prepared for the teens, the special attention it pays to this time of life is noticeable chiefly in the care with which his childhood and youth are presented, and in the affection and gratitude the biographer, without undue emphasis, makes no effort to conceal." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N 16 '47 360w

"Besides a new knowledge of Thackeray, high school readers will gain from the book a comprehensive picture of the early Victorian literary scene." N. B. B.

+ N Y Times p43 N 16 '47 180w

Reviewed by Helen Price

San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 30 '47 180w

"Miss Benet has a great admiration for Thackeray. . . . Through her skilful writing Thackeray becomes a most human person. . . . So detailed are the character analysis and the descriptions that the reader feels that he would recognize Thackeray at any party or on any street corner. . . . This book is good reading for adults as well as for young people."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:58 N 15 '47 250w

BENET, WILLIAM ROSE. Stairway of surprise. 265p $3.50 Knopf

811 47-30575

"Mr. Benet's new book is divided into nine parts displaying so much variety that we find several books of poetry in one. The author himself is revealed as a man of many moods and much learning, but throughout his work runs the single faith in the potential goodness of man and a purpose in the universe. The title 'Stairway of Surprise,' is from a stanza by Emerson which concludes: 'But mount to paradise by the stairway of surprise.'" N Y Times

Reviewed by H. C. Webster

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 S 7 '47
400w

"A substantial and readable collection." Pearl Strachan + Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 21
47 480w

Reviewed by Gerald MacDonald

Library J 72:1687 D 1 '47 70w

"In wisdom and intensity, 'The Stairway of Surprise,' I feel, surpasses anything Mr. Benet has done before. With this book he takes an incontestable place among our important living poets." Robert Hilley
+ N Y Times p7 Ag 24 '47 500w

Reviewed by Raymond Holden

Sat R of Lit 30:17 Ag 23 '47 650w

BENET, WILLIAM ROSE. Timothy's angels; pictures by Alajálov. [23p] $2 Crowell 47-11765

A poem and gay pictures describe a small boy's reactions to a thunder storm.

"A warm, funny, simple little poem, completely unpretentious, and the pictures have just the touch of sophistication that no well-run nursery should be without." Jane Cobb
+ Atlantic 180:144 D '47 60w

"Combined simplicity and sophistication have created a picture book which will appeal to both children and their elders." M. B. Snow
+ Library J 72:1783 D 15 '47 70w

"The text is hand-written. A slight picture book, this will give pleasure to children from 3 to 6 wherever it goes." V. H. Mathews
+ N Y Times p42 N 16 '47 140w

"It is a reassuring fantasy and may help a child who becomes frightened when the clouds pile up. Alajálov's angels—halfway between choirboys and street urchins—are wonderful against cerulean backgrounds." R. C. Benet
+ New Yorker 23:142 D 6 '47 60w

BENN, FREDERICK CHRISTOPHER. Mozart on the stage; with an introd. by Richard Capell; il. by Kenneth Green. 178p $5 Coward-McCann

792.4 Mozart, Johann Chrysostom Wolfgang Amadeus. Opera—Stories, plots, etc. Theater 46-8428

Studies, somewhat in the form of lengthy "program notes," of four Mozart operas: Le Nozze di Figaro; Don Giovanni; Così fan Tutte; and Die Zauberflöte. The author was a young English musician who was killed early in the war. The illustrations, for the most part in color, are drawings from Mozart productions at Glyndebourne and at Sadlers Wells in pre-war days.

"A brilliant and informative introduction by Richard Capell concerns itself with Christopher Benn, 1912-1941. There are excellent illustrations in color by Kenneth Green which record the superb Mozartian festival at Glyndebourne in the years before the war. This is a detailed practical consideration of the staging of Mozart operas and as such is highly recommended to theatre and music collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 72:322 F 15 '47 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p34
My 11 '47 230w

"Keen intelligence, dependable historical and practical knowledge and sensitive intuition mark these essays on four Mozart operas."

+ Theatre Arts 31:80 Ap '47 90w

"The author examines each opera carefully from the point of view of production and makes his proposals in the light of some sound musical criticism. He is always on the side of the angels in emphasizing that these comic operas are not farces, and that the nature of the music precludes farcical treatment. . . . On the other hand, he under-estimates the social satire of Figaro, and takes no account of the double allegory in The Magic Flute. The book will, however, be read with pleasure by all opera lovers, while a wider public will find in Mr. Richard Capell's moving introduction some ideas about the forces in education which produced such a man as Christopher Benn and which, in the wider social and political life of the years between the wars, gave rise to the movements of taste represented by the enhanced appreciation of Mozart, of which this book is the latest product."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p524 O 26 '46
370w

BENNETT, HARRY, comp. Chemical specialties; a symposium. 826p il $12.50 Chemical pub. co.

658.96 Chemicals. Drugs—Laws and legislation 46-8281

"This work is designed as a comprehensive handbook for persons entering the chemical specialties business. The first part of the book deals with classes of chemicals, their properties, reactions and uses in industry. These topics are treated strictly from the manufacturing viewpoint. Compounding, testing of raw materials, packaging and shipping are discussed. Tablet-forming, filling and labeling machines are described. The second part of the book, which accounts for about one-third of its bulk, is a formulary containing recipes for such types of products as adhesives, cosmetics, inks, paints, polishes, soaps and cleaners. The third part discusses marketing methods, business management, book-keeping, laws and regulations that may affect a chemical business, and where to buy equipment and supplies." N Y New Tech Bks

"The value of the book lies in its usefulness for possible suggestions rather than as a complete guide." C. T. Snell

Chem & Eng N 25:2176 J1 28 '47 300w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:78 Ja 1 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:58 O '46

BENNETT, HARRY, ed. Concise chemical and technical dictionary. 1055p $10 Chemical pub. co.

540.3 Chemistry—Dictionaries. Technology—Dictionaries 47-1705

"This chemical and technical dictionary is compiled for use by the professional scientist as well as the business man and general reader. About 50,000 condensed definitions of chemical, physical, metallurgical, mineralogical, biological, medical, mathematical terms are included in the volume. Commonly used chemical and technical abbreviations, trade and proprietary names are explained, and manufacturing processes, raw materials and finished products described briefly." Subscription Bks Bul

"The book is an important aid to the comprehension of the vast and ever growing vocabulary of chemistry." W. A. Boughton

+ Am Chem Soc J 69:1552 Je '47 290w

Chem & Eng N 25:2322 Ag 11 '47 100w

Reviewed by J. A. Lee

Chem Eng 54:273 S '47 220w

"The book is well made, the printing is good, and the proofreading has been very carefully done; the reviewer did not notice a single typographical error. The dictionary should prove valuable on many occasions to most of the persons whom the author intends it to serve, and it deserves a place in the libraries of those who can afford the purchase price." J. L. Maynard

BENNETT, HARRY—Continued

+ J Phys Chem 51:1217 S '47 400w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:812 My 15 '47 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:7 Ja '47

"The attempt to crowd so many terms on so wide a variety of subjects into a single volume of convenient size has necessitated very concise, even terse definitions. . . . The physical make-up of the volume is excellent, the paper of good quality, and the typography and printing well planned and clear. Double column arrangement of the page is used for economy of space and easy reading. The Concise Chemical and Technical Dictionary will not take the place of more highly specialized subject dictionaries which give more information about compounds and materials. Its chief value lies in the fact that it brings a wide variety of technical terms together in a single alphabet. It will appeal, therefore, to the general user, and is recommended for medium-size and small libraries."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:13 Ap '47 500w

"Librarians, scientists in general, and engineers should find the book useful."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:215 Je '47 190w

BENNETT, HARRY. Practical emulsions; 2d, completely rev. ed. incl. a symposium on emulsifying agents and emulsions in industry. 568p il $8.50 Chemical pub. co.

541.3452 Emulsions 47-2663

"As in its first edition [Book Review Digest 1943] this book is intended to serve as a practical manual for technicians and manufacturers engaged in the preparation of emulsions. The author discusses briefly the types of emulsions and emulsifiers, and describes some of the methods and equipment used in their preparation. In the present edition these particular sections have been expanded, and the arrangement of the material has been improved. Again, extensive lists of commercial surface-active agents, emulsifiers and emulsions, have been provided. The increase of more than 100 pages in this edition is partially accounted for by the inclusions of thirteen brief papers dealing with the utilization of emulsifiers and emulsions in the manufacture of soaps, dyes, food, leather, cosmetics, etc." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 32:30 Ap '47

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:315 S '47 240w

BENNETT, JOHN COLEMAN. Christian ethics and social policy. 132p $2 Scribner

171.1 Christian ethics. Christianity and social problems 47-1931

This volume contains, in expanded form, lectures delivered at the University of Virginia in 1945. The author is professor of Christian theology and ethics at Union Theological Seminary. Contents: The Christian social imperative; The Distance between Christian ethics and social policy; Four Christian social strategies; The Relevance of Christian ethics to social policy; a fifth strategy; The Ethical role of the church in society; Note on Christian ethics and the ethics of natural law. Index.

"This reviewer used Professor Bennett's book in a class in Christian ethics last spring. He found that students on the whole were appreciative of the book's merits and grateful for its insights. Yet many times they commented that it gave them 'nothing positive' and left them quite as much up in the air about the relevance of Christian ethical principles to social policies as they had been before." Roger Hazelton

+ Christian Century 64:1334 N 5 '47 650w

"These Richard Lectures in the University of Virginia are as frank and comprehensive a treatment of the social mission of the Christian church as the reviewer has ever seen." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 161:17 Mr 1 '47 300w

"This is a straightforward and practical if unpretentious little book and it will do its part in helping to throw light on the ethical choices the Christian confronts today. . . . To me the book was especially effective in its analysis of the factors which blur our understanding of what is good and interfere with our single-minded pursuit of it. I am not sure that the argument was strengthened by giving these practical difficulties the theological name of 'original sin.'" J. S. Bixler

+ Crozer Q 24:186 Ap '47 300w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 23 '47

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:246 S '47 240w

BENNETT, MARGOT. Away went the little fish. 249p $2 Doubleday

47-660

Detective story.

"Among younger English detective story writers, Margot Bennett is one of the most promising. Her second novel, Away Went the Little Fish, has all of the incidental merits and the ultimate fault of her first. It is a conscientiously and, to a point, delightfully irrelevant detective story, lively with sardonic speculation and with conversation acridly or innocently revealing. But its sum is extremely diffuse." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 D 29 '46 70w

"Bright writing, if slow pace, for an entertaining whodunit."

+ Kirkus 14:530 O 15 '46 100w

"Another pleasant and discursive exercise by the author of Time to Change Hats."

+ New Repub 116:40 F 10 '47 100w

"This new author seems a trifle thinner this time because she was thinking mostly of fun at some cost to the other ingredients. You don't have to be bright and snappy every minute, Miss Bennett. Easy does it." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 D 29 '46 230w

"The moral, if any, of this rather amusing story is that even a blunderer can't be wrong all the time." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 Ja 5 '47 120w

"The evidence in the case is rather slim, but if you feel savage about life in the suburbs, you ought to find plenty to keep you entertained."

New Yorker 22:67 D 28 '46 60w

"As delightfully rich in wit and indirection as the author's first, 'Time to Change Hats', and far better plotted; too long to be sure, and too digressive, but a good thing is a good thing even if there's too much of it." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 5 '47 70w

"Top-drawer."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 D 21 '46 40w

"A bright and ingenious detective novel in which more attention is paid to characterization than is customary in whodunits." Walter Allen

+ Spec 177:402 O 18 '46 90w

BENNETT, PEGGY. The varmints. 287p $2.50 Knopf

46-8190

The scene of this first novel is a Florida gulf-coast town. The chief characters are three poor children and their hard-working grandparents, who are bringing them up, and the children's hard-drinking father.

Reviewed by William Lipscomb

Chicago Sun Book Week p17 F 9 '47 360w

"A gritty, unsublimated recording of transition, of psychological trends and patterns, of heritage, environment and the shaping of personality. The novel has the earmarks of case history, of documentation, rather than of warm humanity."

Kirkus 14:602 D 1 '46 170w

"This young woman's first novel shows unusual depth of understanding." L. R. Miller
+ Library J 72:76 Ja 1 '47 80w

"The year is young, but hardly anything can happen to it better than Peggy Bennett, a novelist." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
Ja 12 '47 850w

"Miss Bennett's first novel is a remarkable piece, not always successful in its close rendering of human affairs, but unusually pure and honorable in its intentions, generally sound in its values and frequently distinguished in its rich, bright phrasing." Richard Sullivan
+ N Y Times p5 Ja 19 '47 550w

"An unpleasantly mannered prose makes for a certain nebulosity, from which neither the children nor the grandmother emerge very clearly. Only the old grandfather seems real, and it is his portrait that gives the novel its interest. Miss Bennett has considerable originality and a nice ironic touch, and since, according to the dust jacket, she is only twenty-one, she cannot be too old to be reminded that there is absolutely nothing disgraceful in being caught with a simple declarative sentence once in a while."

New Yorker 22:84 Ja 11 '47 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 9 '47 90w

"It is very difficult to believe that this unique little book, this sensitive, startling little job of character building did, in fact, come from so young a mind. But the story is there, on the dust-jacket, and if I shake my head until it loosens, Miss Bennett will still be only twenty-one and her book still one of the most original, carefully worked, promising pieces of writing that I have seen in over a year. . . In line with her talent for abstraction is the author's very keen and penetrating feeling for the United States. Her eye travels quickly and competently; her mind, pausing philosophically at some of our characteristic problems, reveals its brilliance not only in the unfolding of her story, but in her prologue, too. She distills, she crystallizes, despite the scattered defects, despite an occasional disturbing apostrophic tangent." N. G. Chaiken

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 F 15 '47 500w

Time 49:104 F 3 '47 220w

BENTLEY, JOHN. Kill me again! 234p $2.50
Dodd

47-2977

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
Ap 27 '47 180w

"Glen Gibson is a lawyer, but he isn't working at it at the moment. One of his clients has been murdered, and he is making like a detective—also like a wise-cracking comedian. Why someone doesn't murder him is more than we are prepared to say. Everybody within the sound of his voice has sufficient provocation. And yet, some of the people with whom he comes in contact actually seem to like the guy." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p30 My 11 '47 140w

Sat R of Lit 30:46 Je 21 '47 40w

BENTLEY, MARGUERITE LOGAN (MRS LOGAN BENTLEY). Wedding etiquette. 383p il $4 Winston

395 Etiquet. Weddings 47-4200

"A very useful and complete book for the bride, with several chapters included for the groom. Although the author says that it was written for people in all circumstances of life, the greater part of the book is devoted to the large wedding, with paragraphs instead of pages for those who wish to be married quietly without long dresses and floral background." Booklist

Booklist 43:354 J1 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '47

"The information given is excellent, but it is written with a cloying sweetness that is a bit hard to take." Eugene MacHamus

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 3 '47 160w

Wis Lib Bul 43:113 J1 '47

BENTLEY, PHYLLIS ELEANOR. Some observations on the art of narrative. 50p $1.50 Macmillan

808.3 Fiction—Technique 47-982

Brief essay on the art of writing fiction, by a well-known English novelist. "For her the art of fictitious narrative consists of the right mingling of scene, description, and summary, and she considers each of these elements in turn, basing her analysis on well-chosen examples. Later she shows how the influence of Dorothy Richardson, Virginia Woolf, and James Joyce has led in the most advanced contemporary technique to the abandonment of the summary altogether. She believes this rejection to be a mistake and she gives sound reasons for her view." (Manchester Guardian)

Booklist 43:306 Je 1 '47

"Probably every teacher of 'creative writing' in the country will, as he should, recommend to his students the reading of these 'observations,' by a distinguished practitioner of the art which she here expounds. She does not tell everything the young writer needs to know but confines herself to a few points. On these, her comments are well fortified by illustration and explanation. The little book is an aid to the intelligent critical reading of fiction."

Christian Century 64:240 F 19 '47 70w

Reviewed by Robert Berkelman

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 21 '47 240w

Kirkus 15:20 Ja 1 '47 100w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 15 '46 150w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
Ap 6 '47 140w

"A slight but important notebook." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p32 F 23 '47 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 18 '47 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p602 D 7 '46 2350w

Wis Lib Bul 43:79 My '47

BERCOVICI, KONRAD. The exodus. 319p $3 Beechhurst press

Moses—Fiction 47-3983

A retelling of the Biblical story of the exodus of the Israelites out of the land of Egypt, and their long journey toward the Promised Land. The novel is at the same time a biography of Moses.

"Konrad Bercovici, a storyteller of rare adaptability, has sought to create in the stylistic medium of ancient Hebraic cadences a literary portrait of Moshe, the man of destiny. He has hewn fairly close to the Old Testament story but has added literary embellishments and a romanticized fictional background that may provide for many readers a warmer and more readable account of the Deliverer than may be found in the Pentateuch. . . The entire pageantry of the Exodus is in this unusual novel, done with exceeding cleverness and charm. At times the thread of the story becomes taut with the heaviness of ancient Israel's grief. The oppressive life of the Israelites under the Pharaohs is described with a terrible force." Van Allen Bradley
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 15 '47 290w

"What Thomas Mann has done on a stupendous scale in his Joseph trilogy and Sholem Asch, with genuine literary art in his 'The Nazarene' and 'The Apostle,' Konrad Bercovici has attempted with Moses for his theme. His book has neither the power nor the profundity of these earlier masterpieces. But it has imagination, beauty, and a certain strange

BERCOVICI, KONRAD—Continued
timeliness which arouse interest and hold attention." J. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 J1
13 '47 550w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p3 My 25 '47 500w

"Mr. Bercovici, using an engaging style that is somewhere between the pseudo-Biblical and the extremely informal, tells a story that even a reader apathetic about Moses is likely to follow with very little skipping. . . The fact that the author has used a great deal of imagination in following the career of Moses (about whom practically nothing is known, historically) does not detract from the interest of this story."

+ New Yorker 23:94 Je 14 '47 130w

"A novel about Moses would seem to challenge even the skill of Thomas Mann, whose novels of Joseph were so moving. While Bercovici is far from Mann, he has succeeded in giving a poetic and human portrayal of Moses, from infancy to the leadership of his people." Irving Babow

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 19 '47
600w

"Mr. Bercovici's retelling of one of the world's great stories is appealing and generally entertaining." Donald Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 23 '47 600w
Wis Lib Bul 43:140 O '47

BERESFORD, MARCUS (MARC BRANDEL, pseud). Rod and the staff. 254p $2.50 Harper 47-1460

"A grim, dark-shadowed little novel about some peaceful Central American fisherfolk and the deeds of violence to which they are driven by the betrayal of their leader in an attempted revolution by non-violence." New Yorker

"Bercovici's first novel, 'Rain Before Seven (a Low Fantasy),' was criticized for vagueness of motivation and intention. With some justice, the same criticism may be made of 'The Rod and the Staff,' though its greatest weakness seems to lie in a preoccupation with style and analysis of motives at the expense of continuity." Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 F 23 '47
420w

Kirkus 14:605 D 1 '46 160w

Library J 72:225 F 1 '47 50w

"'The Rod and the Staff' is as simple in line as a Diego Rivera mural, as clean in color and primitive in its materials." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 F
23 '47 850w

Reviewed by H. R. Hays

N Y Times p22 F 9 '47 490w

"Mr. Brandel's prose is simple and straightforward most of the way, but in the stretch it becomes a bit hard-breathing."

+ New Yorker 22:97 F 8 '47 70w

"Writing with restraint and in a style whose simplicity disguises its pictorially-poetic quality, 'The Rod and the Staff,' is likely to comfort the philosophically minded rather than those whose minds are adjusted to more immediate ideas of political action and novels which put problems in more simple and active terms. But even these, if they retain any sensitiveness to good writing, will know that here is a first-rate piece of fiction and a novelist with something to say." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 14 '47
650w

"There is much of the Christ legend here, and the story suffers considerably from the fact that it makes bold use of the parallel without being able to maintain any spiritual greatness of its own in that greater shadow." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 30:22 My 3 '47 500w

BERESFORD-HOWE, CONSTANCE. Of this day's journey. 240p $2.50 Dodd 47-2973

The romance of a very young English instructor in a small college. Camilla Brent was a rebel from the beginning, for she refused to live in the residence halls provided, and shared an apartment with the secretary of the college president, Andrew Cameron. The object of Camilla's love was the president, who was married to an invalid wife. This story of their brief idyll is told by three narrators: the secretary; Cam herself; and Andrew.

"This is an adult and honest work of fiction."

Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
My 25 '47 170w

"It seems to me that this design is rather neatly executed, that Miss Beresford-Howe has pieced her story together in a way which avoids all redundancy (the dangers of her method). And in doing so, she has built up a good deal of suspense. While the simplicity of her story is not a glaring fault, it appears that the simplicity of her treatment is, and the book lacks, in the long run, a good deal of potential substance. She has failed to see all the facets of her problem; her characters are not too sharply underlined, and one portion seems to run into the other without revealing the definitive characteristics of the people behind the telling." N. G. Chaikin

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 Je 14 '47 490w

BERG, CHARLES. Deep analysis; the clinical study of an individual case. 254p $3.50 Norton 616.8 Psychoanalysis Med47-2433

Description of a single case of psychoanalysis. The sessions which are recorded in detail, were held "many years ago," and the patient who was twenty-nine at the time, has since attained "a position of national importance" in England.

"Read as a novel or the scenario (if that is the word) of a film, there is little to object to; but read as a sober record of fact it is hard to see quite how the explanations of his symptoms, whether given by the doctor or (as they so often were) by the patient himself, produced the changes that they evidently did. Probably the truth is that in order to make his book readable Dr. Berg left out much that might have removed this objection. It is not easy to be scientific if one aims at being read by a large public." Adrian Stephen

+ New Statesman & Nation 33:258 Ap 12
'47 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p227 My 10
'47 700w

BERGENGREN, RALPH WILHELM. Susan and the butterbees; il. by Anne Vaughan.
175p $2 Longmans
47-1966

Lively adventures of a little girl named Susan who was granted a wish by a fairy. Susan promptly wished that the forty-seven sandpipers on the shore were as many uncles. The story is of what happened when her wish was granted.

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 My 25 '47
80w

"Will amuse imaginative young readers." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 15 '47
90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:212 My '47 120w

Kirkus 15:163 Mr 15 '47 80w

"Style is cluttered and wordy, the plot rather confused and hard to follow. Not necessary." J. E. Lynch

— Library J 72:643 Ap 15 '47 70w

"A story that read aloud, one chapter at a time, sends a small person smiling into dream-land." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
My 11 '47 500w

Reviewed by Rosejeanne Slifer

N Y Times p32 Je 8 '47 140w

"This is delightful nonsense, written with a sure, light touch and illustrated with line drawings that are in complete harmony with the story."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:35 My 17 '47 140w
Springf'd Republican p14B N 2 '47 90w

BERGER, JOSEF (JEREMIAH DIGGES, pseud)
Operation Underground; with il. by David Berger. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 300p $2.50 Little

47-3057

"An experienced writer spins a tight adventure plot around 17-year-old Ted Post, interpreter for a reparation mission which goes to England and Europe. Secret Nazi treasure becomes a major issue." Chicago Sun Book Week

Booklist 43:311 Je 1 '47

"Good characterization and subtle emphasis on international understanding give special quality to this action story."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 My 25 '47 50w

"This is an astonishingly good story because the author has added to his attributes of intriguing plot and forceful characterization the authentic background material which he himself obtained in Germany." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p4 Jl 31 '47 210w

+ Kirkus 15:191 Ap 1 '47 100w

"A plausible tale laid against the fantastic background of postwar Germany. For older boys." E. F. Clift

+ Library J 72:894 Je 1 '47 70w

"This is as grown-up a story as a boy is likely to get this year. It is a year when you cannot found a story on actual co-operation with a group of reparation experts in Germany, and either pull punches or play favorites. Mr. Berger does not; he gives older boys the straight truth as it appears to his hero." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 My 11 '47 320w

"Over and above the author's skill in writing a rousing adventure tale involving vast caches of Nazi loot and stolen treasures, the book has valuable historical interest, for it has the added virtue of presenting an eye-witness report on how people who have somehow managed to survive the total devastation of total warfare live and think." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times p17 Jl 6 '47 190w

BERGER, KLAUS. Gericault. See Gericault, J. L. A. T.

BERGERON, VICTOR (TRADER VIC). Bartender's guide; with drawings by Ray Sullivan. 437p $3.50 Doubleday

663.8 Beverages, Alcoholic 47-11525

A manual on cocktail making, which is addressed to professionals, but could also be used by the amateur. "Besides the formulas for every known cocktail, punch, cooler, and fizz, and a number of beverages you probably never heard of, there are practical suggestions on the mixing and serving of drinks, and some pages on the production and nature of alcoholic spirits." (New Yorker) Index.

Kirkus 15:497 S 1 '47 170w

"A really excellent manual. . . This is such a helpful volume that you may even forgive the author's approval of that unholy practice of occasionally 'frosting' the rim of a cocktail glass with powdered sugar."

+ New Yorker 23:139 N 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 9 '47 600w

BERGLER, EDMUND. Unhappy marriage and divorce; a study of neurotic choice of marriage partners. 167p $2.50 Int. univ. press

392.5 Marriage. Divorce 46-4369

"The author of this little volume is a Freudian psychoanalyst who appears to have given special attention in his practice to the psychopathology of marriage. In view of the highly selected sample of subjects whose marriage relationships he observed and the theoretical standpoint from which he observed them, it is not surprising to find that he regards unhappy marriage and divorce as often determined solely by the malfunctioning of personalities. He believes the failure of most marriages—whether they end in divorce or not—is the inevitable product of the neurosis of one or both partners." Am J Soc

"The book is primarily concerned with the marriage of neurotics and adds little, if anything, to our knowledge or understanding of the psychodynamics of happy marriage. The most that can be said is that it provides a brief, if not systematic, summary of some of the psychoanalytic theory relevant to the analysis of the role of personality in marriage." Paul Wallin

Am J Soc 52:548 My '47 500w

"A specialized study, which, if technical, is more accessible to the interested layman than many psychiatric presentations. A sound job."

+ Kirkus 14:220 My 1 '46 110w

"Like many Freudians, Dr. Bergler is long on theory and short on experimental evidence. He attributes too much of personality troubles to childhood experience, too little to internal chemistry." Robert Simpson

N Y Times p18 Ja 26 '47 150w

"The book is thought-provoking and, although it follows an analytical party line, it belongs in the libraries of all who seek to understand, interpret, and influence human behavior." H. D. Lamson

+ Social Forces 25:476 My '47 600w

"It is high time that we put an end to the granting of indiscriminate divorces and begin to examine the underlying causes of marital conflict. Dr. Bergler, however, overshoots the mark by requiring that judges in the future shall 'not grant a divorce without asking as prerequisite for the proof that both candidates for divorce were treated psychiatrically, particularly if the couple has children. . . Dr. Bergler offers a wealth of material and food for thought to the discerning reader, particularly to doctors, lawyers, judges, social workers, clergymen, and marriage counselors. Placed in the hands of the general public and unhappy spouses the book may perhaps encourage pseudoanalyses and pseudo-diagnoses." Marie Munk

Survey 82:337 D '46 450w

BERGMAN, MARION. Russian-American song and dance book [original il. in color by Lucina Smith Wakefield]. 95p $3 Barnes, A.S.

784.4 Folk songs, Russian. Dancing—Folk and national dances 47-2454

For these Russian singing games and dances the author has given the music, in simple piano and voice arrangements; the verses in both English and Russian; and a brief text covering directions, explanations, historical background or other notes of interest.

Booklist 43:276 My 1 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:222 My '47 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 9 '47 370w

"The reader of this material will readily appreciate the skill of the author, the artist and the publisher which have combined so evenly to make this book a success. It has been prepared to bring pleasure to all types of groups who want to sing and dance together—the family, young people and church and community groups." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p40 Mr 30 '47 190w

BERGMAN, RAY. With fly, plug, and bait; fly plates by Edgar Burke; drawings by Ivin Sickels. 2nd. 640p $5 Morrow

799.12 Fishing Agr47-195

"In essence, a manual of fishing for trout (except lakera and Dolly Vardens) and black bass with these three types of lure. . . . It builds on the basis of the author's earlier works, underlining and developing some of his theories, modifying others and entering one or two fields (e. g., spinning-rod fishing) which he hasn't touched before. It is not, however, a replacement for its predecessors." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Indexes.

"Like the best of our angler-authors, Mr. Bergman enjoys writing. He brings to his pages not only the incidents of four decades of skillful fishing, episodes to make your mouth water, but also the alertness, the forethought, and the fresh expectancy with which every fisherman should come to the water in the prime of the year." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 180:118 Jl '47 180w

Booklist 43:327 Je 15 '47

Bookmark 8:7 My '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ap 13 '47 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

"Fresh water fishermen, with serious interest in every facet of the subject of fishing for trout and bass will find this virtually a definitive book on the 'hows' of the subject."

+ Kirkus 14:514 O 1 '46 180w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 73:42 Ja 1 '48 20w

"In this reviewer's opinion, Ray Bergman is one of the best men writing today on the techniques and practices of American fresh-water fishing. . . . 'With Fly, Plug and Bait' is . . . informed, explicit, readable; and, like all the author's work, liberally garnished with illustrative anecdotes drawn from his own and his friends' experiences in almost all corners of this country as well as the brook-trout areas of Canada." J. R. De La Torre Bueno

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p31 My 4 '47 850w

"Although the dry-fly purist will turn from this book in horror, the average fresh-water angler will welcome it as heartily as he has the other contributions to fishing lore written by Ray Bergman during the past decade. . . . Dogmatism is always avoided. Even in the chapter on 'fish vision,' a subject of considerable argument by most anglers, Bergman simply relates his experiences and permits the reader to draw his own conclusions." R. R. Camp

+ N Y Times p28 Ap 27 '47 180w

"Mr. Bergman's latest book is probably the most comprehensive one on bass and trout fishing to be found in this country today." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ap 27 '47 400w

BERLE, ALF KEYSER, and DE CAMP, LYON SPRAGUE. Inventions and their management. 2d ed 742p il $6 Int. textbook

608 Inventions. Patent laws and legislation

Second edition of a book which first appeared in 1937 (Book Review Digest 1937). "The principal changes have been a discussion of the Lanham Act and the important influence it will have on U. S. trade-mark law . . . and a new chapter on trends in industrial research and invention. A number of minor changes have also brought the text up to date." (Pref) Glossary of terms, bibliography, list of libraries containing patent office publications, and patent law associations. Index.

Booklist 43:361 Jl 15 '47

"Inventors, investors, company executives, and businessmen are among those who will find the information useful."

+ Chem & Eng N 25:3247 N 3 '47 40w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1037 Jl '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:52 Jl '47

BERNARD, THEOS. Hindu philosophy. 207p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

181.4 Philosophy, Hindu 47-11335

An outline of the six traditional schools of Indian philosophy and one additional one which the author calls Kāsmīr Saivism. The six are Nyāya, Vaiśeṣika, Sāṃkhya, Yoga, Mīmāṃsā, and Vedānta. Each section contains a survey of the literature and the leading philosophers. Glossary of Sanskrit terms. Bibliography. No index.

"Most welcome is this brief and intelligible account of Hindu philosophy. . . . Of course, Bernard's book does not try to cover the whole field. . . . He does not attempt anything like a detailed historical account of the rise and development of each school. Moreover, he refrains from any attempt to criticize or evaluate the philosophies. But what he does is very useful." C. S. Braden

+ Christian Century 65:14 Ja 7 '48 950w

Reviewed by W. A. Kalenich

Library J 72:1464 O 15 '47 90w

BERNE, ERIC. Mind in action. 320p $3 Simon & Schuster

616.8 Psychology, Pathological Med47-2495

"A layman's guide to psychiatry." Parts one and two discuss normal and abnormal development of personality according to modern adaptations of the Freudian psychology. Part three deals with methods of treating neuroses and psychoses. Word list. Index.

Booklist 44:145 D 15 '47

Kirkus 15:385 Jl 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by Frederic Wertham

N Y Times p3 Ja 4 '48 360w

"His fictionalized case histories are snugly illustrative, his views embrace such recent and non-Freudian developments as Sheldon's mind-body types, glandular and other physiological influences on thought, and even the speculative 'physis,' or universal growth-force, of Gilbert Murray. Of particular interest are his remarks on images, and how illusory and all-pervading they may be; enough to make a man fall in love with a lampshade, or a world go to war." Luther Nichols

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 4 '48 750w

School & Society 66:462 D 13 '47

BERNHHEIM, BERTRAM MOSES. Surgeon's domain. 253p $3 Norton

B or 92 Surgeons—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Med47-33

Personal experiences of an American surgeon who has been both a private practitioner and a staff member of a medical institution. Dr Bernheim is now associate professor of surgery at The Johns Hopkins medical school.

Booklist 43:218 Mr 15 '47

"This surgeon-author has written an honest book, an interesting book and one that contains some timely chapters." Peter Williamson

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ap 6 '47 230w

Christian Century 64:434 Ap 2 '47 110w

"This is a prosaic account of an often glamorized, popularized profession and for that very reason certainly a better balanced picture than most. . . . Plain-clothes version of men in white, humane and liberal in viewpoint, but not for the drama market of this genre."

+ Kirkus 15:24 Ja 1 '47 170w

"This lively book of personal reminiscence and opinion should interest both doctors and patients. . . . This book is exceptionally well written and holds the reader's interest throughout." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 72:455 Mr 15 '47 80w

"Dr. Bernheim is not in any way a sorehead. He likes and understands his fellow workers, loves his profession, and, being in its front ranks, happily is free to point out not only its great services but also the points at which it still is 'primitive.' His book will probably engender some qualms in any one who has faced or is likely to face an operating table, but to a greater extent it will arouse appreciation of what it takes to make a surgeon." Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
Mr 30 '47 1000w

"Dr. Bernheim is the author of several other volumes: he writes engagingly, in a free-flowing, confidential style." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 6 '47 900w

"For those who relish the drama of a rich and varied scientific experience Dr. Bernheim's book offers adventuresome reading. And it will prove even more rewarding for those who enjoy meeting a distinguished doctor in his shirt-sleeves, free of professional attitudes or pretensions." T. M. Sanders

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 My 17 '47 700w

"Dr. Bernheim mixes humor with pungent comment and presents for the lay public an illuminating dissertation on the ways of the professional medical man."

+ Springfield Union p11 Ag 20 '47 240w

"For the neophyte student or practitioner, and for those who foresee themselves surgical patients, this book will make pleasant and profitable reading."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:145 Je '47 320w

BERNSTEIN, ABRAHAM. Home is the hunted.
308p $3 Dial press

47-31402

The hero is Jewish, but has succeeded in passing as a Christian and is a member of an exclusive New York advertising firm. When he is wounded in the war his deception is discovered. On his return his old job is closed to him, but his employer has found him a post with a Jewish firm. The battle is on, but both sides grant concessions and the struggle ends peacefully.

"His novel is not an echo of any other, but vigorous and often challenging. It tells a complex story compactly, reflects contemporary New York with an oblique irony free from caricature, and is not afraid to allow a few of his lusty characters indelicate—but not inappropriate—freedom of speech." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
Ja 11 '48 320w

"Unfortunately, all this is not made believable. There is only one character in the entire book, a minor one, who comes at all alive, a European refugee uncle of Cannaday's, whom Otis manages to get into America. . . . The other characters are, almost entirely, boring puppets. Mr. Bernstein simply forgets to write a good story and drags in race prejudice by the heels on the slightest provocation." Theodore Pratt

— N Y Times p24 O 12 '47 360w

BERNSTEIN, MRS ALINE (FRANKAU). Miss Condon. 244p $2.50 Knopf

47-16778

Portrait of Jennie Ames, wife of a successful New York theatrical producer. Jennie's father had been a famous painter, but he died when she was only seventeen, and Jennie had married Charlie Ames, one of her father's friends. On a solitary trip to Italy, where she was revisiting the places she and her father had enjoyed, Jennie met a stern New Englander, and made a bigamous marriage. The remainder of the story is of Jennie's problem and how it was worked out.

"The narrative rolls along at a fast clip, the writing is easy, and the conversation, in its less emotional moments, very good. Approached in the same spirit in which one attends the Bijou of a Saturday night, the book becomes decidedly entertaining." P. L. Adams

Atlantic 179:156 My '47 500w

"Jenny's adventures and her thought processes are rather incredible, and though she seems aware in the end that she will be paying all her life for her brief interlude of ecstasy, her erratic behavior and her eventual supineness under her fate make it difficult to feel sorry for her. The book, however, has a fine background of theatrical New York and of Portofino at about the turn of the century." Dorothy Sparks

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p8 My 11 '47
220w

Kirkus 15:105 F 15 '47 170w

"Though carefully created, Mrs. Bernstein's vague and lovely heroine never quite convinces or compels, and her story, essentially one of high romance, never quite gets its wings. Mrs. Bernstein does manage, however—perhaps because she is a scene designer and knows the workaday life of the theater so very well—to make the career of Charlie Ames in the theater a convincing matter-of-course. . . . 'Miss Condon' is written with skill and a sharp appreciation of the mise en scene of the period. How Mrs. Bernstein's characters dressed, what they ate, and how they furnished their houses is of much more vital interest than the lady herself." F. H. Bullock

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
Mr 23 '47 600w

"There is, in Aline Bernstein's latest book, an atmosphere so richly, so skillfully and so implacably created as to cast a hypnotic spell over the five senses of both characters and reader and to make credible—as a result—a completely incredible tale." Florence Crowther

N Y Times p5 Mr 23 '47 500w

"The book takes us far from gimcrack, shapeless reality and conducts us on an opulently extravagant tour of an emotional adventure. The author has dreamed a tasteful and typically American dream, and though what she has achieved is not life, it is still a concrete expression of experience."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p545 O 25 '47
300w

BERNSTEIN, DAVID. Philippine story. 276p
$3.75 Farrar, Straus

991.4 Philippine Islands—Politics and government 47-30761

The author, an American, was formerly associated with the Philippine government, and was for a time advisor to the Philippine government in Washington. He regards the relations of the United States with the Philippines as an experiment in preparation for independence. "This book is an attempt to analyze the background, failures, accomplishments, and implications of the experiment itself. Inevitably, it must cover—however briefly—the economic background of the country, and something of its history. But its final focus is on the present crisis in Philippine-American relations, a crisis all the more dangerous because most Americans are not aware of its existence." (Introd) Index.

Booklist 44:48 O 1 '47

"The last war has made America Philippine conscious. In my travels in the United States I have noted the desire of Americans to know more of our country and people. I have been asked time and again to recommend a good book on the Philippines. David Bernstein's 'The Philippine Story' is just such a book."

T. L. Cabili

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 S 28 '47
500w

"The chief permanent value of this book lies in its survey of the history of the American experiment in the Philippines, rather than in its rather controversial presentation of contemporary aspects. . . . An easy to read manual which challenges our policies."

+ Kirkus 15:359 Jl 1 '47 180w

"The book is much better when depicting the high spots of the Philippines' volatile historical background and is best when portraying and evaluating the character of outstanding Filipino political figures such as venerated Quezon, perennial Osmena and mistrusted Roxas." Clarence Gorchels

Library 72:1101 Ag '47 110w

BERNSTEIN, DAVID—Continued

"In the main this book is polite, well-informed, and temperate." Mildred Adams
+ Nation 165:451 O 25 '47 950w

"For an illuminating non-partisan account of American rule in the Philippines, and especially of post-war conditions, it would be hard to find an equal to The Philippine Story." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 S 21 '47 650w

"Carefully written history of the Philippines. A perceptive young man with a penchant for facts and a facile writing style, Bernstein has done a thorough job. The book gives the average reader a good description of the islands and the people who live on them, and contains a fast-paced summary of the Spanish and American regimes." F. S. Marquardt

+ N Y Times p6 S 28 '47 750w

Reviewed by Robert Okin

Sat R of Lit 30:22 S 20 '47 650w

BERNSTEIN, JOSEPH MILTON, ed. Baudelaire, Rimbaud, Verlaine; selected verse and prose poems. 320p $3 Citadel 841.08 French poetry—Translations into English 47-4034

"Joseph M. Bernstein has brought together in one volume . . . the Arthur Symons translations of Charles Baudelaire's 'Flowers of Evil' and 'Prose Poems'; the Symons translation of poems from 'In Parallel Fashion,' by Paul Verlaine, and the Gertrude Hall translation of Verlaine's 'Selected Verse'; the J. Norman Cameron translation of Arthur Rimbaud's 'Illuminations,' and the Louise Varèse translations of Rimbaud's 'A Season in Hell' and 'Prose Poems.'" N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"The really wonderful surprise in Bernstein's book is J. Norman Cameron's translations of Rimbaud's verse poems; Cameron rhymes, incredibly keeps twelve syllables to the Alexandrine line without padding, and at any rate brings Rimbaud as close to English as seems possible. The satisfaction you have in reading Cameron is that of coming across a great new poet in English." Rene Blanc-Roos
+ Nation 165:233 S 6 '47 200w

"All three are great poets, and it was a happy thought to collect them in the most satisfactory English translations."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 Je 15 '47 170w

"A distorted version of Baudelaire comes through in the translation, published some thirty years ago, by Arthur Symons. The jacket of the present book describes this translation as 'unabridged,' which, if it means anything here, must signify only that the handful of naughty poems 'Femmes damnées,' 'Lesbos,' and so on—is retained intact; for Symons translated only a part of 'Les fleurs du mal,' and a heavily slanted part to boot. Verlaine fares even worse: the 'Selected Verse,' in a version by Gertrude Hall, gives us a most unsatisfactory account of his range, and the addition of a few poems from 'Parallèlement,' again by Symons, does not help much. As for Rimbaud, his lot is at least quantitatively happier: we are given Louise Varèse's rather overcautious translations of 'Une saison en enfer' and the prose poems from 'Illuminations,' together with some of the poems from 'Illuminations' and a smattering of pieces from other sources in a translation by J. Norman Cameron." Dudley Fitts

— N Y Times p10 My 25 '47 1100w

BERNSTEIN, VICTOR HEINE. Final judgment; the story of Nuremberg; with an introd. by Max Lerner. 289p $3.50 Boni & Gaer

341.3 War crimes—Trials 47-1717

"Mr. Bernstein probably spent a longer time at Nuremberg than any other correspondent. . . Expertly, weaving the documentary evidence into his narrative as he proceeds, he tells the story of Hitler's rise to power, of how he was helped in this by Schacht and Papen, of how the Nazis built a base for aggression in Germany, then took Austria by telephone and Czechoslovakia by bluff. He cites the proofs that the attacks on Poland, Norway, Belgium, Greece and the Soviet Union were long premeditated, and that Hitler encouraged Japan to attack the United States. Finally he considers at gruesome length the incredible 'crimes against humanity' that were a part of the Nazi war effort." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"This is a well-written account of the Nuremberg trial by a correspondent of the New York newspaper PM." F. L. Neumann

+ Am Hist R 53:167 O '47 320w

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Mr 30 '47 450w

"A more appalling book than Mein Kampf. That told what Hitler intended to do; this tells how he and his host of supporters did it."

Christian Century 64:464 Ap 9 '47 230w

Reviewed by Rustem Vamberg

Nation 164:492 Ap 26 '47 320w

Reviewed by Russell Hill

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly R p4 Mr 16 '47 850w

"Bernstein's book, wittily written and well-documented, is certainly worth reading." Alfred Werner

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 27 '47 750w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 24 '47 500w

"The book is journalism, of the rather slapdash 'quickie' variety. But for what it is—a simplified primer—'Final Judgment' is done with skill and perception. . . The weakness of this book is its constant digressions from its announced mission of anatomizing Nazi guilt to nag at the rest of the world, except Russia, for not recognizing from the first tentative symptoms the full evil which it has taken the fruits of war to document conclusively." W. E. Jackson

Sat R of Lit 30:15 My 10 '47 1000w

Discussion by V. H. Bernstein and W. E. Jackson

Sat R of Lit 30:19 Je 28 '47 500w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:283 S '47 210w

BERREY, LESTER V., and VAN DEN BARK, MELVIN. American thesaurus of slang, with supplement; a complete reference book of colloquial speech. 1174p $6.50 Crowell

427 English language—Slang. Americanisms. English language—Synonyms 47-2107

"Originally published in 1942 [Book Review Digest 1942] and for several years out of print, The American Thesaurus of Slang is now reprinted with a Supplement dealing chiefly with military and civilian slang developed during World War II. . . The Thesaurus is patterned upon the well-known work by Roget. It consequently should not be compared nor confused with recent dictionary or linguistic studies. Nor should the reader expect the work to be fully exhaustive, since the American language is in a perpetual state of change. . . The volume, containing over 1,200 pages, presents a vivid introduction to the past and present vitality of the American language. The synonyms and antonyms cover the broad subjects of life from natural phenomena through social organizations to individual acts and attributes." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes

N Y Times p1 Jl 27 '47 1400w

Time 49:104 Mr 3 '47 180w

"While primarily a reference work of use to librarians, scholars, and authors, the volume is also readable for itself and of interest to a general audience."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:216 Je '47 190w

BERRY, ERICK, pseud. See Best, A. C.

BERTAIL, INEZ, ed. Complete nursery song book; il. by Walt Kelly. 152p $3 Lothrop

784 Children's songs 47-11766

Over a hundred and fifty nursery rhymes, most of them familiar. Simple piano accompaniments and directions for playing singing games are included. Illustrated. Index.

Booklist 44:156 D 15 '47

Kirkus 15:626 N 15 '47 70w

"Walt Kelly's illustrations are colorful and lively. Will be especially useful to mothers and teachers. Recommended." Clara Adams

+ Library J 72:1690 D 1 '47 70w

BESSELIEVRE, EDMUND BULKLEY. Going abroad for business. 242p $4 Reinhold

658.8 Commerce 46-6893

"Excellent book on foreign service and preparation for residence abroad for business with information on technique of business transactions, liaison with the home office, social duties, subtleties of alien psychology and pleasure to be derived from commercial and social contacts." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:1626 N 15 '46 60w

Management R 36:234 Ap '47 20w

BEST, MRS ALLENA (CHAMPLIN) Little farm in the big city; written and il. by Erick Berry [pseud.]. [47p] $1.50 Viking

47-2388

Story of a lonely boy who lived in a little city house, completely surrounded by other houses, but he did have a backyard. However, the neighbors objected to his playing in the yard, until Abel sold the junk out of it for a dollar. Then he dug up the whole place and planted corn, cabbage, and squash, aided and abetted by his formerly complaining neighbors. That was the beginning of a bigger and better garden.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 179:128 Je '47 50w

Booklist 43:296 My 15 '47

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 24 '47 120w

"There's a lot to recommend this book, and it falls short of success only in the measure to which it seems an adult's story about a boy who won the friendship of city neighbors through their participation in his efforts (and success) as a city backyard farmer. . . The commercial success at the end, as the neighbors stage an open air market, seems a trifle exaggerated. And yet the book, with its lively illustrations and its repeat pattern of story telling, is fun to read. Seven and eight years olds would like it read aloud; third and fourth graders could read it to themselves."

+ Kirkus 15:218 Ap 15 '47 160w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Sussdorff

Library J 72:736 My 1 '47 60w

"I'm sure the author, herself a practical farmer, wouldn't guarantee that every such garden would pay on this scale. That's not the idea. It pays in getting people together as friends. Nobody can plant vegetables—especially in a city—without somebody looking over a fence or out of a window and taking warm personal interest in what's going on. And it goes on often enough in what some people think is 'a city without neighbors,' to show that to be neighborly all most people need is a little encouragement." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 20 '47 360w

"So persuasive is the author, so spirited her account of Abel's triumph, that city youngsters of the middle years are liable to overestimate their chances of equaling his harvest. Still, if they work as hard as he did and follow his garden chart they will at least discover the immense satisfaction that comes from growing things." E. L. E.

N Y Times p33 My 18 '47 180w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:153 D 6 '47 60w

Sat R of Lit 30:36 Ap 19 '47 50w

BEST, MRS ALLENA (CHAMPLIN) and BEST, HERBERT. Writing for children; il. by Erick Berry. 202p $2.50 Viking

808.3 Fiction—Technique. Authorship. Children's literature 47-2103

"Two established authors of books for children and adults analyze the methods of planning and writing stories for children. Their ideas are presented in a warm but concrete manner and accompanied by numerous illustrative examples, many from their own writings." (Booklist) No index.

"The subject is thoroughly covered and the book should find many users, not only among writers but among parents, teachers, and libraries. It will help to clarify thoughts and purposes muddled by the perusal of too many poor and mediocre stories. A touch of humor is added by Erick Berry's sketches."

+ Booklist 43:248 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:221 My '47 80w

"This well-known writing team has proved they know their stuff, whether writing for younger readers or for their adults. They share here the wholesome fruit of their experience, and do it in such readable form that one spins along easily, and only now and again comes up against the fact that a great deal of sound and practical and workable information has been sorted, analyzed and presented for the serious aspirant to success in this particular field."

+ Kirkus 15:72 F 1 '47 260w

"A 'how' book with laughs in it. Not such a bad idea, especially in the writing field. . . What it serves up as sauce for the children's-book writer would be a healthful dish for any literary aspirant." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 72:630 Ap 15 '47 300w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p27 Ag 24 '47 180w

"A good, practical handbook by two successful authors of books for children. By a humorous, commonsense approach which precludes the aspiring author from taking himself too seriously, it makes entertaining reading and, at the same time, gives a clear analysis of the art of writing fiction."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 Ap 19 '47 70w

School & Society 66:270 O 4 '47 10w

Wis Lib Bul 43:114 Jl '47

BEST, HERBERT. Whistle, daughter, whistle. 300p $3.50 Macmillan

47-11391

The Lake Champlain country is the background for this novel about a flirtatious young lady from Albany, sent to stay for a while with her lively little grandmother. Gramma Truttle was a character with a will of her own, and before long her granddaughter had laid aside her city foolishness and had fallen in love with the man of Gramma's choice.

Booklist 44:90 N 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '47

"Good reading—good Americana."

+ Kirkus 15:511 S 15 '47 250w

"A fine story to be recommended to all." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 72:1540 N 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Lisie Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N 2 '47 140w

"Mr. Best's sharp, gay little story stands up well against his earlier novel of New York State, 'Young 'Un.' Since he is a Britisher by birth and education, it is doubly amazing that his flavorful, strong American idiom in his books carries so well the sound and touch of truth." Judith Paige

+ N Y Times p26 N 16 '47 380w

+ Springfield Republican p10B N 30 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:174 D '47

BESTERMAN, MRS CATHERINE. Quaint and curious quest of Johnny Longfoot, the shoe king's son; with il. by Warren Chappell. 147p $2 Bobbs

47-11151

The adventures of a clever small boy who set out to visit his Uncle Lucas, dressed in his father's coat and polished boots, and bearing a case of precious shoemaker's tools. He had many strange experiences with animals and buried treasures before he earned the right to live with his father and a greatly reformed uncle.

Booklist 44:116 N 15 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Book Week O 25 '47 200w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p12 D 12 '47 240w

"I predict a long and a merry life for Johnny Longfoot," A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk 23:435 N '47 120w

"The author brings such vigor and expansion to an old folk tale that she wins for it a high place in the company of zestful, imaginative stories," A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:36 Ja '48 100w

"Nicely handled nonsense in a good style for reading aloud," J. H. Dohm
+ Library J 72:1618 N 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p 28 N 16 '47 410w

"Children of the fairy tale age will probably find Johnny's adventures entertaining and will certainly like Warren Chappell's humorous and fanciful illustrations," Elizabeth Hodges
+ N Y Times p45 N 16 '47 130w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét
New Yorker 23:149 D 6 '47 60w

"Catherine Besterman has expanded into book length an old Polish tale which will delight middle-aged children who lean to magic and wonder," Gretchen Wulffing
+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 16 '47 150w

"This is a fresh, imaginative, delightful story with almost perfect illustrations,"
+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 D 13 '47 250w

BETJEMAN, JOHN. Slick but not streamlined: poems and short pieces; sel. and with an introd. by W. H. Auden. 185p $3 Doubleday 821 47-5494

Selection of poetry and prose by an English poet. "Once an editor of England's Architectural Review and author of two Shell guide-books to the English counties (at the moment he is doing another guide to Buckinghamshire), Betjeman is a deliberately 'provincial' poet. He has an equal passion for industrial cities and for gaslit towns, entered by bicycle and artfully explored. In his prose Betjeman defends the dignity of places that humorists have poked fun at and social critics have deplored." (Time)

"The Introduction makes this an Auden item for his fans... Much of the writing suggests Auden, in its skill, its wit, its polish."
+ Kirkus 15:325 Je 15 '47 160w

"Sorry, but this collection is a vexation, if not a disappointment. Perhaps the trouble is that the reader has to stoop below too many low bridges, duck under too many falling arches of archness... Pages 25-107 in the present collection consist of poems; pages 110-185 of essays. This arrangement adds to the effect of clutter, no matter how eager one is to find more books, in America, with at least a touch of belles-lettres. The essays are easy and readable; the longest, a satirical examination of various types of dons, carries on just a little too much—is the whole business that important?" Rolfe Humphries
— Nation 165:316 S 27 '47 550w

Reviewed by Richard Watts
New Repub 117:28 Ag 4 '47 1900w

"The net quality of this book is that of highly civilized entertainment, and of something more; of tenderness and understanding of things English, and of wry insight into the mixture of the new and the traditional, the traditional and the sceptical in modern English intelligence," Irwin Edman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 14 '47 750w

"It is to be hoped that when more Americans have encountered him, his publishers will be ready to present Betjeman in more extended form. For confirmed Betjeman fans, this selection is apt to be less satisfactory than tantalizing. He is a full-fledged and, in England at least, a recognized talent; he deserves to be presented as such," Herbert Lyons
N Y Times p7 Ag 24 '47 700w

"Satirist and wit Betjeman surely is, but a special kind of graveness underlies a good deal of his work. Nothing is farther from pathos than parody, which is Betjeman's manner of projection, and it is an unexpected experience to find him now and again pushing parody over into the region of pure feeling. . . Betjeman brings off his effects with the greatest deftness. He is capable of writing in the most glittering way about British middle-class mores; he is capable, too, of abruptly stepping into another dimension, where sensibility is all. Suddenly, we are in the midst of pathos before we realize what response is being demanded of us," Louise Bogan
+ New Yorker 23:118 S 13 '47 650w

Reviewed by Northrop Frye
Poetry 71:162 D '47 700w

"A minor poet, Betjeman's verse is wrongfully called slick. These simple rhymes are deceiving, for they are anything but light jingles. Local atmosphere, warm heart, and sensitive mood are all here. . . Redolent with Betjeman's love of English suburbs and gaslit provincial towns, Gothic Revival churches and mineral railways, seaside resorts, and industrial cities, these verses will have an added appeal for those who have ever cycled over the English countryside or visited the scenes recaptured here," Richard McLaughlin
+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 Ag 16 '47 450w

Time 50:90 JI 28 '47 600w

BETTINGER, HOYLAND. Television techniques; with drawings by the author. 237p il $5 Harper

621.388 Television 47-4476

Discussion of the different aspects of television production for amateur and professional. Index.

Booklist 44:168 Ja 1 '48

"This well-illustrated volume is to my mind the best handbook dealing with television to come along. It makes sense to the amateur as well as to the professional. If your budget will allow only one television volume, take this one. Highly recommended," George Freedley
+ Library J 72:1036 JI '47 40w

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes
N Y Times p5 Ag 10 '47 280w
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 17 '47 80w

"The volume is handsomely produced but the author's own experience is limited to a short period as manager of a small television station in upstate New York. To fill out he has rehearsed indiscriminately," R. E. Hubbell
Theatre Arts 31:80 N '47 40w

BETZ, BETTY. Party book; il. by [the author]. 138p $2.50 Grosset

793 Entertaining 47-12458

Good advice, for the teen-ages, on how to plan parties, what to wear, how to choose and invite guests, how to entertain them, what to serve, how to handle the family on the party problem, and how to clean up afterwards. Includes sixteen different kinds of parties, ice-breakers, and songs for group singing.

"To an older person her way of talking may sound reckless, but come right down to it her ideas are safe and sane. Only they're from the teen-age standpoint, which in this case is what counts. . . She talks sense—and success, for following this peremptory advice is likely to make everybody have a good time." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 D 28 '47 350w

"Teen-agers will love this and the soberest adults will find Betty Betz' suggestions full of common sense." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p13 D 28 '47 160w

BEVERLEY, ROBERT. History and present state of Virginia; ed. with an introd. by Louis B. Wright; pub. for the Inst. of early American history and culture. 366p $4 Univ. of N.C. press

975.5 Virginia—History

Reprint of the work of a seventeenth century Virginia historian, describing the history, Indians, and early life and customs of Virginia. Reproductions of the original illustrations. Index.

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 30 '47 1000w

"Beverley's history is easy and informative reading for an evening and invaluable for an atmosphere which later writers on Virginia fail to catch." R. J. Purcell

+ Commonweal 47:379 Ja 23 '48 390w

"Mr. Wright, a very exact scholar and a useful one, seems to love clichés almost as much as well ascertained facts. . . If I sound acid it is because this reprint of Beverley was desirable, and it has been well done so far as text and printing are concerned. The book itself is a minor treasure of American literature. But the Institute of Early American History and Culture simply ought to insist that its editors write with more distinction than this."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 J1 27 '47 600w; p20 S 7 '47 380w

"In its vigor and directness, in its honesty and humor, Beverley's history is an authentically American book. . . The qualities which made it a welcome voice from the new world now make it a welcome voice from the past." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Times p23 J1 20 '47 400w

Reviewed by D. H. Stewart

Social Educ 12:47 Ja '48 500w

BEYER, ERWIN FRANK. Acrobatics for all; coeducational acrobatics simplified. 123p il $3 Univ. of Chicago press

796.41 Acrobatics and acrobatism 47-1516

The author is assistant professor of physical education at the University of Chicago. The book is a simplified manual which may be used for mixed groups wishing to learn acrobatics, and by physical-education teachers and leaders of young people's recreation groups.

Booklist 43:219 Mr 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Mr 2 '47 50w

School & Society 65:111 F 8 '47 30w

BEYER, WERNER WILLIAM. Keats and the daemon king. 414p $4 Oxford

821 Keats, John. Wieland, Christoph Martin. Literature, Comparative 47-4921

This study of Keats' poetry concentrates attention on the influence upon him of the long narrative poem, Oberon, by an eighteenth century German writer, C. M. Wieland.

Booklist 43:327 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by A. J. Green

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 F 23 '47 400w

"The monograph is a 'study in the ways of the imagination' and belongs to that kind of literary research of which the most famous example is Professor Lowes's 'Road to Xanadu.' . . The argument does not lead, and is not intended to lead, to a rejection of the findings of other investigators. . . Rather, it is an important supplement to earlier findings. The danger is lest such a study lead to a denigration of Keats's originality; but the danger is not great if these inquiries are viewed in proper perspective." S. C. C.

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 15 '47 650w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 Mr 30 '47 400w

"Students of English romantic poetry will benefit from this careful examination of a new and important source." Carlos Baker

N Y Times p7 Ap 27 '47 800w

"In short, the mass of evidence Beyer adduces to support his thesis is quite overwhelming; and if one finishes his book with a faint sense of weakness after undergoing his sustained barrage of innumerable comparisons and analyses, one must at the same time be grateful to him for uncovering this neglected source of poetic nutriment for Keats, and concede that his study, in spite of its prolixity and repetitiousness, does, as he predicts in his Preface, greatly enrich 'the meaning of a host of lines and passages, indeed the meaning of whole poems in the canon, and illuminates entire areas of Keats' art and thought.'" Frajam Taylor

+ — Poetry 70:168 Je '47 550w

"Mr. Beyer unquestionably has uncovered something, but he is inclined to belabor his points and repeat himself. One is left questioning how much of the lyric beauty produced in Keats's brief and brilliant span is genuine. These findings make for a better understanding of the poems, but this is a book for scholars. A quarter of it is devoted to notes and appendix." D. B. B.

Springf'd Union p2 Ap 28 '47 240w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:130 Je '47 200w

BEYER, WILLIAM GRAY. Death of a puppeteer. 256p $2 Curl

47-17775

Detective story.

"[The victim's] death is meant to appear to be accidental, but his murderer does not know quite enough about guns. Clifford Parks, a gun expert, spots the flaw in the evidence and catches the killer after the local police have arrested the wrong man. It is a fairly good story except that some of the steps by which Parks reaches his solution are not mentioned until the concluding chapter." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p35 Ja 12 '47 130w

"Lightweight, fast and readable, with dividend of extensive gun-lore." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 22 '46 50w

BEYMER, WILLIAM GILMORE. Middle of midnight. (Whittlesey house publication) 242p $2.50 McGraw

47-757

Novel based on the American occupation of Germany after World war II. Company K of the American army of occupation was stationed in a seemingly quiet Bavarian village. The quiet was all on the surface, as subsequent events proved.

Booklist 43:185 F 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 30 '47 120w

"Minus romantic frills, this is fast paced, fact-founded, yarning."

Kirkus 14:603 D 1 '46 130w

"The Americans are here, there and everywhere in their jeeps. They clear up one situation only to find their troubles compounded, and the story rushes on to its fatal end. It is excitingly, hair-raisingly told. Not always credible, it is never dull. Even in their heyday few Westerners offered more suspense or action at a faster pace." R. M. MacGregor

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 F 2 '47 500w

BEYMER, W. G.—Continued

"Although Mr. Beymer's plot creaks mightily at times, his writing is well paced and alive."

D. D. — N Y Times p35 Ap 13 '47 290w

"If this is corn it's been distilled to pack a real wallop. Roderick Braun is gallant beyond the call of duty." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 F 2 '47 70w

BIANCO, PAMELA (MRS ROBERT SCHLICK).

Beginning with A. [58p] $2.50 Oxford 47-30903

An alphabet-book in which each letter stands for a child's name. There is a black and white picture opposite each verse.

"The book suggests a very charming valentine of the Victorian era and has been given a format in complete harmony with the artist's design." A. C. Moore

+ Horn BK 23:435 N '47 60w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn BK 23:437 N '47 60w

Kirkus 15:500 S 15 '47 80w

"The technique is very interesting, but the pictures are static and somewhat Victorian in feeling with no action, storytelling, or color to appeal to a child of the age to use an alphabet book." E. W. Turpin

Library J 72:1380 O 1 '47 70w

"It takes line drawings like this to bring out these elements, apparently contradictory, in the possibilities of character before the third birthday. Most of these twenty-four drawings surrounded with exquisite, elaborate frames are of boys and girls somewhere around two; others are in long clothes, displayed on pillows in the pomp of christening robes." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly BK R p8 N 16 '47 260w

"What lovelier gift for a little child could be found anywhere than this book from a poet and artist who has been too long silent?"

+ Sat R of Lit 30:55 N 15 '47 230w

BIBBY, CYRIL. Sex education; a guide for parents, teachers and youth leaders [ed. by L. J. F. Brimble]. 311p $2.50 Emerson

612.6 Sex instruction 46-7990

"The author of this book is a biologist, with experience in England as a parent, a teacher, and a youth leader. . . He emphasizes opportunities parents have, especially with preschool children, for developing wholesome attitudes. He also stresses the need of more adequate preparation, advance planning, and co-operative functioning on the part of parents in this important educational responsibility. The major portion of the book is devoted to the philosophy, content, and methods of sex education as an integral part of the school curriculum." (J Home Econ) Bibliography.

"An American edition of a work that has won high praise in England. The author is education officer in the Central Council for Health Education, of which the late Archbishop Temple was president. Only an occasional alteration of explanation of terminology was needed to adapt the book to American readers. It is radically thorough in its treatment, is completely free from the philosophy of hush-hush, and presents a carefully developed curriculum of sex education through an entire generation from cradle to cradle."

+ Christian Century 63:1345 N 6 '46 110w

Reviewed by E. E. Walls

J Home Econ 39:170 Mr '47 250w

Kirkus 14:327 JI 15 '46 90w

School & Society 65:446 Je 14 '47 10w

Reviewed by D. S. Klais

+ Social Forces 25:479 My '47 850w

BIBLE, DANA X. Championship football; a guide for player, coach and fan. 275p il $3 Prentice-Hall

796.33 Football 47-31163

The director of athletics at the University of Texas, after thirty-four years of coaching experience, discusses all angles of standard football practice. Partial contents: Blocking; Offensive line play; The running game; The passing game; The kicking game; Individual defensive play; Defensive team play; Organizing the program; Drills; Watching football. Index.

Booklist 44:47 O 1 '47

Reviewed by Tom Siler

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 S 28 '47 270w

"He knows the game and how to describe it. Book of lasting value."

+ Kirkus 15:326 Je 15 '47 150w

"Although written for football coaches, this book will be read eagerly by high school boys. . . Good type, many charts and diagrams. Highly recommended for all high school and public libraries." M. M. Smith

+ Library J 72:1116 Ag '47 80w

"Bible has written what is essentially a text-book, full of technical information. . . To high school coaches, the book should prove invaluable. Hardly an angle has been missed by Bible, who also delves into the treatment of injuries, a coach's responsibility to the school, alumni, press and radio. Finally, he tells the fan how best to watch a game." Louis Effrat

+ N Y Times p10 O 5 '47 550w

BIBLE. WHOLE. SELECTIONS. Many mansions, from the Bible; interpretations by Jessie Orton Jones; drawings by Lynd Ward. 134p $4.50 Viking

220.52

47-6314

"Passages from the Old and the New Testament arranged as poetry and preceded by an interpretation. The full-page drawings are printed in black and a very dark blue." (Sat R of Lit) For grades four to eight.

"An expensive book for the average library collection but a beautiful and inspirational one both in conception and in format. . . Especially valuable in connection with religious education."

+ Booklist 44:93 N 1 '47

Churchman 161:17 D 1 '47 30w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn BK 23:436 N '47 80w

"This will be a rich and stimulating possession in any home. Lynd Ward's striking illustrations are imaginative and symbolical." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn BK 23:449 N '47 80w

Kirkus 15:470 S 1 '47 170w

"Beautiful presentation of selections from the Bible that interpret the Word of God. . . Desirable book but price is high." E. F. Clift

+ Library J 72:1473 O 15 '47 70w

"A book of great beauty and dignity."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:56 N 15 '47 50w

Wis Lib Bul 43:156 N '47

BIBLE. OLD TESTAMENT. SELECTIONS. Golden Bible; from the King James version of the Old Testament; selected and arranged by Elsa Jane Werner; il. by Feodor Rojankovsky. (Giant golden bks) 124p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

221 Bible stories

47-994

"This Old Testament for children follows the King James version. While the spirit of the original remains, vocabulary and phrasing are simplified, and characters and incidents of interest mainly to adults are omitted. Paragraphs have been inserted for continuity. Lavishly but appropriately illustrated by Rojankovsky." Library J

Booklist 43:209 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 30 '47
410w

"Acceptable for libraries except for its ungainly size and paper covered board covers."
Claire Nolte

Library J 72:229 F 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
Ja 19 '47 500w

"Unfortunately, Rojankovsky's action pictures are static and he gives the famous old Bible heroes and heroines no personality or character in their faces or actions by which a child may remember them. The text, printed in double columns, stands out effectively in a good black type, but much of the lyric simplicity of the biblical verses has been lost in the very effort to simplify. However, it is a book well worth owning." V. H. Mathews
+ N Y Times p31 F 2 '47 180w

Springf'd Union p15 My 8 '47 120w

BIBLE. OLD TESTAMENT. SELECTIONS.

Pathways through the Bible, by Mortimer J.
Cohen; il. by Arthur Szyk, 548p $3; school ed in 2v ea $1.50 Jewish pub.

221.52 46-18966

"This book, which deals only with the Old Testament, is like the Bible divided into three sections: the Law, the Prophets and the Writings. It is planned to give the reader a broad acquaintance with the contents of the Bible and embodies, according to the author, 'such literary and pedagogical devices as will make for better understanding and richer appreciation of the Holy Scriptures.' The American Jewish Standard Version, translated by a group of American rabbis and published by the Jewish Publication Society, is used as the basic text, though in a number of places this text has been replaced by more modern translations of the original. The book of Job is presented in dramatic form, while the books of Chronicles are represented by a few selections, and some Minor Prophets have been omitted altogether." Christian Century

"The book contains 548 pages, and is a treasury of biblical and explanatory information. It has especial value for those who like to weave sermonettes for the religious schools around biblical characters and stories. The introductions and the explanations are invaluable for Sunday school work. The book has in general the same faults as other works of a similar nature, but it makes up for these by the arrangement of the texts and by the explanation of the contents, which make this a very valuable addition to a minister's or Sunday school library. One must add a word of commendation for the splendid illustrations.
There are 26 of them each one novel and striking, though not always what one expects.
There are eight maps, from 'the world of the patriarchs' to 'the days of the restoration.' In style, form, makeup and artistry the volume is easily one of the best things ever gotten out by the Jewish Publication Society." G. G.
Fox

+ Christian Century 63:1473 D 4 '46 700w
Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '47

"On the whole, this shorter Bible is a modernized, westernized, expurgated interpretation of the material found in the Hebrew canon.
It is an effort, not to outline that actual struggle and growth within Israel that made her what she was, but by by-passing the difficulties to stimulate the religious zeal of Judaism.
A threefold interest is emphasized: a minimum of ritual; an insistence on ethical values; and, above all, Israel's election as the covenant people of the Lord. The omissions, the selections, the reorganization, and the interpretation, all are ordered and massed so that the shining destiny of the Chosen People may appear the all glorious purpose of the Almighty."
I. G. Matthews

+ Crozer Q 24:75 Ja '47 500w

"The book is beautifully illustrated, well made and well adapted to the reading of all young people." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:33 Ja '47 130w

"It is, from first to last, a volume holding pleasure and profit for all readers, whether young or old." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p18 Ja 19 '47 500w

BIBLE. OLD TESTAMENT. GENESIS. Joseph; arranged by Elizabeth Yates. 72p il $2 Knopf 222.11 Joseph, the patriarch—Juvenile literature 47-1934

The Old Testament story of Joseph, taken from the King James Version, arranged for children, and illustrated with woodcuts.

Booklist 43:296 My 15 '47

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p4 Jl 31 '47
190w

"Elizabeth Yates has written an illuminating introduction to the familiar story which is presented in a form acceptable to any age, and of special interest to young people with an appreciation of a well-made book of lasting value." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 23:209 My '47 70w

"Pleasure in the beauty of the Bible narrative is here enhanced by the finely designed pages and the distinguished engravings by Nora Unwin. The greatness of the tale itself will be more likely to speak to young people in this form than in its conventional position in the book of Genesis, interspersed with unrelated matter." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:217 My '47 90w

Kirkus 15:217 Ap 15 '47 40w

"Excellent arrangement, fine illustrations... and clear, bold and easy-to-read print. A distinguished book. Recommended for all over 12 years of age." G. E. Cartmell

+ Library J 72:647 Ap 15 '47 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
My 11 '47 140w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p27 Ap 6 '47 150w

"Elizabeth Yates is particularly successful in presenting the story of Joseph and his father and brothers. . . The book is set in an especially beautiful type—English Monotype—and Nora Unwin's wood engravings have great distinction."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 My 17 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:72 Ap '47

BIBLE. OLD TESTAMENT. PSALMS. The Psalms; a new translation by Ronald Knox.
239p $2 Sheed

223 47-3025

"This translation is from the new Latin version of the Psalms, with reference to the Hebrew; the canticles from the Roman breviary are included. . . Though the translation is into plain modern prose throughout, it remains sufficiently rhythmic to remind us that the Psalms are, after all, songs, and written to be sung." Publisher's note

"A most beautiful, inspiring, and readable English rendition of the songs of Zion. . . One is reminded often of the English of the King James Version: there is a simplicity of phrasing which approximates that of the first English translations. Certainly Father Knox has an accurate grasp of the meaning of the words and has succeeded in making understandable so many of the more obscure verses of the Psalter." Richard Flower

+ Commonweal 46:314 Jl 11 '47 160w

"To one familiar with the beautiful simplicity of the King James Version, or, for that matter, with the surprisingly similar Douay, Father Knox's Psalms, with all their dignity, will inevitably, at least upon first acquaintance, seem unnecessarily heavy and distinctly Latinized in what I must think their cumbersome diction and syntax. . . Whatever may be one's personal preference for the wording of 'The Psalms,' however, Father Knox's scholarly labors for his church and its people must win admiration." M. E. Chase

N Y Times p26 Je 15 '47 1100w

BIBLE. NEW TESTAMENT. EPISTLES. New Testament letters . . . paraphrased by J. W. C. Wand. See Wand, J. W. C.

BIDDLE, DOROTHY (MRS W. A. JOHNSON), and BLOM, MRS DOROTHEA (JOHNSON). Flower arrangement for everyone. 192p il $2.50 Barrows

635.9664 Floral decoration

Agr47-14

Photographs and text on the principles of flower arrangement. Both home grown and florist flowers are included in the story. Written partly from garden club point of view. Index.

Booklist 43:325 Je 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '47

"Compared with Gladys Taber and Ruth Kistner's Flower Arranging for the American Home, this seems perhaps more professional, less practical for you and me, but more important for the people who are already experts and who want to be better. Florists, flower show exhibitors, people who are doing arrangements for public places (clubs, churches, hotels, etc.) will find this book offers—let's say—the Master's degree. . . . There are excellent lists of cutting garden favorites, charts and diagrams of containers, and numerous photographs. There's more money involved—less bow to the simple home where makeshifts are imperative—and very little of personal chitchat."

+ Kirkus 15:254 My 1 '47 180w

"'Flower Arranging for Everyone' is generously illustrated with large photographs, most of which seem to bear the hall-mark of flower show entries rather than the atmosphere of the living room or dining table at home. In themselves they are excellent and informative, and their reproduction leaves little to be desired. One might wish, perhaps, that the accompanying captions were not so heavily scented with mystical beauty that they are likely to receive their most enthusiastic acclaim from Helen Hokinson ladies with souls." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 S 7 '47 200w

"Entertaining as well as instructive." O. S. Stull

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 1 '47 50w

BIERCE, AMBROSE. Collected writings; with an introd. by Clifton Fadiman. 810p $4 Citadel

818 Bierce, Ambrose

47-30068

"This collection makes available to the student and general reader many of the works of one of America's truly pessimistic and bitter writers, whose disappearance in 1913 is his only identification for many readers. A preoccupation with death and with the supernatural runs through the stories. Contents: In the midst of life—The devil's dictionary—Can such things be?—Fantastic fables—The monk and the hangman's daughter—Negligible tales—The parenticide club." Booklist

Booklist 43:185 F 15 '47

Reviewed by Robert Halsband
Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Mr 2 '47 600w

Reviewed by Harold Rosenberg
Nation 164:311 Mr 15 '47 1150w

"Here, in one volume, are the most significant writings of that lonely, bitter man, Ambrose Bierce. . . . Much of this material is hardly worth notice today; and yet the collection seems wholly admirable. The good stuff is very good indeed. It stands up with time." Stanley Walker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Mr 30 '47 650w

"Although Mr. Fadiman's edition is entitled 'The Collected Writings of Ambrose Bierce' it is not that by any manner of means. . . . Nevertheless it can be asserted that Mr. Fadiman's selection makes the most useful single book of Bierce stuff now readily available. It includes much of the cream of the crop, even if not all of it." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y Times p3 D 22 '46 1300w

"The preface which Clifton Fadiman has contributed to 'The Collected Writings of Ambrose Bierce' (Citadel Press) is one of the ablest presentations of a writer that I remember to have seen from his hand. It is written in a more sober style than most of his earlier criticism, and distinguished by a tone more judicious than the rather intemperate one that he developed in connection with the war. . . . I do not think that the contents of this volume (for the selection of which Mr. Fadiman has announced that he is not responsible) represent very satisfactorily either the whole of Bierce's work or his point of view." Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 22:89 Ja 18 '47 2000w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 6 '47 700w

"There was never any danger that Bierce's stories would be forgotten. Now they are old-fashioned, creaky, melodramatic, but they are also art. . . . But the larger value of this volume is its inclusion of the 'Dictionary' and the 'Fables.' These writhing miscellanies are the unique and essential Bierce. He was not a thinker, nor a man of feeling. He had a sharp, jabbing insight, which found new forms of expression in these imitated but never equalled thrusts of iconoclasm." Walter Havighurst

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 Ja 25 '47 900w

BIESTER, LILLIAN L., and others. Units in personal health and human relations; by the Educational services of the Minn. Dept. of health. 267p $3.50 Univ. of Minn.

612.6 Sex instruction

"A practical and scientific series of resource units in sex education, including both teaching materials and methods tested in a variety of schools." (School & Society) Bibliography at end of each chapter. Index.

"Educators who believe that sex education should be part of education for living will welcome this volume. . . . References used are sound and the accompanying vocabularies are explained. It is a useful volume." M. P. Connolly

+ Am J Pub Health 37:1486 N '47 140w
School & Society 65:446 Je 14 '47 30w

BILES, ROY EDWIN. Modern family garden book. 160p $1.50 Greenberg

635.9 Gardening

Guide for the owner of the small place. In a combination of concise text, drawings, and tabulated charts, the author conveys advice on planning, trees, shrubbery, flowers, and vegetables.

"Good, all-round bargain for the small place. . . . While not really up to date, it's a solid beginning volume." C. R. Everitt

+ Atlantic 179:152 Ap '47 50w

"In so far as it is possible to cover in one moderate-size volume all the angles of gardening that are likely to concern an average family, Mr. Biles's book does it with directness and success. . . . A commendable and convenient guide that should win a substantial following." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29 My 4 '47 110w

BILHEIMER, ROBERT S. What must the church do? (Interseminary ser) 148p $1 Harper

261 Church

47-3415

"In volume V of the excellent Interseminary Series, the editor, Robert S. Bilheimer, interprets anew the ecumenical movement as a new reformation not unlike the Protestant Reformation in influence and impact. Bilheimer presents a thoughtful exposition of what the 'Ecumenical Reformation' means in terms of civilization's total problem." Churchman

Booklist 43:303 Je 1 '47

Christian Century 64:853 Jl 9 '47 210w

"Here is a discerning treatment of the desperate problems faced by the church in a sorely distraught age, which needs a new reformation." C. H. Voss

+ Churchman 161:19 Jl '47 150w

Reviewed by E. C. Herrick

Crozer Q 24:375 O '47 350w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:249 S '47 100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:112 Jl '47

BILL, ALFRED HOYT. Rehearsal for conflict, the war with Mexico, 1846-1848. 342p il $4.50 Knopf

973.62. U.S.—History—War with Mexico, 1845-1848 47-31194

An account of our war with Mexico (1846-1848) its political background and its relations to the greater, more terrible war to come, the Civil War. The book is intended for the general reader "to acquaint him with a period which, although one of the most picturesque and fateful in our history, has been one of the most misrepresented, misunderstood, and, by all but the special student, neglected." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:103 N 15 '47

"It is very evident that Alfred Hoyt Bill wrote with the determination to prove that Polk was as pure as the driven snow, so far as promoting a war against Mexico was concerned. Accordingly the book is characterized by the weaknesses of any book which attempts to prove something. Only those developments favorable to Polk are included; anything which militates against him is omitted." Paul Kinlery

— Commonweal 47:258 D 19 '47 550w

Current Hist 13:294 N '47 50w

Kirkus 15:450 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Readable, interesting. For all libraries."

Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1187 S 1 '47 70w

"While disagreeing with some of Mr. Bill's interpretations, I am ready to testify that he plays fair in giving the facts which tell against him as well as those which support his thesis. His book is one that deserves to be taken seriously even if it aims at the general reader and is not studded with footnotes." Keith Hutchison

+ — Nation 165:534 N 15 '47 550w

"Mr. Bill has set a sound, compact military history of the Mexican War in just such an embroidery of social detail as that which made his 'The Beleaguered City' enjoyable. The decorations make for zestful reading, and the military history has long been needed. . . Mr. Bill is well grounded in military theory and military history at large. . . Mr. Bill's larger frame of reference is less dependable than his military history." Bernard DeVoto

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 O 26 '47 1450w

Reviewed by W. B. Hamilton

N Y Times p7 O 12 '47 900w

"The book is carefully written, exceptionally readable for a book of its kind, an admirable example of what a book about a war should be." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 29 '47 700w

BILLINGTON, RAY ALLEN, and others. United States; American democracy in world perspective. 894p il maps $5 Rinehart

973 U.S.—History 47-3552

Traces the history of the rise of the United States from the social point of view. The stress is on the periods in which significant social and economic changes were in the making. Suggested readings. Index.

Booklist 44:10 S 1 '47

"Here is a book whose qualities are the reverse of those of most broad historical surveys: it is often fuzzy when dealing with earlier centuries, but it is sharp when dealing with our own. Planned on a spacious scale, the book gets off to a curiously listless start: the eras of discovery and colonial growth are rehearsed as if by rote, and it isn't until the emergence of the struggling young republic that the authors really warm up to their subject. Stock attitudes and clichés, in fact, abound in the first two inauspicious chapters. . . Not until the drafting of the Constitution do the authors unlimber, and there they follow the once heretical interpretation set forth by Charles A. Beard. But then they hit their stride." W. H. Hale

Sat R of Lit 30:9 D 20 '47 1300w

School & Society 67:29 Ja 10 '48 30w

BINKLEY, WILFRED ELLSWORTH. President and Congress. 312p $4 Knopf

353.03 Presidents (U.S.)—Powers and duties. U.S. Congress. U.S.—Politics and government 47-1135

"Author has rewritten previous study The Powers of the President [Book Review Digest 1937] and in this volume includes Mr. Truman's postwar policies. He stresses the points that Congress must improve if it is to fulfill its functions, that the LaFollette-Moroney act may improve congressional organization when fully actuated, but that the search for effective working basis between the Chief Executive and Congress must continue if nation's policies are to be enacted into law. Brief history of Presidents who proved to be leaders and various expediences of those who were not, interestingly told." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by G. B. Galloway

Am Hist R 53:135 O '47 420w

Reviewed by G. B. Galloway

Am Pol Sci R 41:780 Ag '47 1300w

"Professor Binkley has written a logical and illuminating interpretation of a subject of perennial interest; it is unfortunate that it should be marred by carelessness in proofreading and by confusion in footnotes." W. G. Tyrrell

+ — Ann Am Acad 252:112 Jl '47 360w

Booklist 43:293 My 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 18 '47 90w

Current Hist 12:581 Je '47 70w

Kirkus 15:114 F 15 '47 180w

"Recommended for students." D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 72:455 Mr 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by T. K. Finletter

N Y Times p37 Ap 13 '47 800w

Reviewed by L. H. Chamberlain

Pol Sci Q 62:438 S '47 500w

Reviewed by Irving Dilliard

Survey G 36:708 D '47 700w

BINNS, ARCHIE. You rolling river. 342p $3 Scribner

47-30902

A novel of life in the port town of Astoria at the mouth of the Columbia river sixty to seventy years ago. A number of different stories, interlocked at intervals, are told,—of the sea pilot and his lovely wife, of the two boys who wanted to become sailors, of the boy who wanted to become a lawyer and the girl who loved him—all affected in some way by the sea and the river, the sources of the life of the community.

Booklist 44:32 S 15 '47

"It is not a novel in the real sense of the term but rather a series of short stories, vignettes each telling a fairly complete story of the experiences of some of the characters in the book. It is a faithful portrayal of life at the mouth of the Columbia at that period and Mr. Binns has again demonstrated not only his knowledge of the sea but also his deep insight into human nature." W. J. Marx

Commonweal 47:355 Ja 16 '48 450w

Kirkus 15:347 Jl 1 '47 210w

BINNS, ARCHIE—Continued

Reviewed by E. L. Lewis

Library J 72:1269 S 15 '47 60w

"In 'You Rolling River' Archie Binns has topped his own list; this easily is the finest story and the best piece of writing he has yet produced, sound and sure and true from beginning to end. There is a sense of freedom and confidence in it which is hard to explain; the author seems through with experimentation now, knows exactly what he is after and what he wants to say." Lincoln Colcord

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 S 28 '47 850w

"Clearly 'You Rolling River' should be made into a picture—a silent picture, that is. In the cast are Rover boys and fallen maidens, sadistic parents and stiff-necked youths who talk like old movie titles. These move jerkily through an unabashed melodrama. . . In his own better days as a novelist, notably in 'The Land Is Bright,' Mr. Binns described superbly the Pacific Northwest, which is the scene of this innocent, salt-sprayed yarn. In the present effort, however, he is much steadier at sea." Mary McGrory

— + N Y Times p30 N 23 '47 270w

BIOGRAPHICAL encyclopedia of the World. 3d ed 1216p il $25 Inst. for research in biography, inc, 296 Broadway, N.Y. 7

920 Biography—Dictionaries 46-14665

"The Biographical Encyclopedia of the World consists of over 20,000 articles in 'who's who' style on outstanding living men and women in all countries. The first (1940) edition was reviewed in the July 1940 Subscription Books Bulletin [Book Review Digest 1940] but no copy of it nor of the second edition was available for comparison with the one under review. As in the original edition no authorities are named, neither editors nor contributors, and there is no indication of the personnel of the Institute for Research in Biography. The preface states: 'The aid of leading authorities in many fields was obtained, as well as the cooperation of responsible heads of government bureaus and departments. . . . No charge of any kind was made for the inclusion of any biography or photograph. The practice of including sketches in foreign languages, cited as a fault by the Committee in 1940, has been discontinued. The new arrangement is unusual. Following an alphabetical index, the body of the book is divided into thirteen subject groups, including Government, Business, Law, Medicine, Education, Religion, Science, Literature, Music, Radio, Stage and Screen, Art, Engineering and Armed Forces. A final section covers 'Leaders in Other Fields and Addenda.'" Subscription Bks Bul

"The biographies vary extremely in fullness from a couple of lines giving only title of present position and address to sketches of 100 lines or more. The plan which determines the length of the biographies is hard to discover. . . The book checks in accuracy with other, authoritative who's whos, and it appears up to date, citing appointments as recent as November 1945. A comparison with the 1945 Political Handbook of the World and Current Biography was satisfactory. . . The Biographical Encyclopedia of the World is useful for its many up-to-date entries not easily found elsewhere. But the abundance of detail in some articles, the paucity in others and the omission of prominent individuals give an unreliable perspective of importance within each subject field. It is recommended only as supplementary biographical material where needed."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 17:25 J1 '46 700w

BIOGRAPHY index; a cumulative index to biographical material in books and magazines; quarterly with annual cumulation. Service basis Wilson, H.W.

016.92 Biography—Indexes 47-6532

"The preface states that this index is designed to 'meet the need for a one-place index to biographical material.' It is comprehensive in scope and analyzes approximately 1500 periodicals including the 1300 regularly indexed by the Wilson service, the New York Times, and current books of individual and collective biography published in English. Useful material from non-biographical books is covered through the use of analytics. . . The Biography Index is divided into two sections. The first section which forms the main portion of the volume is the name index, arranged alphabetically. The second section is an index to professions and occupations arranged alphabetically by subject. With the December issue a new feature is added, a check list of the composite books analyzed. Short notes call attention to a few new books in the field of biography, chiefly new who's who publications." Subscription Bks Bul

Library Q 17:90 Ja '47 100w

"The subject listing of professions and occupations classifies the individuals found in the main index by their profession or occupation and is a very useful feature of the work. Cross references are given in the case of variations in name of the biographees. . . Although final evaluation cannot be made on the basis of examination of only one or two issues, it appears that the Biography Index will provide an up-to-date, well-organized service which should be valuable in all kinds of reference work."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:11 Ap '47 480w

BIRCH, VERA BENEDICTA (GAGE). Game for one player. 248p $2.75 Scribner 47-30069

Psychological study of a charming, but ruthless Englishman whose chief joy was to arrange the lives of his friends to his own satisfaction, but seldom to theirs. The time is from the early 1930's to the present.

Booklist 43:185 F 15 '47

"Ian's story is told with wit and perception—up to the last 50 pages. Then, as though she were in a hurry to get it over with, the author telescopes a few years' events into three or four short chapters, leaving the reader with a letdown feeling. Nevertheless 'Game for One Player' is a better-than-average first novel that reveals a fresh and pungent writing talent." Ben Kartman

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 2 '47 180w

"Reminiscent of the early Evelyn Waugh, this is worldly, witty, with a more serious implication beyond its caustic comedy."

+ Kirkus 14:582 N 15 '46 170w

"As a psychological study of character it is superficial and unsatisfactory. As a story it is dull." El. P. Nichols

— Library J 72:160 Ja 15 '47 40w

"While the novel lacks literary polish and distinction—Miss Birch has a penchant for making her male characters 'giggle'—it makes interesting reading for its perceptive characterization of a charming scoundrel who played his own game at the expense of the happiness of others. Possessing no mean talent at irony and ridicule herself, Miss Birch also draws an amusing portrait of Laura's first husband, the pompous, stuffy, middle-aged novelist, who lived on the milk of adulation." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 F 2 '47 600w

"The frosting and trimmings of this novel are excellently done. Mrs. Birch dissects a certain segment of society composed of landed gentry and London flat dweller with considerable skill. . . But the real substance of this book, the principal characters and the plot are as flat as the inside of a store cake." Andrea Parke

— + N Y Times p14 F 9 '47 380w

"Mrs. Birch has written a devilishly clever novel about a clever and devilish young man. Its hard, icy surface glitters with particles of brittle wit that almost completely conceal any warmth underneath. Yet warmth of a sort there is, the warmth that derives from a fine sense of satire, a competent style, and an ability to create, however indirectly, time, place, and people. . . With its crackling brightness this tale will amuse all but the stodgier members of the audience. They will object with reason that Gervaise is not as sharply defined as Ian and that toward the end of the book the author fumbles slightly in knotting the threads of her plot." Grace Frank

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:26 F 22 '47 700w

BIRDOFF, HARRY. The world's greatest hit: Uncle Tom's cabin; il. with old-time play-bills, daguerreotypes, vignettes, music-sheets, poems, and cartoons. 440p $5 Vanni

792 Stowe, Harriet Elizabeth (Beecher)—Uncle Tom's cabin. Theater—U.S. 47-6624
Study of the stage history of Uncle Tom's Cabin which has had the longest run of any play in theatrical history: over ninety years. Copiously illustrated.

"Carefully and lovingly done. Of interest to Negro as well as theatre collections. Recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:1779 D 15 '47 20w

"Harry Birdoff's entertaining book is an authentic contribution to the history of the American theatre." Carl Glick

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 4 '48 450w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 30 '47 80w

BIRNEY, HOFFMAN (DAVID KENT, pseud). A knife is silent. 245p $2.50 Random house

47-761

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 12 '47 150w

"Haitian high jinks, and a fairly slow routine of questions and answers amplify a monomurder of rather simple proportions. Far—but certainly not excellence."

Kirkus 14:561 N 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Ja 12 '47 200w

"An off-stage voice and hints of voodoo add to the excitement and help to befog the issue, already sufficiently clouded by Hutchinson's bountiful supply of wines and liquors. After the mystery is cleared up there is a concluding chapter which has little to do with the story, but appears to have been tossed in to please those who must have love along with their murders." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 F 2 '47 160w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 26 '47 50w

"O.K."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ja 18 '47 50w

BISHOP, MRS CLAIRE (HUCHET). Pancakes—Paris; il. by Georges Schreiber. 62p $2 Viking 47-2541

A group of French children sitting in the sun to warm themselves are confronted by two American soldiers, asking directions. To Charles, aged ten, who helped them they gave a box of pancake flour. The story is of Charles' grave attempts to celebrate the beginning of Lent by making crêpes for his mother and little sister and how the American soldiers once more came to the rescue.

Booklist 43:276 My 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 25 '47 100w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 27 '47 240w

Commonweal 47:158 N 21 '47 100w

"Tender and moving in the simplicity of its realism, Pancakes—Paris has a pathos lightened by humor which must appeal to every sensitive heart. With Georges Schreiber's sympathetic drawings the book will be long remembered." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:216 My '47 120w

"Here's a story that will help convey even to five to seven year olds something of what the war has meant to children like themselves. And yet it does it without losing the perspective of a sense of adventure and discovery."

+ Kirkus 15:67 F 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 72:736 My 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 20 '47 360w

"The prose in the story is occasionally awkward, but its spirit never is. It should be read by every well-fed American child of 7 to 10—and by their parents too. Georges Schreiber has contributed some notable illustrations, blithe and vigorous, and evocative of a city which has not lost its courage." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p40 Ap 13 '47 230w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:151 D 6 '47 80w

"An excellent book for American children—an excellent book for children to read to their parents—an excellent book for parents to read to their Congressmen." Eleanor Breed

+ San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 16 '47 260w

"Mrs. Bishop's story is rich with her knowledge of and feeling for post-war France. In spite of its background of poverty and sadness. It is a story that has real gaiety and great courage. The drawings, printed in sepia, are realistic and informing."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 Ap 19 '47 190w

U S Quarterly BkI 3:244 S '47 100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:99 Je '47

BLACK, DOROTHY. Hidden heart. 236p $2 Macrae Smith co.

47-1596

"As guardian of a pretty, precocious, unpredictable niece, the Rev. Mr. Pook, of Podbury, listened politely to the unsought advice of spinsters and married busybodies and didn't remember a word of it. He and Prudence, about whose vanished mother whispers still circulated, bridged the years in companionship, immune to parish criticism. When Prudence got mixed up in romance, the gentle, puttering parson's unreliable memory proved quite invaluable." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Kirkus 15:8 Ja 1 '47 100w

Library J 72:225 F 1 '47 10w

"Dorothy Black has brewed a flavoursome story of vicarage and garden." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26

Mr 30 '47 100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:97 Je '47

BLACK, GEORGE FRASER. Surnames of Scotland; their origin, meaning, and history. 838p $10 N.Y. public lib.

929.4 Names, Personal A47-1716

"Dr. Black's book, which has been running serially in the 'Bulletin' of the New York Public Library since August, 1943, is the most comprehensive and valuable contribution to the study of British onomastics since the appearance of C. L'Estrange Ewen's 'History of Surnames of the British Isles' in 1931. As its title indicates, it covers a narrower ground than Ewen's revolutionary work, but it covers that ground with a new thoroughness. In one massive volume weighing nearly four-and-a-half pounds avoirdupois it assembles everything that is known about the origin and spread of nearly 7,000 Scottish family names, many of which have become almost as common in the United States and Canada as they are in their native Scotland." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"It is not for me to comment on the accuracy and finality of the author's interpretations of ancient documents or on his excursions into the other paths he opens in such inviting and alluring ways, but I am willing to say that for sheer fascination of the tale and for alluring invitation into further reading along the same or similar lines, the book stands high."

BLACK, F. F.—Continued

H. M. Lydenberg

+ Library J 72:217 F 1 '47 750w

Reviewed by H. L. Mencken

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 D 29 '46 1400w

"This book is indeed an impressive and valuable contribution to the subject of personal nomenclature. . . It is not surprising that so great a task occupied the author 'for over forty years' or that the outcome should be this bulky volume of 338 pages in double columns, with lxxi preliminary pages of general matter. Details of the names are drawn from official or other accredited sources, which are duly referred to and catalogued. This gives the work a sound historical foundation."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p257 My 24 '47 1850w

BLACK, MAX. Critical thinking; an introduction to logic and scientific method. 402p $5 Prentice-Hall

160 Logic, Thought and thinking. Reasoning 47-348

Textbook for an elementary course in logic, covering deductive reasoning, truth-tables, disjunctive arguments, a study of language, and the scientific method. Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

"The text should certainly be seriously considered for introductory logic courses. Its scope, carefulness, and richness of material at least qualify it that far. The text is best suited for logic courses in which scientific (experimental) method is of secondary, and logical forms are of primary, importance." C. W. C.

+ J Philos 44:361 Je 19 '47 480w

School & Society 65:285 Ap 19 '47 20w

BLACK, THOMAS B. Pinball murders. 187p $2 Reynal

47-30901

Detective story

Kirkus 15:266 My 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 S 21 '47 110w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p23 S 28 '47 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p13 S 21 '47 70w

"Passable."

Sat R of Lit 30:26 O 4 '47 40w

BLACK MASK (periodical). Hard-boiled omnibus; early stories from Black mask; ed. and with an introd. by Joseph T. Shaw. 468p $3 Simon & Schuster

Short stories—Collections 46-8293

A collection of "rough and tough" mystery and detective stories originally published ten to twenty years ago. Contents: The Devil suit, by J. J. des Ormeaux; Taking his time, by R. J. Shay; Fly paper, by Dashiell Hammett; Death in the Pasig, by Ramon Decolta; The man who liked dogs, by Raymond Chandler; Red goose, by Norbert Davis; Murder mixup, by G. H. Cox; Red 71, by Paul Cain; Inside job, by Raoul Whitfield; Sail, by Lester Dent; Sister act, by C. G. Booth; Best man, by Thomas Walsh; Kick-back, by Ed Lybeck; Clean sweep, by Roger Torrey; South wind, by Theodore Tinsley.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p12 N 17 '46 270w

"Admirable collection." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p48 N 24 '46 90w

New Yorker 22:127 N 9 '46 80w

"Of these fifteen novelette-length stories at least eleven appear masterly even to a non-aficionado such as I. Action usually takes the place of detection, and there's more blood than you can shake a stick at. There's also some very effective writing." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 24 '46 70w

Sat R of Lit 29:42 N 23 '46 50w

BLACKFORD, SUSAN LEIGH (COLSTON) (MRS CHARLES MINOR BLACKFORD). Letters from Lee's army; or, Memoirs of life in and out of the army in Virginia during the war between the states. 312p $3.50 Scribner

973.742 U.S.—History—Civil war—Personal narratives, Confederate 47-2436

Behind the scenes pictures of life in the South from the beginning to the end of the Civil war. The book is made up of letters of Captain Charles Minor Blackford and his wife, and selections from their diaries, edited and abridged by their grandson, from an earlier edition, privately printed in 1894. Index.

Reviewed by Ollinger Crenshaw

Am Hist R 53:195 O '47 400w

Reviewed by Paul Kiniry

Commonweal 45:477 F 21 '47 400w

Current Hist 12:498 My '47 70w

Kirkus 14:631 D 15 '46 170w

"Written with intelligence and humor. Reveals the tragedy of the Confederacy in battle and in lives of those carrying on at home. A real contribution to the literature on the Civil War." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 72:157 Ja 15 '47 90w

"The picture that emerges from these letters and diaries is singularly vivid; far better than most Civil War volumes it integrates military and civilian life. The editing leaves something to be desired. The introductory material is inadequate, and there are few annotations to assist the unskilled reader in fitting family history into the larger history of the war." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 F 9 '47 1550w

"The matter of the book is of human beings in a crisis, and is therefore perennially vital and poignant. Not so acceptable is the manner in which this raw material is presented. It was compiled by Mrs. Blackford. The whole was 'annotated' by Mr. Blackford and thirty-five copies were privately printed in 1894-96 in two volumes. This work has now been 'edited and abridged' by Charles M. Blackford 3d, grandson of the letter writers. His 'editing' is insufficient to orient the reader who picks up this book merely as a human interest story, and it falls far short of the most rudimentary standards that those who want to use it as source material have a right to expect." W. B. Hamilton

+ N Y Times p7 F 16 '47 1000w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Social Educ 11:331 N '47 210w

"As letters, they make fascinating reading; as a record of Southern life, 1861-65, they are worth a stack of yarns like Gone With the Wind."

+ Time 49:96 F 3 '47 800w

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 3:255 S '47 250w

BLACKWOOD, JAMES RUSSELL. Soul of Frederick W. Robertson, the Brighton preacher; with an introd. by Andrew Watterson Blackwood, sr. 201p $2 Harper

B or 92 Robertson, Frederick William

47-3909

"It was just a century ago that young Frederick Robertson began his ministry at Brighton, England, which ended with his death after six years. . . The father of the author of this book, Professor of Homiletics at Princeton Seminary, says in his Introduction that he, and many others who teach homiletics, 'think of Robertson as the most influential preacher thus far in the English-speaking world.' The story of his life is told briefly and clearly, of a young man who did not wish to be a clergyman, who was never satisfied with his work, who found preaching a difficult task, but who was a landmark of the nineteenth century, the precursor of the Phillips Brooks and the Fosdicks of future generations." (Churchman) Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 64:742 Je 11 '47 40w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 161:20 S 15 '47 240w

"The book is not a conventional biography but a presentation of its subject's inner self. It is one young man writing about another young man, as is most clearly seen in the choice of material, the diction, and the sympathetic and revealing interpretation throughout. It fails, however, to give much reason for the controversies at Brighton; they are stated and hinted at, but the issues are not clearly drawn. Neither does it do much to resolve our own perplexity about the peculiar loneliness, despair, and even grumbling of Robertson in his later days. Much of the preacher still remains a mystery. The book is good, clear writing; simple and effective; a contribution to the history of Christian preaching." R. E. Keighton
+ — Crozer Q 24:377 O '47 200w

BLANCH, ARNOLD. Methods and techniques for gouache painting. 76p 53il $2.75 Am. artists

751.42 Painting 47-4348

"A simple basic text for gouache painting. Arnold Blanch's book contains many color reproductions showing the wide range of this medium. Among the famous artists who fully describe their technique in working in gouache are Doris Lee, Martyl, Adolf Dehn, Stuart Edie, Yasuo Kuniyoshi, Aaron Bohrod, Bruce Mitchell and Anton Refregier." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by R. A. Florsheim

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 D 22 '46 230w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 29 '46 60w

Springf'd Republican p5B S 14 '47 40w

BLANCHARD, HENRY. White bull. 252p $2.50 Doubleday

47-5151

Novel based on life in pastoral Normandy, beginning in the 30's and ending sometime after the Allied invasion. It is the story of a stubborn, money-loving peasant, married to a woman of a fine old family; of their children, and of the American musician who fell in love with the favorite daughter, Jenni. The activities of the various members of the family during the war are narrated by Madame Mère to the American, when he returns from the United States as a Major in the intelligence service.

"A first novel of more than average accomplishment."

+ Kirkus 15:262 My 15 '47 120w

"This is a satisfying tale. The tender love story, the sharply etched personalities and their reactions to caste and tradition, the interwoven story of the magnificent white bull, the grim struggle of the underground, all are done with a graphic though delicate touch. Of wide appeal and for general purchase." M. C. Manley

+ Library J 72:1032 Ji '47 70w

Reviewed by Richard Spinney

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ji 20 '47 180w

"The part of the story which is most fresh and alive tells of Gerard's love for Jenni. . . But as the tomtoms beat across Europe the pigment begins to fade from this group of personalities. Characters are on their way to becoming symbols of the French spirit, long before the curtain falls on the pre-war years.

What remains, after the horror has swallowed up romance and personal conflict, is the feeling that this story presents a special relationship between an American and a French family." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p25 Ji 27 '47 260w

BLAND, ALDEN. Behold a cry. 229p $2.50 Scribner

47-2364

A novel of Negro life in Chicago in the early months after the first World war, when the Negroes were coming up from the South, seeking better living conditions for themselves but too often becoming the reason for class and race conflicts.

Booklist 43:272 My 1 '47

Reviewed by Horace Cayton

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 23 '47 600w

"A convincing portrait of Negroes against the rising racial and labor unrest of 1918, this however will not carry against the stronger, sharper writing of Richard Wright, of Ann Petry—and is at best only mildly moving." Kirkus 15:105 F 15 '47 160w

"A first novel that has few of the expected creaks. Recommended." L. D. Reddick

+ Library J 72:387 Mr 1 '47 70w

"Alden Bland's first novel is a warm and human story, told with understanding and with unobtrusive artistry." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Mr 9 '47 700w

"Alden Bland, the Negro author of this short novel, has none of the power of a Richard Wright. His style is jerky, sometimes making it as difficult to follow his story as it is to discern what he is getting at. . . In places 'Behold a Cry' is pretty good reporting, especially when it gets away from Ed's woman chasing and treats of his sons asking questions as they become aware of the color of their skin. The brief picture of the Chicago race riots is vivid and raises horror in the reader's mind. But there is confusion as to whether the author wished to tell of infidelity and unholy passion in his first novel, or to tell of his people's problems." Theodore Pratt

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 23 '47 260w

BLANKFORT, MICHAEL. Big Yankee, the life of Carlson of the Raiders. 380p il $4 Little

B or 92 Carlson, Evans Fordyce 47-1790

Life story to date of Evans F. Carlson, the New England minister's son, who became commander of Carlson's Raiders, and who applied his lessons on religious and democratic principles in a practical way. Index.

Booklist 43:240 Ap 1 '47

"A superb biography of a superb human being." Herman Kogan

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Mr 23 '47 600w

"The reader will find the excerpts of some of the writings and speeches in the 'Appendices' to be well worth reading." J. L. Donovan

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 26 '47 550w

Kirkus 15:87 F 1 '47 180w

"A fascinating account of the growth of a mind. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:384 Mr 1 '47 110w

"In telling Carlson's story, Michael Blankfort has written the perfect biography. The story is told with the skill of a brilliant scenarist, as scenes, episodes, and happenings in Carlson's life, beautifully interwoven and put together, are permitted to unfold naturally, as the man might speak. The author, one of Carlson's close personal friends, is surely one of the most inconspicuous of biographers. Throughout the book, one has the feeling that it is Carlson and the Raiders who are telling the story, notably in the remarkable narrative devoted to the raid on Makin Island." Carey McWilliams

+ Nation 164:431 Ap 12 '47 1550w

BLANKFORTH, MICHAEL—Continued

"The picture that finally emerges from this biography of Carlson is of a man of action, a fearless warrior in both military and civilian life whose basic Christianity has evolved into more universal democratic consciousness. It is a picture of a man of marvelous simplicity and humility who has grown in political stature with each passing year, a man of incorruptible integrity—a kind of composite twentieth-century John Brown and William Lloyd Garrison. The book is courageous in exposing many evils and 'secrets' which our own and the Chinese ruling class would rather have kept from the public." Agnes Smedley

+ New Repub 116:38 Mr 10 '47 1050w

"The Big Yankee" is chiefly valuable as a history of the education of Evans Carlson, but it might educate a lot of people about Far Eastern affairs." Richard Watts

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Mr 2 '47 1200w

"Mr. Blankforth is frankly biased in Carlson's favor, and exalts him frequently at the expense of many other excellent officers who, lacking Carlson's 'causes' and his flair for publicity, performed their duties less conspicuously. Gen. Merritt A. Edson's raiders, for example, also fought valiantly, but you would hardly know it from this book. The truth is that General Carlson was a great enough leader without the halo with which his biographer is determined to fit him." David Dempsey

N Y Times p5 Mr 9 '47 750w

"In time 'The Big Yankee' should become a book read by untold numbers of youngsters, for the story has what youth responds to, courage, achievement, simplicity, and nobility. If they do not respond to it just now, with a war hardly over two years gone, they will do so later on, if Carlson does become an American legend." Raymond Swing

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 O 11 '47 2150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:97 Je '47

BLANSHARD, PAUL. Democracy and empire in the Caribbean; a contemporary review by [the author]. 379p $5 Macmillan

330.9729 Caribbean sea

47-30919

"A socio-economic review of the unhappy, poverty-ridden peoples of the Caribbean. Blanshard, State Department official and Caribbean Commission consultant, lived and worked in the West Indies from 1942 to 1946. He vigorously attacks the ruthless imperialism that is supported by brutal exploitation of the Negroes. Agrarian economy, based on rum, sugar, bananas, and tourists, is operated for the profit of absentee capitalists by indifferent overlords through a system of virtual slavery based on a color caste and social stratification. The best hope, Blanshard believes, is a political and economic administrative reorganization on a regional basis." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by D. G. Munro

Am Pol Sci R 41:1238 D '47 600w

Booklist 44:66 O 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 S 7 '47 110w

"Island by island, Mr. Blanshard traverses this enchanting and perplexing archipelago, paying as little attention as possible to scenery and tourist attractions, giving a masterly presentation and analysis of the facts in regard to race, population pressures, subsistence, education, government and the rising tide of democracy." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 64:1302 O 29 '47 950w

"His book is fair, objective, and for the most part accurate. There are a few minor errors." L. A. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 S 18 '47 550w

"This is an informative book. It quite evidently is written by a man who has fortified personal observation with a careful and extensive study of his subject. Conceding that bibliographies often are padded to give specious weight to a volume, I should hazard the opinion that Mr. Blanshard actually has digested a good bit of the material listed in the appendix. To that solid basis he has added his own personal observations and evaluations, garnered during his four-year service as a State Department official in the Caribbean." L. J. Trese

+ Commonweal 46:507 S 5 '47 470w

Current Hist 13:294 N '47 70w

Kirkus 15:301 Je 1 '47 160w

Reviewed by Harold Lancour

Library J 72:1101 Ag '47 120w

"His book is the best general study of the area to date." J. W. Ivy

+ Nation 165:385 O 11 '47 850w

"Mr. Blanshard has produced an important and distinguished book. There are no pirates in its pages, no careening galleys and shining sails, no buried treasure, no hymns to aromatic rum and spices and the lordly power of the tourist dollar. Yet it is easily the best comprehensive, over-all review and detailed picture of the present status of empire and the actual condition of all the islands and mainland holdings that make up the British, French, Dutch and American colonial dependencies in the Caribbean. And it is a distinguished book in another sense. Without any apparent conscious effort at style, by his complete mastery of his material and awareness of his own viewpoint, Mr. Blanshard has achieved the stylistic virtue of the compact, telling and meaningful phrase so often lacking in contemporary, popular surveys." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S 7 '47 900w

"Mr. Blanshard's experience with the Caribbean Commission balance his personal sympathies, and gives his book its solid value." Mildred Adams

+ N Y Times p26 S 23 '47 1000w

New Yorker 23:67 Ag 30 '47 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 26 '47 500w

"Not many general books have been written on the Caribbean in English or any other language, and this is not only the most comprehensive, but by all odds the best and most penetrating, although Cuba, Haiti, and the Dominican Republic, the so-called republics—which do not fall directly in the colonial pattern which Blanshard is treating—receive only cursory treatment." Carleton Beals

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 S 6 '47 1000w

BLANTON, CATHERINE. Three miracles; pictures by Leo Politl. 47p $2 Day

46-7571

"Juan, the laziest boy in Mexico and Pablo the most stubborn donkey take Paul, the selfish, crippled little Americano, to Mexico City so that the Lady of Guadalupe can perform a miracle. They do not reach her, but three miracles are performed just the same." Sat R of Lit

"This slight story with amusing pictures in color carries a simple moral, easily understood by young children."

+ Horn Bk 23:109 Mr '47 50w

Kirkus 14:543 N 1 '46 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 N 10 '46 470w

Sat R of Lit 29:58 N 9 '46 50w

BLAU, ABRAM. Master hand. (Research monographs) 206p il $4.50 Am. orthopsychiatric assn, inc, L. G. Lowrey, 25 W 54th st, N.Y. 19

158.435 Left- and right-handedness

Med47-477

"A study of the origin and meaning of right and left sidedness and its relation to personality and language. Bibliography and index." School & Society

Reviewed by Vera Brandon

J Home Econ 39:362 Je '47 240w

School & Society 64:407 D 7 '46 20w

BLAU, ERNEST E. Queen's falcon. 218p $2
McKay

47-2062

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19
Ap 6 '47 120w

"The author almost makes you believe things which you know to be untrue. What more can you ask of any writer of mysteries?" Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 6 '47 110w

"Capably done melodrama."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:68 Ap 12 '47 50w

BLAU, JOSEPH LEON, ed. American philosophic addresses, 1700-1900. 762p $6.75 Columbia univ. press

191.04 Philosophy, American A47-784

Twenty-seven philosophic addresses, arranged topically, each chosen for its significance, as 'an outstanding example of a literary form much cultivated in America; . . . together they give impressive evidence of the degree to which American thinking for particular occasions in the major areas which the addresses span was universalized by general considerations and led to philosophical formulation.' (Pref) Brief critical and biographical notes precede each essay. Index.

"The exclusion of all philosophic materials not in the form of addresses has meant the omission of famous men in the history of American ideas. For example, the section on the philosophy of science excludes John Fiske, although it is true that evolution is ably represented by James Woodrow. . . Dr. Blau has prepared a careful, serviceable series of analytical introductions for each address, including a calendar of the chief biographic facts for each person represented. This should serve classes in history, philosophy, and literature and is a worth-while addition to the general library." Harvey Wish

Am Hist R 52:742 Jl '47 700w

"Students of American civilization will welcome this handsomely printed and carefully edited volume." D. J. Boorstin

+ Ethics 57:228 Ap '47 180w

"Messrs. Schneider and Blau make only modest and cautious claims, but their joint accomplishments speak louder than the loudest of publishers' blurbs. Their spades have been busy in neglected corners of a field close to home, and their first harvest should be a shining example to their compatriots." H. A. Larabee

+ J Philos 44:272 My 8 '47 360w

Reviewed by Cameron Thompson

New Eng Q 20:416 S '47 260w

School & Society 65:430 Je 7 '47 10w

BLISS, GILBERT AMES. Lectures on the calculus of variations. 296p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

517.4 Calculus of variations A46-5369

"This text on advanced mathematics presents some of the topics treated in the author's graduate courses on the calculus of variations at the University of Chicago. The extremal of the simple integral in three-space with fixed end-points is first discussed, and the Weierstrass sufficiency condition proved. Alternative sufficiency methods, problems in parametric form, and those with variable end-points in three and other dimensions are then presented. The last half of the book deals with the problem of Bolza and its extensions as recently treated by the author and his associates." U S Quarterly Bkl

N Y New Tech Bks 31:63 O '46

"The material is presented with the clarity and precision for which the author is noted. Multiple integrals are omitted from consideration, as are the 'direct methods' so often useful for physical applications. But for the restricted area and standpoint selected, the treatment is complete. The book is well suited for the student of advanced mathematics seeking a rigorous treatment of extremal problems, either for independent study or as a class text."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:106 Mr '47 190w

BLIXEN, KAREN (DINESEN) baroness (PIERRE ANDREZEL, ISAK DINESEN, pseud.). Angelic avengers. 402p $3 Random house

47-6233

A horror story which first appeared in Denmark during the Nazi occupation. The tale opens in the 1840's when two beautiful girls, one who had just lost her fortune, and the other who was fleeing the amorous advances of her employer, decided to join forces. They went to a remote part of France, there to work for a saintly old British clergyman and his wife. When it developed that all was not as it seemed the two girls stayed on until their innocence and goodness had helped to repel evil.

"Now does Mr. Andrezel write this book with his tongue well placed in his cheek? Is it a satire? Is it a test made by the author, publisher, and book clubs to discover the final limits of the trash that the public can be shoved into buying? And will the public be shoved? And is that a justification for this incredible book?" Gretchen Finletter

Atlantic 179:109 Ja '47 300w

Booklist 43:170 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:15 My '47

"Heartily recommended."

+ Cath World 164:573 Mr '47 250w

"It appears as though Andrezel wrote these chapters with the feeling that the Gestapo was closing in on him; stalking him as he put each sentence upon the page. We have in this novel a most illuminating example of how an artist fought against the tangible evil of Nazism while tricking the cleverest detectors of the opposition. Andrezel thus created an extraordinarily fascinating piece of literature to stimulate hope (as this book did) in his countrymen while they existed in a web of domination as vicious as that woven by Mr. Pennhallow." Marie Seton

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ja 12 '47 410w

"For post-war Americans, the undertones of this book are so muffled as to be practically unheard, while the actual horror story, though unfolded to the author's customary magnetism, is too grotesque to be acceptable. There is a perversity about the whole atmosphere of 'The Angelic Avengers,' a kind of willful discarding of the props of probability which alone could hold up such improbable adventures, which tempts you to believe that Isak Dinesen has, in this instance, thrown her integrity to the winds. Whether the book was written as propaganda or out of some secret caprice, the author has managed to produce a caricature of her own kind of romanticism which, instead of being persuasive, makes mock of her past work." Virginia Peterson

Commonweal 45:403 Ja 31 '47 650w

Kirkus 14:554 N 1 '46 180w

"The antique yet masterful style in which it is written is well suited to the period in which the events take place. Reminiscent of The Chink in the Armor. Recommended." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 71:1806 D 15 '46 70w

"M. Andrézel's heartfelt nostalgia for out-moded graces has helped him to make a peculiar and readable story." Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p3 F 28 '47 180w

Reviewed by Eleanor Clark

Nation 164:402 Ap 5 '47 550w

"A period-piece with little sense of period. . . It is gay, witty, charming and far too long; a fairy-tale that doesn't quite come off." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 33:280 Ap 19 '47 250w

"What seems at the outset a story of romantic adventures, redolent of youthfulness and grace but with just enough salt to give it flavor, turns imperceptibly into a horror story handled with such uncanny skill and lightness of hand that its growing menace and tension creep in imperceptibly. A compelling portrait of unmixed and brilliant evil is put before one, not unexpectedly, but all the more forcefully because its lineaments at first had seemed familiar, mildly pitiful, almost benign so that full awareness of its horror and its power is tantalizingly delayed. The prolonged climax is almost unbearably sinister and dramatic and the dilemma in which the two heroines are caught so hateful as to wring and twist the imagination: it is not a book to read alone in a dark house at night." Iris Barry

BLIXEN, KAREN—Continued

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Ja 5 '47 750w

"In 1944, while the Germans still occupied Denmark, a novel was published in Copenhagen with the title, 'Ways of Retribution.' It was an accomplished piece of story-telling, intricate in pattern, yet simply and luminously set forth. With every evidence of confident artistry, 'Pierre Andrezel' (or Isak Dinesen, as we now know her to be) achieved free intensities of romance, mystery, diabolism and horror, all in a delightfully chaste style of Augustan elegance and restraint. The story was a best-seller in Denmark, and should become one here under the more militant title of 'The Angelic Avengers.' . . . Although it is not without poetry and a sense of destiny, of life lived as well as dreamed, Isak Dinesen is dealing in 'The Angelic Avengers' with somewhat coarser material than in the best of her tales, but dealing with it in such a way that this novel will certainly widen the circle of her readers." R. G. Davis

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 5 '47 1400w

"'The Angelic Avengers' . . . doesn't read like a translation. Perhaps the author herself put it into English, a feat that she could have performed without too much trouble, if she is the person there is the best of reasons for suspecting she is. . . Her English in this book . . . is gracefully old-fashioned, in keeping with a gracefully old-fashioned story. . . Danish readers, we are told by the American publisher, were quick to see a parallel with the German occupation of their country. The parallel is unmistakable, once it has been pointed out, and its presence in the author's mind explains why her story has an intensity that seems to focus upon something outside her subject matter. My complaint against this and other novels charged with symbolic implications is that I am not sure how far the symbolism is meant to extend." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Yorker 22:82 Ja 11 '47 500w

"Don't let the slow start, Victorian in its primness, mislead you as it did the Nazi censors. After the first chapter or two, the story gains momentum, never losing pace until the final chapter, when the author slips back into the nineteenth century style of novel writing which he used so effectively in the opening." El. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 5 '47 270w

"The book is certain to have a large public. It is an eighteenth-century damsel-in-distress novel written in beautiful nineteenth-century language by an author who has come to know the twentieth-century triumph of evil and its bitter fruit among the good. Lust for revenge is the bitterest of all. . . The American publishers . . . want to retain the anonymity of the author. Actually, it is of no importance who has written the book. With or without the allegory implied, it is a well-nigh perfect novel—as our grandparents understood the term, and our grandchildren are likely to understand it. 'Credibility' is a poor yardstick for such rare volumes. The perfect novelist is the person who invents the truth. Nor has perfection any age or fashion." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 Ja 18 '47 1050w

Reviewed by D. S. Savage
Spec 178:250 Mr 7 '47 110w

BLIZARD, MARIE. Men in her death. 255p $2
Curl

47-17773

Detective story.

N Y Times p21 Ag 17 '47 110w

"Coherent, light and pleasantly feminine."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 9 '47 60w

"Might have been better."
Sat R of Lit 30:42 F 15 '47 50w

BLOCH, ROBERT. The scarf. 247p $2.50 Dial press

47-30429

Psychological novel of murder and perversion.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 31 '47 50w

"The theme, though repulsive, does hold interest and the central character is believable and even occasionally likeable. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ — Library J 72:1106 Ag '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
S 28 '47 90w

Reviewed by Donald Barr
N Y Times p31 S 28 '47 420w

"Neatly plotted, with one of those endings that are ironic as all getout but not very convincing."

+ New Yorker 23:68 Ag 30 '47 130w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 31 '47 70w

"Abnormal psychology handled without gloves and with spade. Quite unbelievable—but effective if you like this kind of goop."

Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ag 9 '47 40w

BLOCK, LIBBIE. Bedeviled. 217p $2 Doubleday
47-3059

Psychological murder story.

"The situation is one of those specially designed torture chambers which militate vigorously against sense or probability and the manner of it is so intensely emotional that the crowding out of the simplest sense seems reasonable ground for resentment without any suggestion of intellectual snobbery." James Sandoe

— Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 1 '47 90w

"Not brains, not brawn, just emotion, and overwrought at that."

Kirkus 15:81 F 1 '47 90w

"A good stab at a 'suspense novel,' necessarily a little balled up by the current craze for removing whodunit interest; though this one is not billed as such." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28
My 4 '47 200w

"There is a scene in a woman's gym . . . that's worth the price of admission alone. . . Probably it'll seem even better a few months from now—as a Gene Tierney-Dana Andrews special at your local cinema. But it's well worth a sleepless midnight as it stands—right through the breathless moment when Elizabeth meets the real killer." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 6 '47 300w

"Since the author obviously intends her work to be classified as psychological rather than mysterious, there is not much action and quite a lot of semi-precious literary decoration. On the whole, probably a little too tranquil and genteel for the average enthusiast."

New Yorker 23:120 Ap 12 '47 100w

Sat R of Lit 30:30 Je 14 '47 40w

BLOOMFIELD, ROBERT, pseud. See Edgley, L.

BLOY, LEON. Pilgrim of the absolute; selection by Raïssa Maritain; introduction by Jacques Maritain [tr. by John Coleman and Harry Lorin Binsse]. 358p $3.50 Pantheon bks.

B or 92 Bloy, Léon

47-4909

Excerpts from the works of Léon Bloy, nineteenth century French author, editor and journalist. The extracts are from letters, diaries, and from an autobiographical novel.

"The magnificence of Bloy's style has been faithfully preserved. . . It is suggested that the sympathetic analysis and profound study of Léon Bloy by Albert Béguin be read before one takes up the excellent selections from his writings edited by Raissa Maritain." J. T. Clune

+ Cath World 165:280 Je '47 300w

Reviewed by A. N. Wilder

Christian Century 64:797 Je 25 '47 950w

"Absorbingly interesting."

+ Commonweal 46:71 My 2 '47 30w

Reviewed by D. V. Steere

J Religion 27:293 O '47 900w

Reviewed by Albert Guérard

Nation 165:170 Ag 16 '47 500w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 18 '47 850w

"Excellent presentation of all Bloy's few works, gathered, abbreviated and ordered intelligently and sensitively and translated successfully. . . Jacques Maritain's introduction, taken from an essay he wrote on Bloy, is the best appreciation of him in print." Philip Burnham

+ N Y Times p18 Je 1 '47 1100w

BLOY, LEON. Woman who was poor; a contemporary novel of the French 'eighties; tr. from the French by I. J. Collins. 356p $3 Sheed

"The first American printing of this celebrated but little-read late-nineteenth-century French novel about the spiritual development of an almost incredibly wretched artist's model in Paris." New Yorker

"There is much philosophizing along the way, so that the novel does not move with swift and arresting action, but there are passages of great beauty and the character delineation is interesting. The book is saturated with Catholic thought and allusions, but is by no means just a pietistic tract in novel form, for Leon Bloy was an accomplished novelist."

+ Kirkus 15:673 D 1 '47 130w

"An almost unbearably tragic book, immense, somber and heroic, written at the white heat of passion and at the rock bottom of physical and psychological resources. . . Long conversations, clumsily contrived, are slammed into the book like artificially flavored sandwich filling, and overweight the novel's construction. Dated dinner-party prattle, however highbrow, is better blue-penciled, especially when, as in one instance, it runs over forty-six pages. Yet some of the seemingly irrelevant dialogues are profound and essential." Anne Fremantle

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 D 14 '47 1000w

"This story—certainly his best work of fiction—contains stretches of extraordinarily virile religious writing, as well as some estimates of middle-class morality that make the pyrotechnics of, say, H. L. Mencken seem mild social chidings. It would be going a little far, though, to describe the book as a model of finished, imaginative prose."

+ New Yorker 23:132 N 8 '47 160w

Reviewed by H. L. Varley

Springf'd Republican p10B Ja 4 '48 160w

BLUMENFIELD, SAMUEL M. Master of Troyes; a study of Rashi, the educator. 203p $3.50 Behrman

B or 92 Rashi (Solomon ben Isaac)

"Rabbi Shlomoh Yitzhaki, known as Rashi, was a medieval Jewish scholar and educator the 900th anniversary of whose birth at Troyes, France, was celebrated in 1940. This learned dissertation presents his views on education and his work as commentator on the Bible and the Talmud. Half of the volume consists of extracts from Rashi's commentaries, in alternate pages of Hebrew text and English translation, containing his maxims about education." Christian Century

Christian Century 64:495 Ap 16 '47 80w

"Of special value as source materials are the appended selections, in Hebrew and in English translation, from Rashi's commentaries on the Bible and the Talmud." W. W. Brickman

+ School & Society 65:314 Ap 26 '47 200w

BLUMENTHAL, SAUL. Food products. 986p $12 Chemical pub. co.

664 Food industry and trade 47-3488

"Many persons are already familiar with Mr. Blumenthal's Food Manufacturing (1942) a compendium of information about food products, including hundreds of formulas, that was written primarily for persons engaged in commercial food processing or interested in entering the business. That work has been revised and expanded, and republished under this new title. A considerable amount of new material has been added and only a little that appeared in the earlier work has been dropped." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography.

"The chapter on plant sanitation and sanitary food control is timely and particularly informative on insect infestation. The procedures described for the dehydration of fruits and vegetables are quite up to date and complete. Freezing methods are treated in a very cursory fashion." J. H. Nair

+ Chem & Eng N 25:3456 N 17 '47 300w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1111 Ag '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:30 Ap '47

BLUNDEN, EDMUND CHARLES. Shelley; a life story. 388p $3.75 Viking

B or 92 Shelley, Percy Bysshe 47-30070

A new biography of Shelley, written by a distinguished English poet. "Mr. Blunden moves with complete ease and authority amongst the gossip, the lies and the forgeries, and never lets them deflect him or muddy the 'fresh spring and summer and winter hoar' which made Shelley's life. He does not waste time wrangling nor devote disproportionate space to problems merely because they have been magnified (and made stale) by controversy." (Spec) Index.

"The first five chapters of Edmund Blunden's book on Shelley are written in a prose surprisingly slipshod and cumbersome. . . But in Chapter Six the style gradually clears. The final chapter is again inferior. Between these two sections lies the best general biography of Shelley yet to appear. The facts are set at new and effective angles. The people and landscapes are wonderfully alive. The criticisms are brilliant and—in a time when Shelley's abstract manner of writing is in disfavor—warmly persuasive." Robert Hillyer

+ Atlantic 179:138 Mr '47 500w

Booklist 43:184 F 15 '47

"It is the highest praise of this study that no other which comes to mind endows Shelley with such human reality." J. J. Reilly

+ Cath World 165:569 S '47 420w

"Set a thief to catch a thief goes for a poet too: Edmund Blunden, a distinguished contemporary British poet, has written an admirable life of the poet Percy Bysshe Shelley. Sensitive and sensible both, Mr. Blunden worships the invisible sun of Shelley's genius, yet faces the appalling waste of dross and shame which his 'pure flame' left unconsumed." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 46:96 My 9 '47 1350w

"A penetrating and masterly, if controversial, study of one of England's most fascinating figures."

+ Kirkus 14:571 N 1 '46 220w

"While this is a scholarly story of the man and the poet it is a book for the general reader and may be widely purchased." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 71:1805 D 15 '46 70w

BLUNDEN, E. C.—Continued

"To Mr. Blunden the back files of newspapers or even the testimony of a tailor's bills can be as suggestive as unearthly circumstance. . . If his style is a little overburdened with literary allusions his reading of character has the simple insight which charity and poetic understanding combined ensure. . . We may question, too, whether, despite the range of his mind and interests, Shelley was as suited for several careers as he suggests. But he brings out well the manly side of his character and retells his story more humanly, perhaps, than it has ever been told before." H. L.A. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 1 '46
330w

"As a life of Shelley we could hope for little from Blunden's book. As criticism we could hope for everything. And we get nothing, or almost nothing, beyond a sensitive and reliable comment on Shelley's literary affiliations. In a rigorous sense all the Shelley criticism is still to write." Wylie Sypher

Nation 164:373 Mr 29 '47 2100w

"This book is not only a great achievement in itself, but an event in the mental history of the future. Wherever English is spoken or taught, Shelley is with the young a focus and stimulus of enthusiasm for poetry and for politics: to the young they are both modes of imaginative activity, and Shelley thought of them always as closely linked. . . Even by Regency standards Shelley's life was odd, and Mr. Blunden's triumph is that he has made this oddity human, credible and sympathetic; he has neither exalted nor toned down, vulgarised or explained away. By deliberately compressing his work into one volume he has been able to bring out the unity he stresses: every sentence tells, and the book is full of vitality." Humphrey House

+ New Statesman & Nation 31:342 My 11 '46 1000w

"'Shelley: A Life Story' has few defects, and these we should catalogue and then dismiss for its virtues. First of all, Mr. Blunden is beguiled by that vice of the biographer, to give us gratuitous facts because they are surprising or because they are interesting to him. . . Mr. Blunden's temperateness is admirable as scholarship, and it makes for amiability of style; it is the pervading quality of his book even when he most would love enthusiastically. The chief virtues of this new biography lie in the correction of certain mistaken emphases in Shelley's character." Mark Schorer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
F 2 '47 2100w

"There are a few, tantalizingly few, fresh remarks about Shelley's poetry. . . But one demands more of another book about Shelley than a scattering of aperçus. This biography was not needed, but what is needed is a thorough re-examination of Shelley's theory and practice of poetry." F. O. Matthiessen

N Y Times p5 Ja 5 '47 1100w

"Blunden, himself a poet, brings the Shelley legend down to earth by investigating Shelley's purely English heritage more thoroughly than has been usual and by relating the poems closely to the poet's life. The intellectual and biographical facts thus uncovered refute the notion, as Blunden says, that Shelley was 'a kind of mimosa, unable to belong to the struggling world of men.'"

+ New Yorker 22:98 F 8 '47 80w

"The book has value because Mr. Blunden has invested Shelley and his ideas with a freshness of meaning for the reader of to-day." I. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Mr 2 '47
270w

"To pass any considerable time in Shelley's company is to be persuaded, as Mr. Blunden says, 'that in intellectual or in active life there was little that was not at his command.' This straightforward biography may not please those who like food highly seasoned, but nowhere else is Shelley's story presented more concisely, more accurately, or more convincingly." Arnold Whitridge

+ Sat R of Lit 30:18 My 17 '47 750w

"It is a very great gain for us to have Shelley's life written by a poet and scholar able to discount the tradition of an inspired idiot and his paper boats. . . This exciting and quick-moving story was written more for the general reader than for Shelleyans. Except for its lack of references, footnotes and bibliography it gains from the limitations imposed upon it. There are enough books already about Shelley the philosopher and his debt to Godwin; Mr. Blunden was wise not to worry this particular bone. Again, it is more appropriate in a biography to furnish the time and place of composition, rather than to use the poems themselves as food for literary criticism. But the first is so well done that we begin to wish for the second." Phoebe Pool

+ Spec 176:536 My 24 '46 800w

Spring'd Union p6 S 3 '47 120w

"This new biography has been greeted in England as the first really satisfactory life of England's great romantic poet. U.S. critics should agree that, though Newman Ivey White's trenchant and scholarly two-volume Shelley (1940) has more information, Edmund Blunden's book has all that's necessary for a solid interpretation. A very fair poet himself, Blunden writes of Shelley devotedly, but with the ease and savor of long personal familiarity."

+ Time 49:108 Ja 13 '47 1200w

"We may be grateful to Mr. Blunden for a very living biography. That he should bring to the telling of this 'Life-Story' sympathy and intuition was consonant with his gifts, and no more than might have been expected. But the reader will be especially grateful for what he was perhaps less likely to take for granted, the fine narrative talent that keeps the story moving."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p210 My 4 '46
3350w

BLUNDEN, GODFREY. Room on the route.
327p $3 Lippincott

47-491

Novel based on everyday existence in Moscow during the war. "The author, partly through the eyes of a young man of the American Embassy who becomes involved with a group of old-line Bolsheviks, observes the behavior, under almost unbelievable stress, of intellectuals, factory workers, small bureaucrats, spies, soldiers, big shots in the Communist hierarchy, and the ever-present N.K.V.D." (New Yorker)

"The pictures Mr. Blunden gives us of courage, endurance, and dedication, of how the early certitude of the Revolutionaries collapses under the fear and the torture of the inexorable and impersonal State, are strong and vivid pictures no one of us can readily forget. For its human touches and its terse and mounting action, this novel is certainly exceptional." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 179:146 My '47 330w

Cath World 165:286 Je '47 200w

Reviewed by George Dillon

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 2 '47
270w

"Frankly I found it difficult and dull."

— Kirkus 14:623 D 15 '46 180w

Reviewed by W. A. Kalenich

Library J 72:319 F 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 116:35 Ap 28 '47 470w

"This dramatic and controversial novel has breadth and scope and depth. Whatever one's intellectual or political reaction to it, one is excited by its picture of clashing temperaments and philosophies." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Mr
9 '47 1200w

"The tale is little more than a series of ill-formulated mumbblings of discontent. There is little action in the book. Such as there is is violent and brief and of obscure and doubtful significance. . . Mr. Blunden was in Russia during the fighting around Stalingrad. This novel in no way indicates that he is aware of the ideas, energies, or moralities which must have been in conflict everywhere then." Lawrence Lee

— N Y Times p12 Mr 9 '47 650w

"Mr. Blunden is not yet a first-flight novelist, but he writes with sensibility and an alert intelligence. He is horrified by the men in the Kremlin, but the profound pity for the common people that pervades the book marks him as a compassionate Russophile. An important as well as a deeply moving piece of work."

+ New Yorker 23:93 Mr 1 '47 160w

"A gripping story and a grim exposure of the terror under which citizens of any statist government live." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 4 '47 700w

"To the border guards who overlooked Blunden's notebook, the American reader owes a certain debt of gratitude. For he has converted these notes into a tense, skillfully-told story which conveys more about life in a police state than a dozen learned political treatises." John Fischer

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 Ap 5 '47 1000w

"A Room on the Route is the best novel on Russia since Arthur Koestler's Darkness at Noon, though Koestler's book is still much the better. . . . No Russian could write so honestly, and so far no Western visitor to Russia during the war has drawn such good fiction from his experience."

+ Time 49:99 Mr 3 '47 800w

"An interesting novel with a frank political thesis." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 36:768 summer '47 230w

BLYTTON, ENID. Mystery of the burnt cottage; the first adventure of the five find-outs and dog; il. by J. Abbey. 160p $2 Wayne L. McNaughton, inc, Box 4033, Village station, Los Angeles 24

46-8615

Mystery story for young readers.

Reviewed by V. W. Schott

Library J 72:82 Ja 1 '47 40w

"Buried treasure, favorite theme of 'juvenile mysteries,' has been so overdone I had almost stopped reading them when this different, delightful one came along. Gay and thoroughly childlike, it is a real detective story so readable that parents who bring it home for a ten-year-old may carry it off to finish for themselves." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 27 '47 320w

BLYTTON, ENID. Valley of adventure; with il. by Stuart Tresilian. 269p $2.50 Macmillan

47-4138

Adventure story for children of ten to fourteen. The two boys and two girls have appeared in other stories by this English author. In this book the children board the wrong plane and are landed in a hidden valley in an unknown country, from which they are later rescued by their friend Bill, of the secret service.

Kirkus 15:100 F 15 '47 90w

"Good mysterious atmosphere, characters quite interesting, but story is less well done than the others. Children's conversations and repetitions of Kiki the parrot become tiresome. Situation in beginning and later developments seem most improbable." J. E. Lynch

+ — Library J 72:1040 Jl '47 110w

"As usual, it is kept lively with the talk of the children, so natural that their wild adventures slip down without question." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 S 28 '47 230w

"This is escape fiction for children, neither skillful nor well-written, but full of action and so adequate in its field." Marjorie Fischer

N Y Times p27 Je 22 '47 160w

BODLEY, RONALD VICTOR COURTENAY.

The quest. 368p $3 Doubleday

915 Asia—Description and travel 47-2681

"After having attained tranquillity among Arabs in the Sahara Desert author continues his quest for peace of mind in order either to find a better answer to the reason for life or to be convinced that his present achievement is in itself the answer. The quest takes him to Java, China, Japan and Manchuria after the 'incident' of 1931, the islands of Saipan and Yap and to Japan again as professor of English for a year in a Japanese university." Library J

Reviewed by D. M. Weil

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Je 1 '47 410w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 46:170 My 30 '47 1100w

Kirkus 15:91 F 1 '47 150w

"Purpose of the book as outlined in introductory chapter seems only partially realized as the reader's interest centers on people and places visited rather than on any philosophical observations of author. Recommended for limited purchase." H. P. Bolman

Library J 72:455 Mr 15 '47 130w

"The Quest' should be read, not as Mr. Bodley seems to have intended it, as an intimate study of Orientals, but as a first-rate travel book with amusing sketches of individuals (usually Europeans), views of temples and jungles, opium houses and geishas, and the thousand and one other exotic features that make up Asia. His sense of humor is unfailing and accounts of reading Jane Austen to forty Japanese schoolboys who knew no English, being forcibly shaved in honor of the Rising Sun, a public seduction, and exploding millet wine will bring more than a plain smile." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 My 11 '47 600w

"As a traveler recounting what he has seen and done, Mr. Bodley is admirable. He does not take himself very seriously even when he is trying to make a point of the uniqueness of his experiences. . . . In addition, he writes in a simple and direct narrative style that succeeds in communicating an illusion of reality. If Mr. Bodley had been content to make his book only a somewhat superficial story of pre-war travel it would be difficult to find anything to criticize in it, other than the occasional out-cropping of a patronizing air toward what he insists on calling the 'little men.' But he has embarrassed himself with the 'quest' of his title and a feeling that he must interpret the Orient to the Occident. One wearies a little of Mr. Bodley's pausing before each new step on his way to wonder if this will at last reveal what he is seeking." J. J. Espey

+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 6 '47 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p671 D 27 '47 900w

BOEHME, JAKOB. Way to Christ; in a new tr. by John Joseph Stoudt; with a foreword by Rufus M. Jones. 254p $3 Harper

149.3 Mysticism 47-4175

A new translation of seven "tracts" or treatises on the elements of the spiritual life by the German shoemaker mystic (1575-1624). Selected bibliography.

"Boehme repels most modern readers by what seems the extravagance of his claims to amazing private visions and direct heavenly dictation of his writings and by the apocalyptic obscurity of his style. Yet his influence has been permanent and pervasive. The seven tracts which were collected under the above title soon after Boehme's death exhibit none of these questionable qualities. If one who is not a confirmed 'Behmenist' may venture to say so, they show Boehme at his best. . . . Tract seven, 'Of Divine Prayer,' written in the last year of Boehme's life and left unfinished, gives profound counsel on the nature and method of prayer and was designed to conclude with prayers suited to a man's various activities through each day of a week, but the author got only as far as Tuesday. Incomplete as it is, this tract is one of the towering monuments in the literature of devotion." W. E. Garrison

BOEHME, JAKOB—Continued

+ Christian Century 64:852 J1 9 '47 900w

"To the lovers of the literature of religious mysticism: this new translation of Jacob Boehme's classic will come as a delightful surprise and great comfort. Dr. Stoudt has admirably rendered the archaisms and oddities of Boehme's style and thought into readable English." K. M. Chworowsky

+ Churchman 161:19 J1 '47 160w

Reviewed by E. E. Aubrey

Crozer Q 24:373 O '47 350w

BOEKE, JULIUS HERMAN. Evolution of the Netherlands Indies economy. 180p $2.50; pa $2 Inst. of Pacific relations

330.991 Netherlands Indies 47-17557

"Written by Professor Boeke during his internment in World War II. His book is characterized by Frans H. Visman in the foreword: 'Its subject matter ranges from a historical retrospect upon the forces that have shaped the economic policies of the Netherlands Indies Government to recent changes in the agrarian, trade, and labor policies of both Government and private enterprise. Its special significance lies in the intimate manner in which the author connects basic factors in the support of the colony's economic structure with a vital concern in the ever changing influences that determine the welfare of every section of the population. To those who are in the habit of regarding the statistics of foreign trade, of investment, and of government revenues as sufficient indications of the territory's prosperity or the lack of it, and to those who tend to discuss the burning social and political questions that agitate the Indies as though they were unrelated to questions of world trade, of public finance, or of the social composition of the population—to all such this book may be recommended as holding up the mirror to a reality that is far from simple or easy to appraise.'" (Geog R) Index.

"The reader will find in this volume no startlingly new facts or conclusions but a very thorough and scholarly analysis of a process that has had its parallel in almost every major area of the Far East. As in all these Eastern areas, it becomes clear that economic progress is conditioned on appropriate changes in cultural institutions, and particularly upon a solution of the population problem. Professor Boeke has done an excellent job both of setting forth these problems and of describing attempts to deal with them." H. A. Simon

+ Am J Soc 53:69 J1 '47 500w

"This study gives an excellent analysis of the extensive and thoroughgoing intervention by the East Indies Government in the economic life of the country. It also presents a carefully reasoned justification of this policy. All persons responsible for economic policy in backward countries will profit greatly from a perusal of this study." Amry Vandenbosch

+ Ann Am Acad 252:148 J1 '47 400w

Foreign Affairs 25:708 J1 '47 30w

Reviewed by R. L. Pendleton

Geog R 37:514 J1 '47 290w

Reviewed by S. E. Clough

Pol Sci Q 62:471 S '47 550w

BOGUE, ROBERT HERMAN. Chemistry of portland cement. 572p il $10 Reinhold

666.9 Cement 47-20235

"For the cement chemist, written from point of view of the research chemist concerned with the chemical problems of the industry—the chemistry of clinker formation and the chemistry of cement utilization. It covers chemical and physical structure, hydration, setting, physical properties and applications of cement. It is a complete treatise written by one of the world's authorities on cement. Contains an adequate history of the cement industry. Chapter references. Illustrated." Library J

"For more than twenty years, Dr. Bogue has been the research director of the Portland Cement Association Fellowship at the National Bureau of Standards. . . In connection with his work, he has kept in close touch with the developments in cement chemistry around the world. The scientific information acquired in this way is the basis of the most recent, and one of the very good, books in his field of research. . . There are many points about the manufacture and use of cement that are highly controversial. Consequently, the book contains some statements that could be challenged, or at least modified." J. C. Witt

+ Chem Eng 54:278 D '47 800w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:813 My 15 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:28 Ap '47

"The scope of this book is greater than the title announces, and includes historical and explanatory material which gives useful perspective to the principal subject. The technical information could be more tersely stated than it is here."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:315 S '47 240w

BOHANON, PAUL. The wind and Arabella; pictures by Janice Holland. 70p $2 Oxford

47-30920

Arabella was made of strands of raffia, dedicated to tying up plants, and she objected to being called a doll. But when Lucy went to visit her Aunt Phebe, Arabella had some different ideas. She was quite content to go home in Lucy's suitcase. For ages eight to ten.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 9 '47

120w

Kirkus 15:503 S 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Sussdorff

Library J 72:1473 O 15 '47 70w

"With quiet drollery and understanding of how little girls feel about dolls, this tale of a garden doll deals with unexpected adventure."

M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly R p6 D 28 '47 230w

"There are the makings here of a better story than actually comes from the solid, unbroken pages of print and prosiness. Children like conversation, humor and pictures in a book. 'The Wind and Arabella' offers little of these; but the paper jacket by Janice Holland is a beauty." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p37 N 2 '47 150w

BOHME, JAKOB. See Boehme, J.

BOISEN, ANTON THEOPHILUS. Problems in religion and life; a manual for pastors; with outlines for the cooperative study of personal experience in social situations. 159p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

253 Pastoral work

46-7910

"Anton T. Boisen is a familiar name in the field of pastoral counseling. His rich experience of twenty-odd years has been carefully sifted, compiled, and arranged in practical outline to assist the average pastor in grasping a better understanding of the people to whom he ministers by learning to read them as 'living documents.' The first division of his book, comprising three chapters, acquaints the reader with methods for obtaining information concerning the total background of a parishoner's life. The procedure is outlined in detailed steps including the community, the home, and the individual's case history. The records required might seem voluminous, but the adaptation of the materials to local needs would prove of inestimable help in effective pastoral ministry. The second division of the book explains the common types of maladjusted people. . . The last division of the book deals with general problems a pastor faces in a normal counseling ministry." (Crozer Q) Bibliographies.

"Drawing on a fund of practical experience and technical skill, Mr. Bolsen offers both minister and laymen a compact summary of the task of the church and its leaders in the immediate problems of community life—and he writes as one who believes that there are resources equal to any task." M. H. Bro

+ Christian Century 64:15 Ja 1 '47 700w

"The problems which the minister faces in dealing with the underprivileged, the pressing aspects of moral reconversion in the postwar aftermath, and the impelling need of social action in sharing our religious expression with others are challengingly if not disturbingly presented to one inclined to routine religion here-on-out. The minister prospecting to enrich his field of service, will strike pay dirt if he investigates for himself Problems in Religion and Life." J. H. Ivey

+ Crozer Q 24:180 Ap '47 700w

BOLITHO, HECTOR. Command performance; the authentic story of the last battle of Coastal command, R.A.F. 262p il $3 Howell, Soskin

340.544 Great Britain. Royal air force. Coastal command. World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations 46-8184

War diary of an English author who joined the RAF coastal command early in the war. The diary covers the time from just before D-Day to some months after victory in Europe.

Foreign Affairs 25:698 Jl '47 30w

"It is doubtful if the author bothered to re-write or polish his prose. Book suffers from repetition but adds another square to the pattern that spelled victory for the allies." J. H. Berthel

Library J 71:975 Jl '46 100w

Spring'd Union p3 Ap 21 '47 220w

BOLLINGER, LYNN LOUIS. Terminal airport financing and management. 385p $4.25 Harvard univ. Division of research

629.136 Airports A46-5382

This volume surveys "the interrelated problems that grow from the privately owned airlines, the publicly owned airports, and the need for an adequate public policy in transportation. . . The volume is a product of the Division of Research of the Graduate School of Business Administration at Harvard University. The data on which the study rests were accumulated from operating terminal airports, and it is supplemented by careful analysis." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

Reviewed by C. B. Hagan

Am Pol Sci R 41:154 F '47 380w

"The book fills a definite need in the literature on air transportation, for altogether too little has been written on the subject of airport operation. By calling attention to the unsatisfactory condition of airport financial records and cost data, the authors have undoubtedly contributed to the ultimate remedying of the situation." Gilbert Goodman

+ Ann Am Acad 249:202 Ja '47 240w

Library J 71:1051 Ag '46 80w

"The study is a thorough presentation of a perplexing and critical problem in commercial aviation. The problem is well stated, and the solutions suggested, while not necessarily conclusive, are well reasoned and provocative."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:48 Mr '47 260w

BOLTON, IVY MAY. Son of the land; il. by Lorence F. Bjorklund. 211p $2.25 Messner

46-8398

Novel for older boys and girls about an English youth, who though born a serf, fought on the side of his master in the days of Wat Tyler's rebellion.

"An absorbing story. . . It could not be easy to make the complex causes and significance plain in such a story, but Ivy Bolton has given a vivid picture of some of the living conditions of the age."

+ Horn Bk 23:119 Mr '47 150w

"Good adventure, and a background that has not been hackneyed."

+ Kirkus 14:389 Ag 15 '46 120w

"Vivid and well written; for junior high school age." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 72:168 Ja 15 '47 80w

"Modern-minded young people, bred in the idea that it is not ignoble to fight for liberty, may not find Roger's loyalty so admirable as did his master. They will, however, enjoy his adventures, which although marred by far too many coincidences, are moderately entertaining." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p31 Ja 19 '47 160w

"The story lacks subtlety and Roger has almost unbelievable honor, courage, and wisdom for a sixteen-year-old boy; but it is fast-moving and dramatic and the background is convincing." R. A. H

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ja 18 '47 160w

Wis Lib Bul 43:41 F '47

BOLTON, MRS MURIEL ROY. Golden porcupine. 408p $3 Doubleday

Louis XII, king of France—Fiction

47-31271

Novel based on the life of the handsome Duc d'Orleans, who traveled a long and winding course before he finally became Louis XII of France.

+ Kirkus 15:438 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Mrs. Bolton's writing doesn't match Mr. Costain's for pace and sustained vitality, but she has carried off a complicated story well. 'The Golden Porcupine' has the ring of historical authenticity." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p14 S 28 '47 470w

Reviewed by James Edin

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 30 '47 100w

"Before the end of the first chapter one realizes that Miss Bolton is not just another writer who knows the recipe. 'The Golden Porcupine' holds its reader not by mere vigor or brush effects but by deft construction and grace of style. This deftness of technique is well illustrated by the opening chapter, which, with admirable dexterity, succeeds in accomplishing three things crucial to the story. . . The artistry of this first chapter pervades and illumines the entire novel, which, replete with stirring incident though it be, owes its distinction not to its story but to the easy grace with which it is told." George Genzmer

+ Sat R of Lit 30:18 O 4 '47 850w

BOMBAL, MARIA LUISA (MRS FAL DE SAINT-PHALLE). House of mist. 245p $2.75 Farrar, Straus

47-2411

Combination of psychology, fantasy, and mystery, the scene of which is South America. The central character is Helga Viana, who, because she knows her much loved husband is still devoted to his dead first wife, attempts to create a dream life for herself.

Booklist 43:290 My 15 '47

"A curious fey-adolescent exercise, a stormy visit made by Heathcliff to the brothers Grimm. It is told by the wide-eyed product of a Great Love who is infernally gentle and coy, confiding and emotionally unkempt." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 9 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:13 Ja 1 '47 150w

"Recommended." Jayne Doughman

+ Library J 72:462 Mr 15 '47 70w

"A tender, sentimental, romantic novelette of the age of sentiment and sensibility that is past—until a gifted writer makes it present." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ap 13 '47 550w

"Dexterous, amoral, delicate, and at times the least bit silly, this book—like most thoroughly romantic novels—holds little conviction in story or in characterization. Its power to attract, its compulsion, its charm, are mainly verbal. Generally this verbal appeal is well sustained. Yet there are a few discomfiting touches, both in the eerie and in the romantic intentions. The terror evoked by such paraphernalia as mist and dreams and visions and premonitions, for example, is at its most urgent, more literally than literal. It is an effect never so much derived from situation and character as imposed upon them by the first-person narrator's somewhat exclamatory tone. Miss Bombal's heroine dwells far too steadily on her raptures—and her fears." Richard Sullivan

BOMBAL, M. L.—Continued

N Y Times p18 Ap 13 '47 470w

New Yorker 23:105 My 10 '47 120w

"A somewhat dated and unreal romance. . . Latin critics praise the magic of Miss Bombal's style, which unfortunately does not survive her unwise decision to write directly in English." A. B.

— San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 20 '47 50w

"Time is all out of mind in 'House of Mist.' . . At the drop of a thimble adult characters are catapulted back into childhood or, with a faithful reliance on destiny, vault into the future. This device can, of course, be dealt with admirably, but it demands a logical, neat sense of contrivance that is lacking here." C. M. Brown

— Sat R of Lit 30:22 My 3 '47 410w

BOND, FRED. Westward how, through the scenic West; how, where and when to go, what to see, and how to shoot it. 324p il maps $6.95 Camera Craft pub. co, 376 Sutter st, San Francisco 8

917.8 West—Description and travel 47-4828

"Tucked away in a pocket in the book's back cover is a 'Route Selector Map,' which will come like manna to the motorist lost in the wilderness of highway maps and chamber-of-commerce literature. The selector shows five routes, ranging from an 8,870-mile, fifty-five-day great circle, to a twenty-day, 3,525-mile jaunt; plus four variations. The motorist can take his pick as is, or tailor a trip to fit his time, funds and the stamina of his vehicle. A help to this decision are the chapters on each state. Here, lavishly illustrated by the author are capsule, World Almanac-style histories, a once-over of the natural wonders and the cities, detailed instructions on how and when to photograph each, and an objective report on the state's weather." N Y Times

"Mr. Bond must be forgiven his title, and his patronizing approach to his readers and subject because in 'Westward How' he tells in great detail exactly what a tourist needs to know to plan a trip into and out of the vast area west of a line drawn from the Dakotas to Texas. . . Mr. Bond is a better photographer than a writer. His pictures will inspire more 'westward-hoing' than his paragraphs." P. J. C. Friedlander

N Y Times p19 Jl 20 '47 550w

Reviewed by R. L. Neuberger

Sat R of Lit 30:35 O 4 '47 400w

"This is primarily designed for the camera fan, which includes practically every tourist these days, with tables of suggested exposures, examples of what can be done with cameras in the West, and descriptions of scenic wonders with advice on their comparative sight-seeing worth. Those traveling without cameras, as well as those with them will be pleased by the wealth of information on the West and the gorgeous pictures." R. F. H.

+ Springfield Union p5 Jl 21 '47 180w

BOND, RAYMOND TOSTEVIN, ed. Famous stories of code and cipher. 342p $3.50 Rinehart

Short stories—Collections 47-3831

Contents: The puzzle lock, by R. A. Freeman; The great cipher, by M. D. Post; The ministering angel, by E. C. Bentley; The treasure of Abbot Thomas, by M. R. James; QL 696 .C9, by Anthony Boucher; The gold-bug, by E. A. Poe; The adventure of the dancing men, by A. C. Doyle; The key in Michael, by Elsa Barker; Collaway's code, by O. Henry; The four suspects, by Agatha Christie; The secret of the singular cipher, by F. A. M. Webster; The learned adventure of the dragon's head, by D. L. Sayers; The blackmailers, by Harvey O'Higgins; The white elephant, by Margery Allingham; Uncle Hyacinth, by Alfred Noyes; The stolen Christmas box, by Lillian de la Torre.

Booklist 43:347 Jl 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 3 '47

30w

"A wisely and widely selected collection of short stories which provide mental sport and satisfaction and which derive their solutions from codes, ciphers, or cryptograms."

+ Kirkus 15:223 Ap 15 '47 110w

"Mr. Bond's fine job of selection renews one's faith in anthologies." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Je 22 '47 190w

"The aficionado should linger on Mr. Bond's introduction, which manages to be both sprightly and informative." James McBride

+ N Y Times p14 Je 15 '47 100w

New Yorker 23:68 Jl 12 '47 100w

"Many of the stories are reasonably familiar; but they assume a fresh interest when placed together and compared from this new viewpoint, and illuminated by Mr. Bond's informative and often provocative comments. It's a book assured of a permanent place on the select shelf of Grade-A specialized anthologies." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Je 29 '47 170w

"Puzzlers' paradise."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 Jl 26 '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:120 Jl '47

BONI, MARGARET BRADFORD, ed. Fireside book of folk songs; arranged for the piano by Norman Lloyd; il. by Alice and Martin Provensen. 323p $3.95 Simon & Schuster

784 Folk songs 47-31480

Words and music of 147 folk songs, hymns, work songs, etc. arranged under the headings: Ballads and old favorites; Work songs, English and American; Marching songs and songs of valor; Christmas carols; and Old hymns and spirituals. Almost every one has a brief historical description, and all are illustrated in color.

Booklist 44:146 D 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p3a D 3 '47 150w

"This well-named book is the pleasantest, jolliest book of songs seen in many a day." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 29 '47 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:449 N '47 120w

Kirkus 15:573 O 1 '47 120w

"Mrs. Boni comes at her subject less solemnly than some, and the result is all to the good. Her purpose, quite simply, has been to assemble a group of songs which people might really enjoy singing together. Tackling this kind of job always poses problems. No compiler wants to gather the same old songs over again. Yet when you set out to do a collection for people to sing you're up against just that trouble; most of the songs must be songs people know. Mrs. Boni has managed her task admirably in this respect." J. H. Jackson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 O 19 '47 1100w

Reviewed by W. G. Tyrrell

N Y Times p56 N 23 '47 440w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:154 D 6 '47 60w

"In a book like this, to be sure, you can never include all that each individual wants, and everyone will miss some pet song or other. As you'll find, however, for the most part the ones you'll miss are those you can find elsewhere. This is a good cross-section lot, no two ways about it. And if you choose, now and then, to disagree with Mrs. Boni on what is properly folk song . . . well, perhaps the characteristics of folk song can actually be spotted before a song is very old. . . One of the best things about the volume is the spirited, colorful way in which it is illustrated by Alice and Martin Provensen." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 27 '47 850w

"Paging through this altogether delightful book is an exciting experience which sets words and tunes to dancing and singing in your head . . . and it's a moving experience for the lovers of fine music in this country. . . I can find little to criticize and much to praise." Courtlandt Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 N 15 '47 1050w

BONNAMY, FRANCIS, pseud. See Walz, A.

BONNER, MARGERIE (MRS MALCOLM LOWRY). Horse in the sky. 189p $2.50 Scribner

A small Michigan town in 1909 is the scene of this brief novel. The heroine is Thurles Dungarvon, whose mother, born in England of landed gentry, had eloped with a handsome Irish groom and come to America. Thurles had two ambitions: to own a horse, and to be a great lady. After her mother's death she went as a maid to Felicity Lake, and just when she was about to achieve her ambitions, tragedy intervened.

"A slight story, but with characterization that lends a general, if not outstanding, reader interest."

Kirkus 15:408 Ag 1 '47 120w

"Unconvincing situation around which a melodramatic plot develops. Dull reading." E. P. Nichols

— Library J 72:1374 O 1 '47 60w

"Miss Bonner can write with sensitivity and a quiet charm. In spite of some of the fairy-tale touches and moments of melodrama, her story has freshness and an authentic flavor." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p26 O 26 '47 200w

BONNER, MARY GRAHAM. Out to win; a baseball story; il. by Howard Butler. 168p $2.50 Knopf

47-3015

Baseball story for boys aged nine to twelve.

Booklist 43:335 Je 15 '47

"The boys are real in the amusing drawings, and the match games are knowingly described; team play and good sportsmanship, as well as obedience to rules, are seen to be important for winning in this excellent story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:267 Jl '47 120w

"An excellent sport community story."

+ Kirkus 15:284 Je 1 '47 90w

"Full of baseball talk and terms, but manages to be only mildly interesting." E. F. Clift

Library J 72:893 Je 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je 1 '47 400w

"This story will appeal most to boys and girls between 8 and 12. Mr. Butler's drawings are excellent." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p23 Je 1 '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:99 Je '47

BONNER, WILLARD HALLAM. Pirate laureate: the life and legends of Captain Kidd. 239p $3 Rutgers univ. press

B or 92 Kidd, William 47-30368

Study of the life and legends of Captain Kidd, by a professor of English at the University of Buffalo. The author includes not only the factual story of Kidd, but describes the balladry which grew up around his memory, and the tales of buried treasure. Index.

Booklist 43:358 Jl 15 '47

Reviewed by George Dillon

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Ap 13 '47 1000w

Current Hist 12:499 My '47 60w

"Although written in a pleasing, informal style, this book will appeal to a limited number of young people but will be very useful in their collections because of its historical value and the legendary character of the hero. Well indexed." M. F. Cox

Library J 72:738 My 1 '47 80w

"Kidd was also an inspiration to Washington Irving, James Fenimore Cooper, Edgar Allan Poe and Robert Louis Stevenson. Professor Bonner traces exhaustively the influence of the Kidd legends in their work. But those who want an absorbing tale of pirates will have to stick to Stevenson's 'Treasure Island'—or the tall tale of Blackbeard. The present volume, despite its catchy title, is strictly for specialists." M. R. Werner

N Y Times p14 Ap 20 '47 650w

"An absorbing piece of research, very nicely written."

+ New Yorker 23:118 My 3 '47 140w

"What Professor Bonner tries to do in his new book is to strike a balance. He achieves this desirable result, too, and his book is an admirable addition to the shelves of any reader who owns to a curiosity in the matter of freebooters, buried treasure, and such. . . In the end, you get a new kind of examination of the whole Kidd affair in this admirably conceived and executed book, not to mention a lively evocation of the times. And the author's few pages of notes at the book's end constitute an excellent bibliography on his subject."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 17 '47 800w

BONNEY, JOSEPH L. Look to the lady! 220p $2.50 Lippincott

47-2489

A modern version of the Hamlet theme. Roger Kane comes home from war, believing that his father committed suicide a year before. He finds his mother married to his father's brother. Gradually the suspicion arises that it was not suicide after all.

+ New Repub 116:29 My 26 '47 30w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 Ap 27 '47 180w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 Ap 27 '47 190w

"An ingenious promotional job of dressing up a completely uninteresting manuscript." Anthony Boucher

— San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 20 '47 80w

BONTEMPS, ARNA WENDELL, and CONROY, JACK. Slappy Hooper; the wonderful sign painter; pictures by Ursula Koering. 44p $2 Houghton

46-8242

A tall tale from American folklore about Slappy Hooper, "the world's biggest, bestest and fastest sign painter." Slappy's signs were so real that they caused considerable trouble. Birds could not believe his picture of a loaf of bread was not real, and the town bums thought his picture of a stove kept them warm. So Slappy had to be on his way. For ages nine to eleven.

Booklist 43:157 Ja 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 D 15 '46 270w

Kirkus 14:324 Jl 15 '46 100w

"Delightfully retold and most attractively illustrated in color by Ursula Koering. Primarily for nine- to eleven-year-olds, but also useful for older retarded children." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 72:82 Ja 1 '47 70w

BONTEMPS, A. W.—Continued

"His story hasn't exactly the dash nor the completely satisfying climax which the authors brought to their tale of 'The Fast Sooner Hound,' but 7 to 10 year olds with a taste for native extravaganza will enjoy the description of Slappy's painting. . . Ursula Koering wisely hasn't tried to imitate Slappy's style. Her own pictures are free and easy, as full of fun and spirit as is the prose." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p22 D 8 '46 180w

BOOK of knowledge; the children's encyclopedia that leads to love of learning; ed-in-chief, E. V. McLoughlin; educ. consultant Leonard Power, with an introd. by A. J. Stoddard. 20v 1946 & 1947 Standard ed $99.50, de luxe, $119.50; 10v standard $79.50, de luxe, $89.50 Grolier soc.

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries

47-290

"The editors of the Book of Knowledge have designed this set 'to educate while entertaining' and to lead the elementary school child to an interest beyond the immediate reference information required. The set was originally based on an English work published in sections, and a topical arrangement has been followed since The Grolier Society first took over its publication in 1911. Previous printings have been reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, January 1932, July 1935 and January 1941 [Book Review Digest 1941]. . . In the 1946 printing of the Book of Knowledge special attention has been given to science and technology in a new department called Science. It consists of fifty chapters surveying the latest developments in the field and covering physics and chemistry in particular detail. Several of these articles, such as What Are Things Made Of, 1:145, and Looking Inside the Atom, 1:284, first appeared in the 1946 Annual as monographs. . . The publisher announces that revision in the 1946 printing is the most comprehensive since 1926, and a survey of the set shows that there is a great deal of new material." Subscription Bks Bul

"The Book of Knowledge is not an adequate encyclopedia for quick reference use, in spite of its analytic index. Because of its arrangement, the unevenness of coverage, varied treatment of topics and the inclusion of so much material for browsing and entertainment, its chief value lies in its appeal to the casual reader, in accordance with the publishers' primary purpose to entertain the child as well as to instruct him. It is recommended for this purpose and not as a reference tool."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:25 J1 '47 1850w

BOOTH, EDWARD TOWNSEND. Country life in America as lived by ten presidents of the United States. 264p $3.75 Knopf

923.173 Presidents (United States). Country life 47-11256

Collection of sketches presenting ten of our presidents from colonial days to the time of Calvin Coolidge: Contents: John Adams: New England freehold; George Washington: Tidewater plantation; Thomas Jefferson: Piedmont villa; Andrew Jackson: The cotton and the corn; Martin Van Buren at Lindenwald; William Henry Harrison: Ohio alluvial; James Buchanan: Wheatland; Abraham Lincoln: Backwoods farm boy; Theodore Roosevelt: Rancher and country gentleman; Calvin Coolidge: Vermont rock-maple. Bibliography. Index.

Kirkus 15:521 S 15 '47 170w

"Recommended for general purchase. . . An exhaustive bibliography implements a leisurely, pleasantly readable style with authenticity." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 72:1464 O 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 O 26 '47 950w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 30 '47 190w

BORDEN, WILLIAM LISCUM. There will be no time; the revolution in strategy. 225p $2.50 Macmillan

355.4 U.S.—Defenses. International cooperation. Military art and science 46-8052

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"Mr. Borden brings forth one important idea not previously suggested in discussions of the strategy of atomic-bomb warfare. His novel concept is that air bombardment would be aimed at tactical rather than strategic targets; i.e., that a belligerent in an atomic war would feel impelled to destroy his opponent's existing weapons and military forces in being rather than to destroy enemy industries and population. . . The book is marred by frequent errors in stating technical facts. . . Recurring as they do, they give an unfortunate impression of disregard for accuracy. The same flavor is conveyed by casual historical generalization offered without documentation. . . The inaccuracies and the oversimplified and unsupported generalizations are especially regrettable because they detract from the cogency of a central point which is worth making, and which is worth considering by all who are concerned with military plans and military analysis in this era of easy mass destruction—and no one living today can afford to be unconcerned with these matters." A. J. Coale

Ann Am Acad 252:131 J1 '47 550w

Foreign Affairs 25:695 J1 '47 30w

"Convinced that it will be merely a matter of time before rocket developments expose the United States to direct transoceanic attack, Mr. Borden, former Air Force pilot, has written down his thoughts on the strategic implications of the atomic and rocket age. He sees no possibility of escaping an atomic war unless there is a sufficient surrender of national sovereignty to permit the emergence of a real world government." H. A. De Weerd

N Y Times p28 F 2 '47 900w

Reviewed by E. M. Earle

Pol Sci Q 62:467 S '47 380w

"This is the first important book on World War III designed to end the naive but fatal error of basing military preparations on the obsolete patterns of the past war. It was written, not by a general, but by a youngster, Yale 1942, combat pilot, and now a student in the Yale Law School." Gerald Wendt

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 Mr 8 '47 750w

"The eloquent argument of this book is not always well sustained, and is sometimes self-contradictory. In believing that atomic weapons will be directed against tactical rather than strategic objectives, Mr. Borden seems to underestimate the role of the city in highly integrated industrial society, and hence in war, however waged. And even were such use of atomic weapons the best from a military point of view, Mr. Borden would still have to account for the psychological and psychopathological factors entering into the determination of such matters. No one, however, can read this book and remain complacent or indifferent to the strategic and political problems posed by modern war."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:67 Mr '47 300w

BORG, DOROTHY. American policy and the Chinese revolution, 1925-1928. 440p $5 Inst. of Pacific relations; Macmillan

951.042 China—History—Republic, 1912-. U.S.—Foreign relations—China. China—Foreign relations—U.S. 47-4150

"Monograph on American diplomacy in the Far East during three crucial years, with a well-studied survey of the background in events and opinion during that period." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. M. Vinacke

Am Hist R 53:135 O '47 800w

"One of those rarities among doctoral dissertations, a piece of sound scholarly writing which can be read with enjoyment by the non-specialist." G. N. Steiger

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1251 D '47 400w

Booklist 43:356 J1 15 '47

"The record of missionary activities and opinion is exceptionally full and informing."

+ Christian Century 64:853 J1 9 '47 70w

Current Hist 13:35 J1 '47 40w

"Dr. Borg, who is associated with 'Far Eastern Survey' and the Institute of Pacific Relations, has done a thorough job both of historical and contemporary interest in her careful study of American policy during the crucial years of the Chinese Revolution." R. S.

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 17 '47 450w

"Sponsored by the Institute of Pacific Relations and written by one of its erudite research associates, the book goes into the subject in great detail and is no quick way to achieve this greater understanding, but it is certainly not a dull one despite its textbook-like appearance." A. K. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 J1 20 '47 200w

U S Quarterly Bk1 3:283 S '47 280w

BORN, WOLFGANG. Still-life painting in America. 54p 98il $7.50 Oxford

758.4 Painting, American. Still life painting 47-5146

"Illustrated by first-rate plates, this book traces native still-life painting from the Philadelphia school of the Peales (c. 1800) down to the present. . . Of very recent artists [Mr Born limits his selection] to Charles Demuth, Preston Dickinson, and Charles Sheeler—three painters once known as 'The Immaculates' because of their clean, bland techniques. The author restricts himself to these men because their work fits a premise which he develops quite fully, namely, that American mechanization and love of precision point a natural direction for our painters." Sat R of Lit

"This pioneering book is articulate, painstaking and amply illustrated, on a subject close to American grass-roots." W. G. Dooley

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 31 '47 500w

"My own researches in American still life lead me to take issue with many of Prof. Born's statements and points of view, but those differences cannot be set forth here. On the whole, he has done an excellent job of preliminary compilation." Alfred Frankenstein

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 D 7 '47 800w

"I share Mr. Born's admiration for Demuth, Dickinson and Sheeler, but I find many other still-life painters no less American, no less promising for future generations of artists. 'Still-Life Painting in America' is, however, a rewarding book to own and to study." J. T. Soby

+ Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 1 '47 270w

BOSCH, HIERONYMUS (HIERONYMUS VAN AEKEN) Hieronymus Bosch [his paintings] by Howard Daniel (Hyperion bk) 56p $6 Duell

759.9492 Bosch, Hieronymus. Paintings, Dutch 47-30895

"First book in English about the Dutch artist who painted fantastic images some five centuries ago. . . The reproductions of detailed nightmares and kaleidoscopic hordes of nearly recognizable creatures, frequently in color, are strangely pertinent today. From the 'Last Judgment' and the 'Temptation of St. Anthony' the reader will inevitably arrive at a more understanding approach to Salvador Dali and others who probe into the hidden mental processes of this day and age." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"Daniel has produced a text as pungent as the paintings of Bosch. It is refreshing to read in a critical evaluation: 'Fifteen generations of men have come and gone since the Netherlands painter, Hieronymus Bosch, first opened a window into hell and made the voyage around man's unconscious mind in a glass-bottomed boat.'" R. A. Florsheim

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 21 '47 320w

"An excellent addition to any Fine Arts collection."

+ Library J 72:1542 N 1 '47 80w

"A rather cursorily written but well-documented study. Unfortunately, many of the plates in the book require a magnifying glass, because Bosch's major paintings were so crowded with minute movement that they can be reproduced successfully only in full scale. Many enlargements of excerpted detail help considerably, however."

+ New Yorker 23:106 S 20 '47 90w

BOSCO, HENRI. Farm in Provence; tr. from the French by Mervyn Savill [Eng title: The farm Théotime]. 346p $3 Doubleday 47-5762

A farm in southern France is the scene of this novel, which tells the story of two loves: the love of Pascal for his beautiful, tempestuous cousin Geneviève; and his love for the land of his fathers.

Booklist 44:50 O 1 '47

"The excitement of the succession of the seasons, of the mystic communion of man and earth, the beauties of exacting farm work are expressively described and the novel, with its drama, has a certain quiet effect."

+ Kirkus 15:243 My 1 '47 130w

"Written in first person, extensive discourses on inner feelings of chief character sometimes slow down story, but excellent descriptions of persons and landscape reward reader. Hardly a book for the masses, will probably find success it deserves with sophisticated reader." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 72:1033 J1 '47 90w

"In a sense—though perhaps not the sense which the author intended—this is a mystery story. But the mystery does not lie in the quarrels, fevers and eventual murder which punctuate the book. These have no more quality of suspense than the gathering of thunder clouds before a storm. Rather, the mystery lies in the behavior of Pascal and [Geneviève] in their incapacity to reach any understanding. The nightmarish atmosphere in which their love seems to choke itself has no acceptable explanation in Pascal's record of those days. However, for its high poetic tone, completely upheld by the translation, 'Farm in Provence' remains authentic writing. Henri Bosco has re-created in words the same kind of glazing, exotic Provence as Van Gogh brought to life in his painting." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 J1 20 '47 650w

"There is a simplicity in Henri Bosco's writing, a controlled lyrical enthusiasm for the bucolic paraphernalia (peasants, horses, bread, threshing) that is convincingly and austere expressed. . . Altogether it is an old-fashioned kind of novel—leisurely, full of admiration for God's creatures, a little naive. But it is warm and unpretentious; and perhaps the fact that (aside from the suggestion of psychological complications) no intimations of today's tormented world and glaring problems intrude their ugly heads, makes it all the better to read on a long, hot summer day." A. S. Morris

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 3 '47 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 31 '47 350w

"Although his 'style' comes near to being hollow, he has a feeling for language, to which the translator has not been inattentive for the most part, and an eye for the everyday rural scene as well as for natural beauty, but as yet he gives too little indication of creative ability to make the chorus of delight and thanksgiving across the Channel seem anything but odd."

Times (London) Lit Sup p625 D 21 '46 650w

BOSLEY, HAROLD AUGUSTUS. On final ground. 260p $2 Harper

252 Sermons

46-8166

"These 21 sermons to laymen discuss the vital facts of the Christian faith as they bear

BOSLEY, H. A.—Continued

upon the personal and social problems of our age. In a typical sermon, "What authority has the Bible today?", Dr. Bosley says that Biblical illiteracy is one of the startling facts of our contemporary Christianity with consequent weakness in the witness of the Christian churches. He pleads for a renewed interest in and appraisal of the Bible as "the bedrock of Christian tradition and its authority of long-time experience." Churchman

"Through twenty years of seminary teaching in homiletics, this reviewer has often been moved to the humbling yet heartening realization that the rising generation of ministers are better men than his own contemporaries were in their time. This impression is deepened by the reading of this volume of sermons by a preacher twenty-five years younger than himself. Insofar as these sermons are representative of the younger generation, the years ahead may hope to hear better preaching than many of us do now. May God give us more such—then and now." C. W. Gilkey

+ Christian Century 64:432 Ap 2 '47 750w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson
Churchman 161:17 M^o 1 '47 180w

Reviewed by R. E. Keightley
Crozer Q 24:190 Ap '47 150w

"The successive chapters have more continuity than most collections of sermons, and therefore, the book may be more easily be read as a whole."

+ Kirkus 14:548 N 1 '46 140w

BOSTON, GEORGE L. Inside magic [as told to] Robert Parrish, 224p il $3 Beechhurst press

793.8 Conjuring 47-12196

Memoirs of a man who has been an assistant to some of the great modern magicians and is an expert at "illusions." Bibliography, Indexes.

Chicago Sun Book Week p4A D 3 '47 70w

"An entertaining book of memoirs—if you are capable of being entertained by magic."

+ New Yorker 23:94 D 20 '47 80w

Spring'd Republican p8B D 21 '47 180w

BOSWELL, JAMES. Portable Johnson and Boswell. See Johnson, S.

BOSWORTH, ALLAN R. Cabin in the hills; il. by David Hendrickson. 188p $2.50 Doubleday

818 Country life 47-11522

These brief essays on the joys of country living are by an ex-news editor from Texas who lives in the California hills. The essays follow the seasons of the year, and contain not only reflections on country life but also comments on the business of writing for a market, the perversity of nature, and many other observations.

Kirkus 15:496 S 1 '47 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 N 23 '47 130w

"A grand and different book about a city man's experience in the country" H. S. Pearson

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 18 '48 270w

"The point about Bosworth is that he never goes all gushy, as too many writers about country life have done. Yet he doesn't go all ironic, either. . . Part of the flavor of this unpretentious, warmly written little book derives, I think, from the fact that Bosworth is a thorough-going Texan . . . and there is something inherently funny, in a Chaplinesque way, about a cowboy misplaced on a California hillside." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 7 '47 650w

BOSWORTH, ALLAN R. Sancho of the long, long horns; il. by Robert Frankenberg. 206p $2.50 Doubleday

47-11122

Describes a round-up on a Texas ranch and the long trip north with cattle for market and how young Chapo Carroll tried to save the life of a red steer and nearly lost his own.

Booklist 44:116 N 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p5A N 19 '47 180w

Kirkus 15:430 Ag 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by M. D. Read

Library J 72:1693 D 1 '47 70w

"An unusually good story with authentic atmosphere."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:55 N 15 '47 50w

BOTHWELL, JEAN. Star of India; il. by Margaret Ayer. 224p $2.50 Morrow

47-30840

Story of mystery and suspense for grades three to five. Bittu, the heroine, is a ten-year-old Hindu girl, who disguised as a boy finds a stolen medal, called the Star of India, and restores it to her father.

Booklist 44:20 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 21 '47 40w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:361 S '47 70w

+ Kirkus 15:467 S 1 '47 120w

"The author's excellent style, her character portrayals, her knowledge of the country and its people coupled with a good plot, make a story that will add distinction to book collections about children in other lands. . . Recommended." Helen Kremer

+ Library J 72:1197 S 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by N. B. Baker

N Y Times p28 D 14 '47 160w

"A story of India with a vivid, authentic background and an excellent plot."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:48 N 15 '47 20w

Wis Lib Bul 43:132 O '47

BOTKIN, BENJAMIN ALBERT, ed. Treasury of New England folklore; stories, ballads, and traditions of the Yankee people. 934p $4 Crown

398 Folklore—New England 47-11615

An omnibus of Yankee literary lore and culture from sea chanteys to ghost stories, including recipes, and epitaphs from New England graveyards. The material is under the following main headings: Fabulous Yankees; Myths, legends, and traditions; Beliefs and customs; Word lore; Songs and rhymes. Indexes.

Booklist 44:127 D 1 '47

"This is encyclopedic in scope, a book for reference and pickup reading entertainment, for the enjoyment of homely, interesting, indigenous background material."

+ Kirkus 15:620 N 1 '47 90w

"In any collection of folklore there is bound to be a heap of dismal stuff—exaggerations unto idiocy, plays upon words that are dreadful to see in print, 'jokes' that would sadden Puck himself. . . They are to be found in the present book, though the editor has held them, possibly, to the minimum necessary to show this loathsome side of Yankees. For the rest, he has chosen with extraordinarily good understanding of the place and the people, and with decent respect for the reader. If you happen to open the book at a page whereon is a ghastly story in the vernacular, turn quickly either forward or back, and you are quite sure to be rewarded with something better, often with something excellent." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 N 23 '47 750w

Reviewed by E. B. Garside

N Y Times p49 N 16 '47 650w

"A valuable source book, no doubt, but very tiresome as straight reading."

New Yorker 23:139 N 22 '47 60w

"There are many good things to be said about Ben Botkin's newest bargain package of folk-stuff. It is lighter and fresher than its predecessor, the mysteriously overpraised 'Treasury of American Folklore.' The endless array of tall tales and jests is now varied with lore of social custom and word coinage and faith belief and local myth. . . His roundup makes an invaluable and provocative source-book, and a flavorsome and perky reading book. There are other things to be said too. The method that Mr. Botkin employs in building up his folklore stockpile cannot give more than a blurred and impressionistic picture of folklore."

L. M. Dorson

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:9 Ja 17 '48 800w

Springf'd Republican p10B Ja 11 '48
950w

BOTTICELLI, SANDRO. Drawings for Dante's Inferno [with selections from the cantos tr. by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow]. 19p $5
Lear

741 Dante Alighieri 47-5675

Twenty-eight full-page line drawings and some smaller prints, commissioned by Lorenzo di Medici in the late fifteenth century. There are quotations from Longfellow's translation of the Inferno, for each canto represented.

"Possibly popular as a gift book for graduation time; not apt to prove useful in libraries." A. S. Plaut

Library J 72:889 Je 1 '47 70w

"In spite of the dimness and age of the originals, most of the majesty of Dante's conception and of Botticelli's interpretation of it comes out, and the book should be of considerable interest to Dante lovers."

+ New Yorker 23:107 My 10 '47 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 27 '47
200w

"I have never seen the original drawings, so I can only guess that much of the quality of Botticelli's delicate draftsmanship is lost in these reproductions. Even so, the drawings are fascinating in iconography, so imaginative and fresh that they make the accompanying Dante translation by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow seem gray and puffy." J. T. Soby

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:27 Je 28 '47 100w

"Imaginative, powerful and drawn with great delicacy, they are unfortunately reproduced in a reddish ink that obscures their texture."

+ — Theatre Arts 31:82 N '47 60w

BOUCHARD, HARRY. Surveying. 3d ed 647p il maps $4.50 Int. textbook

526.9 Surveying 47-17832

New edition of a textbook first published in 1935 (Book Review Digest 1936), second edition, 1940. "To this edition has been added a discussion of the state systems of plane coordinates and their use; the chapter on astronomical observations is brought up to date, and there is new material on aerial photographs and a description of the tilting dumpy level." (Booklist)

Booklist 43:361 Jl 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1111 Ag '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:58 Jl '47

BOUCHER, PAUL EDWARD. Fundamentals of photography; with laboratory experiments. 2d ed 395p il $4; text ed $3.25 Van Nostrand

770 Photography 47-1713

"College textbook for freshmen and sophomores assuming knowledge of chemistry and physics, offers training in optics and lenses, contrast and meaning of gamma, photographic materials, printing pictures, enlarging, color photography, ultraviolet and infrared rays, X-rays, and motion picture photography. Illustrated." (Library J) Glossary. Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1940.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:530 Ap 1 '47 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:13 Ja '47

BOURJAILY, VANCE. End of my life. 278p
$2.75 Scribner

47-30658

A novel about four young American ambulance drivers with the British armies in Syria and Italy.

Reviewed by Ney MacMinn

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 24 '47
600w

"This novel is featured by clever dialogue, philosophic gropings and a strong flavoring of sex. Not important." G. W. Hill

Library J 72:1106 Ag '47 70w

"It is indeed possible that many of the attitudes to life as expressed will horrify some and that scenes described and expressions used may send an eyebrow or two upward. On the other hand, there is certainly no intention to shock, and the tone of the book as a whole is astonishingly civilized, earnest and illuminating." Iris Barry

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Ag 24 '47 550w

"The narrative at times hits an undergraduate level, but Mr. Bourjaily is often startlingly perceptive, has a true sense of climax, and unquestionably knows how to write. His next book ought to be a lot more than merely promising."

+ — New Yorker 23:66 Ag 30 '47 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 9 '47
700w

"I hope a lot of people will read 'The End of My Life'; I'm sure almost everybody will enjoy it, despite its faults, which are numerous and obvious, and I'm equally certain that Bourjaily is going to write other and better novels. He has done an almost first-rate job with this one." Merle Miller

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:17 Ag 30 '47 700w

BOURNE, PETER, pseud. See Jeffries, G. M.

BOWEN, BETTY MORGAN. Milo's new world; pictures by [the author]. 180p $2.25 Longmans

47-1623

Based on fact but fictitious in form, this story for boys and girls recounts the adventures, good times and bad times, of a group of young people brought over from Europe to America during the war years to be the guests of the United States. Chief among the child characters is Milo, from Belgrade in Yugoslavia, who takes the lead in making friends with other children.

Booklist 43:260 Ap 15 '47

Christian Century 64:528 Ap 23 '47 30w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:215 My '47 130w

Kirkus 15:30 Ja 15 '47 210w

"Highly recommended." M. M. Smith

+ Library J 72:466 Mr 15 '47 80w

"A simple story, founded on fact, it has undertones of heartache that only the happy ending relieves. For it brings home, in terms of actual children living among us, world upheaval, disruption of families and of nations. It shows how strong a character is needed to withstand all this, and how such strength deserves our cooperation." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Mr 9 '47 360w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hodges

N Y Times p30 Mr 9 '47 180w

Sat R of Lit 30:43 Mr 8 '47 90w

School & Society 65:183 Mr 8 '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:83 My '47

BOWEN, ELIZABETH (MRS ALAN CAMERON). Anthony Trollope; a new judgement. 35p il $1 Oxford

822 Trollope, Anthony—Drama 47-848

A short play, written for the radio. It attempts to explain the secret of Trollope's return to public favor. A young soldier on his way to war falls asleep with a copy of Trollope in his pocket. He dreams that Trollope appears to him and together they try to explain the situation by saying that all Trollope's characters were ordinary, "and . . . we long for what's ordinary."

Reviewed by William Brown
Canadian Forum 27:23 Ap '47 190w

"One is greatly in Miss Bowen's debt for a most entertaining little sketch, which provokes thought, and in which Trollope himself is admirably and convincingly presented." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 24 '46 700w

"A half-pocket book; exactly as neat, quiet and sensible as its play." Kappo Phelan

+ Commonweal 46:433 Ag 15 '47 290w

BOWER, MRS BARBARA EUPHAN (TODD). Worzel Gummidge, the scarecrow of Scatterbrook farm; drawings by Ursula Koering. 200p $2.50 Putnam

47-3535

"John and Susan, recovering from whooping cough at Scatterbrook Farm, meet a lively scarecrow named Worzel Gummidge. Worzel is not successful in his attempts to persuade Mrs. Bloomsbury-Barton to take his place in the fields for a while, but he does manage to travel as far as Seashell, where the children are spending the summer holidays. Earchy Mangold, Worzel's wife, follows him, and eventually these two go back to Scatterbrook, having settled Saucy Nancy, figurehead from a sailing ship, on an island looking seaward. . . . For children 8 to 12." (N Y Times) "Based on material originally contained in two books about Worzel Gummidge published in Great Britain under the author's maiden name, Barbara Euphan Todd." (Library of Congress)

Kirkus 15:190 Ap 1 '47 120w

"Miss Bower realizes, as few have done, that there is community of feeling between scarecrows and figureheads, though they can't be expected to appreciate each other's way of life, and the part played in all this by Saucy Nancy, a figurehead stuck up in a garden and managing to save herself from an antique collection and become a sort of lighthouse, lifts the tale out of the grotesque atmosphere in which Gummidge himself moves. The story is written with the care taken in writing for adults, but is in no way over a ten-year-old head." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Jl 27 '47 330w

"The talk in this book is true to the characters, and, in the case of Saucy Nancy, salty as well; but there is very little story and too many aimless happenings. Ursula Koering's illustrations have more discipline and just as much humor." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 27 '47 140w

BOWERS, DOROTHY. Bells of Old Bailey. 251p $2 Doubleday

47-11835

Detective story.

Booklist 44:185 Ja 15 '48

"It is with keen regret that I must report her new novel a seriously disappointing one. . . . The employment of motives from Victorian fiction is inexplicable in a novel whose other characters, like its setting, are observed with a clear and often acrid understanding." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week D 5 '47 250w

Kirkus 15:558 O 1 '47 50w

"The author brings out some effective tricks before you find the lowdown on this romantic British puzzle, with satisfactory snooping by Inspector Raikes, Superintendent Lecky and several amateurs." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p55 D 7 '47 130w

"Skillfully plotted against an authentic English background, the story draws to a climax not wholly unexpected. It proves that a whodunit can be a literate and entertaining excursion into murder rather than a hackneyed, pace-ridden, dialogue-laden cliché." Jack Glick

+ N Y Times p14 D 14 '47 140w

"Raikes' deductive efforts are presented in an agreeable, literate fashion."

+ New Yorker 23:143 N 29 '47 70w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p30 N 23 '47 80w

"Satisfactory."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 22 '47 50w

BOWIE, BEVERLEY. Operation bughouse. 243p $2.75 Dodd

47-31034

The saga of Lieutenant Caesar A. Holliday, who was "90 per cent cloak and 10 per cent dagger," and his wild adventures in the Russian-occupied kingdom of Carpathia.

"As in the case of so many funny 'chase' books, about mid-way the chain of circumstances becomes stretched a trifle taut, the giddy pace slackens. But one readily excuses this for the numerous and often highly amusing incidental scenes dealing with the political situation." J. D. Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S 21 '47 390w

"Doesn't quite hold up. A copy should go to Mr. Gromyko nevertheless." E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p13 S 21 '47 70w

BOWKER, BENJAMIN CUSHING. Out of uniform. 259p il maps $2.75 Norton

355.115 Soldiers. Veterans. World war, 1939-1945—U.S. 46-8182

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Reviewed by R. C. Stone
Am J Soc 53:160 S '47 490w

"The author's perspective is far from being purely philosophical. The book is organized around many statistics, and this gives the reader the feeling that he is not being made the subject of an individual whim but rather that he is being carefully instructed by one who has obtained the necessary information to express an authentic opinion." R. A. Ambron

+ Ann Am Acad 250:169 Mr '47 400w

"The book is full of facts, and figures and hope, but there are no real answers and no conclusions of note. I frankly feel that most of the volume makes laborious reading." J. R. Spector

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 Mr 9 '47 450w

"Well-intentioned and sincere, Mr. Bowker is handing out, for civilians who haven't caught on, the real word on what makes the veteran tick. Formerly a guiding hand in Army Orientation, the author has all the answers. The veteran, you understand, is no freak, he is out of uniform much as he went in except for several years added to his age, a lot of travel, some peevish and some trimmings. The author devotedly decorates these trimmings with statistics, random thoughts and many conclusions." Austin Stevens

+ N Y Times p34 F 9 '47 470w

School & Society 65:183 Mr 8 '47 30w

"Step by step, Colonel Bowker analyzes the so-called 'veteran problem.' The book is, regrettably, late in appearing, and most of the comforting conclusions the folks back home have already found out for themselves. The exposition may, however, be useful for the record."

U S Quarterly Bk1 3:78 Mr '47 230w

BOYCE, JOSEPH CANON, ed. New weapons for air warfare; fire-control equipment, proximity fuzes, and guided missiles; with a foreword by Richard C. Tolman. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 292p il $4 Little

358.4 World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations. U.S. Scientific research and development. Office of. National defense research committee 47-31247

"This volume in the history of Science in World war II deals with some of the most elaborate, novel, and important developments in the modern art of warfare. It describes the work of special divisions of the National Defense Research Committee, which was part of the Office of Scientific Research and Development, on devices to control the behavior of shells, bombs, rockets and other missiles. Specifically, the book covers: 1) Fire control which is described in understandable, not-too-technical terms; 2) proximity or VT fuzes, in which the emphasis is placed on the difficulties to be overcome in achieving both production and acceptance; 3) proximity fuzes for rockets, bombs and mortars, being a record of the work of Division 4 of the NDRC; and 4) guided missiles, in which the general program and major accomplishments are summarized, and the development of several different missiles is described in detail." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by Philip Morrison
N Y Times p38 O 19 '47 750w

"The book is highly technical. It is meant to be history to some extent and also it is meant to serve as something of a guide to men of such diverse occupations—laboratory scientists, soldiers, sailors, production experts—who might be called upon to work together again." L. L.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 16 '47 200w

BOYD, ANDREW KIRK HENRY. United nations organisation handbook. 210p $2.50 Pilot 341.13 United nations [47-30202]

"This book sets out the essential facts about the United Nations Organization. It does not seek to prove that it is perfect; but it does try to show why some kind of world organization is necessary to our threatened society, and how any such organization must draw its real driving powers from the common man." (Pref) Appendices include: The Covenant of the League; The Washington declaration and the Atlantic charter; The Moscow declaration; The charter of the United Nations; A chronology of United Nations activities; A United Nations who's who; Some suggested references; Map of the United Nations. Index.

Booklist 43:236 Ap 1 '47

Bookmark 8:4 My '47

"A far from up-to-date or reliable guide."
— Foreign Affairs 26:226 O '47 10w

"Probably through no fault of the author's—the book was apparently written some months ago—much of the material is grievously outdated. The very title is incorrect, for there is no longer a UNO but, instead, simply the United Nations. Captain Boyd still has the organization doing business at Hunter College; he has Afghanistan, Siam and Sweden 'out' of the United Nations, and he makes no mention at all of Iceland being either in or out, when, of course, all four countries are member nations. There are some useful chapters here, but the purpose of the handbook is totally defeated by the fact that only the well-indoc-trinated student will know what facts are right and what facts are wrong." George Barrett
— N Y Times p19 Je 15 '47 140w

BOYER, MERLE WILLIAM. Everyman's adventure. 172p $2.50 Harper

261 Church. Civilization, Christian 47-3419

"The failure of modern man's attempt to meet the adventure of life without God is the general theme of this book, based on lectures delivered under the sponsorship of the Board of Social Missions of the United Lutheran church." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

"The style is rather straightforward and incisive, while the treatment and subject matter lean somewhat toward the author's particular field of philosophy. There are some very definite recommendations, including the one that every seminarian should have one year in home missions before going into a regular pastorate." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 24:372 O '47 400w

Wis Lib Bul 43:112 Jl '47

BOYER, RICHARD OWEN. Dark ship. 306p $2.75 Little

331.83156 National maritime union of America 47-3066

The book includes and expands two articles which appeared in The New Yorker. The first section takes the SS Marquette thru a wartime Atlantic crossing as a troop ship, and shows the contributions made by the men of the NMU to the war. The second part describes the rise of the NMU, and contains a sketch of Joe Curran.

Booklist 43:324 Je 15 '47

Christian Science Monitor p18 My 7 '47 550w

Kirkus 15:152 Mr 1 '47 170w

"Brilliant writing. Recommended." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:729 My 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by J. A. Wechsler
Nation 165:147 Ag 9 '47 750w

"An expertly and dramatically written work which, regardless of any possible reader's predilection about labor, is certain to hold and to inform." Robert Bedolis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 My 18 '47 650w

"As a book, 'The Dark Ship' is a piece of effluvia; it can now not even be featured in Workers' bookstores because it glorifies men like Curran who have turned out to be renegades to the party. But as a literary phenomenon it is not without interest. It is an exhibit in the gallery of horrors which must be the nightmare of every writer on the party line addressing himself to a non-static subject. Mr. Boyer's awful fate can only be equaled by one of the comrades who sees the party line itself change between the time he has written a serious book and the time it appears in print." M. S. Pitzele

+ N Y Times p25 Je 15 '47 700w

"This is a good book for anyone who desires only a story of the NMU. One will not find here a very friendly attitude toward the other sailor unions. Perhaps this is what Mr. Boyer intended. . . A book like this can be controversial, especially when old-timers begin arguing the merits of two sailor unions. There is no reason why this should start a controversy as long as it is well understood that this is one side of the story and the other side will have to be obtained elsewhere." W. M. Camp

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 24 '47 650w

"When he sticks to the better-known facts about the NMU . . . he is safe enough as a guide. . . But it is not true that the NMU is the collection of labor-day saints and crusaders that Mr. Boyer makes it out to be." Herbert Harris

Sat R of Lit 30:12 Je 28 '47 700w

BOYLEN, MRS MARGARET (CURRIER). Crow Field. 312p $2.75 Doubleday

47-2418

The scene of this psychological novel is a small New England village in which an amateur theatrical company has taken up residence. The narrator, a mid-Western girl who has come to be scene designer, becomes involved in a search for the solution of a mystery, and in the course of her probings of others' pasts we are given glimpses of her own.

BOYLEN, M. C.—Continued

"The average reader will soon balk at the bewildering shifts of the level of narration—from the factual to the symbolic to the metaphysical. Not for him is this savagely alliterate apocalypse. For the devotees of Patchen, perhaps, or for those who retain a taste for Virginia Woolf." Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ap 6 '47
230w

Kirkus 15:40 Ja 15 '47 180w

Reviewed by George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Mr 23 '47 400w

"Anyone who thinks that a Dali canvas should be wired for sound or that the Ancient Mariner would be the perfect dinner guest should be entirely charmed with 'Crow Field.' Readers whose simpler tastes run to a desire to know what an author is talking about will probably leave off after a few pages, pleading sea sickness." Mary McGrory

N Y Times p24 Mr 30 '47 320w

BOYLES, ALFRED. Structure of cast iron.
154p il $3.25 Am. soc. for metals

669.1 Cast iron 47-26750

"Three lectures on the structure of cast iron as determined by freezing and transformation. Attention is given to alloys of hypoeutectic composition. Based on investigations of the author at Battelle Memorial Institute. Many illustrations reproduced for original micro-photographs." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1376 O 1 '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:45 Jl '47

BRACE, GERALD WARNER. Garretson chronicle. 383p $3 Norton

47-4753

A chronicle of three generations of a New England family living in a beautiful old village not far from Boston. The stories of his grandfather's life, briefly; his father's life more extensively; and his own life in detail, are set down by young Ralph Garretson in an attempt to explain how his father came to choose his way of life and why Ralph rebelled against it and chose a different life.

"Leisurely, charming story of three generations." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 180:162 N '47 300w

Booklist 44:16 S 1 '47

Reviewed by M. P. Corcoran

Cath World 166:186 N '47 550w

Reviewed by George Dillon

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 S 14 '47
360w

Reviewed by Margaret Williamson

Christian Science Monitor p16 S 17 '47
330w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '47

Commonweal 46:508 S 5 '47 350w

Kirkus 15:322 Je 15 '47 180w

"You may confidently put well to top of your fiction list. It's good." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:1106 Ag '47 80w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:30 S 22 '47 1050w

"Inevitably, Gerald Warner Brace's new novel will be compared to the books of John Marquand dealing with the Brahmins of Boston. Nor will it suffer by comparison. While Mr. Marquand is the more accomplished storyteller, Mr. Brace, in some respects, has the edge on him in portraiture. There are times when the work almost has the essence of biography and autobiography rather than fiction, a persuasion artfully intended by the author. Concerned with the conflict of ideas, it is a rich and thoughtful book, written with maturity of understanding that holds satire as well as sympathy." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Ag 24 '47 750w

"As the narrative thins down to Ralph's own ordeal, it loses much of its breadth and power, although Mr. Brace's admirably vigorous and exact prose never wavers in its excellence, and he does make some wonderfully cogent observations about education along the way... The fact is that Randall Garretson, philosophical, dilettante country squire striding joyously about his own Arcadia, clasp the dead hand of the past, is a much more interesting human being than his more useful son, and the first third of the book is the best." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 24 '47 950w

"The thing I most like about Mr. Brace, as a matter of fact, is that he doesn't shoot at sitting ducks. He can sight a stuffed shirt with an accuracy that Sinclair Lewis might wish for, but instead of following Mr. Lewis's method of blasting his quarry out of the water, he gets it fairly on the wing, in the cool, sober spirit of a scientist who needs a particular specimen in order to examine its wingspread, coloration, stomach contents, and pinfeathers.

Mr. Brace's book is not a masterpiece by any means, but I enjoyed it thoroughly, and it struck me as being one of the few novels I have read in the past several years that were much too good to be taken up by any of the book clubs." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 23:64 Ag 30 '47 800w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 28 '47
800w

"Mr. Brace has selected a scene, a tradition, which has long intrigued the American imagination. He has drawn men who are believable—recognizable variations on the great New England theme. Whether a certain bloodlessness, a lack of vitality is inadvertent, or whether it is a deliberate comment on the man whose portraits he has sought to draw, is not quite clear." Pamela Taylor

Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 23 '47 450w

Spring'd Republican p10B S 28 '47
420w

"Mr. Brace has written perceptive and beautiful work before, as in The Wayward Pilgrims. But he has never before tackled so ambitious a theme or dug so deep into American life. . . . One of the year's finest novels." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 37:192 autumn '47 400w

BRADBURY, RAY. Dark carnival. 313p $3
Arkham house

47-24598

Short stories dealing with the weird and fantastic.

"Some of the most original and shocking horror writing to have been produced in years appears in this new volume of stories by Ray Bradbury." N. O.

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 29 '47
140w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30
My 25 '47 290w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 22 '47
120w

BRADFORD, ELIZABETH. Let's talk about children. 167p $2.50 Prentice-Hall

649.1 Children—Care and hygiene, Children
—Management Med47-1887

A series of brief informal chapters written for young mothers, discussing the various questions which arise in the care of children. Partial contents: Time tables; Love me—love me not; Ghosties and ghoulies; The dangerous age; Is your face saved; Spare the rod: Habits, mostly bad; The finger of scorn; Blowing off steam; The bookshelf; On living dangerously.

Booklist 44:128 D 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '47

"Additional, rather than required reading." Kirkus 15:327 Je 15 '47 110w

"Subjects range from care of the new baby on the first day home from the hospital to the inspirational values of religion. A good book to precede or to supplement the more scientific treatises on child care and training."

A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 72:1101 Ag '47 110w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 D
14 '47 230w

Reviewed by H. G. Marchese
N Y Times p10 S 7 '47 250w

School & Society 66:254 S 27 '47 20w

BRADFORD, LOUIS JACQUELIN, and EATON, PAUL BURNS. Machine design. 5th ed 283p il $3.25 Wiley

621.81 Machinery—Design 47-972

A revised edition of a textbook for a short course in machine design, which assumes some knowledge of kinematics and mechanics. "We have reviewed the progress made during the last six years, incorporated the significant changes, and eliminated such portions of that edition as have become obsolete. The additions relate principally to the fatigue of metals, modern ideas concerning the nature of friction and lubrication, and special precautions necessary in designing parts made from aluminum, a subject which gained importance through the expansion of the aircraft industry." (Pref to 5th ed) Index.

Booklist 43:225 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:389 Mr 1 '47 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:32 Ap '47

BRADLEY, MURIEL. Affair at Ritos Bay.
188p $2 Doubleday

47-4638

Detective story.

"Her exploration is rather deft and about as deep as a coat of veneer," James Sandoe
— + Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Jl 6 '47
50w

Kirkus 15:228 Ap 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13
Jl 27 '47 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 Je 29 '47 130w
Sat R of Lit 30:34 Jl 19 '47 30w

BRADY, GEORGE STUART. Materials handbook; an encyclopedia for purchasing agents, engineers, executives and foremen. 6th ed 831p $6 McGraw

620.3 Commercial products—Dictionaries.
Building materials—Dictionaries 47-4629

"Essential reference book revised now for purchasing agents, manufacturing executives, foremen and designers. It is indexed by trade and individual names, listing properties, uses, etc. of 7750 materials needed in industry. Part II, 'Elements of Material Economics,' is the result of author's experience in civil and military agencies of the government. Much of the grouping of fundamental data has not appeared in any other book." (Library J) For fifth edition see Book Review Digest 1944.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:813 My 15 '47 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:53 Jl '47

BRAHMS, CARYL, pseud. See Abrahams, D. C.

BRALY, WILLIAM C. The hard way home; a Coast artillery association book. 282p il $3.50
Infantry journal

940.547252 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, Japanese. World war, 1939-1945
—Personal narratives, American 47-26830

"Colonel Braly was Operations Officer for
Maj. Gen. George F. Moore's Harbor Defense

Campaign and became a prisoner of the Japanese when Corregidor surrendered on May 6, 1942. He made the 'March of Humiliation' through Manila to Bilibid Prison, spent some time at Camp Tarlac on Luzon, at Takao, Karenko, and Skirakawa on Formosa and ended his three and a half years of captivity in prison camp at Chenchia-Tun, Manchuria, where an American prisoner-of-war team from General Wedemeyer's headquarters dropped in by parachute on Aug. 16 to set him free. 'The Hard Way Home' . . . is really more than just one man's story. Colonel Braly managed to keep an extensive diary during his travels as a prisoner. . . . His book, therefore, becomes almost a legal record against those officials with whom he came in contact." (N Y Times) Index.

Kirkus 15:414 Ag 1 '47 170w

"No other book of personal experiences has been more fully documented than Colonel Braly's account. And few of the stories have been as dispassionately told." Foster Hailey
+ N Y Times p34 N 16 '47 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 17 '47
750w

BRAND, LOUIS. Vector and tensor analysis.
433p $5.50 Wiley

512.89 Vector analysis. Calculus of tensors
47-4684

"Treatise on the mathematical concepts of vector and tensor analysis with practical applications to such fields as mechanics of rigid bodies, hydrodynamics, electrodynamics, electrical circuits and rotating electrical bodies. Treatment of motor algebra using dual vectors and a complete treatment of integral transformation are offered." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1037 Jl '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:53 Jl '47

BRAND, MAX, pseud. See Faust, F.

BRAND, MILLEN. Albert Sears. 272p $2.75
Simon & Schuster

47-3784

Character sketch of a man of determination and integrity. Albert Sears is sixty-six when the story opens, in 1915. He is buying up Jersey City property, in order to make a life for his illegitimate son, Al. Sears' wife, a cripple, refuses to give him a divorce so that he can marry Al's mother. Trouble over the Negro problem, and trouble over Al's adoption, finally bring on a stroke, and Albert Sears dies as he has lived, a man of grim determination.

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 30
'47 650w

Kirkus 14:309 Jl 1 '46 220w

"Plot is slight, dialogue is stilted and the character portrayal poor except for Albert Sears and his young son. Not recommended." H. P. Bolman

— + Library J 72:960 Je 15 '47 100w

"Artfully simple, tightly written, beautifully objectified short novel. . . . 'Albert Sears' is a tense, honest, finely told story, notable both for its emotional impact and its character portraits. Among the latter, the portraits of the father and son are outstanding; especially the portrait of the son, whose inner consciousness is probed with unusual sensitivity." Jennings Rice

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Je 29 '47
600w

"Mr. Sears' brand of fairness and legal abstractions about who lives where are not closely enough identified with the question of discrimination to help it much. The outcome of 'Albert Sears' avoids rather than explores, the problem. And passion, honest human drama, is so altogether absent from the writing that it is a real strain for the reader to care what happens to anybody on this Jersey City block." H. B. Parker

— N Y Times p21 Jl 13 '47 360w

BRAND, MILLEN—Continued

"Mr. Brand, who writes well and intelligently, underplays his emotional situations with great integrity. The result is a rather static narrative, clearly and firmly written, but oddly lacking in warmth."

— + New Yorker 23:67 J1 5 '47 190w

"Mr. Brand has, in a sense, stacked all the cards, quite deliberately, against himself, for he makes no attempt to beguile the reader's emotions at any time. Never for an instant does sentimentality color the picture which he draws with such economy and clarity. Never for an instant does he make, as has been done frequently of late, cheap capital of a burning issue. 'Albert Sears' is a novel about a completely honest man." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 J1 5 '47 750w

BRANDEL, MARC, pseud. See Beresford, M.

BRANDT, WILLIAM EARL. Do you know your baseball? 121p $1.75 Barnes, A.S.

796.357 Baseball 47-30288

Fifty questions and answers about unusual records and mistakes made in baseball. Each game discussed has a box score included.

Booklist 43:365 Je 1 '47

"The usefulness of the book will be limited to readers who follow the game but might prove useful as reference material where requests for such information warrant its purchase. Physical make-up of book is satisfactory." A. M. Wetherell

Library J 72:895 Je 1 '47 70w

"Some wonderful information is to be had from this new baseball book. Oldtimers will find it as nostalgic as a mustache cup, while the younger fry will find it as entertaining and revealing as an ancestor's diary. It is unacceptable only as a quiz. Perhaps brighter pupils will disagree. If all Bill Brandt's examinations are as tough as this one, I shall have to put in a supply of apples." Harold Kaese

+ N Y Times p27 Je 8 '47 360w

Spring'd Union p10 My 23 '47 160w

BRAUN, KURT. Union-management co-operation; experience in the clothing industry. 259p $3 Brookings

331.188 Industrial relations. Clothing trade 47-31470

"This study traces the rise and growth of cooperative relations between management and labor in the U.S. clothing industry—and analyzes the distinctive ways in which cooperation is possible, and the consequences so far for labor, management, and the public. A formal study for those concerned with labor relations." Booklist

Booklist 44:83 N 1 '47

Christian Century 64:1337 N 5 '47 50w

"This book is a compact, scholarly, and interesting analysis of union-management co-operation in an industry where such cooperation is more commonplace and robust than it is in most other industries. The volume is both timely and important for those who seek to keep abreast of current trends in the highly dynamic field of industrial relations." H. G. Heneman

+ Management R 36:608 N '47 1050w

"Meaty, sober, and authoritative study." Mark Starr

+ Survey 83:357 D '47 600w

BREARLEY, HARRY. Talks about steelmaking. 236p il $3.50 Am. soc. for metals

669.1 Steel—Metallurgy 47-1026

"The inventor of stainless steel, a noted British metallurgist, [has written a book which is] part suggestion, part history, and part criticism of the many aspects of the steel mill. Deals with chemical analysis in the mill melting process, forging, testing, notch fractures, clean steel and 'scrapalurgy.'" Library J

"The book contains a considerable number of English steel-mill expressions—for example, hare track, snooker balls, and the like—which are meaningless to American readers and which should have been defined in footnotes, and there are only 11 illustrations in the whole volume. There is no index, an inexcusable omission in any technical book. As a whole, the book struck us as tiresome in spots but sparkling and interesting in others." F. T. Sisco

Chem & Eng N 25:1148 Ap 21 '47 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

"An easy-to-read, delightful book." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:389 Mr 1 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:18 Ja '47

BREED, CHARLES BLANEY, and HOSMER, GEORGE LEONARD. Principles and practice of surveying; v. 2, Higher surveying. 6th ed 674p il $4.50 Wiley

526.9 Surveying (45-3846)

"Topographic, photogrammetric and hydrographic surveying are the chief topics treated in this standard work. Measurement of stream flow is also treated. Although the number of pages in this sixth edition is the same as in the fifth (1938), there have been important and rather substantial revisions in the material on triangulation, photogrammetric surveying, stream gaging and map projection." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index. For volume I (8th ed) see Book Review Digest 1945.

Booklist 43:293 My 15 '47

Eng N 138:127 Je 12 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:19 Ja '47

BRESLIN, HOWARD. Tamarack tree. (Whitelsey house publication) 435p $3 McGraw

Webster, Daniel—Fiction 47-11149

Historical novel based on the 1840 Whig political rally held near Stratton, Vermont, and addressed by Daniel Webster. The meeting place was on a mountain near a huge tamarack tree. The novel traces the effects of the three-day rally on the inhabitants of the village, showing what happened when the Vermont inhibitions were released.

Booklist 44:108 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Ralph Habas

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 N 15 '47 450w

"There is some unevenness about the book. . . For the most part, 'The Tamarack Tree' is exciting to read, interesting in its revivification of history, and rich in character portrayal." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p28 D 12 '47 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '47

"There's grand reading and a wealth of entertainment and enjoyment in this historical novel."

+ Kirkus 15:376 J1 15 '46 190w

"The many characters are alive, and of their time and environment. Not a serious historical work, but fast-moving, well-constructed, well-written and very readable. Recommended for wide purchase." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 72:1374 O 1 '47 70w

"The Tamarack Tree' is a sturdy, normal growth of plot and incident, adroitly dramatic, but it is not a towering redwood of research, nor is it a formidable family tree of dates and begats. Howard Breslin is content to catch a moment in history and bring it back alive, an admirable goal." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 D 14 '47 270w

"The canvas is broad and the cast is long, and it is only the insistent skill of the author that makes it possible to keep each character in his groove. The result is a rousing good package full of color and sound Americana, tied together with a string of 'E-yahs'—the most gregarious word in the New England vocabulary." Florence Crowther

+ N Y Times p7 N 23 '47 750w

"The device is generally effective, although there is a chance that the author's version of conversation in rural Vermont a hundred years ago is a little snappy for those days, or even for these."

New Yorker 23:135 N 22 '47 120w

"Mr. Breslin has steered a safe course. Because the novel makes no pretense at literary or political significance, it cannot justly be criticized for its manifest shortcomings on these scores. Because the romance and the melodrama are reasonably modulated, the sex held within the bounds of nineteenth-century Vermont, and the familiar details of small-town life accurate and solid, the critic is not tempted to use this novel as text for a lecture on the spurious and factitious romances flooding the market." John Lydenberg

+ Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 22 '47 650w

Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:174 D '47

BRETON, ANDRE. Young cherry trees secured against hares; tr. from the French by Edouard Roditi; cover by Marcel Duchamp; drawings by Arshile Gorky. [56p] $3.75 View editions

841 46-8585

"Edouard Roditi has translated, from among the poems of André Breton, selections representing Breton's work from 1923 to 1944. This volume provides both the Breton originals and Roditi's English versions. Presenting the meditations of the 'classic' surrealist over the past twenty years, Roditi's rendering are both accurate and sensitive." Sat R of Lit

"There is a kind of brilliance of phrase in these poems which is often impressive, but . . . there are places into which it is not always easy to follow Mr. Breton's understanding." Arthur Mizener

Nation 165:50 J1 12 '47 140w

"American horizons have not impaired Breton's Surrealist vision. The fruits of his years as a deraciné are as good as ever—or as bad—according to the inclination of the reader. If in a fragment called 'Fata Morgana' he falls into Steinese repetition, a manner alien to his style, everywhere else he remains true to himself. His poem 'Guerre' presents the eloquence of chaos brimming with somewhat incoherent but violently concrete images of the 'Beast' of war which irritate and challenge every one of the five senses." Anna Balakian

N Y Times p36 Mr 23 '47 750w

"Breton entered the Surrealist movement from French Dadaism. He has been its leader almost continuously, in spite of, or because of, his high-handed manner of leadership. The changes through which Surrealism has passed have Breton's intransigent nature behind them. Breton has, in fact, committed repeatedly what, according to early Surrealist doctrine, is one of the chief literary sins: he has taken himself too seriously. If the movement has now reached a blind alley, it is largely Breton's doing." Louise Bogan

New Yorker 22:121 N 9 '46 500w

Reviewed by Jeremy Ingalls

Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ja 4 '47 470w

BREUER, ELIZABETH (MRS H. V. POOR). Bracelet of Wavvia Lea, and other short stories. 309p $2.75 Sloane

47-11481

A collection of short stories, several of which are here published for the first time. Among the reprinted ones is Pigeons en caserole, which originally appeared in the New Yorker.

Kirkus 15:512 S 15 '47 170w

"The various scenes are viewed with rare detachment and compassion. Miss Breuer carefully avoids any criticism of her people. They speak for themselves or speak to themselves in private misery, private insensitiveness. The effect is dazzling, tantalizing, and guaranteed to disturb or penetrate the least responsive heart." Iris Barry

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 9 '47 380w

Reviewed by Eunice Holsaert

N Y Times p32 N 23 '47 550w

"The stories that have to do with the special agonies of the moderately rich are all very satisfactory, but the title piece—an unusually acute investigation of the Negro problem—is Miss Breuer's major accomplishment. Any number of writers have lunged at the same subject with much less effect."

+ New Yorker 23:132 N 8 '47 120w

"Miss Breuer is at her best in portraying the shallow, sophisticated life of the fashionable beach and the smart hotel. She has unique mastery of mood. . . . Young or old, Miss Breuer's characters seem to move like automata in the groove of some dark, fore-ordained destiny. What most of them need is the exercise of free will and a sense of humor." A. F. Wolfe

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:17 N 29 '47 600w

Reviewed by C. K. Bausman

Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 200w

BRIFFAULT, ROBERT. New life of Mr. Martin. 436p $3 Scribner

47-1622

"Robert Briffault's new novel is a compound of adventure story, social satire and philosophical inquiry. Its subject is England and Europe during the crucial period 1926 to 1936, when the opposition between the fascistically inclined upper classes and the new democratic forces began to crystallize in the form of the Spanish Civil War. On a simple story level 'New Life of Mr. Martin' is about a brilliant and unconventional young Englishman who, because of the freedom that newly inherited millions make possible, travels at will over the globe and hobnobs with chiefs of state, financiers, royalty, cutthroats, shopkeepers and workers." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"Briffault is invariably entertaining on the subject of women: he writes about them not only as an anthropologist and a poet but as a misogynist who is completely fascinated by the enemy. He is, in fact, entertaining on many subjects. He inveighs against the evils of nationalism but shows a kind of inverted nationalism, by no means calculated to induce harmony, in the rude noises he continually makes toward England. . . . But it is hard to imagine anyone taking offense at such out-blowings (or at his blasts at religion and marriage) because it is plain that Briffault is one of the living masters of hyperbole, and what we have here is a case of art for art's sake. And 'New Life of Mr. Martin' is Briffault at his entertaining best." George Dillon

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 9 '47 450w

Kirkus 14:626 D 15 '46 160w

Reviewed by H. W. Hart

Library J 72:319 F 15 '47 90w

"The novel is written in a leisurely, detailed, somewhat old-fashioned style. It is full of complex sentences, strings of adjectives and obsolescent, five-dollar words. Those readers who want their fictional adventures in a hurry may be disappointed by the book. Others will find it a welcome relief from the stuttering prose of so many contemporary writers." Stephen Stepanchev

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 N 23 '47 600w

"There are those who have said before now that Mr. Briffault is no novelist, that his fiction is a vehicle for his political, religious and moral views. Those holding this opinion will have no cause to change it. Long, astounding harangues against the English, against religion, against capitalism, against marriage, still abound. Unfortunately, much of the argument has begun to sound dated. Mr. Briffault, even when he is on the right side, often seems to be fighting the wrong battles." N. K. Burger

N Y Times p16 F 23 '47 850w

BRIFFAULT, ROBERT—Continued

"Mr. Briffault, employing characters as little credible as the fantastic plot, makes use of his enormous erudition, his awareness of the forces that undermine civilization, and his complete ignorance of the technique of the novel to tell us, in painfully unfelicitous prose, what direction he believes we are headed in. Democracy (especially English democracy) is done for, it seems, and Europe can look for hope, if anywhere, only to the East."

New Yorker 23:94 Mr 1 '47 180w

"Mr. Briffault is capable of remarkably fancy writing, but he must be read fully to be fully appreciated. As for attempting to criticize his fantastic yarn, that would plainly be a foolhardy business. . . . What bolder critics will have to say of 'New Life of Mr. Martin,' I dare not guess. But surely they cannot say that it is boring, and they must admit, unless they are monsters of unfairness, that the author of 'The Mothers,' 'Europa,' and 'Europa in Limbo,' is, at seventy, still going strong. Perhaps stronger than ever." B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 30:17 Mr 29 '47 900w

BRIGGS, MARTIN SHAW. Men of taste: from Pharaoh to Riskin. 232p il $5 Scribner

706.9 Art patronage [47-29934]

"Twenty-three essays on people who have influenced public taste in art, concentrating on men—Charlemagne, Cosimo de Medici, Napoleon, and George III among them—who patronized art and artists, rather than on the artists themselves." New Yorker

"Any library should be glad to purchase this notably illustrated book, even if it is not absolutely essential." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:1370 O 1 '47 130w

"Mr. Briggs is factual rather than critical in his approach. Consequently his book leaves one with the impression of a long series of disconnected achievements rather than a slowly evolving cultural pattern." E. N.

Manchester Guardian p3 O 7 '47 180w

"This book disappoints, chiefly because it has been ill planned. . . . The best chapters in this book are devoted to Lords Burlington and Grimthorpe. The latter is a most picturesque figure. . . . His biography has never been written. If Mr. Briggs had undertaken it, or if he had given us an account of the great Continental patrons of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, we could have given it a welcome. The work under review is a piece of book-making unworthy of so eminent a scholar." Roger Marvell

+ New Statesman & Nation 34:177 Ag 31 '47 480w

Reviewed by Granger Ryan

N Y Times p16 Ja 11 '48 650w

"Mr. Briggs, an English critic, begins with a necessarily speculative chapter on Rameses II as the first great art patron, and gets increasingly insular as he approaches modern times. He seems to be in considerable awe of royalty; his defense of Prince Consort Albert as an arbiter of taste, for instance, is a little hard to take. The book is entertaining, though, and well illustrated."

+ New Yorker 23:128 O 18 '47 120w

"The book calls for admiration of the author's assiduity in research and biographical accuracy. It also claims our sympathetic appreciation of the very awkward problems of selection and abbreviation encountered in his ambitious undertaking. These closely packed pages will prove factually informative to the casual reader, but how far they will enrich the scholar's enquiring mind remains to be established. . . . Had his book been entitled Some Patrons and Occasional Men of Taste I should have felt far less inclined to criticize the selection of his studies, for within the narrow compass of each essay he endeavours with scholarly precision to disclose the relations that existed between great patrons and great artists." James Lees-Milne

+ Spec 179:472 O 10 '47 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p440 Ag 30 '47 1100w

BRIGHAM, CLARENCE SAUNDERS. History and bibliography of American newspapers, 1690-1820. 2v $15 Am. antiquarian soc, Salisbury st & Park av, Worcester 5, Mass.

016.071 Newspapers. Newspapers—Bibliography 47-4111

"A revision of a work first issued in 18 parts in the Proceedings of the American antiquarian society, 1913 to 1927, under title: Bibliography of American newspapers, 1690-1820." (Library of Congress card) "These two volumes of 1,508 pages are a compendium of statistics about newspapers in the United States, from 1690 through 1820. . . . Mr. Brigham traveled thousands of miles and visited many States during his summer vacations to gather the data. In the beginning, he thought he would finish in five years what he found took him 34 years to accomplish. . . . In addition to the comprehensive compilation of facts and information about the various papers, the books list libraries where historical newspaper material can be obtained, and certain convenient indices of titles and printers." (Christian Science Monitor)

Reviewed by G. P. Albaugh

Canadian Hist R 28:326 S '47 500w

"Novelists, historians, editors, and Hollywood have in these volumes a key to some of the most exciting chapters of American history." P. S. D.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 7 '47 750w

"Many unforeseen difficulties due to wartime and postwar conditions delayed the publication of Mr. Brigham's monumental work, but this unavoidable period of waiting has served only to increase the appreciation and welcome with which its appearance is greeted by scholars and librarians everywhere." L. M. Stark

+ Library J 72:1026 Jl '47 700w

"Throughout the period of its tentative publication and in the twenty years since, the Brigham compilation has been recognized as a work of the greatest usefulness to those whom it was intended to serve as guide to a vast and unorganized historical source. The present definitive form of the work is the result of continuous expansion, of refinement in detail, and of revision of statement, without change in the simple and convenient basic arrangement of its first installment published thirty-four years ago." L. C. Wroth

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly R p10 Jl 6 '47 1000w

"A two-volume work that comes as near to being definitive as one can easily imagine. The papers are listed alphabetically under states and towns. A concise history of each paper, including all changes of title and ownership, is followed by a list of the various libraries possessing issues of the paper. The exact holdings of each library are indicated. There are two unusually fine indexes, one including 7,300 cross-indexed titles of the various papers, the other listing 2,820 editors, publishers and printers. The latter index enables one to follow many of these workmen from paper to paper and state to state. Not only are these two volumes an indispensable guide for all who would work with these early newspapers, but they are also important contributions to the history of journalism." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p23 Ag 3 '47 600w

"Some five hundred libraries and a hundred private collections are listed as repositories of old newspapers. These listings are of great and almost permanent value, because not likely to be changed. Ample indexes of printers, titles, etc., complete the usefulness of these volumes and testify to the invaluable labors of the compiler." C. P. Rollins

+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ag 2 '47 410w

"Dr. Brigham is warmly to be congratulated on the completion of a task which was begun thirty-four years ago. . . . The indexes of titles and of printers, editors and publishers, which complete the volume are on the same generous and scholarly scale. We could wish, however, that it had been possible to include a chronological table which would show the newspapers published in each year."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p652 D 13 '47 600w

BRIGHT, ROBERT. The Olivers; the story of an artist and his family. 311p $2.50 Doubleday

47-3262

Portrays the characters of an American artist, his wife, and their thirteen-year-old daughter, during their stay at a small town on the coast of France. Success comes to the artist and the adolescent girl realizes that a change is coming over her beloved family. A near tragedy clears the air.

Booklist 43:309 Je 1 '47

Kirkus 15:135 Mr 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27
My 11 '47 380w

"With all their eccentricities, the Olivers are really quite likable, and Mr. Bright's pensively humorous style at its best combines tenderness with a tolerantly observant eye. Nearly Daudetesque in his depiction of a child's simple heart, he is most successful in the scenes directly relating to Lisa and her gradual awakening to reality." Hilda Lake

+ N Y Times p24 Ap 27 420w

"Entertaining, but far below the author's first novel, 'The Life and Death of Little Jo.'" + New Yorker 23:94 Ap 26 '47 140w

"Mr Bright wants to describe, in a realistic, detailed style, the impact of success on a family's happy Bohemian existence. The job calls for sensitive and careful writing. Except for spots, the book fails to measure up. He introduces his characters and their background smoothly and vividly. As they begin to move, he loses them. His unfortunate effort to describe the growing pains of the daughter finishes the already groggy plot."

— San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 25 '47 110w

"The story is told with lightness of touch, with a constant relish for the color and brightness of the French seacoast setting, and with occasional deft revelations of human motive and relationship. But the reader may find the minor characters more interesting than the major ones, and that the French seaside village with its untangled people actually seems more real than the tangled lives of the Americans." Walter Havighurst

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:22 Je 14 '47 360w

BRIN, JOSEPH GOTTLAND. Speech and human relations; an approach to the physical and psychological factors involved in effective oral communication; with a foreword by Frederick C. Packard. 166p $2.50 Humphries

808.5 Public speaking 47-30254

Advice and instructions on speaking to groups effectively. Partial contents: Fear; and an antidote; Consider the audience!; The art of getting along; Style in speech; Words: used singly, as entities, in unison; Elements of the address; Aids in preparation; Gesture and posture; The voice; Personality—elements. Index.

Booklist 43:286 My 15 '47

School & Society 65:268 Ap 12 '47 20w

BRINIG, MYRON. Hour of nightfall. 274p $2.75 Rinehart

47-5466

Novel which traces the story of a beautiful woman, whose love of her own good looks nearly wrecked several lives. The narrator is a neighbor whose first conscious meeting with Helen was when he was five and she was fifteen. He continues the story thru the years until he falls in love with Helen's daughter.

Booklist 44:108 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Helen Long

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 S 14 '47 390w

Kirkus 15:346 Jl 1 '47 130w

"It is extraordinary that a nine-year-old can be so observing, and the comments of the young veteran resemble those of middle age." M. P. McKay

Library J 72:1106 Ag '47 80w

"'Hour of Nightfall' is written smoothly and with some subtlety. It is hard to see, however, why Mr. Briniger bothered to use his considerable gifts to tell Helen's story, which, as he here presents it, is a study in statics."

Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13
Ja 11 '48 300w

"As is usual with his work, the narrative structure is well-made, the dialogue fluent, the emotion earnest, the style facile and assured (except for occasional extravagances). . . 'Hour of Nightfall' is a domestic diversion with many a familiar parallel to delight or make squirm or make thoughtful the absorbed reader. If it lacks literary stature, it does not lack interest, nor will its wider implications—how hold a world together if families are falling apart—be lost." C. L.

+ — N Y Times p24 S 14 '47 650w

— New Yorker 23:121 S 13 '47 70w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 12 '47 600w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Sat R of Lit 30:28 S 13 '47 800w

BRINK, MRS CAROL (PYRIE). Harps in the wind; the story of the singing Hutchinsons. 312p il $3.50 Macmillan

927.8 Hutchinson family. Singers 47-2186

A second biographical study about the New Hampshire family of singers, the Hutchinsons, of which Jordan's Singin' Yankees (Book Review Digest 1946) was the first. Not only does the work describe the lives of the members of the family, it also "provides over-all view of mid-nineteenth century U.S.A., from New Hampshire to the California gold coast and Minnesota, where the family founded the town of Hutchinson." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:254 Ap 15 '47

"As Mrs. Brink is a novelist of some standing, I find greater narrative skill and more atmosphere and color in her book than I do in Prof. Jordan's. In achieving these effects, however, she does not do so at the expense of accuracy or truth." John Drury

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 23 '47 320w

Christian Century 64:464 Ap 9 '47 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '47

Kirkus 15:26 Ja 1 '47 130w

"Here is a very readable book, better documented and better written, in my opinion, than Philip Jordan's recent Hutchinson biography, Singin' Yankees. . . Recommended wherever biography goes, and to music divisions." E. L. Lewis

+ Library J 71:1712 D 1 '46 140w

"The Hutchinsons do not come out of Mrs. Brink's book with as much smugness as I had thought they doubtless were given to. She plainly loves them, though not to excess, and she questions their taste on several occasions and relates their bickerings and small scandals. Her account of the founding and hard times of Hutchinson, Minn., was new to me and more exciting than any Western. For good measure, she includes a sympathetic and heartwarming story of Walter Kittredge, the New Hampshire boy who wrote and composed a song the Hutchinsons quickly made famous, 'Tenting Tonight.'" S. H. Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Ap 6 '47 850w

"Mrs. Carol Brink, working from diaries and contemporary accounts, has recreated this family for us in so far as it is possible to recreate people who used their voices. Her book has a great deal of detailed material which would be of little interest to the general reader and would not be of much value to the specialist." M. R. Werner

N Y Times p22 Jl 27 '47 550w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 Ap 6 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:97 Je '47

BITCHER, PHYLLIS (ROMNEY GAY, pseud). Big picture book. [52p] $1 Gros-set

47-11191

Rhymes and colored pictures about children at play, for ages three to five.

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Book Week p17A D 3 '47
20w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p12 O 28 '47
90w

Kirkus 15:576 O 15 '47 60w

"Recommended." M. A. Webb
+ Library J 72:1618 N 15 '47 60w

BRITISH thought, 1947; with an introduction by Ivor Brown. 461p $3.75 Gresham press

082.1 Great Britain—Civilization. Philosophy, English 47-5342

Companion piece to American thought, 1947. It is composed of about forty articles of British writing on various subjects, written during 1946, and here arranged under subject. Partial contents: A letter about architecture, by Maxwell Fry; Species and evolution, by J. S. Huxley; New plants for old, by W. L. Summer; My way with a play, by Bernard Shaw; The future of the universities, by J. Mackay-Mure; History and the reader, by G. M. Trevelyan; The haunting of clonmacnoise, by Mervyn Wall; The tenth muse climbs Parnassus, by Anthony Asquith; Leftism in the atomic age, by Norman Angell; Britain and Russia, by Kingsley Martin; Nehru's discovery of India, by H. N. Brailsford; The religion of tomorrow, by Lawrence Hyde; Popular taste in music, by Spike Hughes; Poetry for poetry's sake and poetry beyond poetry, by Stephen Spender; Shakespeare and Stratford, by Stephen Potter; A trip to Timbuctoo, by Donald Graham. Brief biographical notes on the authors.

Reviewed by Leslie Lipson

Am Pol Sci R 41:1050 O '47 380w

"The writing is as varied as the subject matter. Bernard Shaw is almost as good as usual on nineteenth century drama. Spike Hughes is vigorous and amusing on 'Popular Taste in Music.' If you like whimsy, Harold Nicolson has a nice piece about his sixtieth birthday. But too much of the writing is rather old and rather tired journalism." W. H. Hindle

Commonweal 46:265 Je 27 '47 400w

"This fat and restless volume . . . is proof enough that the British spirit is ticking on all cylinders. It is a brave sound, for their very indifference to their own discomforts, their preoccupation with making the engine turn over, prove them to be far more interested in living than in anticipating their atomic doom. This fate, they courteously acknowledge along the way, is, of course, a disagreeable possibility. . . The whole book, in spite of its bulk and the temperamental variety of the hands that made it, offers the spectacle of a pinched society moving through a typhoon on an even keel. There are plenty of big names on deck, applying their knowledge for survival's sake; and below, a dependable crew at the undying game of seeking knowledge for curiosity's sake." Alistair Cooke

+ N Y Times p4 Je 22 '47 1350w

New Yorker 23:97 Je 14 '47 160w

"The purpose of the series, to promote international understanding, is an excellent one, and it is to be hoped that the editors will succeed in their plan of eventually releasing volumes every year in all cultural areas." A. F.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 22 '47
160w

School & Society 65:446 Je 14 '47 10w

Theatre Arts 32:70 Ja '48 140w

BROCK, EMMA LILLIAN. Pet for Barbie; II. by [the author]. 50p $1.50 Knopf

47-18222

Story of Barbie who had one pet after another to keep her quiet. The first pet was a mouse; then there was a rabbit, a goat, and an elephant. After that the family got her a puppy, deciding that a quiet child was not what they wanted, anyway.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:262 J1 '47 40w

"Simple and amusing tale, with more content than the usual book for this 5 to 8 age level. The humor at times is oafish—but they like it that way."

+ Kirkus 15:216 Ap 15 '47 90w

"Delightfully illustrated." Peggy Melcher
+ Library J 72:736 My 1 '47 60w

"Told with delightful humor for 5 to 9 year olds." R. A. Gordon

+ N Y Times p22 My 11 '47 100w

Sat R of Lit 30:29 Je 14 '47 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:83 My '47

BROCK, HENRY IRVING, comp. Little book of limericks. 117p $1 Duell

808.17 Limericks 47-30957

"Mr. Brock has made a collection of limericks where, as he says, he has leaned over backward to avoid anything that might offend the fastidious, and has graced it with various bits of scholarly research into the history of the art form." Sat R of Lit

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 S 28 '47
30w

Kirkus 15:413 Ag 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p10 S 14 '47 450w

"This is an entertaining little collection. It contains a few, but only a few, of the oddities that depend on spelling, and those mostly ingenious; and it is safe to say that even the most enthusiastic collector will find here some that are new to him. . . Not so much can be said for the literary history involved. Mr. Brock makes valiant efforts to discover limericks in the lyrics of Shakespeare . . . none of which, frankly, will do." Basil Davenport
+ — Sat R of Lit 30:38 N 22 '47 800w

BROCKELMANN, CARL. History of the Islamic peoples; with a review of events, 1939-1947, by Moshe Perlmann; tr. by Joel Carmichael and Moshe Perlmann. 582p $6 Putnam

953 Mohammedan empire—History. Mohammedanism 47-5836

"Author, former professor of Semitic languages at University of Breslau, and considered one of Europe's great authorities on comparative linguistics, wrote standard work on Arabic literature. German version of this present book was published in 1939. Now, well translated by Joel Carmichael and Moshe Perlmann it fills a gap in our scholarly literature, covering history of Near and Middle East from rise of Mohammed to eve of World War II. Includes not only events of political significance, but dwells also on major trends of Islamic civilization." Library J

Booklist 44:148 D 15 '47

"Such a volume no doubt has its uses for reference, but one is left wondering whether there is real need for a one-volume history of peoples and states so numerous and so diverse. If there is, the book should have more narrative flow, more representation of what the people were like and how their faith affected their culture, and a less meticulous recital of battles, wars and dynasties. This is an extended encyclopedia article, rather than a history."

+ Christian Century 64:1272 O 22 '47
310w

"This book will be of value to students and scholars but the average reader would find it heavy going, which is unfortunate at this moment, when the timeliness of the subject would tend to make it in great demand."

+ — Kirkus 15:270 My 15 '47 310w

"Volume is based on lifetime of research and on thorough command of international scholarly literature. Heartily recommended for large libraries which would like to supplement Hitti's History of the Arabs." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 72:634 Ap 15 '47 130w

"The study requires careful reading for, despite an unaffected style admirably translated, names are largely unfamiliar, events are complicated and remote, and the entire subject strange—except to another scholar. On controversial technical details, the author strives for sound judgment and impartiality and throughout gives convincing evidence of knowledge, thorough research, fairness and skilled presentation. Whether for reference or reading, the volume is highly worth while." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
N 2 '47 550w

"All in all, the combined work is a very timely contribution to the understanding of a long neglected but now extremely significant part of the globe." E. A. Speiser

+ N Y Times p19 D 14 '47 700w

BROD, MAX. Franz Kafka; a biography [tr. from the German by G. Humphreys Roberts]. 236p il $3 Schocken

B or 92 Kafka, Franz 47-4335

Biography of the strange Czechish Jewish genius, who was born in 1883 in Prague, and died in 1924. The author was Kafka's great friend and his literary executor, so had access to all the known material on his life. No index.

"The present volume is particularly valuable since it contains many private letters of Kafka and several rare photos." Alfred Werner

Christian Century 64:711 Je 4 '47 650w
Kirkus 15:89 F 1 '47 170w

"The portrait is a 'close-up' of ardent and at times uncritical admiration. But it is candid and lit by sympathetic understanding." H. I. A. F.

Manchester Guardian p3 My 20 '47 230w

"Despite its value as a document, Brod's book is painfully self-conscious and unsatisfactory as a biography. . . . There are some very good things in it. A partial portrait of Kafka as human being does emerge—a very stirring and lovely portrait. . . . But there are parts of the book which even as memoir, are simply annoying. . . . Brod attempts a rather prissy refutation of the Freudian analysis of Kafka's father-complex. . . . Similarly Brod becomes a bit queasy when he describes Kafka's love affairs; he takes too seriously his own remark that Kafka was on the way to becoming a saint. . . . And here we reach a major weakness of Brod's book: too much Brod and not enough Kafka." Irving Howe

+ Nation 165:47 Jl 12 '47 1250w

Reviewed by Rayner Heppenstall

New Statesman & Nation 33:477 Je 28 '47 850w

"His biography is the primary source of our knowledge of Kafka's personal life and character, and is invaluable to any one at all interested in the mind of the Czech genius. But it shows, for all its important first-hand records of Kafka's life, more jealousy for the reputation of the friend than boldness in defining the imagination of the writer." Alfred Kazin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Ap 13 '47 330w

Reviewed by Charles Neider

N Y Times p16 Je 15 '47 700w

"This biography, though weakened by unsteadiness of method and disunity of purpose, can for a time at least lay claim to being authoritative. Max Brod was Kafka's lifelong friend and his study is consequently rich in personal insights and observations, as well as in factual materials. His biography will not settle literary disputes, but it should, and this perhaps is more important, deepen appreciation of Kafka's work." Arthur Foff

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 22 '47 400w

"In spite of its very evident vices of style and arrangement, this book, even when re-read after ten years, seems a great story of genius and individuality, in virtue of the quotations which it contains. It is a pity that the facts and records are not systematically arranged and allowed to speak for themselves; but, although much is withheld, what is given is magnificent in itself." Stuart Hampshire

+ Spec 178:498 My 2 '47 1400w

"Readers will find in it a muster of biographical facts, possessed by no one else but Brod, arranged with discerning intelligence and affectionate understanding. The biography also includes one of the soundest and most moderate critical appraisals of Kafka's intellectual purpose and achievement."

+ Time 49:104 Ap 28 '47 2900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p252 My 24 '47 500w

BRODRICK, JAMES. Progress of the Jesuits (1556-79). 337p $3.50 Longmans

271.5 Jesuits 47-2049

Second in a series planned as a complete history of the Jesuits. The first: The origin of the Jesuits, appeared in 1940 (Book Review Digest 1941). The present volume "carries on from the death of Ignatius Loyola in 1556 through the generalates of Laynez, Borgia and Mercurian to 1579." (Cath World)

"Father Brodrick is one of those rare historians who can present scholarly work without dryness and write in a fascinating style without shallowness." J. H. Fichter

+ Cath World 165:279 Je '47 450w

School & Society 66:48 Jl 19 '47 30w

BROGAN, DENIS WILLIAM. French personalities and problems. 241p $3 Knopf

944 France—Civilization. France—Politics and government 47-2796

Collection of essays on a variety of subjects from Alexandre Dumas' novels to the place of French in the English schools, or to the liberation of France in 1944. Together they provide sidelights on French politics and culture, and an analytical commentary on modern French life. No index.

"Students of France will find much of value in these essays, particularly as English interpretations of modern French thought, movements, events, and personalities. . . . However, some of the essays are dated, and some give the impression of having been produced with speed and under the tension of a mighty struggle. Though there is a connecting theme, there is a troublesome disjointedness and oftentimes a dissatisfying brevity. . . . Mr. Brogan, to his credit be it said, offers these essays for what they are, and as such they are penetrating, earnest, and absorbing." C. G. Post

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:575 Je '47 650w

Booklist 43:344 Jl 1 '47

Reviewed by Malcolm Moos

Cath World 165:376 Jl '47 750w

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ja 26 '47 400w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 13 '47 350w

"These studies, erudite and urbane though they are, yet are curiously lacking in nourishment. The sentiments are irreproachable, the irony admirable, the learning profound; but the total result is inconclusive." Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 45:570 Mr 21 '47 600w

Kirkus 14:615 D 1 '46 190w

"Of the numerous recent attempts to interpret French 'personalities and problems' this is clearly the most attractive and successful. . . . The book has a unity and a coherence which are unparalleled in this kind of publication. And the reason is that no matter how widely you travel with the author in the direction of French thought, life, and institutions his presence is felt throughout—the presence of an expert guide whose insight into human problems never fails him." E. Vinaver

BROGAN, D. W.—Continued

Manchester Guardian p3 O 22 '46 600w

Reviewed by Albert Guérard

Nation 164:338 Mr 22 '47 450w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

New Statesman & Nation 32:157 Ag 31 '46 1050w

"He writes without benefit of jargon, even the jargon of the political science of which he is so eminent a master. He writes in the great literary tradition. His smooth legato style draws its strength from a rich, well-stored mind disciplined to exposition; and its color and grace derive from training and experience in a sort of self-stimulation, in moving with spirit and wit from allusion to allusion in the realms of art, literature and politics. Perhaps now and then the richness of learning may overwhelm an unwary reader, but such occasions fortunately are few." Leo Gershoy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 F 9 '47 1150w

"I do not know a single writer, French, English or American, who is a better authority on modern France than Denis Brogan. He has intimate knowledge and profound sympathy. . . It is based, not on café gossip but on thorough scholarship: Brogan's 'France Under the Republic' is a monument of research. A student of politics, he is interested in all the other aspects of culture: in 'American Character' he pays an unexpected and glowing tribute to the art of Gypsy Rose Lee. He is perfectly at home in three countries, including his own. In all three he claims his privilege as a son of the house; he criticizes freely, at times sharply. But he never is offensive, for he never gloats over the foibles or misfortunes of his friends. Finally, his style is a joy." Albert Guerard

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 26 '47 750w

"Like you and me, Mr. Brogan's sympathy lies with Jaurès and Clemenceau against the nationalists and doctrinaires whom he studies with such admirable impartiality that anyone concerned with the growth of modern nationalism or the antecedents of Vichy cannot ignore this book. Throughout, his reliable scholarship is expressed in a highly literate style. That Mr. Brogan is not only a sound scholar but also a most gifted journalist is delightfully apparent in the tightly ironic article on Darlan published only three days after the landing in North Africa." Justin O'Brien

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 F 22 '47 650w

Reviewed by John Stapleton

Spec 177:294 S 20 '46 750w

Time 49:98 F 3 '47 440w

"To collect together and republish, in book form, articles and reviews written casually during several years is always a doubtful procedure. It savours of book-making, and only rigid selection and unusually high quality of literary composition can make such an anthology of journalism into a worth-while book. It is all the greater tribute to Professor Brogan's political wisdom and literary craftsmanship that the result is, in every sense, a real, even a first rate, book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p399 Ag 24 '46 1100w

BROMFIELD, LOUIS. Colorado. 263p $2.75
Harper

47-11221

Silver City, Colorado, in the 1880's, is the scene of this novel of love and wealth and squalor in pioneer western days.

Booklist 44:134 D 1 '47

"Perhaps 'Colorado' will not greatly enhance the reputation of Mr. Bromfield, who has elsewhere shown himself capable of more quietly convincing work. It must be added, however, that it is entertaining narration, without a dull page. Maybe its ultimate destination is the screen." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 3 '47 500w

Kirkus 15:437 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Author's usual superb style makes this a compelling novel. Well recommended." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 72:1469 O 15 '47 100w

"This is a honky-tonk 'Western,' with as much actual connection with Colorado as a Coney Island red hot has with Frankfurt; as a novel it is equally real. There is no more uneven writer practising fiction than Louis Bromfield; when he is good he is good enough, but when he is bad he is horrendous, and in the book at hand he has outdone himself in the latter style." E. B. Davis

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 N 9 '47 420w

Reviewed by Virginia Dale

N Y Times p18 O 19 '47 700w

Reviewed by James Edin

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 30 '47 120w

"A plot richly embroidered with shootings, kidnappings, explosions, and general violence. Mr. Bromfield, who appears to have written this rattling tale with his left hand while presumably keeping his right hand at the plough, has shrewdly disarmed all his critics in advance by describing the story, in a long dedication, as 'without social consciousness or self-consciousness.'" Pamela Taylor

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:15 N 1 '47 500w

Wis Lib Bul 43:176 D '47

BROMFIELD, LOUIS. Kenny. 219p $2 Harper
47-4067

In each of these three stories—Kenny; Retread; The end of the road—the war plays some part. In the first one, a story of the farming country, Kenny who looks and acts like the incarnation of a Greek faun, dies in action in the South Pacific but sends a comrade back to comfort his wife. In the second a jovial American major meets his sweetheart of the first war and discovers his unknown son. The third, grimmer than the other two, concerns a dissolute American society woman who dies the death of a collaborator in Paris.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 22 '47 330w

"Three stories, good enough, but not important either as top drawer short stories—or as adding to Bromfield's reputation."

Kirkus 15:196 Ap 1 '47 120w

"The rural stories have, in addition to drama, a charm and validity not always to be found in Mr. Bromfield's narratives of the 'international set.' . . In 'The End of the Road' Mr. Bromfield is back among his 'international set,' and this story is both the shortest and the least satisfactory of the three. . . Even though one's interest is held, one has the feeling that all this has been said before—by Mr. Bromfield, among a host of others—and that if it is to be said it should be said with fresh vision." Jennings Rice

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Je 1 '47 700w

"This is Mr. Bromfield's first fiction to stray between book covers in three years—and the fact is no cause for rejoicing. Consisting of two mag-minded one-shots and a short story from the same mill, it will seem an empty exercise to the reader who remembers this author as he was (much more than three years ago)." James McBride

— N Y Times p14 Je 1 '47 320w

— San Francisco Chronicle p22 Jl 13 '47 170w

Springf'd Republican p8A S 21 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:117 Jl '47

BROOKS, CLEANTH. Well wrought urn; studies in the structure of poetry. 270p $3.50 Reynal

821.09 English poetry—History and criticism 47-3143

The author's purpose in this volume is "to examine, in terms of a common approach, a number of celebrated English poems, taken in chronological order, from the Elizabethan period to the present. Whether or not the approach is really a common approach, and whether or not the examination reveals that the poems possess some common structural properties, are matters for the reader to determine. The last chapter attempts some generalizations upon these properties, and upon the characteristic structure of poetry." (Pref) The poems treated are: The Canonization, by Donne; Macbeth, by Shakespeare; L'Allegro and Il Penseroso, by Milton; Corinna's going a-Maying, by Herrick; The rape of the lock, by Pope; Elegy written in a country church-yard, by Gray; Ode: Intimations of immortality, by Wordsworth; Ode on a Grecian urn, by Keats; Tears, idle tears, by Tennyson; Among school children, by Yeats. Index.

Booklist 43:327 Je 15 '47

"This is a book that I approached respectfully, and even with high hopes, though I thought I might disagree with much of it. As it happened, I disagreed only slightly, and my respect for Mr. Brooks remains. I get the impression of a solid and sincere man, if hardly a brilliant one. But I am left with a suspicion that he is interested in poetry only (or mainly) as the subject matter of his type of criticism, and that he does not really like poetry very much." Theodore Maynard

+ — Cath World 165:570 S '47 300w

"Because there are few readers or reviewers who enjoy having their inadequacies as readers of poetry demonstrated, it's probable that first reactions to Brooks' brilliantly careful analysis of 10 representative English poems will be unfavorable. Brooks is such a careful and discerning reader that he is bound to reveal inadequacies in almost anyone's reading of almost any one of these poems, but the open-minded will find adequate reward for the humiliation in an enriched appreciation of such poems as 'The Rape of the Lock,' 'Among School Children,' and Wordsworth's great 'Ode.'" H. C. Webster

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Jl 20 '47 260w

"Its academic interest recommends it to college and large reference libraries, but in most cases it will not be appropriate selection for other libraries." G. D. McDonald

Library J 72:316 F 15 '47 70w

"The book contains admirable remarks and much truth, besides having the merit of directing attention to such poems. Taking a low view of its reader, however, it is perhaps good teaching rather than criticism; and its prose is troubling." John Berryman

+ — Nation 164:775 Je 28 '47 1000w

"Mr. Brooks' studies in the structure of poetry are masterly exercises in the kind of close critical explication that enriches our appreciation of the poems examined and confers a new dignity on the work of the poet." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ap 20 '47 950w

Reviewed by R. P. Blackmur
N Y Times p6 Je 8 '47 1950w

"Readable, and by no means an example of the modern dull, text-creeping school of literary analysis."

+ New Yorker 23:107 Ap 5 '47 70w

"The latest critical volume by Cleanth Brooks is at once solidly satisfying and unhappily provoking, since it has considerable penetrating commentary within an unhappily doctrinaire and rigid framework itself a fence excluding the larger world." H. W. Wells

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:50 Ap 12 '47 600w

Spring'd Union p12 Ag 8 '47 320w

"Mr. Brooks hints at a more 'humanist' evaluation of the poem, but fails to erect an explicit theory of criticism with which to treat the whole corpus of poetry. Nevertheless, the author is convincing in his view that a poem represents something more universal than the expression of 'the particular values of its time.' . . . The quality of the analysis is searching, but, perhaps because of their origin as college lectures, the essays are of less value to the advanced scholar or critic than one would expect. The meat of the book is relegated to two appendices, but the arguments there advanced are of sufficient weight and insight to render this work a contribution to the serious literary criticism of our period."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:130 Je '47 200w

BROOKS, VAN WYCK. Times of Melville and Whitman. 489p $5 Dutton

810.9 American literature—History and criticism 47-11390

The fourth volume in the author's series on American literary life covers the period from the late 1840's to the mid 1880's, and covers the whole of the United States. Index.

Reviewed by Lucien Price

Atlantic 180:158 D '47 420w

Booklist 44:86 N 1 '47

"If the book now produced shows some falling off, Mr. Brooks is hardly to be blamed. . . . Many who might have been considered in the present volume, had already been so thoroughly dealt with as to permit hardly more than occasional reference. The result is that, apart from the two great writers named in his title, he has nobody of major importance left, except Mark Twain. . . . Another handicap lay in the fact that the geographic range has been widening so steadily that not even Van Wyck Brooks has been able to focus it quite successfully." Theodore Maynard

+ — Cath World 166:278 D '47 750w

"It is free from sentimentality, from affectation, from the more obnoxious forms of pedantry. But it is also at times incontestably tiresome and even exasperating, with its long queues of dependent clauses and its wandering and irresolute pronouns." J. T. Frederick

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week N 4 '47 430w
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '47

"In his treatment of Whitman and Mark Twain, Mr. Brooks is at his best, and his best is very good indeed. . . . This book lacks the natural unity of Mr. Brooks's earlier work on the New England writers. . . . The disadvantages of Mr. Brooks's method become apparent when it is applied to the whole country and a collection of writers who had little in common except that they were Americans living in the same span of years. . . . These criticisms are not to be taken as belittling Mr. Brooks's very great achievement in bringing alive the background against which his central figures, much studied individually, moved and worked. No other historian of American letters has succeeded so brilliantly in giving us the complete picture of a literary period." Mason Wade

+ — Commonweal 47:198 D 5 '47 850w

"A valuable guidebook to literary roadways and bypaths, written with easy charm."

+ — Kirkus 15:518 S 15 '47 340w

"It is unfortunate that a book of such permanent value is not equipped with a complete index. For all libraries." B. B. Libaire

+ — Library J 72:1535 N 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.

Nation 165:598 N 29 '47 700w

"One virtue I find in it is that it reveals his aims more clearly than ever before. If we read it carefully, we find that most of the attacks on Brooks—how many there have been during the last few years!—are based on various misconceptions of his purpose as a historian. . . . For all the faults that might be mentioned, Brooks's story of the literary life in America is a work of real magnitude and lasting value." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 117:25 N 10 '47 2400w

"As in previous installments Mr. Brooks makes a wide cast of his net, brings ashore a tremendous haul, and conscientiously displays his trove, big fish and little fish alike suffused with the magic, moonlight radiance of his style. Of all the studies of our national literature ever undertaken these books are the least professional." G. F. Whicher

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 N 2 '47 1400w

"It has been said of Mr. Brooks' volumes on the literary life in America that they are chiefly anecdotal, that they emphasize the picturesque rather than the significant, that they confuse the American flag, or the American landscape, with American literature. The complaint is a tribute to Brooks' skill, but not to the perspicacity of the critics. For there is a theme that animates all these volumes, and most notably this one and its immediate predecessor. That theme is the discovery of America. And because Mr. Brooks is himself engaged in that discovery, he comes to it with all the freshness and enthusiasm of one of those discoverers whose achievements he celebrates—an Audubon or a Catlin, a Muir or a Burroughs." H. S. Commager

BROOKS, VAN WYCK—Continued

+ N Y Times p5 N 9 '47 1650w

"It is not quite so exciting, perhaps, as the volume published just before, 'The World of Washington Irving' . . . but it is distinguished by the same kind of qualities. These two volumes which do not deal with New England seem to me to have a freedom of movement and an exhilaration of spirit, as well as a brilliance of writing, that the New England volumes, remarkable though they are, do not display to the same degree." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 23:130 N 29 '47 2500w

"His method here, as elsewhere in the book, is primarily pictorial, and not infrequently he recaptures the imaginative world created by the novelists, poets and travelers of the day and place. However, the method has its drawbacks. It is not surprising to find that Mr. Brooks' concept of California of the Gold Rush is that found in Bret Harte's writings. And it is clear that his treatment of the cattle country, a thin and inadequate treatment as a whole, owes more to Frank Harris than it does to Andy Adams. . . Mr. Brooks' failure to make an important contribution to the critical analysis of American literature is apparent not only in his treatment of the Far West, but in the entire book—as it has been throughout the series." Franklin Walker

— San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 9 '47 1550w

"It remains on the same high level as the earlier books in the series. . . As in his other books, Mr. Brooks is completely saturated in his material. He knows the writers of America, the houses they lived in, the places they ate and drank in, the countryside where they farmed or rambled, as if he himself had been born a hundred different times in as many different places, and had spent all his life acting as a sort of collective Boswell. Like Thomas Beer, his only rival in this department, he remembers the significant little facts about our writers as well as the major events in their lives." Lewis Mumford

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 N 8 '47 2300w

"At the base of this book there is a vast erudition. It is written in a stately, orotund prose that many readers have applauded; though Brooks is sometimes addicted to lush rhetoric."

+ Time 50:108 N 10 '47 800w

Wis Lib Bul 43:171 D '47

BROOKS, WALTER ROLLIN. Freddy, the magician; il. by Kurt Wiese. 258p $2.50 Knopf

47-31440

Another book about Freddy, the intelligent pig and his animal friends from Mr Bean's farm. This time Freddy outdoes a magician.

Kirkus 15:547 O 1 '47 50w

Reviewed by B. W. Bell

Library J 72:1473 O 15 '47 70w

"Although few 'series' of stories hold up to the high level of the first success, this fourteenth story of Freddy the Pig, and his colleagues on the Bean farm, a complete and self-contained story, is as funny, as absorbing and as unobtrusively instructive as the very first one." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p27 Ja 18 '48 190w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:150 D 6 '47 70w

Reviewed by G. M. Jansens

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 30 '47 140w

BROPHY, MRS LOIRE. There's plenty of room at the top; a practical guide to success in business. 158p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

174 Success. Executives

47-30025

"Author's own experience as advisor for business firms is reflected in these suggestions for those deserving executive positions. She tells how to attain business success and how to get along with people in business. She advocates, among other things, long range planning, adjustment to position, secret of winning the support of others and technique of executive management." Library J

Booklist 43:151 Ja 15 '47

"Good for vocational shelves—for college libraries—for veterans' reference shelves, etc."

+ Kirkus 14:611 D 1 '46 260w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:389 Mr 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by H. J. Bresler

N Y Times p16 Ap 6 '47 380w

BROWDER, EARL RUSSELL. War or peace with Russia? 190p $2.50 Wyn

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Russia. Russia—Foreign relations—U.S. 47-2575

A book on Soviet-American relations as they stood in the summer and fall of 1946. Author was at one time the leader of the American Communist party, but at the time of writing had been expelled from the party and therefore claims to have written as a private citizen.

Kirkus 15:90 F 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Toby Cole

Library J 72:455 Mr 15 '47 100w

New Repub 116:32 My 12 '47 150w

Reviewed by V. M. Dean

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Ap 13 '47 1200w

"His book is written, he says, 'exclusively from the standpoint of American interests,' and he finds a return to Roosevelt policies at home and abroad 'the only course that can protect American national interests, the only practical policy, the only road to durable peace.' But some readers may feel he is even more alert to the best interests of the U.S.S.R. A book aimed at the masses cannot be convincing when it is crowded with suspicion and criticism of American foreign policy (however richly deserved) but does not find space for one unfavorable comment on Soviet behavior." Edgar Snow

N Y Times p7 Ap 6 '47 1150w

"The author is bitter about the attacks made on him by the American Communists, whose revered leader he used to be, but most of his contumely is directed at Winston Churchill and other champions of an Anglo-American bloc. Once in a while, he sounds like the old Browder, as when he claims that the Russians contributed more to victory in the war than all the other Allies combined."

New Yorker 23:105 Ap 5 '47 190w

Reviewed by Maurice Hindus

Sat R of Lit 30:17 My 24 '47 110w

BROWN, ALVIN. Organization of industry. 370p $5.35 Prentice-Hall

658 Industrial management 47-3463

"Principles and use of organization followed by applications of these principles to industry. One chapter concerns the multiple organization." (Library J) Contains a list of definitions and an index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:111 Ag '47 20w

"It might have been well for the author to orient the reader more explicitly as to the place of organization in management. It is not 'the be-all and the end-all here,' but an essential framework that facilitates the operation of management. . . So thorough a delineation of organizational principles and applications should point out the benefits of participation by all executives in organization planning. In this reviewer's experience such full participation is most important. . . This book provides valuable insight into the reasoning of a successful, practicing top executive. It will challenge and stimulate the thinking of anyone interested in the field." E. W. Reilley

+ — Management R 36:553 O '47 900w

BROWN, BARBARA. Sour cream cookery. 250p $2.50 Barrows
641.5 Cookery

Cookbook which gives recipes for cooking with sour milk and cream, or buttermilk. Contains general instructions or rules on the use of the book. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '47

"Her page-and-a-third of sour cream rules, are alone worth the cost of the book. This is a general cookbook from fowl and meats straight through to pies and candies, and as such is extremely useful. The use of sour cream, sour milk and buttermilk in American cooking is ever on the increase, and sour cream cookery is no longer the exclusive secret of other countries. Here is a good kitchen-aid, one of the better specialized cookbooks." A. D. Faber

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 3 '47 140w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 3 '47 70w

BROWN, DEREK WARBURTON, and HARRIS, WILBUR T. Introduction to engineering plastics. 274p il $4 Rinehart

668.4 Plastics 47-3759

"A detailed presentation of the various plastics that have found commercial acceptance. Included are chapters on the engineering properties and the chemical and physical characteristics of plastics; applications and techniques in handling plastics; and a list of plastics materials, together with their numerous trade names and manufacturers." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1037 J1 '47 70w

"Although this volume contains little information regarding plastic materials which has not already appeared in earlier works of a similar nature, the material is well presented and will be of value to manufacturers, engineers and designers who are not specialists in plastic technology but are interested in the utilization of plastic materials for industrial purposes."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:35 Ap '47

BROWN, EVE, pseud. See Nichols, M. E.

BROWN, FRANCIS JAMES. Educational sociology. 626p maps $5.35; to schools $4 Prentice-Hall

370.15 Education, Sociology 47-2258

A textbook in educational sociology which should be useful also for teachers and administrators. Bibliography. Index.

"The book would be a very acceptable textbook for a course in educational sociology and would also be useful as a reference book in advanced courses in the social studies such as are offered in many high schools." J. B. Edmonson

+ Am Soc R 12:729 D '47 440w

School & Society 65:253 Ap 5 '47 30w

Social Studies 38:288 O '47 10w

BROWN, FREDRIC. Fabulous clipjoint. 224p $2.50 Dutton

47-17762

Detective story.

"Refreshingly unhackneyed. . . The novel gathers most of its physical excitement from the pursuit of red herring and comes to its genuine solution abruptly and on very slight evidence. But Brown's manner is generally sound and happily plain and most of the tale is both touching and convincing." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 2 '47 180w

"Hits a hard, fast pace, but with no particular distinction."

Kirkus 15:46 Ja 15 '47 60w

"Naive and sometimes pleasing little item. Just to show how opinions differ, the story is officially said to be 'in the tough and rugged tradition of James M. Cain and Raymond Chandler,' while we found no likeness whatever to the work of those slick professionals. Seems to us the author has something of his own." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 Ap 6 '47 170w

"The motive for the killing is cockeyed, the plot is screwy and the title of the book has nothing whatever to do with the story." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p43 Mr 16 '47 140w

"Despite occasional purpleness, this is a singularly effective job of portraying people as they are and murder as it is—a sordidly compelling story." Anthony Boucher

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 23 '47 100w

"No masterpiece of detection, but people, especially Ed and Uncle Ambrose, are capably done. Action fast and tough. Background colorful."

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:68 Ap 12 '47 50w

BROWN, GEORGE HAROLD, and others. Theory and application of radio-frequency heating. 370p il $6.50 Van Nostrand

697.7 Induction heating 47-3544

"Explains from basic principles to application, how radio-frequency heating is used in metallurgy, chemical and electrical engineering and shows many applications to non-metallic materials—bonding of thermoplastic sheets, dehydration of textiles and pharmaceuticals and processing of food, also determination of properties of electrical conductors and chemical compounds, and a radio frequency sewing machine and many other operations. Tables, graphs and charts." Library J

"This book is one which should certainly be read by anyone having a serious technical interest in the application of radio-frequency heating." Fred Schumann

+ Chem & Eng N 25:2397 Ag 18 '47 280w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:813 My 15 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:29 Ap '47

"The book stands alone in its field, inasmuch as it presents the subject with more mathematical exactness than has been done heretofore."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:316 S '47 200w

BROWN, J. A. C. Psychiatry for everyman. 247p $3 Philosophical lib.

616.8 Psychology, Pathological Med47-2431

A survey of "the psychological background and development of psychiatry from ancient theories to contemporary practice. English author examines the body-mind problem and defines mind as a process that goes on in living matter. He reviews psychoanalytic theories giving chief attention to Freud, Jung and Adler; describes the nervous system and presents an interesting discussion of intelligence, psychopathology, the psychoses and the neuroses." (Library J) Index.

"Dr. Brown's book must be rated as one of the most successful attempts yet made to introduce the ordinary citizen to the problems, ideas and practices of psychiatry." J. D. Kitchum

+ Canadian Forum 27:238 Ja '48 200w

BROWN, J. A. C.—Continued

"Comprehensive, well-balanced survey. . . An excellent chapter on treatment concludes the book. Recommended for the intelligent layman, but too difficult for 'everyman' to read with ease." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 72:1029 J1 '47 110w

Reviewed by S. B. Shear

Springf'd Republican p14B N 2 '47
120w

BROWN, J. HAMMOND, ed. Outdoors unlimited. 343p il $3.50 Barnes, A.S.

799 Hunting. Fishing Agr47-172

A collection of hunting and fishing stories culled from such magazines as Field and Stream, Nature Magazine, Outdoors, Sports Afield, etc.

Booklist 44:8 S 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 22 '47
110w

Kirkus 15:147 Mr 1 '47 90w

"Even if you have never hit anything with a gun or caught anything with a fly. 'Outdoors Unlimited' is reading entertainment, varied and forest fresh."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 N
2 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:120 J1 '47

BROWN, MRS JEANETTE (PERKINS), comp.

Little book of bedtime songs; pictures by Decie Merwin. [24p] 50c Abingdon-Cokesbury

784 Children's songs 47-30428

Nine simple songs with music to be sung to young children at bedtime.

Kirkus 15:334 J1 1 '47 90w

"These tiny tunes are not hymns and supplement rather than take the place of prayers: sung to a little child they stay in the mind quietly, as a bedtime story should do, but being rhyme, very brief, and carried by a simple, singable tune, they are likely to keep on in the mind as sleep comes on. The pictures are of happy family life, toys waiting for next morning and children ready for bed." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 9
'47 150w

"These songs have been contributed by parents and teachers who know the importance of sending a child to sleep relaxed and happy."

L. R. S.

Springf'd Republican p8B D 21 '47 90w

BROWN, JOE DAVID. Stars in my crown; decorations by Gould K. Hulse, jr. 256p $2.75 Morrow

47-11058

"Told as reminiscences of the childhood years which the author spent with his grandparents in a small Georgia town. Grandpa was an unusual person, a Protestant minister and an outstanding member of the community. The little boy who was seldom separated from him was witness to many experiences of which the average child would be oblivious." Booklist

Booklist 44:108 N 15 '47

"The author reveals a sympathetic understanding of human nature and his book makes good reading."

+ Kirkus 15:177 S 1 '47 130w

"It's a sentimental and nostalgic portrait that Mr. Brown paints, but his plain writing keeps it from bogging down into offensive sweetness and light." David Tilden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
O 19 '47 360w

"This tone, combined with the warmth, wit and understanding used in the handling of personality-types, explains the considerable charm of this first novel." Therese de Grace

+ N Y Times p18 O 19 '47 400w

Wis Lib Bul 43:175 D '47

BROWN, KENNETH IRVING. Margie, the story of a friendship, as told in part through her letters. 255p $2.50 Assn. press

B or 92 Richards, Margaret 46-5712

"A record of the college years of Margie, daughter of the Dean of Denison and Dick, a young theological student of Dartmouth, told mostly through their letters." Cleveland Open Shelf

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '47

Kirkus 14:336 J1 15 '46 130w

Reviewed by P. H. Bickerton

Springf'd Republican p6 S 12 '46 330w

BROWN, LEWIS HEROLD. Report on Germany. 247p $3 Farrar, Straus

330.943 Germany—Economic conditions. Reconstruction (1939-)—Germany 47-11437

"At the request of General Lucius Clay, American administrator in Germany, Mr. Brown, chairman of the Johns-Manville Corporation, made this survey and report. . . He analyzes the factors preventing the economic reconstruction in Germany; he blames the cutting of Germany in half, the restrictive and hampering regulations affecting trade, the American de-Nazification policy, the Russian program. He goes back to the original decision in going into Italy rather than Yugoslavia, thus—he feels—letting Russia go into Vienna, Budapest and Warsaw, and dividing Germany between two civilizations. He blames Roosevelt for following the Morgenthau doctrine rather than that of the Joint Chief of Staff." (Kirkus) No index.

Booklist 44:178 Ja 15 '48

"His criticisms, while open to argument and controversial,—and his proposals for their correction, present a sound, intelligent discussion of the problems of Germany and its relationship to Western Europe from the viewpoint of big business. N.A.M. will welcome this presentation, as will many who fear Russia and hate Roosevelt. But it is a position receiving wide endorsement and needs a fair analysis."

Kirkus 15:564 O 1 '47 250w

"It was a job worth doing, and the book is timely." Russell Hill

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 N
23 '47 700w

"There are some highly commendable recommendations in Mr. Brown's program. . . When Mr. Brown sticks to production, he is on his firmest ground, though even here it is easier, for example, to say that Germany should not export coal than for France, Belgium, Holland, England to accept any such program." Shepard Stone

N Y Times p7 D 7 '47 1200w

Reviewed by W. E. Jackson

Sat R of Lit 30:12 D 29 '47 550w

BROWN, MARCIA. Stone soup; an old tale; told and pictured by [the author]. [41p] $2 Scribner

47-11630

A picture story book about three soldiers on their way home from the wars who manage to wangle a good meal from some overcareful French peasants.

Booklist 44:137 D 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p4a N 19 '47
100w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:33 Ja '48 80w

Kirkus 15:600 N 1 '47 120w

"Gay and witty; perfect for telling or reading aloud." E. F. Clift

+ Library J 72:1690 D 1 '47

"Miss Brown, who has told this and other stories to children in New York's public libraries, has made this book a valuable addition to the equipment of home storytellers as well. Reading aloud the merry tale is sure to please little children as they watch it take place in the pictures." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 D
28 '47 270w

"Marcia Brown brings out the humor inherent in this old tale with the touch of a skillful story-teller and gives to her bright red double-page pictures a real feeling of fete." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p61 N 9 '47 170w

Reviewed by Leone Garvey

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 30 '47 100w

"This clever picture book with its feeling for the French peasants and their background is printed in brown, black and a clear red. It has freshness and charm. It is sure to be favorite with the children and with story-tellers."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:37 N 15 '47 350w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Bad little duck-hunter; with ill. by Clement Hurd. [32p] $1.50 Scott, W.R.

The little duck hunter was not really bad: he just wanted to shoot a wild duck. This picture book for four-year-olds describes in text and picture how he was foiled completely.

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 25 '47 40w

"The background is a trifle off the line of child experience or interest but the development gives it some measure of general appeal." Kirkus 15:127 Mr 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Mr 16 '47 160w

"The 4's, 5's and 6's will find this delightfully silly, which is the way they like their stories. Once again Miss Brown has shown her ability to choose the right, simple words to make the plot clear, weaving into the story the color, sound and motion of poetry." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 16 '47 230w

Sat R of Lit 30:36 Ap 19 '47 50w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. First story; pictures by Marc Simont. [31p] $1.75 Harper 47-30753

A poetic story telling how things might have looked to a little girl, wandering alone just after the creation. After she has met and talked with many of the animals, the little girl finds a boy of her own age for a playmate.

"It is the imaginative drawings of Marc Simont that lend distinction to the book. The text is formless, in spite of the sensitivity of many passages." B. J. Thompson

Cath World 166:238 D '47 50w

Kirkus 15:392 Ag 1 '47 160w

"The pictures do a fine job of catching the mood of the text. This one is for a rather special child, to be sure, but it will delight the right audience." R. C. Benét

+ New Yorker 23:140 D 6 '47 70w

"Marc Simont's drawings are unusual and very lovely. They are printed in black and white against a golden background. Their effect is to make one feel the strangeness and beauty of a world newly created. This is a beautiful book."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 O 18 '47 130w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Golden egg book; ill. by Leonard Weisgard. [28p] $1 Simon & Schuster

47-30234

"Colorful end papers and decorations on every page by Leonard Weisgard are the important features of this large, flat picture book. The brief text concerns a lonely little bunny who found an egg which eventually hatched out a lonely little duck. Details of flowers, leaves and berries in the borders surrounding the pictures of bunny and duck will interest readers of any age." Library J

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 179:126 Je '47 90w

Booklist 43:276 My 1 '47

"It's a beautiful easter egg gift book."

Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 30 '47 230w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p8 Mr 25 '47 240w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:262 Jl '47 50w

+ Kirkus 15:189 Ap 1 '47 100w

"Recommended." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 72:643 Ap 15 '47 80w

"It is the pictures that distinguish the work. On uncommonly large pages and with the luminous beauty of color that so charmed readers of 'Red Light Green Light,' Leonard Weisgard surrounds life-like little animals with flowers of a loveliness one would call unearthly were it not that flowers just like these do grow from our American earth. On the endpapers, which create a panoramic effect nineteen by thirteen inches in extent, the bunny, a frog, a mouse, and a moth in a world of blossom, seem listening to some night music of the forest." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 30 '47 180w

"Florid as an Edwardian valentine, more colorful and more enduring, too, than a whole basketful of Easter eggs, this picture book is a stunning eye-ful for a child's Easter morning." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 30 '47 180w

Spring'd Republican p18A O 12 '47 110w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Goodnight moon; pictures by Clement Hurd. [31p] $2 Harper 47-30762

Picture book for very young children, with rhyming phrases to read aloud just before bedtime.

Booklist 44:74 O 15 '47

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 166:238 D '47 30w

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 14 '47 200w

"In these days of hurry and strain, a book for little children which creates an atmosphere of peace and calm is something for which to be thankful. Such a book is 'Goodnight Moon.'" A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 S 30 '47 210w

"Little children will love this going to sleep book, a really fresh idea by a talented and prolific author."

+ Kirkus 15:334 Jl 1 '47 120w

"Read in a sing-song voice this well-made picture book will put almost any preschooler to sleep." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 72:1277 S 15 '47 70w

"Sleepy stories have a special place in nursery equipment, as every mother knows. This one combines a softly repeating, rhyming text with pictures for the most part in full color, together creating an atmosphere of going to sleep so contagious that the eyelids of a reviewer may begin to droop if he is writing on a warm day." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 26 '47 270w

"The rhythm of the little story is like the sing-song of disconnected thoughts with which children so often put themselves to sleep, and should prove very effective in the case of a too wide-awake youngster." V. H. Mathews

+ N Y Times p35 S 7 '47 150w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:140 D 6 '47 70w

Reviewed by Yvonne Poirier

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 16 '47 80w

Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 15 '47 40w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Sleepy little lion; phot. by Ylla. [31p] $1.75 Harper 47-11482

Photographs of a baby lion playing with a kitten, two dogs, some white rabbits, and a little boy and girl. Pictures and brief text contrive to give an air of relaxation for the very young.

Booklist 44:137 D 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p3a N 19 '47 70w

"A perfect bedtime story."

+ Commonweal 47:150 N 21 '47 50w

Kirkus 15:599 N 1 '47 70w

"A book of specialized appeal and not essential for library purposes," Dorothea Dawson
Library J 72:1690 D 1 '47 70w

"The yawning cub and an intentionally soporific text make this slim volume another good solution to the lights-out problem. Don't be surprised, though, if your audience asks you for a lion cub to play with." R. C. Benét
New Yorker 23:142 D 6 '47 80w

"Text and pictures make anyone, even grownups, feel relaxed and sleepy."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 15 '47 40w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Winter noisy book; pictures by Charles G. Shaw. [42p] $1.35 Scott, W.R. 47-30809

Pictures and brief text describe the sensations of a little black dog as he adjusts himself to the sights and sounds of winter. For the very young.

"Like its predecessors it is original, beautiful, funny, and composed with every possible awareness of what a child would like said next." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 180:142 D '47 210w

+ Kirkus 15:464 S 1 '47 70w

"Excellent sense-perception material for the young child, but book would have to be pre-bound for library use. Recommended." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 72:1380 O 1 '47 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:132 O '47

BROWN, NELSON COURTLANDT. Lumber; manufacture, conditioning, grading, distribution, and use. 344p il $4.25 Wiley 47-31185

674 Lumber trade. Lumbering
"History of and economical production methods in the lumber industry. Discussion of the manufacture and remanufacture, conditioning by air seasoning and kiln drying, grades and inspection sizes and price relationships, merchandising, distribution and use, shipping and traffic and exports of lumber." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:84 N 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1038 J1 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:52 J1 '47

BROWN, PAUL. Circus school; told and pictured. [62p] $2 Scribner 47-30033

"The Perkins family and their horse and dog pets from Piper's Pony reappear in an animal alphabet book. Because he belongs to a circus family, Piper learns his ABC's not in school but in the circus menagerie. The pages are filled with strange and familiar animals, several for each letter of the alphabet; there is very little narrative. Ages 6-9." Booklist

Booklist 43:173 F 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 D 29 '47 100w

"This alphabetically constructed picture book has all the makings of a quiet but entertaining family game, training memory and intelligence."

+ Horn Bk 23:108 Mr '47 50w

Reviewed by N. L. Rathbun
Library J 72:165 Ja 15 '47 80w

BROWN, SAMUEL P. Air conditioning and elements of refrigeration; with the editorial assistance of John D. Constance. 644p il $6 McGraw

628.8 Air conditioning. Refrigeration and refrigerating machinery 47-4477

"For the student interested in design, installation or operation of heating, cooling and ventilating equipment for buildings, the book could serve as a text and handbook. Emphasis is placed on the understanding of fundamentals, but typical manufacturers' rating data for equipment and data from the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers' Guide are reproduced to make this book a complete manual for the design of all but the most complex multistory systems." (Eng N) Index.

Eng N 139:95 Ag 7 '47 90w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1626 N 15 '46 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:43 J1 '47

BROWN, THELMA SHARMAN, ed. Treasury of religious plays; introd. by Harold Ehrensperger. 345p $3 Assn. press

308.82 Religious drama 47-11234

An anthology of twenty short religious plays, suitable for church and school groups. There are six Christmas plays, and three for Easter. Indexes.

Booklist 44:130 D 1 '47

"Recommended to school libraries primarily." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:1610 N 15 '47 30w

BROWN, WENZELL. Angry men, laughing men; the Caribbean caldron. 369p il $3.50 Greenberg

917.29 West Indies—Description and travel. Caribbean sea 47-30233

An account of the author's recent visit to some of the islands and countries to the south of us. There are sections on: Cuba; Jamaica; Haiti; the Dominican Republic; Puerto Rico; the American Virgin islands; the British Virgin Islands; Trinidad; Grenada; Barbados; British Guiana; Venezuela; and the Netherlands West Indies.

Booklist 43:270 My 1 '47

"The book is charmingly populated with prostitutes, drunkards, killers, beggars... The result is as savory and as hard to digest as one of those dishes from the Dutch Indies... I find two things in the book to which I object. In the first place it is a unilateral picture of the islands. Such a point of view destroys perspective and hence appreciation of the countries studied. The second objection is: sociological phenomena can not be studied by merely looking at them over a beer in the corner bar, or while chatting in the market place. A narration in such cases lacks the value of constructive denunciation, since no effort is made to trace the origin, causes (climatic, psychological, hereditary, ethnographic, religious) and possible remedies of the phenomena. The best section of the book is its gallant exposé of the political régime in Santo Domingo." Lorenzo Medrano

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 10 '47 290w

Foreign Affairs 26:233 O '47 30w

"Brown relates his own experiences and describes the beauties and ugliness of the islands with a candor and honesty that win respect even when one disagrees with some of his conclusions. More objective than his previous book, though no less disconcerting, this record makes an interesting contribution to our understanding of a too-little known area." Henrietta Hardman

+ N Y Times p32 Ap 20 '47 230w

"This readable book is both superficial and profound. It is superficial in that it deals chiefly with up-to-the-minute items, with only sketchy background. . . There is a wealth of all sorts of material in this volume." Carleton Beals

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:15 Ap 19 '47 700w

BROWN, WENZELL. Murder seeks an agent. 224p $2 Arcadia

47-19188

Detective story.

"The story is overcrowded with villains, which is why Peter has such an exciting time." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 Je 8 '47 150w

"Here's a unique publishing phenomenon; a $2 reprint of a novel which originally appeared a year or two ago as a 25-cent paperback. It's still a mildly amusing meller about lurid N. Y. criminality." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 13 '47 80w

BROWN, MRS ZENITH (JONES) (LESLIE FORD, DAVID FROME, pseud.). Woman in black. 255p $2.50 Scribner

47-3780

Detective story.

Booklist 44:33 S 15 '47

"Confusing and confused as to denouement, this is not Leslie Ford at her best."

— Kirkus 15:246 My 1 '47 50w

"Mrs. Latham works wonders with the clues, and the upshot is a major Ford opus with plenty of fun by the way, lots of sober puzzlement and a highly impressive conclusion." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 My 18 '47 310w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p34 My 18 '47 190w

"All very sleek and opulent and well above par in its plot."

+ New Yorker 23:120 My 17 '47 90w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 18 '47 100w

"Among the best."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Je 28 '47 40w

BROWNE, HOWARD (JOHN EVANS, pseud.). If you have tears. 255p $2 Curl

47-5874

Psychological tale of mystery and murder.

"The moralizing here makes this fairly dull."

— Kirkus 15:246 My 1 '47 50w

"So far as the reader is concerned, this is no mystery. It is merely the story of the making of a murderer, and it is told with considerable insight and skill." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 Je 8 '47 180w

"Reasonably able job in the Cain tradition, with some good sordid realism; but it's hard to prepare to shed your tears for Mr. Evans' facile irony and shallow characters." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 Je 8 '47 60w

"Old reliable 'wages of sin' theme decked out in 'psychological' trappings—page 3 tabloid stuff duked up for two-buck brackets."

— Sat R of Lit 30:32 Je 28 '47 40w

BROWNE, LEWIS, ed. World's great scriptures; with decorations and maps by the editor. 559p $5 Macmillan

290.82 Sacred books 46-8512

"An anthology of the sacred books of the ten principal religions, compiled and annotated with historical introductions and interpretive comments." (Subtitle) Those religions included are: Babylonian, Egyptian, Hinduism, Buddhism, Confucianism, Taoism, Zoroastrianism, Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism. Indexes of authors and titles.

Booklist 43:163 F 1 '47

"All such books are good. An anthology of the sacred literatures of the world would be worth reading and meditating upon even if the selections were made at random. In this volume the selections were, of course, not made at random, for the compiler has read widely in these classics of man's moral and spiritual quest." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 64:239 F 19 '47 850w
Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '47

"A volume which will have a wide appeal. It is not primarily a scholar's tool, but a book to be read and enjoyed. It can scarcely help battering down many prejudices, raising many questions, and attacking in general the invincible ignorance that has so long seemed a necessary concomitant of true piety. In addition to the texts, beautifully printed and prefaced by very brief but often illuminating introductions, are more than a hundred modern drawings by the author, which add to the attractiveness and value." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 24:283 Ji '47 200w

Current Hist 12:241 Mr '47 40w

Kirkus 14:549 N 1 '46 240w

"Very similar to Ballou's well-known Bible of the World though not nearly so inclusive, and done with less careful scholarship. For larger libraries. Smaller libraries possessing Ballou will probably not require this." G. W. Wakefield

Library J 71:1623 N 15 '46 140w

BROWNE, WALDO RALPH, ed. Leviathan in crisis; an international symposium on the state, its past, present, and future, by fifty-four twentieth century writers. 430p $3.75 Viking

320.8 State, The 46-8354

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"However provocative Mr. Browne's selections may be, they are not organized in such a way as to be useful for the teacher of political theory. No doubt the editor was aiming at the general reader more than the teacher and the student, but a properly organized symposium on the modern state crisis should be a highly useful book." F. G. Wilson

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:139 F '47 550w

"Although this symposium consisting of no less than fifty-four separate essays, papers and extracts covers a wide field, it is not a model of its kind. Some of the choices are good, some bad, some mediocre but what we miss is a guiding idea, a leitmotiv. There is none."

Cath World 165:94 Ap '47 220w

Foreign Affairs 25:518 Ap '47 20w

"A brief review such as this cannot possibly attempt specific reference to each, or for that matter to any of the contributions. It should be sufficient to stimulate the reader's desires by venturing our own classification of the writers he can meet in these pages. Surely a work which starts with Dewey and ends with Wells and has so many of note in the pages between is worthy of study." L. E. Dennon

+ N Y Times p41 F 9 '47 900w

Reviewed by Louis Wasserman

San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 9 '47 470w

"This book is an important contribution to political realism, a reasoned diagnosis of a near-fatal disease. It should be required reading for every adult, and particularly for teachers and statesmen." N. D. Palmer

+ Social Studies 38:327 N '47 500w

BROWNE, FREDERICK LESLIE. New day ascending. 310p il $3 Pilgrim press

266 American missionary association. U.S.—
Race question 47-349

"Fred L. Browne, for 26 years executive secretary of the American Missionary Association, has authored [this] book, dealing with

BROWNLEE, F. L.—Continued
progress in the field of Negro education and race relations since the founding of the Association 100 years ago." San Francisco Chronicle

Christian Century 64:1555 D 17 '47 280w

"Dr. Brownlee writes so well and persuasively that this reviewer wishes every good cause had so eloquent and persuasive a chronicler and spokesman." K. M. Chworowsky
+ Churchman 161:18 F 1 '47 240w

"A sincere, well-written plea for freedom and justice for minority groups." W. A. P. White
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 16 '46 50w

"'New Day Ascending' had to be written and it must be read. It will do much in helping America to relieve itself of the necessity of hypocrisy." E. B. Johnson
+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 Ja 25 '47 1150w

BRUBACHER, JOHN SEILER. History of the problems of education. 688p $4 McGraw

370.9 Education—History 47-2761

In this history of education the author has organized his material into chapters, each one containing a chronological treatment of some persistent educational problem: aims; nationalism; economic influences; philosophy; psychology; methods; curriculum; elementary, secondary, and higher education; etc. Bibliographical commentary. Index.

"There is much in this excellent work to repay the careful reader. It is a well-written, unconventional book which reveals an amazing grasp of the problems which have ever plagued and inspired mankind." J. L. Davis
+ Christian Century 64:829 Jl 2 '47 1000w

"Brubacher's book is an ideal supplementary text for elementary classes and an eminently stimulating volume for students and practitioners with some knowledge of educational history." W. W. Erickman
+ School & Society 65:312 Ap 26 '47 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Angell

School R 55:620 D '47 1050w

Social Studies 38:336 N '47 20w

Reviewed by L. D. Crow

Survey G 36:642 N '47 40w

BRUFF, NANCY (MRS E. T. CLARKE). Cider from Eden. 331p $2.75 Dutton

47-1823

Story of Chloe Van Fleet who ran away from her fashionable Brooklyn Heights home, her husband and three sons, to embark on a prolonged series of love affairs in South America. The time is the last quarter of the nineteenth century.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Mr 23 '47 320w

"The plot is hastily stitched together and superficial to the point of being vapid. Slipshod style and too obvious characterization make it too evidently timed to capture the elusive market of The Manatee. Those who read this for an emotional jog will be disappointed."
— Kirkus 15:12 Ja 1 '47 250w

"Only lovers of sentimental, superficial love stories will enjoy this not unusual novel." Anne Whitmore

— Library J 72:387 Mr 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29 Mr 30 '47 470w

"To say that Miss Nancy Bruff is concerned with the baser manifestations of sex will come as no great surprise to readers who dipped into 'The Manatee.' Her new novel explores the same domains, approximately—heaping (with a minimum of thought, but with a fair share of lavish intuition) adultery on desertion, impotence on lust, madness on immorality, and so on." B. V. Winebaum
— N Y Times p43 Mr 16 '47 400w

"Miss Bruff, not bothering with such trivia as plot, style, and niceties of the language, does her earnest and dogged best to startle the lending-library set."

New Yorker 23:118 Mr 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 16 '47 50w

— Time 49:106 Mr 17 '47 330w

BRULLER, JEAN (VERCORS, pseud). Three short novels. 195p $2 Little 47-2784

Three short novels translated from the French. Contents: Guiding star; Night and fog; The Verdun press.

Booklist 44:16 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 10 '47 200w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 28 '47 450w

"Vercors moves around a good deal while he is telling a story and he probably violates every rule that is supposed to lead to an impressive finished product. Somehow, though, the effect keeps building up and one remembers his shattered done-in Frenchmen a long time after the reading." John Broderick
Commonweal 46:149 My 23 '47 260w

Kirkus 15:134 Mr 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien

Nation 164:487 Ap 26 '47 550w

"Sincere tales through which the intensity of the author's personal emotion comes straight at the reader." John Farrelly

+ New Repub 116:31 My 12 '47 280w

Reviewed by Iris Barry

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ap 27 '47 550w

"Vercors uses again the complicated but perfectly mastered technique of narration within narration, proceeding mostly by indirection, as Joseph Conrad used to do. His style is still highly cultivated; as it was and, without having seen the French original, I have the impression that the translators have kept its flavor. . . It is certainly no disparagement of Vercors' literary achievement to assume that his stories contain many authentic and documentary elements of his own experience. Being a real artist and man, he has succeeded in transforming the sluggy ore of oppressive memories into the pure metallic substances of art." Franz Schoenberner
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 27 '47 800w

"Vercors is full of mannerisms, which are much less noticeable in the original French, but he does have his own way of seeing things, as well as the ability to handle big emotions and big scenes with economy and restraint. I think that anyone interested in contemporary French literature will want to read him." Hamilton Basso

New Yorker 23:103 My 10 '47 240w

"None of the stories is pretty, but Vercors is always restrained in the telling. . . He has mastered the art of understatement and it is what he so skillfully does not say that will evoke the greatest horror." Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 6 '47 600w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 30:42 N 8 '47 400w

BRUMBAUGH, SARA BARBARA. Democratic experience and education in the National league of women voters. 115p $2.10 Teachers college

324.3 National league of women voters. Politics, Practical A47-350

Study of the practical education in politics planned and carried out by the National league of women voters from its beginning to the present time. Bibliography. No index.

"It sets forth admirably the working principles of an organization of free citizens which has taken its stand unwaveringly on a profound belief in the democratic process and the political educability of the adult citizen, and a conviction that the right to vote carries with it the responsibility to know." L. M. Young
+ Ann Am Acad 251:186 My '47 360w

Booklist 43:284 My 15 '47

"The author's attitude is that of a kindly, but firm, critic." W. W. Brickman
School & Society 66:250 S 27 '47 130w
Social Studies 38:96 F '47 30w

Reviewed by A. D. Carlson
Survey G 36:255 Ap '47 550w

BRUNNER, HEINRICH EMIL. Revelation and reason; the Christian doctrine of faith and knowledge; tr. by Olive Wyon. 440p $4.50 Presbyterian bd

231.74 Revelation 46-7404

"Readers of the writings of Barth, Brunner, Niebuhr and others of the same school of thought have long felt the need of a definite exposition in English of the theory of revelation underlying the assumptions and assertions of these thinkers. With the translation of Emil Brunner's Offenbarung und Vernunft, first published in 1941, this need is now supplied. Those who have been looking for a rational justification of the doctrine of revelation will, however, be disappointed. Dr. Brunner not only repudiates natural theology, he also rejects every attempt to prove the inspiration of biblical writers or to give reasoned support to the conviction he holds that certain events of the biblical story really are the 'mighty acts' of God wherein he reveals himself to men." (Christian Century) Index.

"It is definitely claimed that all specific revelation in history is confined to the Hebrew-Christian tradition. . . . To the present reviewer, who has had considerable experience in teaching the philosophy of religion in a state university, it is somewhat alarming to contemplate the effect of the adoption of such a view by any considerable proportion of the educated Christian ministry. It plays straight into the hands of the supporters of secularism in our contemporary culture. . . . Further, the function of revelation is to convert sinners. So surely a true interpretation of revelation should help to do this. But the influence of Dr. Brunner's interpretation upon the children of our modern enlightened paganism will, I fear, be only to confirm them in their unbelief. Yet there is much in this scholarly work that is profoundly true and important. It should be read by everyone who is concerned with contemporary theology. There is an able critique of the traditional Catholic and Protestant views of inspiration." A. C. Garnett
+ Christian Century 64:113 Ja 22 '47 1200w

"The book raises ever so many questions which cannot be discussed in this notice. But no one can read it without receiving from it a great deal of enlightenment and stimulus. The translation by Miss Olive Wyon is as clear and convincing as her work always is." Russell Southwell
+ Spec 179:340 S 12 '47 1250w

"No one who takes seriously the intellectual problems of our time, however, can afford to neglect Dr. Brunner's treatment of them. . . . But can belief in God, or acceptance of the 'revealed' doctrines of Christianity, be consistent with complete intellectual integrity? Dr. Brunner sees the answer in the uniqueness of the Christian revelation. . . . This may not be the final answer; but Dr. Brunner's exposition of it is the most convincing and comprehensive that has so far come from what is without doubt the most influential movement to-day in Protestant Christendom, the 'biblical theology' of Kierkegaard, Barth and himself."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p553 O 25 '47 1700w

BRUNNER, ROBERT KENDRICK, ed. Treasury of gambling stories. 382p $3 Ziff-Davis

Short stories—Collections 46-8526

"There are stories on checkers, mah jong, backgammon, dice, billiards, whist, bridge, poker, écarté, baccarat, faro, roulette and just plain betting—among numerous others. Suspense over the outcome of a contest or game of chance is not always the chief source of interest. Daudet's 'Game of Billiards' is really a blast at military caste, and Frank Stockton's 'A Somewhat Peculiar Boarder' uses an innocent game of checkers only as a means of occupying the attention of two characters. But the stories do picture the hold of many kinds of gambling on many kinds of characters—from Moll Flanders to Alexander Woollcott." N Y Times

"Most of the stories are first rate. Brunner's editing is excellent, with brief biographical sketches, footnotes, a group of aphorisms on gambling, some philosophical observations on the same subject and a bibliography." Ricker Van Metre

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 3 '47 200w

"Like many another entry in the great compendium sweepstakes, Mr Brunner's book contains a number of good pieces and a quantity of flapdoodle as well. The reason so much second-rate stuff gets into anthologies these days may be haste on the part of the editor or publisher to put a book on the market, or it may be, in the case of collections like Mr. Brunner's, that there is just not enough first-rate material available to sustain the theme." John Lardner

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ja 12 '47 950w

"A certain overlapping to be noted in recent anthologies, prompts the thought that perhaps the time has come when any type anthology can be assembled simply by reshuffling the old ones. World literature—the good and the bad—has been by now pretty well anthologized." N. K. Burger

N Y Times p20 D 8 '46 340w

"'Treasury of Gambling Stories' has the merit of handling a hitherto untouched field. It has its faults—largely in the matter of translation. And the editor has sometimes yielded to the collector's temptation to include a story because of its rare subject matter despite its lack of any other quality. Omissions are sometimes surprising—the admirable poker stories which Thomas Costain wrote under the pseudonym of 'Pat Hand,' are, for instance, omitted even from the supplementary bibliography. But the book has its fascination." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 3 '47 170w

BRYAN, MRS FLORENCE HORN. Susan B. Anthony, champion of women's rights; il. by Ericka Weihs. 186p $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Anthony, Susan Brownell—Juvenile literature 47-31491

"An interesting and sometimes dramatic story of the life of a great American, from childhood to her death in 1906. One chapter tells of the first meeting of the International Council of Women in Berlin, another of Miss Anthony's fight to have women admitted to the University of Rochester." (Sat R of Lit) For junior and senior high schools, Bibliography. Index.

"She has a fascinating tale to tell, Susan B. Anthony's turbulent and successful life has all the elements necessary to a first-class biography. Mrs. Bryan has written well, and handled her drama skillfully, and certainly Miss Anthony was a superb woman, deserving every kind of admiration. Perhaps the book is a little flawed by Mrs. Bryan's playing up Women's Rights for a little more than they are worth." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 180:148 D '47 150w

Booklist 44:114 N 15 '47

Commonweal 47:156 N 21 '47 40w

Kirkus 15:436 Ag 15 '47 80w

BRYAN, F. H.—Continued

"Readable account of Susan B. Anthony's part in the fight for women's rights, based on authentic sources and apparently not over-fictionized." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 72:1693 D 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

N Y Times p36 O 12 '47 180w

Sat R of Lit 30:60 N 15 '47 50w

BRYANT, ARTHUR HERBERT. Double image. 175p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

47-1333

The events of twenty-four hours in a comfortable tourist camp on a stretch of Florida beach known as Barton's corners. An assorted group of people, most of them strangers to each other, meet at the camp, and for a day and a night their lives are brought into sharp focus. The outcome in most of the cases is tragedy. One of the characters is a battle-shocked navy veteran; another a brutal hitchhiking soldier.

"The book is not all morbid reverie. It is an exciting moving novel, filled with quick action, penetrating psychological characterization and acutely observed descriptions of Florida sand and sea." Peter Pollack

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 F 16 '47 280w

"A simplicity here counteracts the sordid, and though the market will be limited, this introduces some writing which is compelling if cruel."

Kirkus 14:625 D 15 '46 160w

"In the Grand Hotel pattern, but more carefully and less popularly written. . . A poignant book, well written but not for small libraries." M. H. McElfresh

Library J 72:224 F 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 Mr 30 '47 170w

"The total effect of this lugubrious story is a Grand Hotel squeezed down to miniature size, written indignantly to get some things off the chest. It is a quizzical minor document rather than a novel. Mr. Bryant the veteran speaks editorially through his characters on a number of current topics. And most of this is pretty thin stuff. At the same time there are passages of brief power, realistic description in scenes of violence and tragedy. Mr. Bryant's style can be vivid, but it is too often excessively lurid. When, and if, he can relax, eschew a pursuit of the shocking for its own sake, he shows promise of being able to write a mature, more satisfying book." Theodore Pratt

+ — N Y Times p12 F 23 '47 320w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 16 '47 80w

"Mr. Bryant has done a beautiful, high-powered job of writing on a story that needed all he could give it to make it credible. What we have as a result is a triumph of method over material. The whole thing glitters with excitement and immediacy." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 F 15 '47 480w

BRYANT, DEAN, il. Fun for baby. [16p] 75c Rand McNally

Colored pictures of familiar objects with an accompanying line of text. Pages are cardboard, and the spiral binding makes it easy to use with the very youngest child.

Kirkus 15:598 N 1 '47 40w

"A happy choice for the preschool child, as well as the one just learning to read."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 16 '47 70w

BRYANT, LELAND ADAM, and DICKINSON, THOMAS ALBERT. Jigs and fixtures for mass production. 222p il $3.50 Pitman

621.9 Jigs and fixtures 47-1152

"Three main topics form the basis of the book: tooling procedures preparatory to manufacturing a new product; types of jigs and fixtures; and design and construction of a master tooling dock. Other chapters describe the construction of jigs and fixtures and discuss the properties of various metals and plastic materials used in them. Included in the appendix is a glossary of mechanical terms, and tabulated data for hardness conversion, standard dimensions of nuts and bolts, wire gage standards, drill sizes, weights and specific gravities, etc." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:389 Mr 1 '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:11 Ja '47

BRYANT, SAMUEL WOOD. The sea and the states; a maritime history of the American people. (Growth of America ser) 538p il $5 Crowell

973 U.S.—History, Naval, Merchant marine —U.S. 47-12083

History of the part played by all branches of the maritime service in the development of the United States. Considers the slave trade, whaling, merchant marine, packets, clipper ships, shipbuilding, growth of the navy, and smuggling, as well as brief histories of all our wars from the Anglo-Dutch wars of the 1650's to World War II. Some brief biographical sketches of maritime personnel. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun Book Week p18A D 3 '47 200w

Kirkus 15:523 S 15 '47 90w

"Recommended for all types of libraries." Joseph Borome

+ Library J 72:1608 N 15 '47 110w

"A tremendous amount of information on American ships, sailors, shipping, and belligerent voyages. He is quite thorough, reasonably opinionated, and very enthusiastic. It is assumed that the projected Growth of America series is intended to be for posterity as well as for contemporary readers, which may in time make for puzzled students of a later day if all the books are written in the same easy-going style adopted by Mr. Bryant, possibly due in part to his connection with a magazine noted for a distinctive way of saying things." R. F. H.

Spring'd Republican p10B Ja 11 '48 370w

BRYCE, MRS LUCY WINIFRED (ROBINSON). India at the threshold. 177p $1; pa 60c Friendship press

266 Missions—India. India—Civilization

46-7862

"This book by a woman who served for thirty-two years in India with her husband in the Y.M.C.A. and as a missionary of the Presbyterian, and then the United Church of Canada, is a compact, but complete account of what Christianity has done for India, but with a sympathetic understanding of the contributions which India has made to the civilization and culture of the world." Churchman

Christian Century 63:918 Jl 24 '46 50w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 160:17 O 1 '46 100w

Foreign Affairs 25:346 Ja '47 10w

"Certain glaring problems which India faces are either neatly skirted or altogether left out of the picture. Very little is said about the complex controversy over independence and practically nothing about the relation of Hindu to Moslem. . . However, to be fair, the author has accomplished her purpose in showing how Christianity has related itself to the daily concerns of its converts. And the book contains, here and there, nuggets of fact of pure gold." M. M. Deems

J Religion 27:75 Ja '47 300w

BRYSON, LYMAN, ed. See Conference on science, philosophy and religion in their relation to the democratic way of life, 1947. Approaches to group understanding

BRYSON, LYMAN, ed. See Conference on science, philosophy and religion in their relation to the democratic way of life, 1947. Conflicts of power in modern culture.

BRYSON, LYMAN. Science and freedom. 191p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

304 Science—Philosophy. Liberty. Social problems 47-1502

"Dr. Bryson defines the meanings of freedom, science and scientific thinking and by drawing upon sciences such as anthropology and psychology endeavors to show how these are applied in the world of today. He discusses the feeling of society towards science and use of the scientific method in human society, and examines education in its effect on social change, which, he maintains, should be shaped and controlled by intelligence and experience. His conclusion is that a free world can be attained by straightforward, scientific thinking." (Library J) Index.

"A valuable addition to the book would have been an analysis to to just how scientific humanism is to be reached. The reviewer, at least, finished the book with the sense of having read a speculative essay pitched to a high moral tune. In addition, one can legitimately differ from Dr. Bryson's conceptions of science and culture." F. E. Hartung

Am Soc R 12:242 Ap '47 650w

Booklist 43:248 Ap 15 '47

"This is a thoughtful and sane discussion, speculative and philosophical in nature, about the relationships among science, social advance, education, and individual freedom." R. J. Williams

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1694 Je 9 '47 270w

"The book is full of convincing contradictions of many theories that are universally accepted as true. . . There is an original chapter on education for the good society. This book will well repay the study of those who are sincerely interested in the creation of a new world." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 161:16 Ag '47 180w

"Devotees of a religion of hope and promise can do well to familiarize themselves with the argument of this book, which supplemented by their own faith and effort can strengthen their courage as they move into the difficult but significant days ahead." Earl Cranston

+ Crozer Q 24:272 Jl '47 600w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 12:236 Mr '47 700w

Reviewed by Hans Morgenthau

Ethics 57:217 Ap '47 550w

Reviewed by W. A. Kalenich

Library J 72:73 Ja 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Ruth Benedict

New Repub 116:35 My 5 '47 500w

Reviewed by Leo Shapiro

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 Mr 30 '47 650w

"Mr. Bryson's writing has a subtle and provocative flavor. It is safe to predict that his views on the relation between science and freedom will challenge his readers to thought and on some matters to second thoughts. This is particularly true of his treatment of the role of the 'social engineer,' an unhappy phrase that suggests mechanical analogies he himself would be the first to deny. The chief dissatisfaction, however, which reflective readers will find with this volume is likely to be based on its brevity. For the analysis is not detailed enough to fulfill the appetite its very excellence creates. In a field in which there is a plethora of long and bad books this is an uncommonly good, short one." Sidney Hook

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 19 '47 1400w

Reviewed by G. H. Sabine

Pol Sci Q 62:431 S '47 1050w

"It is to be hoped that 'Science and Freedom' will find many readers. Dr. Bryson writes a lucid and fluid prose which is prevented from ever becoming dry by constant reference to specific analogies and examples drawn from anthropology, psychology and allied fields. His analyses of the nature of freedom and of social change provide a more than adequate answer to the hatemongers who prey on the prejudices and frustrations of the ignorant and the thwarted by advocating white supremacy, anti-labor legislation, and laissez-faire capitalism." Arthur Foff

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 12 '47 350w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton

Sat R of Lit 30:17 Je 7 '47 800w

School & Society 64:471 D 28 '46 30w

Reviewed by Orday Tead

Survey G 36:308 My '47 410w

Reviewed by E. W. Sinnott

Yale R n s 36:552 spring '47 900w

BUBER, MARTIN. Tales of the Hasidim; v 1 The early masters [tr. by Olga Marx]. 335p $3.75 Schocken

296 Hasidism

47-2952

"In the eighteenth century the Baal Shem Tov founded a new religious movement called Hasidism which swept the Jews of Eastern Europe. The Hasidim (the devout) believed that by attaining spiritual joy they were truly worshipping God. For one hundred and fifty years the deeds and sayings of the Zaddikim (masters) were passed on orally. It was only forty years ago that Martin Buber, professor of social philosophy at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, collected this folk literature and gave it a modern presentation in [this book]." (San Francisco Chronicle) Glossary.

+ Christian Century 64:400 Mr 26 '47 140w

"Any American reader is likely to enjoy this beautiful book, regardless of religious affiliation, unless he is entirely immune to mystical thought." Alfred Werner

+ N Y Times p30 My 18 '47 750w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 13 '47 120w

Springf'd Union p4 S 30 '47 110w

BUCHANAN, LAMONT. Story of football in text and pictures. 255p $5 Stephen-Paul

796.33 Football

47-11401

Brief pictorial history of football in the United States from that first game at New Brunswick, N.J. on November 6, 1869 to the 1947 New Year's day Rose Bowl game. The pictures of great persons and great moments in football are linked with short descriptive text. Lists picture credits. No index.

Booklist 44:168 Ja 1 '48

"Somewhat marred by a ballyhoo tone of the professional sportswriter." R. W. Henderson

Library J 72:1695 D 1 '47 50w

"Pictorially it must rank among the best. Several of the game's outstanding authorities, having glanced at an advance copy of Buchanan's effort, immediately became enamored of it. The layman is likely to be affected similarly as he relives the past of the great players of yesterday." Louis Effrat

+ N Y Times p60 N 9 '47 320w

School & Society 67:15 Ja 3 '48 10w

BUCHANAN, NORMAN SHARPE, and LUTZ, FRIEDRICH AUGUST. Rebuilding the world economy; America's role in foreign trade and investment; with the report and recommendations of the Committee on foreign economic relations. 434p $3.50 Twentieth century fund

382 Commerce. U.S. Commercial policy. Investments. Foreign. Reconstruction (1939-) 47-11433

"Surveys previous experience in world trade and foreign investment; the present situation; the possibilities of the new agencies such as the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, and the International Monetary Fund; the hazards of foreign investment under world conditions of today; the need for multi-lateral trade and the obstacles in its path. A final chapter, by the Fund's Committee on Foreign Economic Relations, including representatives from business, labor and agriculture, presents a program of specific steps looking toward a development of multilateral trade and constructive foreign investment." (Special Libraries) Bibliography. Index.

BUCHANAN, N. S.—Continued

Booklist 44:179 Ja 15 '48

Current Hist 13:355 D '47 100w

"No million-dollar public-relations man could have chosen a better time for the publication of a book with this title than the moment when Americans are just beginning to eat less so that Europe can be fed and the great debate on the Marshall Plan is getting under way. Yet Rebuilding the World Economy is no 'quickie' put together for the emergency; it is a scholarly study by two able economists that has been long in preparation." George Soule

+ New Repub 117:25 D 8 '47 1400w

"The Twentieth Century Fund, an organization which is doing a great deal to promote economic literacy, has timed the publication of this book perfectly. Let us hope that every participant in the great national debate on the extent and form of American aid to Europe will study it with an open mind. In that event the prospects of wise action will be much enhanced." Keith Hutchison

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 11 '48 750w

Special Libraries 38:332 D '47

BUCK, MARGARET WARING. Country boy [pictures by the author]. 63p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

47-30289

Pictures and story describe the adventures of a little city boy who visited his uncle's farm for the first time, and the trouble he had with the various animals.

Booklist 43:312 Je 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 My 25 '47 40w

Kirkus 15:163 Mr 15 '47 100w

"A pleasant if undistinguished little story with a well constructed plot. Commonplace line drawings by the author help to interpret the text but add nothing to the book's attractiveness. For reading aloud, ages 4-7." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 72:643 Ap 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 27 '47 270w

"This is an excellent true-to-life story for the 5 to 9 year olds. Tommy is a natural boy who is frightened by things that scare all children, but he has enough courage to learn to overcome his fears. Words and pictures show the author's knowledge of children and country life." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p22 My 11 '47 150w

"Though 'Country Boy' is a slight story, the author has managed to tell of the age-old transition from city-slicker to farmer without too many trite incidents." P. S. T.

Springf'd Republican p5B S 14 '47 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:84 My '47

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Far and near; stories of Japan, China, and America. 250p $2.75 Day

47-11918

"A collection of fourteen short stories written over a period of thirteen years. [The author] weaves her tales against three national backgrounds: China, Japan and the United States. Some of her stories, particularly those concerned with the American occupation in Japan, are as timely as today's news; others, concerned with the problem of love, marriage, parenthood, delve maturely into the realm of human emotions and relationships divorced from a calendar." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"She writes good novels, but she can also maneuver in less space."

+ Christian Century 64:1489 D 3 '47 70w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 10 '48 550w

"There's occasional cynicism in undertones, but on the whole the stories make pleasant enough reading, though they are relatively unimportant in Pearl Buck's picture."

+ Kirkus 15:586 O 15 '47 160w

Reviewed by Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 N 30 '47 270w

"All of the American stories are rather superficial, and are told in a cool, competent style that is guaranteed not to quicken the pulse. Only 'Home to Heaven,' a satire on the colonial mentality of an American couple returning to their extraterritorial privileges in Shanghai, has any real bite to it. Nor do the Japanese stories fare much better. . . The two Chinese stories, 'The Tax Collector' and 'A Few People,' are worth all the rest put together." J. B.

+ N Y Times p36 N 30 '47 500w

"Miss Buck's writing shows up most favorably, naturally, in the stories about the Orient. . . The American stories, however, which represent the author's reactions to life in the United States since she returned from China in 1934, seem to indicate only that a long stay abroad is not the best way for an American writer to develop a sensitivity to vital tremors in the social atmosphere of this country."

+ New Yorker 23:136 N 22 '47 140w

"It is understandable that, of the fourteen short stories in this collection, those dealing with the Oriental character and with the American in China should be the most satisfying. Yet, even in those six or seven stories, Pearl Buck does not show herself at her consistent best. And in the remaining stories, all of which deal with some aspect or other of marriage, one has a distinctly let-down feeling." Hollis Alpert

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 D 6 '47 650w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). How it happens; talk about the German people, 1914-1933, with Erna von Pustau. 276p $3 Day 943.085 Germany—Politics and government. Pustau, Erna von 47-30034

"The third of Mrs. Buck's book-length conversations with people of other countries, held with the idea of furthering international understanding. This one is the rambling, autobiographical monologue of a German woman of aristocratic birth but pacifist and Leftist leanings who broke with her family over the questions of anti-Semitism and Hitler." New Yorker

Booklist 43:167 F 1 '47

"An opus of unquestionable value as a human document, but of limited validity as a historical study." E. S. P.

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 1 '47 480w

"It's a sorry book: Miss Buck [is] obviously under the impression that a 'case' explains it all and that it could happen anywhere; and her co-author [has] a depressing genius for throwing drabness and meanness over everything." H. A. Reinhold

+ Commonweal 45:525 Mr 7 '47 400w

Foreign Affairs 26:226 O '47 20w

Kirkus 14:611 D 1 '46 180w

"Provocative and interesting. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:73 Ja 1 '47 90w

"It is not very often that a reviewer has the pleasure of offering a full recommendation of a book; it can be said simply that Erna von Pustau's personal, conversational account of the decaying of German society cannot be read too widely, especially in America. 'How It Happens' is nowhere uninteresting, and in total it is both revealing and significant." D. T. Bazelon

+ Nation 164:190 F 15 '47 600w

"Erna von Pustau knows her Germany, but she has a mind very much of her own—a fine, intelligent mind. As she puts it, this 'is not the whole story, naturally,' but it is one chapter of Germany's story told with warm sincerity and understanding." Markoosha Fischer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 F 16 '47 850w

"'How It Happens' is written without prejudice, with good-will. . . But it fails to give us the deeper secrets of the German mentality. And it never quite answers the question why it happened in Germany or even how it happened." Shepard Stone

N Y Times p20 Ag 10 '47 800w

"It is an honest document of an honest and intelligent woman, but it falls short of Mrs. Buck's objective, in that it fails to disclose a great deal about the Germans as a people that is not already known."

+ — New Yorker 22:85 Ja 11 '47 100w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 9 '47 200w

School & Society 66:15 J1 5 '47 50w

Spring'd Union p2 Mr 31 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:66 Ap '47

BUCK, PHILIP WALLENSTEIN, and MASLAND, JOHN WESLEY. The governments of foreign powers. 439p $3.25 Holt

342.4 Political science 47-4562

The purpose of this book, as stated in the first chapter, is to furnish "the essential information needed to interpret the policies and action of the great states of the world." The governmental institutions of Great Britain, France, the Soviet Union, Germany, Italy, Japan, and China, are then described, analyzed, and interpreted. Readings at end of each chapter. Index.

"This work is probably the best up-to-date text in the field of comparative government. . . While the work is a desirable addition to the library of any cultured person, it is especially good as a text for comparative government, providing, as it does, the elementary essentials of such a college course, and supplementing each chapter with a critical reading list of collateral materials." A. D. Angel

+ Ann Am Acad 253:209 S '47 360w

"Perhaps this was intended as a textbook for classes in political science. If so, it is a good one—cool, factual and objective. But it is also valuable for reference or reading by all who want to understand world politics." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 64:902 J1 23 '47 140w
San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 7 '47 130w

"The book is well written and scholarly. In colleges it will find a place as collateral reading in such courses as Comparative Governments, Contemporary Problems, and International Relations." J. F. Santee

+ Social Studies 38:280 O '47 650w

BUCKINGHAM, NASH. Ole Miss'. 178p il $2.75 Putnam

739.2 Hunting Agr46-343

Collection of hunting and fishing stories of the old South. First appeared in a limited deluxe edition in 1937 (Book Review Digest 1937).

Booklist 43:182 F 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Mr 2 '47 60w

"A motley collection, uneven perhaps, but with a high standard of excellence. Sure delight for armchair sportsmen—and for those who like to read 'out of season.'"

Kirkus 14:309 J1 1 '46 210w

Reviewed by Stanleigh Arnold

San Francisco Chronicle p3 D 1 '46 110w

Spring'd Union p11 My 3 '47 50w

BUDENZ, LOUIS FRANCIS. This is my story. (Whittlesey house publication) 379p $3 McGraw

B or 92 Roman Catholic church—Converts. Communist party of America 47-1810

"Louis Budenz will be remembered as the managing editor of 'The Daily Worker' whose sudden conversion to Catholicism in October, 1945 added another star to the gleaming crown of Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen. Born of devout Catholic parents in Indiana, Budenz had an honorable career in the labor movement and in municipal reform before joining the Communist party in 1935. He served in various editorial capacities for the party and, during six of his ten years of membership, was on the Communist National Committee. He is now a member of the Fordham faculty." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Index.

Booklist 43:271 My 1 '47

"Mr. Budenz impresses one as a simple straightforward idealist who writes without rancor toward anyone and with especial sympathy for former comrades whose eyes have not yet been opened. He has a certain engaging humility. Anything but rhetorical and at times even unpolished, his book will give goose flesh to many a reader." Joseph McSorley

Cath World 165:86 Ap '47 650w

Reviewed by H. S. Tigner

Christian Century 64:711 Je 4 '47 210w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin

Commonweal 45:653 Ap 11 '47 160w

Kirkus 15:18 Ja 1 '47 250w

"Louis Budenz's book 'This is My Story,' is important because of its exposure of the American Communist Party and the world Stalinist movement. Reading it, one can readily see that the author tells only a small portion of what he knows. But what he does tell is damning, and even sensational. . . When he writes to expose his old comrades in the Communist Party, his style is clear, direct, and reportorial: when he tries to convey his own emotions of reconversion, he indulges in pieties and banalities, and he seems to find it necessary to rely heavily on quotations. . . This is a terrible book. It is always terrible to read of how men turn themselves into puppets. . . Budenz's book should be studied for its symptomatic value and also for its revelations. At the same time it is essential to stress the fact that Louis Budenz is a man who has only a strait-jacket to offer his fellow-countrymen. If we accept his pious advice, we have nothing to lose but our dignity and freedom." J. T. Farrell

Nation 164:368 Mr 29 '47 1100w

"The best part of 'This Is My Story' is the detailed and squalid picture of life in the C. P. U. S. A. These passages should be read with attention by those who continue to regard Communists as zealous and noble characters dedicated to the salvation of the working class. . . But too little of the book is devoted to detail. As a whole, 'This Is My Story' has little of the plodding, Dreiserian honesty which marked Ben Gitlow's 'I Confess,' and it has none of the psychological insight which distinguishes the writings of many disillusioned European Communists." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Mr 16 '47 1050w

"The anticipations which have been aroused will not be satisfied by Mr. Budenz's 'This is My Story.' For, aside from the exposure of Gerhardt Eisler, there is singularly little personal stuff about mysterious Communist agents in Mr. Budenz's autobiographical essay. . . But if Mr. Budenz is still a little opaque when it comes to applying Catholic principles to the workings of the social organism his book is none the less a heartening document. If, after ten years spent in 'the Red straitjacket,' a man can still shake himself free from Marxist fetters, there is hope for freedom in this world." John Chamberlain

N Y Times p3 Mr 16 '47 1250w

"Mr. Budenz's revelations of duplicity, hypocrisy, mediocrity, and intellectual servility to the U.S.S.R. among members of the American Communist high command are not very pretty. The facts he offers are meagre; there is a first-hand account of how a sinister emis-

BUDENZ, L. F.—Continued
sary from Moscow arranged for the assassination of Trotsky, but it's an inconclusive story. The book is very badly written and crawls with misspellings."

— New Yorker 23:106 Ap 5 '47 110w

"As a writer, Budenz leaves too much out of his story. For a person who was as suspicious of the Communists as he makes himself out to have been even before he became one, his reasons for joining the party are curiously thin. Similarly, his activities during his party membership are largely veiled. There is no real confession of how he could have performed all the mental gymnastics required of the Communists in the last decade. Finally, the story of his reconversion is not clear or detailed enough to make a real spiritual change seem plausible. Add to this that the book is not well organized." Marvin Sargent

— San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 18 '47
500w

BUEL, JESSE. Jesse Buel, agricultural reformer; selections from his writings; ed. with introd. by Harry J. Carman. 609p $6.75 Columbia univ. press

630.8 Agriculture. Buel, Jesse Agr47-263

"Dr. Carman has selected and edited a generous portion of Buel's writings in the field of progressive agriculture and has also contributed a biographical account of this scientific farmer." (School & Society) Glossary. Index.

"Minor editorial slips occur, but these are inconsequential when weighed against the worth of the volume to the historian, especially the historian of American agriculture." N. A. McNall

+ — Am Hist R 53:185 O '47 320w

"Professor Carman's work is well organized and edited. It is an important contribution, particularly as a source book for use in study of the economic and social history of American agriculture." M. L. Wilson

+ Ann Am Acad 254:211 N '47 400w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ag 10 '47
250w

"Buel's simple, direct writings make a self-portrait of an earnest, unselfish American who was devoted to the common weal and who had an uncommon ability to further it." Robert Simpson

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 6 '47 270w

School & Society 65:384 My 24 '47 30w

Reviewed by C. C. Zimmerman
Social Forces 26:118 O '47 750w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:256 S '47 200w

BUELL, RAYMOND LESLIE. Liberia; a century of survival, 1847-1947. (African handbooks) 140p pa $1.50 Univ. of Pa. press

966.6 Liberia 47-1714

"In this posthumous work an American authority on Africa found a need for a 'fresh approach' to the problem of developing Liberia, politically, socially and economically." Foreign Affairs

Foreign Affairs 25:708 Jl '47 30w

Special Libraries 38:8 Mr '47

"The small volume contains important information not readily available elsewhere."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:271 S '47 160w

BULFINCH, THOMAS. Mythology; with dictionary index; il. by Elinore Blaisdell. new ed 957p $3.50 Crowell

291 Mythology 47-4613

"The Age of Fable,' 'The Age of Chivalry,' and 'Legends of Charlemagne' are included in this new edition of Bulfinch's mythological and legendary lore. The editors have added several sections to complete the author's original plan. Additions include a retelling of the 'Nibelungen Lied'; a summary of Wagner's version of the legend in his series of music-dramas; outlines of the stories of Beowulf, Cuchulain, Hereward the Wake and Robin Hood. But the present editors' greatest contribution has been in the complete revision of the index." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 44:34 S 15 '47

"Not a necessary purchase for libraries which already have the three separate volumes or a one-volume edition of Bulfinch." J. D. Lindquist

Library J 72:1116 Ag '47 80w

"I have not looked up the date of the first appearance of Bulfinch's three volumes in one, but they now appear in the new issue of 'Bulfinch's Mythology.' It is said to be copyright 1947, but of course it cannot be except for some of the special features. The Publisher's Preface is so carelessly printed that a part of it is left out. The illustrations are in-ispid. Still, here is Bulfinch solidly in print, after a lapse of standard editions."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 Jl 13 '47 410w

Reviewed by Eugene MacHamus

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 3 '47
150w

BUNCE, WILLIAM HARVEY. Treasure was their quest; il. by Louis Glanzman. 230p $2.25 Harcourt

47-11026

The lively adventures of Willie and Ham, two small boys living in a small upstate New York village. The excitement begins when they see an ad for a divining rod which is supposed to locate buried treasure.

"A delightful, highly humorous account." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 180:144 D '47 90w

"An entertaining story."

+ Churchman 161:17 D 1 '47 30w

"As long-winded and uninspired a piece of writing as has come this way for some time."

— Kirkus 15:581 O 15 '47 60w

"Although style is a bit labored, dialogue is excellent. All but main characters are stereotypes, but they add to the humor. Illustrations are good. Recommended for boys and girls 10-12." J. L. Webster

+ Library J 72:1785 D 15 '47 60w

"Although the plot is slight, Mr. Bunce demonstrates a sound knowledge of boys and spins a good yarn that will hold the attention of 8 to 12 year olds." R. A. Brown

+ — N Y Times p20 Ja 11 '48 140w

"An amusing, well-written story. . . The atmosphere and dialogue are so American that it would be an excellent book to send to the boys and girls abroad who want to know about everything in America."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:48 N 15 '47 50w

BUNT, CYRIL GEORGE EDWARD. History of Russian art [Eng title: Russian art]. 272p pl $6 Studio

709.47 Art, Russian [47-6889]

"The evolution of all aspects of Russian art from the pre-Christian era to the present day." (Cleveland Open Shelf) Bibliography.

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '47

"Perhaps the most complete factual account of the subject yet to appear. Except for two pages at the end, entitled 'Final Survey,' he has confined himself to a purely objective, though comprehensive, recital of facts and events in Russian art history. . . The text is dry going, but the illustrations are well selected, numerous (almost two hundred black and white, and eight in color) and of average good quality." W. E. P.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 24 '47
130w

BURCHFIELD, LAVERNE. Our rural communities; a guidebook to published materials on rural problems. 201p $2.50 Public adm.

323.354 Sociology, Rural, Sociology, Rural—Bibliography, Country life 47-3889

"This book contains carefully compiled lists of reading references on schools, housing, recreation, health and many other aspects and problems of rural life. Each list is preceded by a concise but comprehensive survey of its field, serving at once as introduction and annotation. This is a book that will be widely serviceable." Chicago Sun Book Week

Reviewed by Martha Luginbuhl
Am J Pub Health 37:1483 N '47 180w

Reviewed by P. W. Wager
Am Pol Sci R 41:1033 O '47 410w
Booklist 44:4 S 1 '47

"All of us who are interested in country life will find ourselves indebted to Laverne Burchfield of the University of Chicago for 'Our Rural Communities.'" J. T. Frederick
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Je 22 '47 50w

"Miss Burchfield's volume provides rural leaders and other persons who are interested in the problems of rural America with a valuable guide to the most useful published materials in the various fields." J. P. Leagans
+ El School J 48:52 S '47 750w

School & Society 65:446 Je 14 '47 10w

BURGAN, JOHN. Two per cent fear. 263p $2.75 Farrar, Straus 47-31054

Novel based on the war in the Pacific. The hero is a marine who takes part in the invasion and occupation of a Pacific island, and after thirty months of service, plenty of it boredom, he finally gets stateside leave.

Kirkus 15:263 My 15 '47 110w

"The tedium and peril of war and the army's pungent talk about chow, brass hats and women are honestly recorded. All adds up to creditable but rather undistinguished performance." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:1106 Ag '47 80w

"One of the most heartening things about Mr. Burgan is his sense of form: the inner structure of his book is a first-rate geometric progression, from its first rain-drenched pages to the last, bitter-sweet moment in Honolulu: his battle scenes, plotted with the same care, are superb reporting, as well as the integral core of a fine novel." James MacBride
+ N Y Times p20 O 5 '47 320w

"Mr. Burgan makes his point all right, but his account of the meditations and activities of a group of Marines and sailors who spend most of their time on a quiet island in the Pacific will seem fresh and interesting only to those who have missed all the other novels like it in the last couple of years."

+ New Yorker 23:112 S 27 '47 110w

BURGER, SAMUEL. Careers in aviation; in collaboration with Vocational guidance research. 209p $2.75 Greenberg

629.13 Aeronautics as a profession 46-6734

"Rapid survey of future of aviation, with detailed considerations of all jobs—the 'in flight' and the 'grounded'—telling what the job is and is not, what it demands in education and training and the possible financial rewards. Cautious but not disillusioning. Rounds out with full picture of the CAA and Federal Airways, the status of airplane manufacturing, and how the urge to be one's own boss fits in." Library J

Booklist 43:208 Mr 1 '47

"Solid, specific, closely packed, with an appeal to young people, especially veterans with aviation experience. . . . Unlikely that a better book can be written soon. Essential." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 71:755 My 15 '46 120w

BURGESS, HELEN STEERS. See Steers, H.

BURGUM, EDWIN BERRY. Novel and the world's dilemma. 352p $3.75 Oxford

809.3 Fiction—History and criticism 47-4309

"By means of a series of penetrating essays, the author, Associate Professor of English at New York University, analyzes the writings of such diverse authors as Proust, Joyce, Stein, Faulkner, Saroyan, Hemingway, Wolfe, et al to show how they reflect both constructive and disintegrating phases of contemporary society." (Library J) Partial contents: Social forces and the art of fiction: The sense of the present in Thomas Mann; Franz Kafka and the bankruptcy of faith; Ulysses and the impasse of individualism; Virginia Woolf and the empty room; Aldous Huxley and his dying swan; The promise of democracy in Richard Wright's Native son; The fickle sensibility of John Steinbeck; Thomas Wolfe's discovery of America. Index.

"Though this book lacks precision and a clear outline in its argument (in spite of its title, the world's condition is nowhere sharply defined in the form of a dilemma) it is nevertheless full of interesting and thoughtful criticisms of the various interpretations these novelists make of their times." Philip Child

+ Canadian Forum 27:141 S '47 700w

"To write about fifteen modern novelists with a distinct understanding and sympathy for each of them, to place them in relation to other writers and to the wide world, to consider their style and structure as well as their core of meaning, their technique as well as their humanitarian values, is a large order and Dr. Edwin Berry Burgum has filled it with skill and taste." E. W. Bates

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 18 '47 650w

Commonweal 46:292 Jl 4 '47 900w

"This scholarly work, replete with psychological interpretation, demands reader concentration as well as a broad literary background. The effort is extremely rewarding. Recommended." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 72:804 My 15 '47 110w

"Mr. Burgum is an exponent of the sociological approach to literature. He approaches it grimly, inexorably. He cannot look even at Uncle Remus without seeing him as a symbol of the exploitation of the Negro by the white. If Mr. Burgum has ever read a book just for fun, he never confesses the indiscretion." DeLancey Ferguson

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 O 5 '47 320w

"The Novel and the World's Dilemma' is extremely difficult to read. This is not because its ideas are difficult. They are not; they are all too simple. It is because Mr. Burgum, for all his sense of human urgency, has no sense of human immediacy, and so drifts off at every point into abstractions that have little meaning and often less syntax." Diana Trilling

N Y Times p4 Je 1 '47 1000w

"In some of his chapters, Mr. Burgum sounds like a man trying to solve literary charades, as when he plays with such ideas as whether or not the mouse-loving Lenny can be taken as a symbol of the proletariat. There are some notable omissions, among them Scott Fitzgerald and Evelyn Waugh, but otherwise the author pretty well covers the ground he sets out to."

New Yorker 23:106 My 24 '47 200w

Springf'd Union p13 Jl 3 '47 240w

BURGWYN, MRS MEBANE (HOLOMAN). River treasure; il. by Ralph Ray. 159p $2.50 Oxford

47-2532

A loyal, lonely little Negro boy living in the flood area of the Oconeechee Neck, in North Carolina, is the hero of this story for grades five to seven. Guy heals a wounded dog, and the dog leads him to new foster parents and a happier existence.

Booklist 43:296 My 15 '47

BURGWYN, M. H.—Continued

"Rich folklore is interwoven with the story."
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 My 25 '47
100w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:215 My '47 120w

"A good story of boys, dogs, fishing and treasure."
+ Kirkus 15:217 Ap 15 '47 110w

"Stresses morals and ideals but is good reading for ages 9-11." Gertrude Andrus
+ Library J 72:736 My 1 '47 40w

"Despite a touch of sentimentality, this is a revealing story of Negro life. The problems of a patient and hard-working people are sympathetically presented, with careful attention to speech and background." Elizabeth Hodges
+ N Y Times p27 Je 22 '47 90w
Sat R of Lit 30:29 Je 14 '47 180w

BURKE, EUGENE CHARLES, and KOBER, EDGAR IRVING. Modern store design. 161p il $10 Inst. of product res, 448 S. Hill st, Los Angeles 13

725.213 Stores and store buildings 47-344
"Two well-known western architects specializing in store design and store equipment here and abroad present a practical study of the influence of store style in modern merchandising. Factors discussed are economic considerations, planning budgeting, store fronts, interior lighting, styling and color, accessories and fixtures. Typical details are fully covered. Illustrations." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:226 F 1 '47 60w
Management R 36:239 Ap '47 30w

BURKE, FIELDING, pseud. See Dargan, O. T.

BURKE, RICHARD. Red gate. 225p $1.98 Ziff-Davis 47-11694
Detective story.

"The story is rather clumsily plotted, but you will learn to like Sadie despite her obvious faults." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p62 D 7 '47 160w

"Not so good."
Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 22 '47 40w

BURKE, THOMAS. English night life. 150p $3.50 Scribner

914.2 England—Social life and customs
"A history of after-dark capers in England from the fourteenth century to the blackout. In a way, it is a chronicle of the centuries-old struggle between civil authority and people who don't want to go to bed at night—whether Hogarthian rakehells, Regency bucks, or the young cutups of the nineteen-thirties." New Yorker

"Mr. Burke is a scholar, but an easygoing one, and his book is an interesting study of manners."

+ New Yorker 23:109 O 4 '47 100w
Time 50:112 O 13 '47 800w

BURKE, THOMAS. English townsman as he was and as he is. 151p il $3.75 Scribner

914.2 England—Social life and customs. City and town life [47-20749]

"Thomas Burke, just before his untimely death, had fortunately completed [this book], in which he expressed some of his strongest beliefs and prejudices with wide and curious knowledge, racy examples, and brisk argument... His thesis is that the townsman's life is no less natural and traditional than that of the countryman and is an expression of one of man's earliest instincts. 'All our English liberties, or what is left of them, have been won by the townsman' is another theory he seeks to establish." Manchester Guardian

"This study is a balanced combination of sociology and history and one more pleasantly illustrated book for contemplative reading. Recommended." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 72:1370 O 1 '47 80w

"The townsman's communal life from mediaeval times to the late war is admirably summarised, with many lively and unhackneyed quotations and the shrewd comment of one who had digested his own personal experience, read much, and thought much on the subject." J. B. + Manchester Guardian p3 F 14 '47 240w
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p111 Mr 15 '47 950w

BURKHART, ROY ABRAM. How the church grows; with a foreword by Henry R. Luce. 210p $2 Harper

261 Church. Church work. Community churches 47-30487

"By the pastor of the First Community Church of Columbus, Ohio, a really interdenominational church, this is a description of what he calls the True Church and a discussion of how it should work for the individual and for the social welfare of mankind. Introduction by Henry R. Luce, who says that to advance the cause of Christ's Church in America, each Christian must think about it seriously, and the best way to begin is to read this book." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Reviewed by W. E. Hammond
Christian Century 64:1021 Ag 27 '47 800w

Reviewed by E. M. Tainton
San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 30 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:147 N '47

BURKS, LORNA DOONE. I die daily; ed. by Arthur J. Burks. 208p $3 Rockport press, inc, 545 5th av, N.Y. 17

616.994 Cancer Med47-802
"This short book is the intimate last record of a woman dying of cancer, dying, she believes, because of her own carelessness and neglect. It is the daily report of the progress of the malignancy, and of her emotional and spiritual reaction to her surroundings as well as to her approaching death. It is also a testimony of love and faith and courage—published posthumously and edited by her husband, in the hope that her words will induce others similarly afflicted to take heed before it is too late." Chicago Sun Book Week

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 D 22 '46 90w

"Even Mrs. Burks's unswerving faith in the love and wisdom of Deity and in an eternity to come cannot keep this from being a painful and disturbing book. Surely it should have, as she wished, the effect of impelling all who read it to seek and heed the advice of competent physicians instantly on any continuing ailment not otherwise explicable, to support research in the field of cancer, and to help in providing means and better facilities for the care of its victims; especially because it was wartime it was hard for Mrs. Burks's friends to find even a place in a hospital where she could die. All these are objectives for which scientists and others have long been working. To the reasons and statistics they advance, this intimate record adds the emotional force of direct experience through its unforgettable picture of what death from cancer meant to an extraordinarily courageous and self-controlled woman." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ja 19 '47 450w

N Y Times p14 Ap 27 '47 110w

BURLINGAME, ROGER. Inventors behind the inventor. 211p $3 Harcourt

608 Inventors. Inventions 47-31023

"The main thesis of this book is that inventing is a social process rather than the act of especially gifted individuals. In chapters with such titles as 'Behind Them All,' 'Behind Fulton,' 'True Heroes of the Telegraph,' and 'Behind Henry Ford,' the author shows that behind great inventions there is usually a history of forgotten or unsuccessful inventions that embodied similar principles." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 44:74 O 15 '47

Commonweal 47:155 N 21 '47 100w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:44 Ja '48 80w

Kirkus 15:505 S 15 '47 170w

"This book will fascinate adults as well as young people." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 72:1475 O 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1614 N 15 '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:52 Jl '47

Reviewed by F. S. Adams

N Y Times p65 N 9 '47 550w

"An original and continuously interesting record."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:58 N 15 '47 40w

Wis Lib Bul 43:177 D '47

BURN, MICHAEL. Yes, farewell. 434p $3 Macmillan

47-1780

A novel, probably to some degree autobiographical, which relates the story of a Scotch officer who is a prisoner of war in Germany. In one attempt to escape he falls in with some Red Army soldiers and his companionship with them, his subsequent imprisonment as a "political prisoner," and his friendship with a Yugoslav partisan, combine to change his attitude toward the war and the ends for which it was fought.

"Author Michael Burn engages in no mock heroics: he does not try to shock the reader into consciousness with accounts of atrocities that have been told and retold. He tells his story quietly, almost gently, but with terrific impact upon the mind of the thoughtful reader. In 'Yes, Farewell,' he has written one of the better books about World War II." Ben Kartman

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 30 '47 360w

Kirkus 15:12 Ja 1 '47 170w

"Recommended for most libraries, as a story of action, a political novel, and an interesting study of human nature and relationships." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:387 Mr 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 5 '46 350w

"The value of his account, which is seemingly autobiographical, is its intelligence and the insight it gives into the minds of long-term PWs, Germans and escaping Russians. Not of the quality of the E. E. Cummings 'The Enormous Room,' it is still a trenchant and sensitive account of experiences essentially exciting in themselves, even when treated with the restraint Michael Burn employs." R. M. MacGregor

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Mr 30 '47 650w

"Mr. Burn's characterizations of the various types of prisoners and their German guards; the detailed descriptions of their daily routine, their changing moods, and their physical and mental sufferings; the presentation of the impact of the war's ups and downs on the camp morale—all this, based on hard, firsthand experience, is good writing, though it has been done much better before. . . There is also, in the dialogue, that kind of fullness which for short stretches may pass for passionate intensity. 'Yes, Farewell' is well-meaning, and not without the dignity of its author's sincere convictions. But it is a Tendenzroman—and whatever its tendency, such a novel should attempt to win over the reader by an engrossing story rather than by verbose intellectual debate. As it is, Mr. Burn's Tendenzroman makes, on the whole, tedious reading." Robert Pick

— + Sat R of Lit 30:61 Ap 12 '47 410w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 176:332 Mr 29 '46 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p149 Mr 30 '46 900w

BURNET, ADAM WILSON. The Lord reigneth. 134p $2 Scribner

228 Bible. New Testament—Revelation 47-3911

"This volume contains the Russell Lectures for 1944, delivered at New York and elsewhere on a foundation of Auburn Theological Seminary. It is 'a popular explanation' of the Revelation of John. The author is Collegiate Minister of St. Cuthbert's, Edinburgh." Crozer Q

Christian Century 64:832 Jl 2 '47 20w

"This book is timely as we have just come out of an apocalyptic period of history." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 161:20 S 15 '47 60w

"It is a heartening experience to read a book by a working minister who has studied an obscure writing carefully, used excellent authorities on that writing, and reached conclusions differing from those held by many but in accord with those of the best biblical scholars. It is impossible within the limits of five lectures to do justice to all the questions that are inherent in the closing book of the New Testament canon. The author is well aware of that, and this reviewer passes without criticism some generalizations and omissions that fuller discussion would clarify and remedy." E. W. Parsons

+ Crozer Q 24:373 O '47 300w

"Dr. Burnet is at his best in expository preaching, in which he combines sound scholarship and a knowledge of man's spiritual needs and of the resources available to meet them. The book of Revelation is a much misunderstood and misinterpreted book, and Dr. Burnet's series of lectures will help to make the message of the book comprehensible and helpful to Christian readers. The style is popular, with the average reader, rather than the scholar, in mind."

+ Kirkus 15:306 Je 15 '47 120w

BURNHAM, JAMES. Struggle for the world. 248p $3 Day

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. World politics 47-1144

"With the world not one but two, communist and non-communist, conflict is inevitable. In fact, Mr. Burnham, of the Managerial Revolution, says the Third World War has begun. Points which he makes here are: communism aims for total power, whereas free society implies 'a fragmentation of power'; whether we like it or not we must accept leadership of the non-communist world and create a world empire—otherwise, with our present vacillating and ineffectual foreign policy, we shall be easy victims of the communist plot; internal purge also is necessary, as well as monopoly of atomic bomb production to prevent communist world domination." Library J

Reviewed by H. F. Simon

Am Pol Sci R 41:803 Ag '47 900w

"This is probably the most dangerous and 'un-American' book and, at the same time, in its grim way, the leading joke book of the year. It is dangerous because it is a blueprint for aggressive war, more gratuitous and provocative than anything which, to my knowledge, ever emanated from the Comintern or from the councils of the Nazis. It is 'un-American' because it advocates a complete abandonment of the traditional foreign policy of benevolent neutrality which guided this country from 1789 to 1898 and helped it to become the great country it was at the turn of the century. It is a joke book because it is being eagerly devoured and recommended by conservative, anti-Soviet devotees of free enterprise who are apparently unaware that Professor Burnham's own 'managerial' program for the United States is a quasitechnocratic fascism, which would leave about as little place for

BURNHAM, JAMES—Continued
traditional free enterprise as the Soviet pattern of economic life." H. E. Barnes

— Ann Am Acad 252:106 J1 '47 700w

Reviewed by J. H. Powers
Atlantic 179:152 My '47 1550w
Booklist 43:267 My 1 '47

Reviewed by Carlyle King
Canadian Forum 27:91 J1 '47 240w

Reviewed by L. G. Seligman
Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ap 6 '47
410w

"A bristling, flaming, booming pamphlet. It portrays a crisis and shouts for action. It is counterblast to Marx's Communist Manifesto of 99 years ago. It may attract attention and arouse controversy; but not as much as the Manifesto, because it has many of that tract's defects without its chief virtue of forceful, dramatic literary expression. Notwithstanding, this book is vigorously written." R. H. M.
Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 19 '47 600w

Reviewed by Waldemar Gurian
Commonweal 45:615 Ap 4 '47 2400w
Foreign Affairs 26:219 O '47 110w
Kirkus 15:53 Ja 15 '47 180w

"Recommended as obverse of Sternberg's Coming Crisis." Walter Hausdorfer
Library J 72:455 Mr 15 '47 140w

Reviewed by A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.
Nation 164:398 Ap 5 '47 1550w

Reviewed by George Soule
New Repub 116:32 Mr 24 '47 1450w

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin
New Statesman & Nation 34:414 N 22 '47 700w

"Mr. Burnham is at his best when he deplores the confusion and vacillation of American policy. If his book helps to induce the American people to adopt a more realistic and responsible attitude toward world affairs, it may have a salutary effect. Unfortunately its melodramatic exaggerations may also stimulate a mood of panic which is not conducive to wise judgment, to the practice of democracy or to the adoption of a positive and liberal program of social and economic reconstruction." H. B. Parkes

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ap 20 '47 1000w

"In his new book Mr. Burnham has made up his mind, and like most former Communists, he has recanted with a vengeance. World communism, he asserts, is the enemy. . . . Mr. Burnham accepts this melancholy vision with all the conviction of a prophet, and he writes about it with all the passion of a revolutionary pamphleteer. . . . He has written a superb chapter on 'the immaturity of the United States.' He has also illustrated the lack of clear-headedness in the development and execution of our foreign policy, but it is fair to ask whether the revolutionary cure he suggests is not worse than the disease of improvisation which he properly attacks." James Reston

N Y Times p1 Mr 16 '47 1550w

Reviewed by Frank Altschul
Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ap 12 '47 1700w

Reviewed by M. W. Woodthorpe
Spec 180:26 Ja 2 '48 650w

U S Quarterly Bk1 3:170 Je '47 280w

"Burnham has the courage to follow his logic to its unpalatable and dramatic conclusion. He does ask the key question of our day. In this reviewer's opinion he gives the wrong answer. But it is time to drag the preventive-war-against-Russia school of thinking out into the open where it can be fairly discussed. 'The Struggle for the World' does just that." W. T. R. Fox

Yale R n s 36:755 summer '47 850w

BURNS, JOHN HORNE. The gallery. 342p $3
Harper

47-4090

Series of portraits of Americans and Italians who met in an arcade called the Galleria Umberto in Naples in 1944. There is very little plot; the sketches of the various characters carry on this study of the lonely, the unhappy, and the frustrated. The author is a former army officer.

Reviewed by Robert Halsband
Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Ag 3 '47
380w

Kirkus 15:137 Mr 1 '47 160w

"A reporter and commentator on the varieties of sexual behavior; an angry and thoughtful moralist, he shows the Americans behaving—with a few admirable exceptions—as pitiless conquerors of a hungry and helpless city." H. W. Hart

Library J 72:886 Je 1 '47 70w

"His sympathy with the Neapolitans is generous and ingratiating, and his affection for them is too specific and imaginative to be merely sentimental. But this imaginative sympathy operates too exclusively to the benefit of the Neapolitans, and his final position is too angry, too desperate." John Farrelly

+ — New Repub 117:28 J1 7 '47 600w

"A novel of extraordinary skill and power. . . . Mr Burns writes unevenly, perhaps deliberately so, sometimes using the shock technique of photographic realism, sometimes employing a kind of stylized symbology, but always with telling effect. In this, his first novel, Mr. Burns shows a brilliant understanding of people, a compassion for their frailties and an urge to discover what inner strength or weakness may lie beneath the surface." J. D. Ross

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Je 8 '47 800w

"There is a fervent sensitivity, a passionate sympathy, in the writing of these intimate studies. And in the 'Promenade' sections of the book the author's concern for living people—for their fumbling, perilous attachments and responsibilities—is even more directly revealed. This is a good and admirable concern; yet it is often overdone. The generosity and the compassion are made at times to seem excessive. The appreciation of the Italian people grows occasionally into something like a sentimental idolatry." Richard Sullivan

+ — N Y Times p7 Je 8 '47 650w

"I feel pretty certain that Mr. John Horne Burns, when he has worked at his craft longer, will give us something both solidier and more intense than this already remarkable book." Edmund Wilson

+ — New Yorker 23:60 Ag 9 '47 1150w

"It is the sights and sounds of the places Burns remembers that makes the reader squirm—the camel dung in the Medena in Casa; the ghostly linen brilliance of the hot cities where something festered and where American soldiers for the first time felt like intruders; the fezzes and white teeth of the Fedhala Arabs; the flies on the fruit; the 'passion pit' of the Hotel Alletti in Algiers; and penicillin being queen of the black market in Naples. Burns reports it like a technicolor camera. He has written a very satisfying book." William Hogan

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 29 '47
300w

"This is a remarkable book, written by an instructor in English in a New England boys' school, who served as a GI in the North African and Italian campaigns. The market is glutted with books about the war; but this is one of the best of them." L. G. White

+ Sat R of Lit 30:21 J1 19 '47 680w

Spring'd Republican p10B O 5 '47 170w

"Author Burns is at his best when remembering the shapes, sounds and smells of Naples, Algiers and Casablanca. His sections dealing with Naples' huge VD hospital and an evening spent in a homosexuals' hangout are first-rate. But too much of the best writing is descriptive reporting that does little to advance Gallery as a novel. Characters, good and bad, are used to prove a point or to support an emotional stand. With all its unevenness, Gallery shows more promise than most U.S. novels of World War II. But like many soldiers who came back itching to write a book, Author Burns has poured out his material without managing to shape it."

+ — Time 49:110 Je 9 '47 430w

BURROWS, EDWIN GRANT. Hawaiian Americans; an account of the mingling of Japanese, Chinese, Polynesian, and American cultures. 228p $3 Yale univ. press

309.1969 Hawaiian Islands—Social conditions. Hawaiian Islands—Race question. Acculturation 47-11702

"The cultural differences of the several groups of inhabitants of Hawaii, with a study of the effects of each on the others and on the resulting descendants. Professor Burrows (Anthropology, Connecticut,) gives special consideration to the Nisei, the American born Japanese, and their position at the outbreak of war." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:145 D 15 '47

Current Hist 13:357 D '47 80w

"Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1187 S 1 '47 80w

"Dr. Burrows' study is a brief, readable and scholarly object lesson in the complex field of acculturation. His personal observations are amply supplemented by testimony from sociologists, historians, and other anthropologists, as well as by members of the different cultural groups concerned." N. B. Beck

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 11 '48 360w

BURROWS, MILLAR. Outline of biblical theology. 380p $3.50 Presbyterian bd.

230 Bible. Whole—Theology 47-715

"The author . . . seeks first to discover what the Bible actually says, then whether the conception under study is tenable, and finally to what extent and in what sense the Bible remains authoritative for us.' This procedure is followed through a wide range of theological topics: authority and revelation, God, Christ, the universe, man and sin, the religious community, salvation, and the Christian life with its moral requirements. The characteristic themes of any text in systematic theology are all here even such details as the doctrine of adoption, the meaning of 'son of man,' or the Antichrist. With amazing industry the relevant scriptural passages are assembled, submitted to higher and lower criticism, and interpreted." (Crozer Q) Bibliography. Indexes.

"This book by Professor Burrows has appeared 'in the fullness of time.' With fidelity to the most exacting standards of research in the history, archeology, languages and cultures of Hebrew and Christian antiquity, yet with a sympathetic insight into the problems of our time and his responsibility as a teacher of ministers, he has written a survey of the enormous range of biblical ideas whose every sentence is helpful and exciting." S. V. McCasland

+ Christian Century 64:336 Mr 12 '47 900w

"This is a book of prime importance. . . Any preacher concerned to expound the Bible will find the volume an indispensable reference work. . . At a time when so much neoorthodox theology is read into the Bible and made normative as 'the biblical viewpoint,' it is highly important that students of theology should come to know and use Dr. Burrows' book to recover a sound perspective in the exegesis of scriptures." E. E. Aubrey

+ Crozer Q 24:169 Ap '47 850w

BURT, ELINOR. Far Eastern cookery; with drawings by Samuel Bryant. 349p $3 Little 641.5 Cookery, Far Eastern 47-31012

Contains recipes for many of the better-known dishes of Hawaii, Japan, Siberian Russia, China, the Philippines, the East Indies and islands of the Pacific, India, Australia, and New Zealand. Glossary. Index.

Kirkus 15:332 Je 15 '47 170w

"To be recommended, if only for its excellent glossary, its large and useful index, and its section on interchangeable food terms listing American substitutes for Far Eastern rarities." H. L. Mason

+ N Y Times p66 N 9 '47 180w

"As a specialty cook book, 'Far Eastern Cookery' is a good and useful volume to have at hand." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 O 2 '47 260w

BURT, KATHARINE (NEWLIN) (MRS MAXWELL STRUTHERS BURT). Close pursuit. 320p $3 Scribner

47-30062

Romantic novel of Colonial Virginia. It is the love story of Lady Frances Bemesebrook, who fled from England to avoid an unwanted marriage, and took refuge as a governess on a Tidewater plantation. Glimpses of some historical characters are part of the story: Thomas Jefferson, Patrick Henry, and George Washington.

Booklist 43:170 F 1 '47

"Mrs. Burt is particularly felicitous in handling dialects and in keeping the idiom reasonably close to the spirit of the times. As former fiction editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, she knows how to supply, too, the intrigues which fascinate her feminine readers. 'Close Pursuit' is a lively story, told in an interesting mature style." E. E. Leisy

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 9 '47 290w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 29

'47 550w

"An historical novel by the author of many light love stories which marks a very definite step up and is occasionally reminiscent of To Have and To Hold."

+ Kirkus 14:622 D 15 '46 120w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Mr 9 '47 300w

"Picturesque speech, humor and finesse give 'Close Pursuit' an air of credibility that its events do not always justify. You may protest that some of it is melodrama, that little of it is completely original. But you're likely not to care as you avidly turn the pages. Politics plays a strictly secondary part here. The real theme is love—denied, betrayed, renounced. Seldom in the modern novel is it discussed in such noble phrases. Yet readers sated with articulate psychoneurotics or tight-lipped contemporary passion will doubtless make the most of it." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 26 '47 500w

BURT, NATHANIEL. Rooms in a house, and other poems, 1931-1944. 119p $3 Scribner 811 47-4420

First book of poems by an American writer and musician, who is the son of Struthers and Katharine Newlin Burt.

"Smooth lyrics, done with taste and skill, revealing response of a high caliber. The work of a poet who probably has a good deal to say, though he has not yet emerged from the cave of echoes sufficiently to say it with marked distinction. Full of promise."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 21 '47 70w

"Nathaniel Burt in his first book of poetry wears his Housman with a difference. His verse has the old-fashioned cachet of slight wistfulness and sometimes whimsy. This is not wholly a drawback, for Mr. Burt's imagery is often trenchant and vivid, and where the golden A. E. fades at the end of most of his poems, this new poet, less nostalgic, writes with more youthful and active assertion. His pleasant pasts and forward hopes neither haunt the reader nor make him weep. But in pursuing the old dreams and fashioning the new, Mr. Burt frequently overwrites." Elizabeth Johnson

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 10 '47 420w

"Mr. Burt is both musician and poet, an excellent combination. When he is at his simplest and most melodic, his lyrics are beautiful. . . Sometimes he turns a well-wrought epigram. In the sonnet, both Shakespeare and Petrarchan, he is fluent and effective. When we add that such a poem as "Tower of Roland" has the magic of incantation, we have accorded him an almost Draytonian variety." Robert Hillier

BURT, NATHANIEL—Continued

— Sat R of Lit 30:40 Je 21 '47 450w

BURTON, EARL, and BURTON, MRS LIN-ETTE ARNY (MACAN). Taffy and Joe; drawings by Helen Stone. (Whittlesey house publication) 60p $2 McGraw

47-18671

Taffy was a dog and Joe a clever little monkey. The two animals performed together in a children's circus and that gave Joe an idea. He persuaded Taffy to run away with him and join the real circus in a nearby town. There they became famous for their act, but fame was not a substitute for home and their small master and mistress, so they came home and were forgiven. For ages six to ten.

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 166:236 D '47 20w

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Je 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:211 My '47 80w

"Pet books always find an audience and here is an unusual combination—a monkey and a dog. . . A not particularly important or original book, but a pleasant story."
Kirkus 15:164 Mr 15 '47 80w

"Classic fairy tales always seem plausible and have a degree of reality that captures even an adult, but this does not measure up to the generally accepted standard. Children will enjoy it, however, as they do many of this type of fairy tale." B. W. Bell
— + Library J 72:531 Ap 1 '47 120w

"Besides having a circus in it, this merry tale of Taffy and Joe and their adventures in the great world offers needed variation on the theme of a little animal's running away, regretting it and coming back. These two friends do just that but with a gay difference, and pictures in color, just fantastic enough to suggest a true atmosphere, go right along with what they do." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 11 '47 330w

"A tale of lively pace and humor. Grown-ups are likely to think that Joe and Taffy are over-humanized, but 6 to 10-year-olds, who firmly believe that animals ought to understand English, won't cavil about that, not when the skittery minded monkey and his loyal comrade really go into action." E. L. B.
+ — N Y Times p30 Mr 23 '47 200w

"A lively and amusing tale delightfully illustrated."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 Ap 19 '47 70w
Wis Lib Bul 43:69 Ap '47

BURTON, ELIZABETH (SUSAN ALICE KERBY, pseud). Fortune's gift. 372p $2.75 Dodd 47-3636

The Island of San Mercato, situated in the Adriatic, with its medieval culture and its international society, is the scene of this novel. An American college professor, Hilda Bragge, and a young Englishman, arrive at the citadel at the same time. Hilda was to complete work on her thesis; the boy was fleeing a father with ideas about work. The two hated each other on sight, but after months on San Mercato, the discovery of a miraculous spring, and various episodes with San Mercato's odd inhabitants, their attitude toward one another changed completely.

"Miss Kerby has a high gift for accented portraiture and extravagant situation. Her satire is gentle but probing, her wit nimble and illuminating. She has written a joyous and highly adult comedy of manners." Rose Feld
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ap 20 '47 750w

"An efficient extravaganza, a social comedy in a comic-opera setting, this felicitous first novel by Susan Kerby proves that she shares with other English writers the gift of the light touch. She writes a brisk, crisp prose that may be a legacy from her days as an account executive in a London advertising agency; her gaze is cool and unwavering. If occasionally she is merely facetious when it was obviously her intent to be devastating, 'Fortune's Gift' is still on the whole artful, dry and knowing entertainment." M. M.

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 20 '47 500w

"Entertaining enough reading if you can manage to avoid any devastating comparison of the book with 'South Wind.'"

New Yorker 23:117 My 3 '47 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Je 29 '47 150w

BURTON, MRS KATHERINE (KURZ). Difficult star; the life of Pauline Jaricot. 239p $2.75 Longmans

B or 92 Jaricot, Pauline Marie 47-3702

Biography of a saintly French woman, Pauline Jaricot, daughter of a wealthy silk merchant of Lyons. She founded the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, the Association of the Living Rosary, and a model community of workingmen. Short bibliography. Index.

"An excellent biography. . . Mrs. Burton writes with the grace and ease that claim many satisfied readers for her books, but which, too, are apt to make them forget the painstaking research that has made her works what they are." B. L. Conway
+ Cath World 165:569 S '47 320w

Commonweal 46:555 S 19 '47 390w

"Pedestrian style and appeal limited to Catholics." R. J. Hurley
Library J 72:804 My 15 '47 110w

BURTON, MILES. Will in the way. 192p $2 Doubleday

47-11089

Detective story.

Booklist 44:185 Ja 15 '48

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week O 31 '47 50w
Kirkus 15:447 Ag 15 '47 80w

"Here's an expert British chess puzzle for those so disposed." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 2 '47 110w

"Below this author's par."

— New Yorker 23:116 N 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p27 O 19 '47 100w

"Better-than-average-British."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:41 O 25 '47 50w

BUSH, CHRISTOPHER. Case of the missing men. 217p $2 Macmillan

47-22234

Detective story.

Booklist 44:33 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 31:304 Ap 27 '46 60w

"Christopher Bush is one of the good ones. Quiescent for some seasons, at least on this side, he's out with another Grade A detective tale starring Ludovic Travers, consulting specialist to Scotland Yard—a man to watch." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Je 15 '47 200w

"The plot is ingenious but a trifle far-fetched." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p25 Je 22 '47 110w

"It's good to have Mr. Bush back after too long an absence; as usual he presents the simon-pure jigsaw-puzzle detective story with unobtrusive competence." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 15 '47
70w

"Best British brand."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Je 28 '47 50w

BUSH, CHRISTOPHER. Case of the second chance. 250p $2.50 Macmillan

47-12181

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 D
28 '47 180w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p62 D 7 '47 110w

"Good, solid British stuff."

+ New Yorker 23:143 N 29 '47 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 14 '47
100w

"Redeemed mainly by engaging personalities of Wharton and Travers. Otherwise overlong, tortuous, and, surprisingly, spotted with 'had-I-but-knowns.' Irritating."

— + Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 29 '47 50w

BUSH, DOUGLAS. English literature in the earlier seventeenth century, 1600-1660. (Oxford history of English literature, v 5) 621p $7.50 Oxford

820.9 English literature—History and criticism [A46-1793]

First published volume of a projected twelve volume history of English literature. "In contradistinction to the Cambridge History, which gave separate chapters to the different authors and by different critics . . . in the Oxford plan 'each volume or half-volume will be an independent book.' . . . Here apparently periods are to take the place of authors, with no overlapping." (Spec)

Reviewed by J. F. Macdonald

Canadian Forum 26:187 N '46 420w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 5 '47
150w

"If, in a volume which is notable for wit and humor, wisdom and learning, it is necessary to single out for special mention one or two qualities, the first of these is the quality of order. Professor Bush's task was a formidable one; for the confusions of the time were great, men were divided by the sharpest convictions, styles of expressions were many, and even within groups of congenial spirits there were always points of difference. This historian's particular contribution has been to reduce this rich, inchoate mass to order and coherence. . . . One other characteristic of this admirable and most useful book is the ability to assume the point of view of men of the earlier seventeenth century, to share in, as it were, their anxieties in the face of the new discoveries of natural science; but to share also in their confidence in inherited beliefs." S. C. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 22
'47 1000w

"The first full volume to appear in the twelve-volume project of an Oxford History of English Literature is Professor D. Bush's English Literature in the Earlier Seventeenth Century. It sets a standard such as to make later contributors quail. It is, indeed, a new model of literary history. It is new in conception, or, rather, a revival, with changes, of a long-defunct conception. It takes literature in the large as the body of all philosophically significant writing, political, theological, and scientific, as well as that which more conventionally comprises the literature which is a fine art. It treats its material, too, in a social, but not Marxian, way as an aspect of the society from which it sprang." H. B. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 16 '46 270w

"As a scholar Mr. Bush succeeds admirably; his width of knowledge is impressive, and the scholarship in the body of the book is well supported by the scholarly apparatus at the end—the almost embarrassing wealth of bibliography and the invaluable chronological table. Whatever faults one may find, the final judgment of the book must be that it supplies the student of the period with a guide which, with regard to all matters of fact, is solidly dependable." Joan Bennett

+ New Statesman & Nation 31:68 Ja 26
'46 1350w

"Throughout this learned and gracious book the qualities for which Mr. Bush is so well and favorably known are exhibited: the ability to single out the precisely fitting and exquisite quotation; the gift of witty phrasing, quiet humor and apt (and sometimes slightly sly) allusion; the sympathy with his subject as well as a mastery of it. There is an awareness of present-day tastes, tendencies, vogues and sensibilities, with a wise avoidance and occasionally a reproof of modern extravagances." S. C. Chew

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr
30 '47 1250w

Reviewed by H. J. C. Grierson

Spec 176:68 Ja 18 '46 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p66 F 9 '46
2300w

Reviewed by L. L. Martz

+ Yale R n s 36:568 spring '47 1100w

BUSH, MARIAN (SPORE). They [with a pref. by Edward Alden Jewell; il. with 3 full-color pl. and 14 half-tone paintings and drawings]. 158p $3 Beechhurst press

133.93 Spiritualism

47-5620

"The posthumously published autobiography of the 'spirit-directed' artist who a few years ago startled art critics with distinctive paintings she said were the work of long-dead masters using her hands. Presented now for a larger and probably less-startled audience are several of the more famous works, including 'The Leopard Man' and 'The Ship of Death.' The bulk of the book is made up of 'teachings from the other world,' mainly simple sermons on the futility of earthly power and riches." Springfield Republican

"Her painting, which has a crude power, seems to this reviewer better than her writing. Mrs. Bush rhapsodizes; she talks in parables. She moralizes; she exhorts like an evangelist. She is repetitious, and she is illogical. The influence of her social environment is manifest on every page." Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p19 Ag 17 '47 330w

"The paintings are unworldly looking enough to offer support for Mrs. Bush's claim of supernatural direction, but the sermons are too superficial to warrant much attention."

Springf'd Republican p12B O 19 '47
150w

BUSHNELL, ADELYN (MRS MARSHALL BRADFORD). Tide-rod. 344p $3 Coward-McCann

47-4401

Romance of Maine and one of its seafaring families, the Dows, in the 1860's and 70's. Captain Caleb Dow; his aged mother who lives in France and controls the Dow finances; his wife, Delight, who knows how to manage her husband; and John and Mandy, the children of Caleb and Delight, are the chief characters.

"Adelyn Bushnell comes to the writing of fiction from stage and radio. Perhaps her own experience as an actress accounts for the obvious theatricality of her novel and her undue stress on violence and raw emotion. Caleb Dow has individuality if not plausibility, but the rest of the dramatis personae are merely names in a playbill. Narrative interest is fairly well sustained, but 'Tide-Rode' as a whole is unsubstantial melodrama." J. T. Flanagan

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 8 '47
450w

BUSHNELL, ADELYN—Continued

"A first novel of men of the sea and women at home, this is at times dramatic, at other times too well stocked with all the ingredients of the fiction cabinet."

Kirkus 15:175 Mr 15 '47 170w

"Characterizations are tissue-thin, the motivation mechanical, the drama abortive. None the less, 'Tide-Rode' will provide a pleasant evening for the reader in search of light, fast paced entertainment." Therese de Grace

— + N Y Times p10 Je 15 '47 360w

Springf'd Republican p8A S 21 '47 120w

BUSHNELL, EDDIE. Underseas log; from the records, as told to M. O'Moran; illustrated; photography by Wm. L. Morgan; underseas photography by [the author]. 266p $4 Caxton printers

656 Diving, Submarine 47-1927

The adventures of an American deep sea diver, a native of Monterey, California, who began his career as a diver in 1933. He has dived for lost articles, and for the bodies of the drowned; and he has dived to repair hose lines or pipe leaks. He knows the life of the sea, and of the people who live on its shore. His account of this life has been told to Mabel O'Connell Moran.

"If one is willing to wade through Mrs. O'Moran's inept treatment he will find some interesting tales of the life of a diver. Some excellent photographs enhance the book's appearance considerably."

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 23 '47 100w

"No primadonna performance here, but a plain spoken, plain dress account of particular interest to men and boys."

+ Kirkus 15:19 Ja 1 '47 120w

"More interesting than his story is the revelation of a simple but unique personality. In spite of the dangers and difficulties of his job he has an appreciation of beauties of the underseas world, and determines to photograph them! His rugged honesty, tenderheartedness and sense of humor (evident in his tales of waterfront habitués) mark him as a character to be recognized and acclaimed. Fascinating reading for all the family." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:157 Ja 15 '47 130w

"Mrs. Moran, or Mr. Bushnell, or both, have captured the flavor of the Monterey waterfront, and have packed the narrative full of characters and conversation. . . In turning out this fine narrative, it is unfortunate that the publishers did not alter or omit the last three chapters. They concern the Japanese in Monterey—and were written in wartime. They would have been better presented without so much heat." S. N.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 2 '47 300w

BUSTANOBY, JACQUES HENRI. Principles of color and color mixing. 131p col pl $4.50 McGraw

667.6 Color 47-1480

"Practical manual illustrated with original color charts on application of color, development and reproduction of colors. Two hundred and forty-two formulas for standard and popular colors tested by the author, 96 in full color. One of the plates gives a new presentation of primary colors. Topics include color psychology; individuality in wearing apparel; and distance legibility of colors." (Library J) Index.

Chem Eng 54:278 Ag '47 50w

Library J 71:1051 Ag '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:6 Ja '47

BUTCHER, DEVEREUX. Exploring our national parks and monuments; prepared under the auspices of the National parks association. 160p il $2.75; pa $1.75 Oxford

917.3 National parks and reserves 47-30376

"Lists the National Parks from Maine to California, illustrates the text with stock photographs, and furnishes park headquarters addresses, opening and closing dates, and locations of camp grounds and hotels. It strongly defends the parks against their enemies, lately increased by forces seeking to establish airports within the parks, thereby defacing the scenery and destroying their worth as examples of primeval America." (N Y Times) The author is executive secretary of the National parks association. Bibliography.

Booklist 44:13 S 1 '47

"This attractive booklet by the executive secretary of the National Parks Association is marked by the strong conviction that these areas must be preserved in their natural state. Mr. Butcher's volume is also to be commended for its many fine halftones and its invaluable data on topography, trees, flora and fauna and means of access."

+ Commonweal 46:341 JI 18 '47 200w

Reviewed by P. J. C. Friedlander

N Y Times p19 JI 20 '47 110w

Reviewed by D. L. Morgan

Sat R of Lit 30:29 S 20 '47 90w

Springf'd Union p5 JI 21 '47 110w

BUTLER, JESSIE REHWOLDT HAVER (MRS HUGH D. BUTLER). Time to speak up; a speaker's handbook for women; foreword by Nancy Astor. 264p $2.50 Harper

808.5 Public speaking 46-8232

"An informal yet expert little volume on public speaking for the average woman. There are suggestions for platform speaking, for conducting a board meeting, for leading a discussion group and even a syllabus for a club course in public speaking." (Cleveland Open Shelf) Index.

Booklist 43:166 F 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

"As an incentive and a guide to women to become effective public speakers, as a textbook in public speaking for high school and college classes, and as a source of basic information in this field, this book offers excellent subject matter." M. H. Kingsley

+ J Home Econ 39:524 O '47 200w

"An excellent handbook for the women who some time or other will have to accept the challenge of speaking on their feet. . . Not a step by step, self-teaching course in public speaking, but sound advice on how to be a better public speaker. Some sample material and some practical exercises add to its classroom value."

+ Kirkus 14:374 Ag 1 '46 170w

Springf'd Union p6 S 3 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:34 F '47

BUTTERFIELD, ROGER PLACE. The American past. 476p il $10 Simon & Schuster

973 U.S.—History. U.S.—History—Pictorial works 47-11505

"A history of the United States from Concord to Hiroshima, 1775-1945; told with the aid of a thousand pictures, reproduced from original photographs, paintings, cartoons, lithographs, engravings, and drawings, especially selected and arranged to illuminate and illustrate the politics, personalities, wars, and peaceful progress of America and its people." (Subtitle) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:131 D 1 '47

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 O 26 '47 380w

Kirkus 15:634 N 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by George Soule

New Repub 117:26 D 1 '47 140w

"A book that leaves the reader—if, indeed, one should call him the reader, rather than the spectator—goggle-eyed, and yet with a satisfying sense that he has not been looking on at any vain show but witnessing a pageant with meaning for himself and for the rest of the world." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 N 2 '47 1650w

"The pictures were hand-picked with considerable skill. They provide a lively and varied commentary upon the commentary of the text. Drawn from numerous private collections, as well as from the better-known public ones, they display Americans through 170 years in all their broad humor, vengeful politicking, and substantial photographic reality. . . . The author's text in no way repeats the form of the ordinary history books, true, but beneath the streamlined form lurk the old clichés on which American history has so sadly founded." Adrienne Koch

+ N Y Times p9 N 16 '47 950w

New Yorker 23:133 N 8 '47 120w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 23 '47 500w

"This handsome volume is the product of an original conception that has been admirably realized. But although it makes an innovation by applying the method of pictorial narrative to history, it is in other respects closely allied to some recent books that deal with portions of the national saga. . . . Excellent book." Lloyd Morris

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 O 25 '47 1300w

"The American Past is almost exclusively focused on politics and politicians, sheds only an occasional gleam on the high spots of U.S. social history. But on U.S. politics, it is a first-rate picture book."

+ Time 50:105 N 3 '47 230w

BUTTS, ROBERT FREEMAN. Cultural history of education; reassessing our educational traditions. 726p $4 McGraw

370.9 Education—History 47-1428

"Viewing education as 'integrally related with the culture of each period' (p. 2), Professor Butts goes about 'reassessing our educational traditions' in a consistently systematic fashion. He introduces significant data derived from political, economic, social, intellectual, and religious history as a backdrop for his analysis of educational development. . . . Nearly half of the book deals with the 19th and 20th centuries, yet not much of prime importance seems to have been left out of the other sections. The individual educators are given short shrift, fewer than five pages being devoted to Pestalozzi, Herbart, and Froebel combined." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

"A Cultural History of Education is a sound pedagogical text for elementary students of the history of education, even though it lacks illustrative material. The historical scholar, however, will have to look elsewhere for a thorough-going treatment of the subject." W. W. Brickman

+ Am Hist R 53:77 O '47 480w

"The European roots of cultural and educational changes which found expression in America are traced with clarity and skill. The perspective which it gives, in the consideration of current educational theories, is invaluable to one who seeks to comprehend fully the present-day schools of thought. . . . Professor Butts attempted a difficult task, that of delineating the effect of education upon culture and of culture upon education. He has succeeded admirably. His Cultural History of Education deserves to be widely read." O. C. Carmichael

+ Ann Am Acad 252:171 J1 '47 440w

"The content of this impressive work is rather descriptive than evaluative. The 'reassessing' aspect is not conspicuous. . . . While designed especially for students of education, [the book] has value for other readers who may wish a general conspectus of history in one volume. The development of particular topics may seem inadequate, even though it is never reduced to an arid outline; but there are ample bibliographies as a guide for further reading."

Christian Century 64:951 Ag 6 '47 270w

"About the best all-around text published in a long time is 'A Cultural History of Education.' . . . The 50-page index is exceptionally valuable for reference purposes, especially since Professor Butts has included the vital dates of all persons mentioned. The bibliography is up to date with 1946 titles and is almost entirely clear of slips." W. W. Brickman

+ School & Society 65:312 Ap 26 '47 450w

Reviewed by C. D. Champlin

School R 55:432 S '47 1100w

"From the standpoints of selection of content, the method of treatment, style of writing, and basic interpretation of both history and education this book ranks unusually high in quality and usefulness as a contribution to the literature of the history of education." F. C. Wooten

+ Social Educ 11:233 My '47 700w

Social Studies 38:238 My '47 30w

"The scope of the book is broad, and the full use of current scholarship in a variety of fields has made especially difficult the problem of proportioning the materials. The procedure is, however, sufficiently systematic to make the vast array of facts and ideas less fragmentary and confusing than they might easily have become."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 3:270 S '47 180w

BUZZATI, DINO. Bears' famous invasion of Sicily; tr. by Frances Lobb. 147p $2.75 Pantheon bks.

Fairy tales

Translation of a popular Italian fairy tale. It is the story of King Leander of the bears who conquered Sicily and lived in peace with its human inhabitants for thirteen years. Then corruption raised its head, the King was killed, and the bears departed to their mountains.

Booklist 44:189 Ja 15 '48

"It seems wicked to find any fault with the translation and presentation of this story when the whole book is one of the astonishing and delightful features of the season's publishing. Read aloud from the original Italian it swings along like a Chesterton ballad. . . . This is a very moral story and ideal reading in 1947."

+ Commonweal 47:154 N 21 '47 350w

"No brief book note can describe adequately the charm of this highly original tale with its enchanting pictures. It must be savored by readers old and young who enjoy imaginative stories. And some of these will perceive the satire." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:36 Ja '48 170w

Kirkus 15:625 N 15 '47 120w

"Story has charm in spite of certain awkward bits of translation, principally in the interpolations in rhyme. Illustrated by author; full pages in color are full of lively humor. Librarians had better examine before buying, since chapters dealing with battles and ghosts may be too strong for some. Not essential; for special purchase only." Clara Adams

Library J 72:1473 O 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ja 11 '48 360w

"Whether or not one quite agrees with the theme, one is wholly disarmed by the charm of its presentation, by the lively inventiveness of detail which enthalls the imagination, the bland humor which highlights the most unexpected incidents. These qualities are also abundant in the fine illustrations, beautifully drawn and reproduced in subtle, glowing colors." E. L. E.

+ N Y Times p45 N 16 '47 200w

New Yorker 23:136 D 6 '47 30w

BUZZATI, DINO—Continued

"From Italy comes a book for all ages that, in text and pictures, is filled with a sort of enchantment. There is no other word that expresses the feeling that is created as we turn its pages."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:42 N 15 '47 470w

Time 51:74 Ja 5 '48 600w

BYNNER, WITTER. Take away the darkness. 177p $2.75 Knopf

811

47-2007

The first book of new poems published by this American poet since 1940.

"There is a limpid quality about Mr. Bynner's poems and, at the same time, a depth not always noticed at a glance. The process of communication is so adroit that the reader is amazed to find how much he shares so soon. It is the natural instinct of the maker of poetry to impart, generously. And to do so takes artistic skill." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 19 '47 480w

"The cumulative impression of the volume is not very satisfactory. Bynner has not matured, and the total effect is of carelessness, of superficiality. Perhaps nothing else could be expected from the early Bohemian point of view in which he flourished. His heart is in the right place but somehow more is demanded these days. However there must still be a certain following for his work."

Kirkus 15:187 Mr 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by George McDonald

Library J 72:889 Je 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 31 '47 370w

"It is impossible to read these new verses by Mr. Bynner without being touched by his humanity, his warm openness. If these qualities sufficed to make poetry, 'Take Away the Darkness' would be an important book. That it is not throws additional light upon the nature of Hell's street-paving; but more importantly, the failure of so ingratiating a book to rise above mediocrity should tell us something about a whole tradition—I do not want to call it a school—which Mr. Bynner's verse very accurately represents: Poetry is one of the Decorative Arts." Dudley Pitts

— N Y Times p4 Je 15 '47 550w

"'Take Away the Darkness' will win new friends for Witter Bynner's poetry and will be a joy—at times even a revelation—to those who count themselves old friends of his work." Starr Nelson

+ Sat R of Lit 30:25 J1 5 '47 550w

BYRNES, JAMES FRANCIS. Speaking frankly. 324p il $3.50 Harper

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. World war, 1939-1945—Peace. International relations 47-11175

A candid statement of the author's experiences first as observer at the Yalta conference, and later as secretary of state. In the period he covers, from February, 1945, to October, 1946, Mr Byrnes traveled some 77,000 miles "in search of peace." Index.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 181:118 Ja '48 700w

Booklist 44:83 N 1 '47

Reviewed by A. E. Stevenson

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 O 26 '47 700w

"It may be contended that Mr. Byrnes' spirit and intent has been distorted by a sensation-hungry press or by publishers eager to make a killing. Certainly the newspaper stories released on the day of the book's publication gave an impression of a sword-rattling, bellicose, provocative attack on Russia which the book as a whole fails to sustain. In the main, Mr. Byrnes has written a good-tempered, restrained if disillusioned account of his experiences in dealing with Russian leaders. . . . Nevertheless, the provocative section played up by the press is in Mr. Byrnes' book, and under the conditions of its authorship it makes up the heart of the book. No American political leader of Mr. Byrnes' eminence could write what he has written between pages 195 and 203 of this book and not have it construed as a deliberate attempt to persuade the United States government to hasten a military showdown with the U.S.S.R. The press was justified in seizing on this section as the most important thing said by Mr. Byrnes, for it is."

+ Christian Century 64:1295 O 29 '47 1900w

"Must stand at the head of the current list of history while it is hot. It is admittedly a personalized story rather than an analysis of the full record. But it lays a significant basis for a considerable understanding of the international role upon which the United States is now embarked." Charles Gratke

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 15 '47 1050w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '47

Reviewed by J. C. Kerwin

Commonweal 47:232 D 12 '47 390w

Current Hist 13:355 D '47 100w

"An essential book for well-informed citizens to read. Not easy, but worthwhile."

+ Kirkus 15:487 S 1 '47 180w

"His recommendations on foreign policy seem soundly based on his own experience and on an appeal to common sense. Recommended." W. A. Hausdorfer

+ Library J 72:1264 S 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by Blair Bolles

Nation 165:448 O 25 '47 1700w

"A straightforward and persuasive account. . . . With quiet earnestness and an admirable determination to keep from shouting, James F. Byrnes offers a detailed report on his connection with American foreign policy from the days of Yalta . . . to his handing over of a burdensome and heartbreaking office to General Marshall in January, 1947. It is an illuminating book, and is unlikely to leave any doubt in a fair-minded reader's heart that the United States has sincerely striven for international concord, that Byrnes was a negotiator of infinite patience and that the Russians are incredibly exasperating people to deal with. He makes an unassailable case that Molotov is a man to try the forbearance of saints, and he never pretends that he himself is among those possessing such forbearance." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 117:28 O 27 '47 1550w

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin

New Statesman & Nation 34:414 N 22 '47 600w

"It was Mr Byrnes' capacity for work which pulled him through some of the roughest going any American Secretary of State has ever faced, and it is the record of this patient, unyielding, unremitting toil which distinguishes his book about it. Not that the book is heavy. It is written with considerable urbanity, and its disclosures of Big Three politics on the highest level make exciting reading. . . . His book fulfills the promise of its title. What Mr. Byrnes knew he tells frankly and simply, and many of the revelations in this book would produce front-page headlines if they were doled out piece-meal. . . . Historians will study this book carefully for a long time; it is clearly the most important source yet available on the central diplomatic problem of our time." Joseph Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 O 19 '47 1800w

"The time will probably come again when historians of the future will find it difficult to believe the long catalogue of maneuvers, diversions, frustrations and misunderstandings that faced those who tried to negotiate a fair settlement after World War II. For this reason alone, Mr Byrnes' record of his stewardship will be valuable. . . . He has produced the kind of book that is not only informative but readable—for like the good politician he is, he wrote it for the average reader." J. B. Reston

+ N Y Times p1 O 19 '47 1450w

"Neither the clumsiness of its arrangement nor the crudities of Mr. Byrnes' diction can quite obscure the historical interest of his revelations." J. M. Lalley

New Yorker 23:121 O 18 '47 1500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 19 '47 1850w

"If there were a prize for the most nationally useful book-of-the-year, the 1947 prize should be awarded without a moment's hesitation to former Secretary of State Byrnes. Mr. Byrnes has served his country ably in an unusually varied range of capacities—legislative, executive, and judicial. But the greatest public service he has rendered is in 'speaking frankly' about the important part he played in the international negotiations of two crucial post-war years." V. M. Dean

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 O 25 '47 3350w

"The reader who starts this book will not put it down until he has gone from cover to cover. It is full of such homely observations as, 'The nearest approach to immortality on earth is a Government bureau.' That particular remark is worthy of Benjamin Franklin." B. M. Baruch

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 O 25 '47 370w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan

Spec 179:714 D 5 '47 1000w

Reviewed by Ferdinand Kuhn

Survey G 36:700 D '47 700w

"Mr. Byrnes worked hard for eighteen months and got nowhere. His book is an honest attempt to explain his difficulties; and as the first detailed account of negotiations with the Russians it will be useful to others who may attempt the task."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p611 N 29 '47 1800w

Wis Lib Bul 43:152 N '47

C

CABELL, JAMES BRANCH. Let me lie; being in the main an ethnological account of the remarkable commonwealth of Virginia and the making of its history. 286p $3.75 Farrar, Straus

917.55 Virginia. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-30215

Collection of essays on the history and some personages of Virginia. Partial contents: The First Virginian; Myths of the Old Dominion; Colonel Esmond of Virginia; Mr. Ritchie's Richmond; Almost touching the Confederacy; General Lee of Virginia; Is of southern ladies; "Published in Richmond, Virginia."

"The net whole presents a well-rounded collection of Cabelliana that should delight his many readers, while making a first acquaintance with this prolific Virginian a remarkable adventure... It would be an unconscionable breach of faith to discuss these delicate and charming little essays of Virginia in any greater detail. Cabell must be read to be fully appreciated and understood. There are moments when the reader will indignantly kick up his heels and accuse Mr. Cabell of being pontifical, otherworldish, or cynical. He will frequently resent the necessity of keeping a dictionary, an encyclopedia, and an atlas within arm's reach. But few will deny that the author possesses a charm and a detached exuberance which, combined with his delightfully rambling conversational style, make for extremely pleasant reading and recollection." W. M. Kunstler

+ Atlantic 179:160 My '47 450w

Booklist 43:252 Ap 15 '47

"His present collection of essays is mannered, cynical, sentimental, artificial, spiteful, urbane. 'Let Me Lie' will probably both delight and irritate a good many readers." William Peden

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 30 '47 360w

"This is, in every sense, an old book... Four decades ago, the self-consciousness, the mannered style, the irony, irreverence and iconoclasm of this volume might have offended Virginians and amused their neighbors to north and south, but today it is the tiresome Swan Song of that generation which had as a primary purpose in writing the blasting of tradition and the exhibition of its own shallow cleverness... Particularly offensive in its vulgarity is 'General Lee of Virginia.' The most appealing chapter, uncouthly entitled 'Is of Southern Ladies,' concerns colored mammies." D. H. Moseley

— Commonweal 46:22 Ap 18 '47 250w

"For the literary essay market."

Kirkus 15:54 Ja 15 '47 150w

"A work of fond homage, discursive and mannered." H. W. Hart

Library J 72:456 Mr 15 '47 100w

"Throughout this book, which is a genial fire-side chat, with Mr. Cabell in a mellow mood, there is enough subacid comment on affairs of the day to make it a healthy tonic at a time when the literary fare rather tends to make one bilious." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Mr 30 '47 1100w

"'Let Me Lie' is a collection of stylistic devices designed to conceal the fact that the author has nothing in particular to say. It is an elegy for the elegist. Here lies James Branch Cabell in rigor artis." D. S. Norton

— N Y Times p5 Mr 30 '47 850w

"The dozen pieces included, which range in subject from 'Myths of the Old Dominion' to a diverting account of Charles Dickens' snubbing of Edgar Allan Poe, are delightful, and give the author ample opportunity to air his felicitous, if sometimes idiosyncratic, style."

+ New Yorker 23:111 Mr 29 '47 90w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p13 My 4 '47 220w

U S Quarterly BkI 3:136 Je '47 240w

CABOT, PHILIPPE SIDNEY DE Q., comp. Juvenile delinquency; a critical annotated bibliography. 166p $3.75 Wilson, H.W.

016.36436 Juvenile delinquency—Bibliography 47-453

"A fully annotated bibliography of writings bearing on the subject published between 1914 and 1944. Arrangement is in one alphabet with an extensive index to provide a key to special phases." Wis Lib Bul

"This is the best comprehensive bibliography on juvenile delinquency available in English. A must for anyone interested in the subject."

+ Am Soc R 12:615 O '47 40w

"Anyone interested in special problems of juvenile delinquency will find good source leads in this volume. Its key to periodical references and the subject index are useful features." L. A. Lynde

+ J Home Econ 39:524 O '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:50 Mr '47

CADBURY, HENRY JOEL. Jesus: what manner of man. 123p $2.25 Macmillan

232.9 Jesus Christ—Character 47-30922

"Objective study of life, work and teachings of Jesus, based on Shaffer lectures, given at Yale in 1946. Author who is Hollis Professor of Divinity at Harvard admits great difficulty in fathoming Jesus but guides his readers along paths rarely followed in quest of understanding Him. Dr. Cadbury believes that men prefer to know how Jesus thought rather than what he thought. His inquiry therefore is into the working of his mind, the underlying attitudes, emphases and presupposition of his teachings. Many significant questions are raised and answered, and the study is brought down to earth more than once by comparing the 20th and 1st centuries." Library J

Reviewed by J. L. Adams

Chicago Sun Book Week p14a D 3 '47 400w

CADBURY, H. J.—Continued

"This is not a large book but it is packed with food for serious thinking." S. J. Case
+ Christian Century 64:1176 O 1 '47 450w

"The author has stated with characteristic exactness precisely the problem which the competent student of the gospels and of its central figure finds himself confronted with, but which is so often obscure to those who would talk on these themes with a zeal but not according to knowledge." M. S. Enslin
+ Crozer Q 25:76 Ja '48 950w

"This is a book which New Testament scholars should welcome and which ministers and other thoughtful interpreters of the New Testament will find helpfully suggestive, particularly if they are of the liberal camp."
+ Kirkus 15:536 S 15 '47 180w

Reviewed by O. G. Lawson
Library J 72:1188 S 1 '47 110w

CADELL, ELIZABETH. Last straw for Harriet. 256p $2.75 Morrow 47-30145

A story of upper-middle-class English family life. Harriet, a widow with four children, tries to prevent her brother, the admiral, from coming on a visit during the spring holidays, but without success. Life is further complicated for Harriet by the presence of a volunteer girl gardener who may be after Charles, the older son; by a European refugee who murders the king's English; by the unexpected return of a long absent sister-in-law; etc.

Booklist 43:223 Mr 15 '47

Bookmark 8:15 My '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 9 '47 170w

Kirkus 14:622 D 15 '46 170w

"A slight, romantically pretty love story threads its way circumspectly through the pages of 'Last Straw for Harriet,' an acceptable device for presenting the whole Ellison family in action. And the author loves all her Ellisons enthusiastically. For so apparently slight a tale, 'Last Straw for Harriet' is shrewdly solid in its intention and its accomplishment." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
Mr 9 '47 700w

"'Last Straw for Harriet' is a happy straw in the wind for readers who enjoy light English novels. Mrs. Cadell looks to be a welcome member of the Angela Thirkell school. She has a felicitous style, a refreshing sense of humor, an assorted cast of English characters, and a mild story with a requisite number of kinks of plot—including young romance and younger pranks." Barbara Bond

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 6 '47 200w

Reviewed by Edith James
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 16 '47 40w

"When the author forgets about her plot and lets her readers relax around the family table, she comes up with rich and cheerful conversation, a lot of it very funny." John Lamb
Sat R of Lit 30:18 Ap 19 '47 400w

CAESAR, MRS EUNICE LEE. For this my mother wrapped me warm. 247p $2.75 Appleton-Century 47-11547

Story of an unsuccessful marriage. Cicely was beautiful and was adored by her family and all the servants on her grandfather's plantation. The northern farm boy she married was rough and used to crude living. Cicely tried vainly to make a go of their marriage, but was at last compelled to go back to her own environment.

Kirkus 15:445 Ag 15 '47 130w

"Characterizations are not convincing. Book definitely belongs to group known as 'light romances.'" M. A. Johnson

Library J 72:1374 O 1 '47 60w

"The author tries hard to engage your sympathy, but she is lucky to overcome your apathy." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
N 30 '47 100w

CAHALANE, VICTOR HARRISON. Mammals of North America; with drawings by Francis L. Jaques. 682p $7.50 Macmillan 599 Mammals 47-4195

Descriptions of ninety-four of the main group of North American mammals, living north of the Rio Grande. Data given for each group include appearance, range, life and habits. Illustrated in black and white. List of references. Index.

Booklist 44:6 S 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '47

"Lively, informal, often humorous." V. K. Fitch

+ Library J 72:1114 Ag '47 80w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 73:43 Ja 1 '48 30w

"Whether you use this book for reference purposes or merely for the kind of reading material that most animal lovers pore over from time to time, you will hardly be disappointed. Victor Cahalane, chief biologist of America's national parks, is also an author of some repute; he is happily endowed with the combination of talents necessary for turning out such a book as 'Mammals of North America.'" Gwen Jones

+ N Y Times p29 S 21 '47 450w

"A handsome, massive volume, of surprisingly general interest."

+ New Yorker 23:114 N 1 '47 80w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:308 S '47 160w

CAHILL, HOLGER. Look south to the polar star. 554p $3 Harcourt 47-30023

"Shanghai just before Pearl Harbor was the scene of undercover warfare and intrigue even more intense than usual in that city of many nationalities, crowded with refugees. Guerrillas were harassing the Japanese forces, while Kuomintang and Communist forces were beginning their civil war. An American scholar disappeared, and the Japanese wanted his daughter, whom a member of the American intelligence, a newspaperman, and a German suspected of Japanese cooperation, tried to protect. Filled with conversation, indirection that sometimes baffles the reader, and allusions to Chinese classics and proverbs, yet it has a holding power by reason of its subtlety, writing, and locale." Booklist

Booklist 43:155 Ja 15 '47

Reviewed by Ben Kartman
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 26 '47 340w

"For a person who, it seems, has never been in China, Mr. Cahill has produced a real tour de force. To gather information for this novel his reading must have been extensive, and he has been able to breathe life into his narrative. One may question some of his points of view, but one has to recognize his skill in creating an illusion of actuality. . . The story moves along in a leisurely manner, and the conclusion is indefinite, just as the actual situation is confused and uncertain. But in this plausible and interesting novel the reader will certainly gain a better and more sympathetic feeling for the problems of China." L. E. Cannon

Christian Century 64:306 Mr 5 '47 280w

"Mr. Cahill knows his Shanghai and his China. They come alive in many long passages. But the plot is exceedingly hard to follow—as unpredictable as China's political pattern. And a profusion of loosely drawn characters adds to the confusion." H. S. Hayward

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 15 '47 650w

"There's fascination—sometimes confusion—here, in a unique book and exceptionally well written!"

Kirkus 14:600 D 1 '46 170w

"The novel is entertaining; it is also a store of information about Chinese warfare, customs, opinions and politics. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:160 Ja 15 '47 70w

"As compared with the Chinese in the story, Farjohn and company are bloodless and uninteresting. . . The only Orientals who come off badly are the villains of the piece. . . It is mainly a problem of size; the minor characters, who are not laboring to make the plot go, emerge as human beings. The nameless Chinese of the Shanghai streets, the Kiangsu peasants and the New Fourth Army guerillas fare best of all. This is something of a triumph, for Mr. Cahill, a writer and authority on American art and former head of the W.P.A. Federal Art Project, has not been in China since his youth. None the less, he shows deep affection and great respect for the country and its people, and his knowledge and perception exceed that of most old China hands." Adie Suehsdorf

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ja 26 '47 700w

"Cahill strikes a few false notes, but they are very few. . . This novel will cause a good deal of nostalgia. Anyone who has never ventured abroad will lay down the book as wise and confused as an old China hand. Older China hands will again soak in Shanghai fog, delight in familiar sights and smells, sounds and disagreements. In a way, this book is even better than a Pacific crossing; only an uncannily observant tourist could see so much or understand so much of what he saw." Annalee Jacoby

+ — N Y Times p5 F 9 '47 650w

"Against a highly colored and convincing background of Shanghai night life, and in an atmosphere of intrigue that gives the story a nice edge, Mr. Cahill's cosmopolitans exchange highly intelligent and provocative ideas on Chinese art, literature, military history, politics, and philosophy. When, however, the missionary's daughter unaccountably disappears and the two Americans start looking for her, too, this novel of ideas turns rather abruptly into an entertaining but overlong adventure story. An exceedingly good job, but with more than a faint whiff of the library."

+ — New Yorker 22:84 Ja 25 '47 160w

"The action is hopelessly buried under talk, talk, talk. Even chronic description-skippers will weary of long philosophical discussions carried on while the unfortunate Teigne awaits rescue just a few miles away. However, some of the conversations are extremely good, especially those having to do with art (a subject which Mr. Cahill has written about in a number of excellent books and monographs), and the chapter which describes the hectic preparation of art exhibits for a charity auction will stand many rereadings." Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 2 '47 500w

"Holger Cahill has put a lot about modern China and its revolutionary ferment into this long and ambitious novel but I am afraid he has done so chiefly by overwhelming his reader with detail and cataloguing. What he has written is a hopefully Malraux-like combination of melodrama and philosophical disquisition. . . In his 554 pages he has set down much that is dramatic, sensitive, colorful, and understanding, but he has an unhappy way of getting lost in his verbiage." Richard Watts

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:23 F 15 '47 800w

Time 49:103 Ja 27 '47 240w

"Definitely disappointing as fiction, awkward, clumsy and inept, is Look South to the Polar Star—an over-long novel about Shanghai in November, 1941. . . It probably never should have been cast in a fictional mold at all. Its abstract, symbolical characters, its frequent digressions into odd corners of Chinese life, its clumsy plot leave it defenseless against critical attack. But if we think of it as a discourse by a learned and warm-hearted commentator on everything about China which interests him, we may find that many of those same things interest us, too." Orville Prescott

— + Yale R 36:575 spring '47 300w

CAIN, JAMES MALLAHAN. Butterfly. 165p $2 Knopf

47-294

"[The] Kentucky hero, Jess Tyler, finds that he passionately desires his daughter Kady when, after years of absence, she returns to him a grown and fetching woman. She, in turn, makes unmistakable advances to him. The two are kept apart by the usual barriers of conscience, custom and law, and a number of complications are provided by Wash, Kady's former lover and father of her illegitimate son, Danny; by Belle, Jess's unfaithful wife, and by Moke, the banjo player for whom Belle has deserted her husband. Additional complications derive from Danny's butterfly birthmark, which, because of the paternity it implies, causes tragic confusion." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ja 26 '47 650w

"A sordid tale of compulsive prohibitive passion. Certainly not for conservatives."

— Kirkus 14:605 D 1 '46 170w

"The usual, expected characters, techniques and props are here—though a little worse for wear. Author's preface explaining and defending his art provides the only humor in the book." H. G. Kelley

— Library J 72:160 Ja 15 '47 70w

"That the novel is contrived is, of course, true. But unless I am greatly mistaken, you are likely to enjoy the neatly packaged violence of 'The Butterfly.'" Stephen Stepanchev
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ja 26 '47 800w

"Stories like 'The Butterfly' are not dubious social goods because they consider incest and murder. The major tragedies have done that. But what hard-boiled fiction, in and out of the movies, increasingly does is to train its audience not only to accept violence and perversion, but to take a callous pleasure in them. Thanks to this technique, violence and perversion are made to seem so isolated from normal consequence and meaning, from the audience's own social and spiritual concerns, that it feels no tragic fear or pity, but only the excitement of shock. Hard-boiled literature makes entertainment out of suffering by dehumanizing it. The important question is whether it can succeed in this without dehumanizing its audience at the same time." R. G. Davis

N Y Times p5 Ja 26 '47 1100w

"The richness of Mr. Cain's accomplishment, like the richness of those scows that used to ply the East River and dump their cargoes out at sea, can be appreciated only at first hand." Hamilton Basso

New Yorker 22:72 F 1 '47 1000w

"Cain is a remarkably able writer. He has developed an approach of his own; a kind of special electricity charges his fiction, as his readers all know. And it is not an imitation of somebody else's style, either, but Mr. Cain's own particular quality and the reason thousands of readers jump to the bookstore the moment a new Cain title is announced. His new short novel, 'The Butterfly,' is the occasion for these remarks. In it Mr. Cain brings his readers exactly what they have a right to expect from him by now, a story of passion and suspense and violence." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 27 '47 800w

"It is good writing—hard, lean, nicely weighted. The pitch is just right and the pace is the Cain pace, sustained and pressing, like a hound on scent. The little book is all one, the writing, the people, the gaunt, pockmarked country, the abandoned mine shaft which keys in with the disintegration of Moke Blue and Jess Tyler and the women. There is suspense, and it is used like a weapon, with control and timing. You won't forget this story, though you may get it mixed up with the other Cain stories—since one man slaving over a girl in a tight dress is much the same as another, and the dragging of a dead body is about the same in a mine shaft as on a mountainside. 'The Butterfly' is good writing on less than good material, or on practically no material at all." Walter Havighurst

CAIN, J. M.—Continued

Sat R of Lit 30:18 F 1 '47 700w

"Author Cain's introduction is so spirited that readers are likely to start his new novel with respect and sympathy. Unfortunately, they will find that The Butterfly, despite its air of dealing frankly with the delicate and ancient Oedipus theme, is about as incestuous as Tarzan of the Apes."

— Time 49:100 Ja 27 '47 550w

CALDWELL, MRS ELSIE (NOBLE). In a changing Brazil. 198p il $3 Smith, Richard R. 918.1 Brazil 47-962

"The author went to Brazil thirty years ago when she was young and Brazil, in some ways, was still young, too. She had a friend who had been lady-in-waiting to the last Empress (whose husband abdicated in 1889) and a brother who was engaged in work outside of Rio de Janeiro. Thus she saw the country and heard tales of the past. Her book is full of stories of the older days, and if she brings in the brawny young giant that is modern Brazil it is mostly to point a contrast. [She] writes in detail of the home life of the middle class, which she found 'a state of enviable contentment.'" (N Y Times) No index.

Reviewed by J. B. Watson

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 D 29 '46 390w

Foreign Affairs 25:709 Jl '47 30w

"Of all the books that have recently been written on Brazil this one occupies a place apart. . . Mrs. Caldwell admires Vargas, regarding him not as a dictator but a fine public servant. She devotes a chapter to 'The Future of Brazil,' and says all the proper things about its resources, its land program, its great men, its booming industry. But her heart is in Brazil's past glories, and if one suspects that time has cast a rosy cloud over her memories, still her book makes pleasant fireside reading." Mildred Adams

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 19 '47 370w

Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47 300w

CALDWELL, ERSKINE. Sure hand of God. 243p $2.75 Duell 47-11204

A story of a small-town woman of easy virtue who at thirty-five, fat, no longer pretty, but good-natured, has two problems she is trying to solve—to find a man who will pay her bills and to get her daughter Lily married.

Kirkus 15:405 Ag 1 '47 150w

"Probably interesting for those who have enjoyed Caldwell's earlier works." M. C. Manley

Library J 72:1269 S 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Richard Match

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 O 26 '47 550w

"Mr. Caldwell takes occasion in his present novel to explain the economic and social conditions that have molded Molly and to show the somewhat similar forces that will probably destroy her daughter. But these straightforward, honest bits of narrative are lost in the much greater quantity of burlesque and caricature. It is hard to have real sympathy for slap-stick characters or to feel that the buffets they receive are other than custard pies." N. K. Burger

— + N Y Times p4 O 12 '47 600w

New Yorker 23:109 N 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

— San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 6 '47 500w

"The Sure Hand of God is gamy enough to attract the censors. It has little to merit anyone else's attention."

— Time 50:108 N 3 '47 390w

CALDWELL, J. B. Introducing Alaska. 202p il $3.75 Putnam 917.98 Alaska 47-3308

Information for prospective settlers in Alaska, or for people who want to fish or hunt there. Includes details on homesteading, farming, ranching, prospecting and mining, lumbering, and commercial fishing. No index.

Commonweal 46:69 My 2 '47 20w

"A book designed to satisfy the growing curiosity in the states about Alaska, but not a book for the tourist. . . Of reference value chiefly."

Kirkus 15:54 Ja 15 '47 90w

"Recommended except for smaller libraries which can skip in favor of the Department of the Interior publication, Alaska." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:384 Mr 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Ruth Gruber

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Jl 13 '47 550w

"For those whose interest in Alaska is casually inquisitive, Mr. Caldwell has performed a service; although 'Introducing Alaska' contributes little to already accessible information about the Territory, it condenses a great deal of it." G. N. Myers

N Y Times p17 Je 1 '47 650w

"All travelers to Alaska will find this excellent compendium useful." Ernest Gruening

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ag 2 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:115 Jl '47

CALDWELL, JANET TAYLOR (MRS MARCUS REBACK). There was a time. 471p $3 Scribner 47-3322

Character study of a writer. It takes Frank Clair from his home in England at the turn of the century; follows him to a New York state city; then to the Kentucky oil fields where he attempted to make money; and finally leaves him about to marry a nice girl.

Reviewed by Marion Strobel

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 My 18 '47 360w

Kirkus 15:133 Mr 1 '47 340w

"Dull, depressing, antagonizing reading; Caldwell should stick to period romances." Anne Whitmore

— Library J 72:732 My 1 '47 70w

"Both the setting and the people are strongly painted; the view through Frank's eyes will not gratify civic pride. The author's focus is on an unusual personality and, moreover, on a child and man who had considerably more than the common run of childhood injustices and injuries to surmount. It is an engrossing picture of the struggle, pain and desolation that for such a person result from fear, self-distrust and the attempt to reject humanity." Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 4 '47 600w

"Being the novel she evidently yearned to write all the while she was turning out those other enormously popular opera, 'There Comes a Time' will doubtless rank as the author's favorite. Doting audiences may place it somewhat below such concoctions as 'The Strong City' and 'This Side of Innocence.' Unreconstructed reviewers may mulishly decide that Miss Caldwell has proved to be the exception to the rule about writing what one knows best. 'There Comes a Time' comes no closer than her other books to literature or to life. With her astonishing powers of invention she would perhaps do best to leave the soul-searching to others." Mary McGrovy

N Y Times p20 My 11 '47 550w

New Yorker 23:105 My 10 '47 200w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 29 '47
70w

"I do not remember any other autobiographical novel in which the writer presents himself (or herself) inside a fictitious personality of the opposite sex. It is an ambitious device, adding as it does the burden of objectivity to that of self-exploration: two of the most incompatible tasks in writing. And of course it doesn't really work out that way, chiefly because Miss Caldwell never projects herself into a masculine personality. . . I liked this book better than the others I have read. It seems a profounder and more realistic work than those, and suggests, in the writer herself, a searching, restless development." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 30:28 My 31 '47 650w

Spring'd Republican p10B O 5 '47
180w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 36:450 Ag '47 90w

"There Was a Time has the color-blind prose and inability to distinguish real emotions from salable affectations that were written all over earlier Caldwell works. But this time, instead of centering around rapacious industrial tycoons, it is a portrait of an artist as a young man. . . [It] is packed to the beards with the kind of hatred of people and of the world that is often felt by the most normal man. But it is always balanced by Author Caldwell's cautious and frequent lip service to such equally human aspirations as love of humanity, tolerance and faith."

— + Time 49:108 My 19 '47 900w

CALDWELL, TAYLOR, pseud. See Caldwell, J. T.

CALKINS, EARNEST ELMO. And hearing not—. 387p il $3.75 Scribner

B or 92 Deaf 46-11809

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Bookmark 8:13 Mr '47

"Much of what Mr. Calkins has written in 'And Hearing Not' he has told before in his voluminous writings on deafness, advertising and other subjects, and he explains in a foreword that most of what he wrote in his volume 'Louder, Please' has been incorporated in this one. Nevertheless, his easy, conversational style makes all his works seem fresh and new, and his reminiscences glow with an added charm on rereading. Here one will find humor, pathos, wisdom, shrewdness and much sage advice from a man who at 78 is still enamored of many, many things, is able to see them objectively." R. D. D.

+ N Y Times p35 Ja 26 '47 550w

"An entertaining and instructive autobiography of particular interest to the hard of hearing and to all persons engaged in the advertising game, still more especially, perhaps, to young aspirants seeking guidance along the paths of approach to the advertising profession." E. A. F.

+ Spring'd Union p8 Ap 18 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:21 Ja '47

CALKINS, RAYMOND. Modern message of the minor prophets. 205p $3 Harper

224 Bible. Old Testament—Prophetical books 47-2646

A study of the twelve so-called minor prophets of Israel. Taking up the books one by one the author gives first a survey of each, as to authorship, date, authenticity, etc., and then relates their teachings to the problems of today.

Booklist 43:341 Jl 1 '47

Reviewed by I. G. Matthews

Christian Century 64:712 Je 4 '47 250w

"An excellent book on the importance of the so-called 'Minor' prophets for our day. [Dr. Calkins'] careful and inclusive scholarship, coupled with his awareness of the profound needs of this generation, proves beyond doubt the fact that these somewhat overlooked Twelve Prophets speak to us as to their own people." C. L. Willard

+ Churchman 161:19 Jl '47 120w

"This book may well serve as a model for a homiletical treatment of prophetic literature. Its author has demonstrated that a preacher may, by means of the commentaries available to him in the English language, discover in the prophets insights which are applicable to his own day and generation. . . This book is an extremely useful introduction to the minor prophets, one which will give to the serious reader as much as he may wish to learn from his first serious encounter with this section of the Bible. It will serve as an effective catalyst upon the mind of the preacher as he seeks for a word to his own congregation." J. B. Pritchard

+ Crozer Q 24:269 Jl '47 550w

Wis Lib Bul 43:77 My '47

CALLAHAM, MRS. LUDMILLA IGNATIEV.

Russian-English technical and chemical dictionary. 794p $10 Wiley

540.3 Chemistry—Dictionaries. Technology —Dictionaries. Russian language—Dictionaries 47-2698

"A scientifically organized reference to 80,000 terms, including those of organic and inorganic chemistry, chemical technology, mineralogy, metallurgy, mining, geology, engineering physics, botany, pharmacy and the more common terms in agriculture, medicine, aeronautics, meteorology and military science." Special Libraries

Reviewed by Kira Kalichevsky

— Chem & Eng N 25:1895 Je 30 '47 350w

Reviewed by J. G. Tolpin

Chem Eng 54:267 Jl '47 950w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1331 O 1 '46 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:7 Ja '47

Special Libraries 38:52 F '47

"The first of its kind in breadth of scope and in thoroughness of interpretation, this new bilingual dictionary renders obsolete the hitherto current glossaries and catchword dictionaries of chemistry and allied fields. . . Although wanting in the terms of industrial operations and by-products, this work contains a wealth of accurate information. Scientists who are learning the Russian language or who follow scientific and technological developments in the USSR will find here a valuable aid."

+ — U S Quarterly BkI 3:216 Je '47 120w

CALLAHAN, CLAIRE WALLIS (NANCY

HARTWELL, pseud). Shoestring theatre; il. by Barbara Cooney. 198p $2.50 Holt

47-31393

Story of a summer theatre started in a barn. Describes all the details in the production of a play by amateurs. For older girls.

Booklist 44:114 N 15 '47

Churchman 161:17 D 1 '47 30w

"Cheery, easy reading of the light romantic school."

+ Kirkus 15:434 Ag 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by Ann Kirkland

Library J 72:1693 D 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
N 30 '47 320w

"All in all, this makes very lively reading for older girls. The characters are more fully developed than in most stories of this type, the romantic problems are handled with a nice restraint and the theatrical problems with sure knowledge." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p42 O 19 '47 190w

Reviewed by L. R. Hanna

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 30 '47
160w

Sat R of Lit 30:52 N 15 '47 40w

CALLAHAN, NORTH. Armed forces as a career. (Whittlesey house publication) 334p $3 McGraw

355 U.S.—Armed services. Military service as a profession 47-4637

"Briefly considers the histories of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, then describes the permanent career opportunities for enlisted men and officers in each of the services; emphasizes the benefits (real and imagined) of service life, and gives information on admission to the various service schools." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:4 S 1 '47

Kirkus 15:209 Ap 1 '47 90w

"Does not substantially add to the information contained in the official recruiting literature though may be useful to have the material in one volume. Probably will not appeal to ex-enlisted men." R. E. Kingery

Library J 72:957 Je 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by H. A. DeWeerd
N Y Times p21 Jl 20 '47 700w

CAMBRIDGE, ARTHUR WALLACE PICKARD. See Pickard-Cambridge, A. W.

CAMERON, DONALD CLOUGH. White for a shroud. 224p $2 Curl

47-31022

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p32 S 14 '47 130w

"Just violent enough, with some frightening hugger mugger among the grinders, rollers, and acid vats of a paper mill."

New Yorker 23:111 O 4 '47 90w

CAMP, WILLIAM MARTIN. San Francisco, port of gold. 518p il $5 Doubleday

979.461 San Francisco—History 47-11836

A combination of history, story, legend, biography, adventure, and social and economic analysis, about the city of San Francisco. Index.

"One of the best of the excellent Seaport Series—well timed for California's centenary... A skeleton background of history holds the whole together, without becoming obtrusive."

+ Kirkus 15:568 O 1 '47 120w

"All this might well be a factual, authentic but dull affair, and in some writers' hands it would have become just that. In Mr. Camp's, partly because he has long been a newspaper man and understands human values, it becomes lively, anecdotal, spirited. The pages are crammed with people." J. H. Jackson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
N 30 '47 1050w

"Without setting out to write a straight-line history of a great port Mr. Camp has accomplished something very like it, though in terms of the human-interest tale, the quick bit of action, the colorful incident which his newspaperman's eye unfailingly spots. A lot of people are going to have a good time reading his book and discovering some of the background of a side of the city about which most of them know too little." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 9 '47
1500w

CAMPBELL, DORCAS ELISABETH. Your career in banking. 217p $3 Dutton

332.1 Banks and banking 47-31036

This analysis of banking as a career, presents the stories of thirteen prominent bankers in preference to descriptions of banking procedure. Each man represents a special aspect of banking. Partial contents: A. P. Giannini: the house of Giannini; Charles W. Bailey: a horseback banker; Robert M. Strickland: a legal president; Robert V. Fleming: doctor of finance; Allan Sproul: a bankers' banker; Edward E. Brown: an old-fashioned ingredient makes a successful banker; Philip A. Benson: top office boy; the president; Charles E. Spencer, Jr: an "all round" banker. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:99 N 15 '47

Kirkus 15:582 O 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1614 N 15 '47 40w

CAMPBELL, FRANCES W. Men of the Enchantress. 335p $2.75 Bobbs

46-7705

The Enchantress is a mine in the mountains of Mexico. The miners are Mexicans who see no crime in taking their share of the gold and silver they mine for their American bosses. Labor unrest and a mysterious union lawyer from Mexico City play a part in the story.

"The novel is too long for my taste; it is told fluently but not especially attractively; and there is of course no connection between such work, competent and readable as it may be, and what I think of as literature." Arthur Meeker

Chicago Sun Book Week p22 N 24 '46
320w

Kirkus 14:399 Ag 15 '46 100w

"Men of the Enchantress" is not a book with a thesis. It is written from no bias. Nor is it a 'labor' novel, but a story of life in Mexico today." Jennings Rice

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
F 2 '47 750w

Springf'd Union p12 Ag 26 '47 120w

CAMPBELL, SIR GERALD. Of true experience. 259p $3.50 Dodd

B or 92 Diplomatic memoirs 47-30216

Autobiography of a member of the English consular service, stressing his twenty-five years spent in various cities of the United States. Sir Gerald is an accomplished raconteur, and his book is enlivened with many stories of the people he has met in his many years in the service in this country, and in Europe and Africa.

Booklist 43:254 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by Malcolm Moos

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Mr 16 '47 850w

"You should read Sir Gerald's book to see just how sensibly and how understandingly one Englishman can write about the U. S. and about his own country. You're likely to conclude that if more like him came over here, and if more Americans who were simply men of good will went over there in official capacities, two great countries would discover that there was more to hold them together than to draw them apart." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 8 '47
900w

CAMPBELL, GLENN HAROLD. The Campbells are coming. 333p il $4 Dodd

929.7205 Campbell family. Great Britain—History 47-4851

A history of the Campbell clan from the year 900 A.D. to the present, based on much research in Scotland and in the files of the Cleveland public library. No index.

Current Hist 13:165 S '47 70w

"To those of Scottish ancestry this lively eulogistic account of Mr. Campbell's forbears will doubtless appeal, but its length (333 pp.) will also be a drawback. Battles and executions are on every page; few bearing the name of Campbell ever missed a good fight if one reads correctly between the lines. Recommended with the above in mind." E. H. Crowell

Library J 72:957 Je 15 '47 100w

"The author tells their story clearly and well. If his book is, as I've hinted, of interest chiefly to another Campbell or connection thereof, well, that's doubtless what its author meant it to be. It might be added that while an index would doubtless have been a tedious job of preparation, it would have been well worth the time spent on it." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p12 J1 21 '47
500w

CAMPBELL, JOHN W. Atomic story. 297p il $3 Holt

541.2 Nuclear physics. Atomic energy
47-2244

"Traces the evolution of man's concepts of the fundamental physical entities in nature from the ideas of the ancient Greeks and the atomic theory of Dalton to the electrons, protons and neutrons of today. Several figures help explain how theory and experiment gradually brought scientists to their modern particles and instruments for studying them, in particular the Wilson cloud chamber, the mass spectrograph, and the cyclotron. Basic was the discovery of different forms of energy such as mechanical, chemical, electrical and nuclear, as well as Einstein's remarkable law on the equivalence of mass and energy." Chicago Sun Book Week

Booklist 43:304 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by T. L. Rettger
Chem & Eng N 25:2176 J1 28 '47 300w

Reviewed by Rufus Oldenburger
Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ap 27 '47
430w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

Kirkus 15:122 F 15 '47 150w

"An excellent work of popularization. This is a lucid and cogent account of the fiendishly difficult theory and balefully fascinating history of nuclear fission and the atomic bomb." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:634 Ap 15 '47 100w

"Sound science, yet fascinating reading. . . What Dr. Smyth revealed to the experts Mr. Campbell puts within the understanding of every one." Gerald Wendt

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
My 25 '47 500w

"Its qualities, where they exist, are those of the journalist: the writing is frequently exciting, and the author possesses a large store of interesting collateral information. . . Mr. Campbell is positive, and positive at the top of his voice, about things he cannot possibly know." Stephen Wheeler

— N Y Times p4 Ap 27 '47 400w

Reviewed by L. N. Ridenour
Sat R of Lit 30:14 Je 28 '47 650w

CAMPBELL, LILY BESS. Shakespeare's histories; mirrors of Elizabethan policy. (Huntington library publications) 346p il $6.75 Huntington lib.

822.33 Shakespeare, William 47-2108

"Just a year after the appearance of Professor E. M. W. Tillyard's book on Shakespeare's History Plays there comes this study by Professor Campbell, covering parts of the same ground, but from a quite different angle of approach. Mr. Tillyard treated the subject from the point of view of the Renaissance concept of 'order' in the cosmos and in human society. . . Miss Campbell's thesis is . . . that which we should expect from the distinguished editor of 'The Mirror for Magistrates.' Leaving 'Henry VIII' out of account because of its unassured place in the Shakespearean canon, and postponing for separate treatment the difficult problems connected with the three parts of 'Henry VI,' she concentrates her attention upon six other history plays." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"Dr. Campbell's position is amply supported by other commentators. Where the historian will find room to quarrel with her is in her attempts to identify particular passages in the plays she considers with specific contemporary events. . . At one point she comes close to identifying Richard III with Robert Dudley, earl of Leicester. . . Nevertheless, there can be no reasonable doubt that Dr. Campbell's main position is well sustained and that she has done much to clarify the significance of Shakespeare's history plays, both in English literature and in English history." Conyers Read

Am Hist R 52:725 J1 '47 900w

"This is probably the most important contribution to Shakespearean scholarship of the twentieth century. Intended for the scholar and serious student, it is highly recommended for theatre collections, large public libraries and particularly university libraries." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:811 My 15 '47 40w

Reviewed by M. E. Prior

Mod Philol 45:135 N '47 3000w

"The merits of Miss Campbell's thesis . . . will have to run the gantlet of scholarly criticism and will not meet with acceptance from those who deny that Shakespeare's plays are ever 'topical.' But of the cogency and learning with which the thesis is argued there can be no question." S. C. Chew

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p31
My 4 '47 700w

Reviewed by William Haller

Poi Sci Q 62:477 S '47 500w

Theatre Arts 31:71 Ag '47 380w

Times [London] Lit Sup p311 Je 21
'47 1350w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:131 Je '47 240w

CAMPBELL, PATRICIA. Eliza. 349p $3 Superior pub.

47-30696

Novel of life in the wilderness of the Pacific Northwest in the late nineteenth century. The heroine is a Philadelphia society girl who struggles to orient herself to the rough living of that country.

"This lusty novel of the Northwest in the '70s and '80s is as refreshing as a thunderstorm and has some of the same qualities." Olive Carruthers

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 S 21 '47
110w

Kirkus 15:474 S 1 '47 120w

"Quite well written, this book is at once entertaining and informative. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1269 S 15 '47 70w

CAMPBELL, THOMAS. Diary of a visit to England in 1775; newly ed. from the ms. by James L. Clifford; with an introd. by S. C. Roberts. 147p $2.75 Macmillan

914.2 England—Description and travel
[47-6266]

"A new and fully annotated edition of the journal of Dr. Thomas Campbell, the Irish divine and part-time travel writer who went over to London to meet some of the major British literary figures, especially Dr. Johnson. Campbell cast a professional eye over the preaching situation in England, which, he noted in his diary, was in a deplorable state, and recorded his conversations with Johnson and Boswell, along with any other literary gossip he picked up." New Yorker

"A complete text of this delightful bit of Johnsoniana is to be welcomed, even if the new passages are slightly scandalous."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 22 '47
120w

"The fact that Campbell was especially interested in Samuel Johnson will guarantee him readers, and he records several well-known sayings in unfamiliar form." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 165:292 S 20 '47 270w

"The entries about Johnson, naturally, are the most interesting. A perceptive and entertaining comment on eighteenth-century London."

+ New Yorker 23:114 S 27 '47 120w

CAMPBELL, THOMAS—Continued

"In the terms of Dr. Johnson's advice: the diarist put down his impressions immediately, and they are still fresh after almost 200 years." R. H. Hagan

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 26 '47
410w

CAMPBELL, VIVIAN, ed. Christmas anthology of poetry and painting; with a foreword by Walter Pach. 95p $3 Womans press

394.268 Christmas poetry. Christian art and symbolism 47-31396

Selection of Christmas poems and carols, chosen from works covering the period from the early Middle Ages thru the nineteenth century. Illustrated with reproductions of paintings and manuscripts.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun Book Week p8a D 3 '47
30w

Christian Century 64:1555 D 17 '47 60w

"Vivian Campbell's anthology is a sensitive piece of artistic and literary correlation." Nona Balakian

+ N Y Times p21 D 14 '47 160w

"The selections are varied and unusual and the reproduction really excellent."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:56 N 15 '47 50w

School & Society 66:254 S 27 '47 20w

CAMPION, SIR GILBERT FRANCIS MONTRION. Introduction to the procedure of the House of commons. 2d ed 346p $4.50 Macmillan

328.42 Great Britain. Parliament. House of commons 47-25949

"The new edition is as up-to-date as this, that it embodies all changes of procedure down to last summer. . . The development of Parliamentary procedure mirrors the 700 years' growth of the Constitution; indeed, this development has always been dictated by the requirements of the changing Constitution, and it is Sir Gilbert's historical chapters that should interest the general reader. That is also true of the chapter comparing the House of Commons procedure with that of foreign Legislatures. The book usefully appears at a moment when the attempt is again being made to adapt procedure to new needs." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

"Indispensable to the member of Parliament, of great value to the student of the Constitution, it is not without its appeal to the general reader—that is, if he is interested in the history and the present working of the House of Commons." H. L.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 17 '47
240w

"The appearance of this revised edition of Sir Gilbert Campion's own book so soon after he had finished the immense task of revising Erskine May is an astonishing testimony both to his industry and to his devotion to the great instrument of Government he so loyally and tirelessly serves. Many people besides Members of Parliament desire, or have occasion, to post themselves in the essentials of Parliamentary procedure. This new edition of a standard guide will supply their every need." Wilson Harris

+ Spec 178:630 My 30 '47 650w

"[Sir Gilbert Campion's] valuable book amply fulfils its avowed purpose of being a 'practical guide.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p219 My 10 '47 1250w

CANADAY, JOHN EDWIN (MATTHEW HEAD, pseud). The accomplice; a novel of suspense. 217p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

47-12113

Mystery story.

"The stuff of the story might be incredible or merely repellant without Hank's ingratiatingly direct and astringent manner of telling it incident by incident as the relationships worked themselves to modified catastrophe.

This ease and intimacy of manner makes the reader an unwilling but fascinated observer of a very curious business." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week N 28 '47 190w

"By no means usual crime fiction, this is fairly fancy, also fairly fascinating psychopathology."

Kirkus 15:447 Ag 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p55 D 7 '47 180w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 D 14 '47 180w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 21 '47
200w

"Evil overtones of tale—including necrophilia—give it ophidian fascination nicely balanced by delightful heroine and likably forthright investigating-narrator."

Sat R of Lit 30:28 D 20 '47 50w

CANBY, HENRY SEIDEL. American memoir. 433p $5 Houghton

917.3 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. U.S.—Intellectual life 47-5320

"Something more than a decade ago Mr. Canby published, a year or two apart, two sections of his memoirs under the titles 'The Age of Confidence' and 'Alma Mater: The Gothic Age of the American College.' These two volumes, revised and condensed, constitute the first part of the present 'Memoir,' which then goes on with the story from the time when Mr. Canby returned to Yale from Europe. There he had been engaged in promoting cultural liaison during and after the first world war. Soon he came on to edit the 'Post's' rejuvenated literary supplement, helped it to become the independent 'Saturday Review of Literature,' joined the first editorial board of The Book of the Month Club, and, in the course of these various activities, had an unusually good opportunity to keep an eye on the literary scene." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Index.

"No editor of our time has written so acutely and so vivaciously of those who have worked with him in the literary field. . . His chapter on the Death of the Iron Virgin, in which he describes the breaking of the Victorian taboo on sex, and that in which he traces the March of the Ideologies are as accurate as they are vivid. The values, like the humor which glints through these pages, are those of a sane and likable American editor, still candid and unafraid." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 180:120 Ag '47 650w

Booklist 44:149 D 15 '47

"Mr. Canby interprets and comments as he relates, very modestly and quietly and with great good sense. One believes in his version of the American past which ended with the First World War. . . It is fortunate for us all that he is, as American Memoir demonstrates, a man of wisdom and integrity." Paul Dinkins

+ Cath World 166:372 Ja '48 350w

Reviewed by H. P. Vincent

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 31 '47
420w

"'American Memoir' is an education in our cultural progress of the last half-century. It is a tour of American literary life, full of authentic close-ups of important writers. A manual for critics and reviewers is deducible from these pages. Best of all, here is a persistent counterpoint between the worlds of time and beyond time by a man passionately interested in both." T. M. Longstrech

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 17 '47 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '47

"There's lots of interest here to anyone concerned with books and their makers, but for the average reader, there is too little of personal flavor, of anecdote, of gossip even; too much philosophizing (insufficiently salted with humor). Its permanent place will be alongside of such studies as Middletown, rather than with literary memoirs such as The Happy Profession."

Kirkus 15:300 Je 1 '47 340w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ag
24 '47 2450w

"'Brief Golden Age' is principally another collection of memories, in which interpretation is subordinated to specific picture. The first two sections of 'American Memoir' are, however, something unique and memorable, and are likely to be enormously useful to historians of American culture." H. M. Jones

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 24 '47 1650w

New Yorker 23:67 Ag 30 '47 120w

"It is the first part to which I call your attention chiefly. Anyone who is old enough to have gone to college before the first World war will recognize a dozen truths to every page of Dr. Canby's careful and thoughtful picture of that older America. Such readers may take it as straight nostalgia if they wish, too; it's all there. But the reader who wants to follow the author's train of thought and to develop what he reads in his own mind, will also find here a social document of solid importance, a good deal more than a hint of how we got The Way We Are Today and where the good in us, as well as the bad, had its roots." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 24 '47
2100w

Reviewed by Bernard DeVoto
+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 Ag 30 '47 1900w
Time 50:97 Ag 25 '47 900w

CANE, MELVILLE. Wider arc; poems. 186p
$3.50 Harcourt

811 47-4501

"This is a collection of poems both serious and light. Many of them have never appeared before in book form. With the single exception of 'Winter Night' the poems represent the work of the past twenty-four years. The volume concludes with a short prose piece, 'Making a Poem.'" Note

"A little of Emily Dickinson (a blurb suggestion, but a true one), a good deal of Arthur Guiterman, and quite a lot of nothing but Melville Cane go to make up these verses, which are lyrical, whimsical, satirical, mystical—not all at once but by turns. Even the most serious avoid the solemn strut, and the most frivolous have cleverness of form and phrase to save them from triviality."

Christian Century 64:626 My 14 '47 70w

Library J 72:890 Je 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by W. A. Sylvester
Poetry 70:280 Ag '47 400w

CANETTI, ELIAS. Tower of Babel; tr. from the German under the personal supervision of the author by C. V. Wedgwood [Eng title: Auto-da-fé]. 427p $3.50 Knopf

47-881

The hero of this strange novel is a pedantic scholar, with no human interests at all. His sole interests in life are his books and the treatises he writes about them. Thru some mischance he marries his gross, grasping housekeeper, who eventually turns him out of his home. Then he goes completely insane, and after a series of adventures in the underworld, he ends by setting fire to his library.

"No one, after reading Elias Canetti's Auto-da-Fé could raise the slightest whisper of complaint about the author's intellectual sincerity. Whether his bleak prognostication of man's fate be true or not, the author delivers his uncompromising message with sledgehammer blows. At the conclusion of the book the reader is left staggering, not only because of the story of unrelieved mental horror and physical brutality, but because of the terrifying implications of the author's sermon." John Garrett

Canadian Forum 27:20 Ap '47 750w

"Canetti's 'The Tower of Babel,' published originally in Vienna in 1935 as 'Die Blendung' (The Deception), stumbles between realism and allegory; and yet, in spite of its shortcomings, it is a book of power, virtuosity and stature." Robert Halsband

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p13 F 9
'47 480w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 45:620 Ap 4 '47 650w

"Possibly Mr. Canetti can be credited with ideals of scholarship; as a novelist he seems portentous, monotonous, and—in final analysis—trivial. Any market—beyond a possible handful seeking obscure and erudite books—is difficult to spot."

— Kirkus 15:7 Ja 1 '47 170w

"Not recommended." E. F. Walbridge

— Library J 72:224 F 1 '47 110w

"The title of the translation should have been 'Insanity Fair,' for with the exception of the brother there is not a single character in the whole immense story that speaks or acts as a reasonable human being, and we grope our way through a fearful nightmare of insane brutality, with never a moment's relief." J. D. Beresford

— Manchester Guardian p3 My 10 '46
240w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 33:418 Je 7
'47 1050w

"One quality is outstanding in 'The Tower of Babel.' It is a shatteringly dismal tale, so unrelieved in its dreadful morbidity that it will cast any reader into the ultimate chasm of melancholy. It might be useful as an antidote for euphoria; applied to the normal individual it will act as a strong depressant. It belongs first of all in a case book of abnormal psychology. Secondly, it is perhaps symbolic of the decay of moral and social responsibility which pervaded Europe in the period between our recent wars. . . This, therefore, is not a book about people who live in the world. Nor is it about people who have renounced the world. It is about people who, despising the world, create new planets for their own pleasure and for the ruin of their souls. If you like that sort of thing, this is your dish." Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
F 23 '47 1000w

"Perhaps the author has intended this as an allegory. . . Perhaps he meant to show that the more science teaches us the less we understand each other. But the plethora of psychological ornamentation has robbed the parable precisely of the allegorical qualities with which he tried to imbue it. Apparently, he has studied psychiatry and embodies the results of his research in his book. But it remains a fable, comprehensible and interesting only for psychiatrists but hardly for the general reader. Mr. Canetti seems merely lost in the labyrinth he himself has created" Richard Plant

— + N Y Times p18 F 9 '47 400w

"Overstuffed, highly complex novel, rigid with symbolism in the best Germanic tradition."

— New Yorker 23:97 F 22 '47 140w

"Although the author piles horror on horror he does not succeed in giving us any sense of tragedy. The horrors, indeed, seem to be fantasies created by the author out of some inner compulsion, rather than actualities relevant to and growing out of the story. Despite its obvious faults 'The Tower of Babel' has a certain depth and complexity which make it worth reading. It has, too, a degree of honesty. And in the first section—which is by far the best—Mr. Canetti strikes at times a peculiar note of comedy, a strike which is very close to tragedy." Arthur Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 9 '47
700w

"Whatever it means, 'The Tower of Babel' is powerful stuff, lusty, mordant—strictly for adults. You may not like its Gothic comedy, but you will have to admit that its author has turned out a real tour de force of despair." A. F. Wolfe

Sat R of Lit 30:21 Mr 8 '47 550w

"Appalling, magnificent book. . . The method is not simple. With desiccated, pedantic caution he reflects fantasy against fact, merges nightmare with routine, cupidity with fanatical innocence, and so establishes all his forces as one great hell that the exhausted reader cannot after a few pages tell light from dark, or hell from hope. All in a curiously dry writing, where no detail is spared, and while asking the most detached patience for phantasmagoria beyond comparable echo. The author asks too much of us; we are too tired for this. Swift and Joyce had more mercy, and each also had the weakness, if you like, of spiritual reference which they could not evade. There is none of that here. There is no God, from any theology; there is no light. Only vileness enthroned, and reason nobly flying to its own obliteration. A mad, magnificent work which we are not able to endure, which perhaps we are right not to accept, but of which we dare not deny the genius or the justification. And, in conclusion, what an achievement is Miss C. V. Wedgwood's English rendering!" Kate O'Brien

CANETTI, ELIAS—Continued

Spec 176:540 My 24 '46 700w
Time 49:102 F 10 '47 700w

CANNING, VICTOR. The chasm. 288p $3 Mill 47-11444

Edward Burgess, an English architect, after the war, returns to an Apennine mountain village where seventeen years before he had spent a vacation with three of his friends. Two of the boys had been killed in the war; the third had supposedly died in Germany. But here Burgess found him, an ex-Nazi, living under an Italian name. The bridge over the chasm breaks, and the scene is set for tragedy.

Booklist 44:184 Ja 15 '48

"Well-sustained plot, with characters of some authority, and background of Italian village life. Well-blended drama with inner drives."

+ Kirkus 15:477 S 1 '47 170w

"The Chasm' is a civilized thriller," Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 N 9 '47 160w

"It is an example of the conventional novel at its best, a really well-executed piece of story-telling which stops short of artistic significance owing to the author's failure to follow his characters beyond the surface." D. S. Savage

+ — Spec 179:444 O 3 '47 360w

CANNON, BEEKMAN COX. Johann Mattheson, spectator in music. (Yale studies in the history of music, v. 1) 244p $3 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Mattheson, Johann [A47-2201]

Critical study of a German musician of the late seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries. "During more than six decades of the eighteenth century . . . Johann Mattheson sang on the operatic stage, became first the tutor and later the secretary of the British Resident in Hamburg, served as Cantor and Musical Director of the Hamburg Cathedral, translated plays, political tracts, and religious writings of all kinds from several languages, taught both theoretical and applied music to countless students, acted as court composer to the Duke of Schleswig-Holstein, composed and arranged music of every description, and produced a stream of printed words equalled by no other musician save perhaps Richard Wagner." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

"An unforgivably dry doctor's dissertation." Theatre Arts 31:81 N '47 30w

"The critical bibliography of Mattheson's tremendous musical and literary output has special merit. The first definitive work on Mattheson in any language, the book is a well-documented yet readable piece of scholarship. Its primary concern with Mattheson's relationship to the intellectual life of his time should make it of interest to the general reader as well as to the specialist in music."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:145 Je '47 320w

CANTOR, ALFRED JOSEPH. Cancer can be cured. 175p $2.50 Didier pubs.

616.994 Cancer

Med46-183

Short discussion on the prevention and curability of cancer. Besides some general information, the book contains brief chapters on specific types of cancer. No index.

"Much of its information is sound, but occasionally an unproved hypothesis has been advanced as an accepted fact, and in some parts of the book there is a tendency toward over-emphasis. The book is easy to read but inclined toward the dramatic. Absurd suggestions are interspersed with sound statements. . . The book is too elementary for physicians and public health workers. It is written from too emotional a viewpoint for the analytical layman. It may be well received by that part of the public which enjoys graphic and emotional presentations, and among this group lives may be saved." H. L. Lombard

Am J Pub Health 37:222 F '47 180w

Chicago Sun Book Week p22 D 8 '46 50w

Kirkus 14:368 Ag 1 '46 120w

"Dr. Cantor's book is one that ought to do much good. The elementary facts about cancer are simply and interestingly presented, and the advice given ought to be followed." W. K. N Y Times p14 Ap 27 '47 360w

CANTOR, NATHANIEL FREEMAN. Dynamics of learning. 282p $3 Foster & Stewart

370.15 Education—Aims and objectives. Learning, Psychology of 46-8494

"Professor Cantor is hopping mad about American education. He thinks we have been using a false psychology of teaching and learning. Moreover, he believes he has the answer. . . Cantor insists that the American school system is on all levels one of the most regimented institutional structures in our society. He excoriates the ABCDF grading of assignments as ineffective memory testing. He finds the gap between knowledge and learning most vulnerable to criticism. This pattern, he asserts, does not permit the student to participate in his own development. Furthermore, he is disturbed by the unrelenting support which our pedagogy allegedly lends to the status quo, an opinion which explains to his satisfaction why the average citizen is fearful of any basic change, however inevitable it may be." N Y Times

Am J Soc 52:379 Ja '47 10w

"Reaction to this book will unquestionably be divergent. To many it will seem vague, wordy, and ponderous, while others will regard it as a pioneer contribution in an area where little is known and much needs to be learned. To the reviewer, who concedes the inadequacies of much college level teaching, the volume largely fails. It offers nothing by way of controlled proof that the methods and mechanisms so painstakingly described do, in fact, achieve the results that are sought." M. M. Willey

Ann Am Acad 252:172 Jl '47 350w

"The profession is indebted to the author for his vigorous presentation of an extremely vital issue. His book will be read with interest by teachers in schools and colleges." F. J. Estvan

+ El School J 48:110 O '47 700w

"One might quarrel with the author about some of his aphorisms ('Virtue cannot be taught but it may be learned') or even his primary conviction ('Our school system has failed miserably in developing democratic attitudes'). But the reader will be impressed by the earnestness of his arguments and the engaging tone of authority, which is not unlike that of the equally witty but, in my opinion, less realistic 'Report on General Education,' which emanated from Harvard two years ago." James Lyons

+ — N Y Times p29 Ja 19 '47 380w

"The present author is in the great tradition. It is to be hoped that many teachers will be moved by this book to scrutinize their classroom performance and become supercharged with the dynamics of learning." Orday Tead
+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 Mr 29 '47 500w

Reviewed by J. J. Jelinek
School & Society 66:191 S 6 '47 750w

"A provocative and stimulating book. In fact, it is so challenging that it has the tendency to set the reader against the author. This seems especially unfortunate because teaching ways in college settings could profit by the content and method so ably discussed by Mr. Cantor in the middle and latter part of the book." I. K. Carter

Social Forces 25:359 Mr '47 600w

Reviewed by R. L. Thorndike
Survey G 36:704 D '47 450w

CAPA, ROBERT. Slightly out of focus. 243p il $3.50 Holt

940.5497 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Hungarian. World war, 1939-1945—Pictorial works 47-4799

Personal narrative of a war photographer who covered the actions in North Africa, Sicily, Italy, and France for Colliers and Life. Capa is Hungarian and he was the only enemy alien to be a war photographer and correspondent for the U. S. Army. Includes selections from his camera shots of the various war fronts.

Booklist 44:10 S 1 '47

Reviewed by R. E. Merriam
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 S 28 '47 300w

Kirkus 15:358 Jl 1 '47 180w

"Interestingly-written and well illustrated with photographs which author took on the various fronts." W. A. Kalenich
+ Library J 72:1102 Ag '47 80w

"Capa, thank God, does not take himself too seriously. Neither is he shy about quoting his own best quips and epigrams. Among correspondents Capa was known not least for his use of eight languages and his mastery of none. Traces of the freedom with which he treats words in any language are to be found in his prose style, but they enhance rather than mar this gay, swift, entertaining story. With Capa in the field there is again a reason to read another correspondent's book." William Walton

+ New Repub 117:28 S 8 '47 850w

"More than half the Capa narrative is very funny. But Capa, with a good Hungarian accent, parachuting into a tree in the very midst of a battle, silent lest both sides take a shot at him and Capa the hero of many poker games, easy-come, easy-go man, is nevertheless a serious fellow. In his choice of shots he is more sensitive and more knowledgeable and more daring than most of his fellow correspondents. . . As raconteur, as is his famous custom, Capa has made himself the butt and has rendered true account, mildly confessional, always acrid, of 1942-'45. Along with good pictures of Brass, he has given us a Goya-like candid picture of what Europe has been through." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 14 '47 950w

"All the pictures are good, from the ones Capa made of the convoy in which he crossed in 1942 to the one he somewhat dogmatically entitles 'The Last Shot.' Nothing in the book is out of focus but the text." Russell Maloney
+ N Y Times p7 S 28 '47 550w

"Some first-rate photographs of the war in Europe, accompanied by Mr. Capa's account of his extracurricular activities in such backwaters as the bar of the Hôtel Scribe. When the author is merely fooling around, the text isn't bad; what may get on your nerves is his occasional incursions into the style of 'A Farewell to Arms.'"

New Yorker 23:110 O 4 '47 70w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 4 '47 500w

Reviewed by Margaret Bourke-White
Sat R of Lit 30:26 N 1 '47 600w

CAREW, DUDLEY. Taken town. 178p $2.50 Scribner

47-2359

A young Englishman returned to civilian life after years in the army, goes on a week-end party with a group of the executives of his firm. During the few hours of that week-end Robert Singleton learns a lot about life that, had things been otherwise, he might have learned less painfully over a longer period of time.

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 8 '47 270w

"In the British tradition, neatness of detail, niceties of phrase, for a story which is essentially minor."

Kirkus 15:105 F 15 '47 170w

"Pleasant reading with application to problems of veteran rehabilitation." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 72:387 Mr 1 '47 90w

"After having got off to a rather slow start, the narrative moves along briskly enough and provides reasonably good entertainment." Jennings Rice

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 Mr 16 '47 500w

CARFRAE, ELIZABETH. Portrait of Caroline. 213p $2.75 Putnam

47-4701

Caroline was the pretty daughter of the coachman on an English estate. Educated by the lady of the manor, Caroline early fell in love with Charles, the son of her benefactress. Both of them married, but when Carrie's husband died and Charles' wife became an invalid, the two went to the West Indies and lived as man and wife. With the death of Charles' wife they were free to return to England.

"A standard British brand of lightweight merchandise."

Kirkus 15:316 Je 15 '47 90w

"A long, syrupy narrative." Lisle Bell
— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 S 14 '47 80w

N Y Times p16 Ag 10 '47 140w

Reviewed by Edith James

— San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 31 '47 80w
Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47 120w

CARINI, LOUIS FRANK BARTHOLOMEW. Drafting for electronics. 211p il $2.50 McGraw 744.42 Drafting room practice. Mechanical drawing 47-1007

"Students and draftsmen who are well versed in engineering drawing often need supplementary instruction to prepare them for electronics drafting which is schematic and employs specialized symbols. This book provides this supplementary information, but it contains also a review of general methods that will be useful to persons who are beginning a study of engineering drawing. . . Useful data such as the R. M. A. color codes for capacitors and resistors, standard wire gages and conversion factors for various electrical units are given in the appendix." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 71:1052 Ag '46 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:7 Ja '47

CARLETON, MRS MARJORIE CHALMERS. Swan sang once. 211p $2.50 Morrow

47-601

Mystery story.

Booklist 43:185 F 15 '47

Kirkus 14:583 N 15 '46 90w

"Recommended." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 72:76 Ja 1 '47 70w

CARLETON, M. C.—Continued

"By deftly extracting the mystery and dropping broad hints along the way, Miss Carleton has achieved a fashionable form sometimes known as the 'suspense novel,' rather at the expense of readers who might wish to be baffled. Otherwise, the tale falls into a crime category to mention which might give too much away at this point. There's a war-time element and an ending for those who rejoice in cruelty to a sinner." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Ja 12 '47 280w

"Despite some over-long descriptive passages, few readers will be able to lay this book down unfinished." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p35 Ja 12 '47 140w

"Suspense is perfectly handled in this superior item, which for my taste has about everything." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 F 2 '47 80w

"Chilling study in hate and terror, with an Act-of-God ending. Backgrounds colorful, people interesting, and finish quite satisfactory. Subtle shocker."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:33 Ja 11 '47 50w

CARLISLE, NORMAN V., and NELSON, EUGENE W. Modern wonder book of ships. 313p il $2.50 Winston

623.8 Ships 47-30320

An account of ships and seafaring from earliest times to the present. The greater part of the book is devoted to modern times covering all phases of the subject—commercial and naval ships, shipwrecks and disasters, harbor equipment, navigation, etc. The last chapter, Language of the sea, contains a glossary of nautical terms.

Booklist 43:335 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:263 Jl '47 40w

Kirkus 15:285 Je 1 '47 100w

"Another Wonder Book presenting a wealth of information and sea lore from Egyptian galleys to superliners, from pirate to battleships. . . Good index includes names of individual ships. Well illustrated." F. L. Morrison

+ Library J 72:963 Je 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 My 11 '47 250w

Sat R of Lit 30:58 N 15 '47 40w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:244 S '47 100w

CARLSON, ESTHER. Moon over the back fence. 191p $2.50 Doubleday

47-31394

An imaginative little girl invents a playmate called Uncle George. The story is of the fantastic adventures of these two during a summer vacation.

"Amusing, tender, nostalgic, this is successful adult recall of a childhood fantasy world."

+ Kirkus 15:475 S 1 '47 120w

"Recommended." Helen Peerless

+ Library J 72:1193 S 1 '47 70w

"The tale has whimsy and fantasy aplenty, but it misses the peculiar magic and charm necessary for real success. . . Part of the fault seems, to this reader, to lie in the fact that we never really get to know Ellen or what causes her to lose herself in make-believe and day-dreams. The real story of Ellen and her family could have made Miss Carlson's web of fancy strong enough to spin out the most gossamer of tales and still enmesh the reader." Anne Richards

+ N Y Times p18 O 5 '47 230w

"It is usual enough to have a first novelist write about his or a thinly veiled someone else's childhood years. But Esther Carlson has taken the subject of childhood and made it into something very special. She has not only captured the spontaneous, richly imaginative quality of a child's mind; she has made of it whimsical, entertaining fantasy." Hollis Alpert

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 O 25 '47 650w

CARLSON, WILLIAM HUGH. College and university libraries and librarianship. See American library association

CARLSTON, KENNETH SMITH. Process of international arbitration. 318p $4.50 Columbia univ. press

341.63 Arbitration, International A47-22

Monograph on international arbitration which emphasizes the judicial aspect. The author, professor of law at the University of Illinois, cites some 150 cases and 300 authorities, by way of describing procedure and problems of international arbitration. Table of cases. Bibliography. Index.

"In this scholarly and well-documented volume Professor Carlston has offered a valuable analysis of the accumulated rules involved in the arbitral process." F. S. Wild

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:794 Ag '47 600w

Reviewed by R. F. Wood

Ann Am Acad 253:205 S '47 400w

"Professor Carlston has made a commendable effort in this volume to assess and solve the problems which have arisen and are likely to arise in the procedure of international arbitration. This aspect of international law has been sorely neglected by writers. Readers may feel confident that this volume is founded on a broad base, for the copious notes and references indicate that the Continental and American literature, as well as pertinent decisions, have been well covered." L. H. Woolsey

+ Columbia Law R 47:870 Jl '47 1000w

Foreign Affairs 25:695 Jl '47 30w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:171 Je '47 260w

CARMER, CARL LAMSON. For the rights of men. 64p il $2 Hinds

920 U.S.—Biography. Civil rights 47-6504

"Brief discussion of the men who have by words and actions fought in America for the principles of free speech, free press and other civil liberties. Altgeld, Lovejoy, Garrison, Lyon, Zenger, Prendergast, Paine and Jefferson and a few others are included." Library J

Kirkus 15:219 Ap 15 '47 170w

"Simply but strikingly written and illustrated, the book will be a good addition to the reading on democracy for the junior and senior high school age." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 72:818 My 15 '47 70w

School & Society 65:237 Mr 29 '47 20w

"The reader, though young, may well wish to question such statements as the people of the United States 'will not be fooled when the crackpots begin shouting that a man who criticizes the government is a traitor.' But taken in the spirit in which the book is written . . . it is a book which should find acceptance among those for whom it is written." M. N. Brown

+ Social Educ 12:44 Ja '48 200w

"The booklet, if daringly used by teachers to point up the repression today of communists, labor unions, and the darker races, can contribute to the struggle to realize in fact what we accept in principle. It is a vivid and heartening little sermon in the best tradition of pamphleteering." R. N. Baldwin

+ Survey 83:214 Jl '47 270w

CARMICHAEL, HOAGLAND HOWARD. Stardust road. 156p il $2 Rinehart

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-89

Brief autobiography, written with rhythm, like the author-song writer's own songs, of which the most famous is Stardust.

"An autobiography in which the man is submerged in the pace of his time, the jazz era, but emerges as sane, stable and humble, despite his genius for low-down blues. By association, jazz means speakeasies, crib houses, opium joints, hopped-up youth, reefer, etc., as in Mezzrow's Really The Blues, but Carmichael shows us here another, and perhaps truer, segment of the era, the intelligensia of jazz."

Kirkus 14:448 S 1 '46 170w

"Mr. Carmichael's own career is a success story, and he is happy in its recording, but no less felicitous are his tributes to fellow artists—some no longer living, like Bix Beiderbecke and William Moenkhaus, and others whose names are indelible—Louis Armstrong, Paul Whiteman, Bing Crosby, Isham Jones." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Ja 19 '47 700w

Reviewed by Lucy Greenbaum

N Y Times p32 D 1 '46 240w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 5 '47 70w

"Mr. Carmichael's thoughts tend to be sentimental and his approach to the music he played and heard lacks a certain critical depth, but he writes with a personal sincerity that makes almost credible the antics of the age when jazz grew up."

Theatre Arts 32:68 Ja '48 80w

CARNAC, CAROL, pseud. See Rivett, E. C.

CARNES, CECIL, and CARNES, FRED. You must go to Mexico. 130p il $3 Ziff-Davis

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel
47-2720

The authors are brothers, both newspaper reporters, who went to Mexico by car, and give here an account of their trip down the Pan American highway, and the side excursions they took.

"Besides being filled with humor, it is an informative guide for United States motorists going to Mexico."

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 My 16 '47 60w

"'You Must Go to Mexico' is informative, informal and infectious in its enthusiasm. It should meet the needs of any traveler, but particularly the motorist unaccustomed to the rules of the road and the hazards of tropical mountain climbing. . . The illustrations are numerous and well chosen."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32
My 11 '47 140w

"Informative, funny and very good reading. The photographs which highlight the text are excellent." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 11 '47 70w

"If you must go to Mexico, either in body or spirit, a pleasant companion will be this volume by the brothers Carnes." Betty Kirk

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 J1 5 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:115 J1 '47

CARNEY, MRS AUBREY (TOULMIN). No certain answer. 248p $2.75 Harper

47-30900

A first novel which pictures the effects of boredom upon a small group of officers in training at an army airfield in New Mexico. Their surplus energies went into love and drink, and often ended in mental depression.

Kirkus 15:345 J1 1 '47 170w

"Characters are convincing, style is fluent, but some of the incidents are overdrawn. Recommended for large and medium-sized libraries as a glimpse of Army life from an unusual point of view." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 72:1106 Ag '47 70w

"As a footnote to the psychological history of the recent war, 'No Certain Answer' wraps certain bitter truths in a smooth capsule." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 S
21 '47 140w

"It is with regret that one must call this promising effort a brave failure. Mrs. Carney shows an easy mastery of style; her prose is effortless; at times she can portray a scene vividly." J. W. Chase

— + N Y Times p30 O 5 '47 500w

CAROLL, EVELYN. Dance, Natasha, dance! [29p] il $1.25 Rinehart

47-2538

Story of a little Russian girl who, everybody said, was the best dancer in the village. One night Natasha had a dream of going to Moscow to dance in the ballet, but in the dream things didn't turn out as they should have, and Natasha was so glad to wake up—and to be again "the best dancer" in her own little village.

Chicago Sun Book Week p5a N 19 '47 100w

Kirkus 15:282 Je 1 '47 130w

"It's too bad the story and binding of this book don't equal the illustrations which have humor, action and child interest." Gertrude Andrus

+ — Library J 72:1197 S 1 '47 80w

"Little girls won't learn much about Russia, or about dancing, from this little story, but it carries an idea so sensible it deserves the gay pink-and-blue pictures in which it is expressed." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O 5
'47 320w

"Profuse illustrations, largely in color, add to the zest of this story, in which girls of 7 to 9 years will identify themselves with a credible heroine." H. K. Lippmann

+ N Y Times p40 N 16 '47 130w

CAROUISSIS, GEORGE. Poetopoeia: the romance of Euripides. (William-Frederick press bk) 322p $3.50 Pamphlet distributing

882.3 Euripides 46-6711

Study of the life and times of Euripides told partly in his own words, and partly in the author's imaginative writings, done in the style of Euripides. No index.

"Ever since, a good many years ago, I enjoyed reading some of the dramas of Euripides and most of those of Sophocles, I have wanted to see somebody study them from the viewpoint of social custom and change and from the viewpoint of the romance of society. Now comes George Carouissis in Poetopoeia: and does exactly this. And in addition to this, the book is an excellent study of social history in which the picture of ancient times is thrown on the screen of modern times." H. W. Odum

+ Social Forces 25:233 D '46 1050w

Social Studies 37:380 D '46 20w

CARPENTER, ALLAN. See Carpenter, J. A.

CARPENTER, JOHN ALLAN, and GUESS, NORMAN FRANCIS, eds. Primer for home builders; il. by Alida Marsh. (Windsor press bk) 171p $2.50 Pop. mechanics

643 Dwellings, Home economics 47-30256

"This book is the work of a group of recognized experts who have attempted to give the prospective homeowner the information that he needs in selecting and purchasing a building site, planning a house, and making decisions about materials and equipment. There are also two chapters on buying an existing house." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 43:286 My 15 '47

"The book is easy to read and the information given in it is undoubtedly reliable, but many subjects are only skimmed. Building materials, for example, are discussed in fourteen pages. The defect could have been remedied in part by referring the reader to additional material, but there is neither bibliography nor index."

N Y New Tech Bks 32:28 Ap '47

CARR, AUTE LEE. Practical guide to prefabricated houses. 111p il $2.75 Harper

728.6 Buildings, Prefabricated. Architecture, Domestic—Designs and plans 47-4290

Introductory chapters trace the history of prefabricated houses, and explain the process of prefabrication. The second part of the book contains pictures, plans, and details of the products of twenty-one manufacturers of this type of building; and lists addresses of over two hundred other United States manufacturers.

Booklist 43:355 J1 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 J1 27 '47
50w

Wis Lib Bul 43:114 J1 '47

CARR, EDWARD HALLETT. Soviet impact on the western world. 113p $1.75 Macmillan

914.7 Russia—Civilization. Communism—Russia. Civilization, Occidental 47-1572

"In the opinion of the author the cult of the 'common man' and the contemporary trend away from 'individualism' are two of many ideological impacts on the Western world which are the result, 'conscious or unconscious' of 'Soviet practice and achievement.' In a series of carefully delineated essays examining the political, economic and social influence of the Soviet Union on the West, Professor Carr provides a fresh approach and provoking insight into the philosophic interplay of two systems." (Library J) No index.

"This slender volume is a truly significant contribution to the understanding of one of history's decisive developments. Written with calm detachment, the book provides a timely corrective for both the passionate denunciation and the unstinted praise of the Soviet Union with which less objective writers have confounded the issue. Professor Carr's matter-of-factness, the incisive acumen with which he unerringly goes to the core of problems, and the historical insight with which he assesses the import of salient developments, combine to make his approach eminently sophisticated. At the same time, the author's well-known gift of simplification and his clear style make the book very readable." Henry Janzen
+ Am Pol Sci R 41:361 Ap '47 700w

Reviewed by Karl Scholz

Ann Am Acad 252:117 J1 '47 480w

Booklist 43:253 Ap 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '47

Reviewed by Waldemar Gurian

Commonweal 46:289 J1 4 '47 290w

Current Hist 12:240 Mr '47 70w

Foreign Affairs 25:527 Ap '47 30w

"He does not attempt to evaluate the merits or demerits of the Soviet experiment, but frankly and dispassionately weighs its importance to western civilization, in which, he feels, the Soviet democracy has its roots. From his text there emerges a new understanding of much that the Soviet has incorporated into their working philosophy. . . Not always easy reading, this is nonetheless one of the most significant of the season's books on that great question mark of the Soviet Union."
+ Kirkus 14:569 N 1 '46 280w

"Merits a wide audience. Recommended."
Toby Cole

+ Library J 72:73 Ja 1 '47 120w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 3 '46 300w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambéry

Nation 164:191 F 15 '47 600w

New Repub 116:36 Mr 3 '47 600w

Reviewed by John Lawrence

New Statesman & Nation 32:486 D 28 '46 480w

"His book has a curiously placid quality, considering the dynamite in it. It is another proof that all Europe has moved far closer to the Bolsheviks in its thinking than Americans have realized. It is also an illustration that many Europeans have watched this happen a little as one watches an avalanche, with a strange, spectator-like passivity. The laissez-faire doctrine of 'the less government the better,' Professor Carr writes, has today 'hardly any whole-hearted adherents left, except perhaps in certain circles in the United States.' But his own acceptance of the kind of government he believes required by his 'new conditions of mass civilization' is itself a long British way from being passionate or whole-hearted. . . The hope—and this he does not write—is that what he calls Western culture is still capable of producing a book as clear and honest and disturbing as this one, and as filled with implicit confidence in the capacity of men to establish a common heritage of ideas and values." Joseph Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
F 2 '47 1750w

"Carr writes with the ease born of penetration, informing experience and with a grace more characteristic of English writing than our own. Many Americans will take exception to some of his arguments, but none will find a consideration of 'The Soviet Impact on the Western World' unrewarding." S. S. Harcave
+ N Y Times p33 F 16 '47 800w

"While many will not agree with some of the ideas expressed therein, the importance of the subject and the competence of the author combine to give this book the right to be read." J. S. Curtiss

Pol Sci Q 62:310 Je '47 700w

Reviewed by Louis Wasserman

San Francisco Chronicle p27 Je 8 '47
550w

"The author is well equipped by experience, training, and talent to undertake this task. . . Within the narrow limits of 113 pages Professor Carr treats his subject in masterly fashion. He sets himself the task of placing within the perspectives of history the impact of the Soviet system on the political, economic, social, international, and ideological patterns of Western civilization. In the performance of his scholarly labors he has striven for objectivity, disclaiming any intention to pass judgment on the merits or demerits of the Soviet achievement." G. S. Counts

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 Ja 25 '47 1000w

"On the face of it, this small volume is straightforward enough. It contains six lectures, slightly amended, delivered by Professor Carr in Oxford early this year; each one an analysis, brilliant, disturbing and often profound, of the Soviet methods of handling the new mass civilisation and their repercussions on the individualist civilisation of the West. . . But, in fact, the book is not as straightforward as that. As we read on we are conscious of increasing ambiguity. In the first place, it is not clear where Professor Carr himself stands. For a great deal of what he says he has an alibi: he is interpreting the Soviet attitude. By the time he has finished, most of the principles upon which our own post-Renaissance individualistic civilisation has been founded are argued out of existence; but at no stage does Professor Carr say in, so many words: 'This is what I believe.' Edward Crankshaw

Spec 177:616 D 6 '46 1050w

"The book is stimulating, challenging, a call to the mental and emotional flexibility without which no valid compromise between the Soviet Union and the western world can be worked out." C. S. Parker

+ Survey G 36:490 S '47 600w

"Professor Carr has earned a unique reputation as a constructive and refreshing writer on political theory and international affairs. He is, in addition, an authority on Russia and eastern Europe. The present small book, containing six lectures given this year in Oxford, is as stimulating and challenging as all that Professor Carr writes. . . It is regrettable that Professor Carr should have decided to print his lectures 'without substantial change,' and should have retained unchanged not a few paragraphs that give unqualified approval for a type of social order that is destructive of individuality and corrosive of the ideas of freedom and personal responsibility as they have been historically evolved in western Christian civilization. The trouble with this book is that there is not enough of it; for there are indications that, if the Professor had taken more elbow-room, the balance of interpretation might have been redressed."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p587 N 30 '46 1400w

Wis Lib Bul 43:95 Je '47

Reviewed by P. E. Mosely

Yale R n s 36:536 spring '47 550w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). Sleeping sphinx. 255p $2.50 Harper 47-1730

Detective story.

Booklist 43:273 My 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 F 23 '47 130w

Kirkus 14:627 D 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 34:374 N 8 '47 120w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Mr 2 '47 300w

"All in all, this is Gideon Fell at his best, and that is saying a mouthful." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p34 F 23 '47 230w

"Neatly plotted, and tricky enough to please even the most demanding of Carr's devotees."

+ New Yorker 23:99 F 22 '47 90w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 9 '47 100w

"Grade A."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 Mr 1 '47 40w

CARR, M. EMILY. Growing pains; the autobiography of Emily Carr; with a foreword by Ira Dilworth. 381p il $4 Oxford

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-19712

Autobiography of a Canadian artist and writer, who painted and wrote about the scenes and the people of the Canadian west.

"Growing Pains considered as an autobiography is quite devoid of self-dramatization. Here is not the ego-inflated artist telling her important story for the world to behold and admire. We could wish even that she had taken herself as an artist more seriously as a public figure and told us more about her work on her pictures. But again, she would not have been Emily Carr. She says she learned something from every teacher, from one that there was sun in all shadows, from another that leaves are not plane surfaces. We see the struggles toward artistic confidence. But we get no indication of anything like an adequate self-appraisal. Emily Carr has not thought a discovery of herself very important; she has tried to describe the discovery of a Canadian art." Kathleen Coburn

+ Canadian Forum 26:234 Ja '47 1250w

"Emily Carr had been recognized before her death as a great Canadian painter. With the publication of Klee Wyck she was established as an essayist, and now Growing Pains places her as possibly our most skilful writer of autobiography. Written in the form of short essays, Growing Pains is the personal and sincere story of the development of a creative mind. It is of special interest to the student of Canadian social history as well as to the student of painting, for in it we find the passionate desire to express Canada, the beauty and solemnity of nature, the history and customs of the Indian tribes of the Pacific Coast, the reactions of a young colonial to Victorian England, humorous and often vitriolic pictures of Victoria and Vancouver, and finally the development of the Canadian art movement." D. R. Plaunt

+ Canadian Hist R 28:212 Je '47 1500w

"Growing Pains" says nothing profound about her art or her experiences, but the rem-iniscences are lively and undimmed, dappled with humor and anecdote."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 Je 29 '47 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 20 '47 170w

"The illustrations show her as a painter of distinction, influenced by the Impressionists, but with something of her own to say 'tremendously expressive of the British Columbia coast,' as another Canadian artist wrote. Her autobiography is also expressive—showing a character obsessed by an ideal of art, finding, in spite of discouragement, a good deal of happiness in it." Gwendolen Freeman

+ Spec 179:506 O 17 '47 550w

CARR, MALCOLM WALLACE. Dentistry; an agency of health service. 219p $1.50 Commonwealth fund

617.6 Dentistry

SG46-319

"Dentistry is one in a series of monographs issued under the auspices of the Committee on Medicine and the Changing Order of the New York Academy of Medicine. Writing for the intelligent layman, Malcolm Carr and a group of prominent contributors describe the history of the dental profession, dental education, dental practice, research, and dental socio-economics." Am J Pub Health

"Summary and conclusions representing the thinking of dental authorities will merit the consideration of public health leaders... Admittedly one book, even one so well written as is Dentistry, will not of itself bring about the desired changes in the thinking of dentists and public health administrators. Nevertheless its wide reading in both professions should enhance the social utility of the dental profession." J. M. Wisan

+ Am J Pub Health 37:318 Mr '47 320w

"In general, the work is a useful contribution to the scientific literature, but it is doubtful that it serves adequately its primary purpose of defining dentistry as an 'agency of health service.'"

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:328 D '46 320w

CARR, WILLIAM GEORGE. One world in the making; the United nations. 100p il $1 Ginn

341.1 United nations (organization) 46-7918

"The author, known to teachers through his N.E.A. position, served as a consultant to the United States Delegation at San Francisco and as Deputy Secretary of the United Nations Conference at London, which created the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization. The book gives an authoritative explanation of the United Nations in a simple, clear-cut manner with photographs, maps, and charts." Social Studies

School & Society 64:279 O 19 '46 30w

Reviewed by Julia Emery

Social Educ 11:88 F '47 500w

"Secondary school teachers should know about this book because of the vital importance of the U. N. as a vehicle for peace and because of its arrangement and content being so adaptable for teaching."

+ Social Studies 38:92 F '47 290w

CARRERA ANDRADE, JORGE. Secret country; poems; tr. by Muna Lee; introd. by John Peale Bishop. 77p $2.50 Macmillan

861

46-5202

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"Mr. Bishop's introduction, incidentally, asserts that Andrade has shaken himself loose from the Symbolist influence, and has developed a simpler, more natural style. In general, this is true, though—as we have seen—it might be more accurate to say that the poet has greatly modified an influence which still shows itself clearly from time to time not only in the handling of sound but in the combination of various senses in the same image ('synaesthesia'). But however we label him, Jorge Carrera Andrade is a poet for Americans to love and study; a gentle, natural and brilliant master of his craft." M. L. Rosenthal

CARRERA ANDRADE, JORGE—Continued
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
Ap 6 '47 650w

"The poems are not political or programmatic, but they are, what is more important, profoundly humane. And whether they speak of strange landscapes or intimate interiors, of 'The Life of the Cricket' or in 'Defense of Sunday,' of the miracles of physical love or of the metaphysics of solitude, they speak with an immediacy and an inwardness that can be paralleled only in the work of such men as Rilke, Lorca and Pasternak." Babette Deutsch
+ N Y Times p4 F 16 '47 500w

"In the gentle atmosphere of his poetry we can move with an almost forgotten delight. The technique of his verses is so unlabored that only the dutiful critic can be conscious of it. There is no demand upon the reader for historical or psychological knowledge or for an astute social judgment. There is no fear of being a poet or of picturing a private reality. When he looks up and down avenues of space and time, he notices actualities, not inhuman fog, and points to dust as the 'corpse of time.' Yet time is not only there, inanimate, it is in ourselves in a completely personal way." Ruth Stephan
+ Poetry 70:159 Je '47 900w

"Miss Lee has, on the whole, rendered the poems included in Mr. Carrera Andrade's volume pretty literally and I think her course was wise because the most salient feature of the book to the non-Spanish reader is the richness, depth, and variety of the metaphor and the image. She has given us the content and very little else, though I question her interpretations on several points." Martha Bacon
+ — Sat R of Lit 30:41 Mr 22 '47 650w

CARRIGHAR, SALLY. One day at Teton marsh; il. by George and Patricia Mattson.
239p $3.50 Knopf

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 47-31164

An equinoctial storm sweeping down from Canada reached the Teton mountains of Wyoming. In a marsh at Jackson's Hole the animals and birds felt the first touch of winter. The author of One Day on Beetle Rock (Book Review Digest 1944, 1945) here describes the effects of the storm on the lives of the creatures at this particular time and this particular spot.

"It is all an absorbing story with an ever changing point of view. . . A book in this day of indifferent bookmaking that is both beguiling to look at and to read and own." David McCord

+ Atlantic 180:178 N '47 420w

Booklist 44:46 O 1 '47

"This transposes the constant activity and tense awareness of the world of animals and insects in delicate and exquisite terms. . . An exceptional nature book in its authentic observation, heightened perception."

+ Kirkus 15:450 Ag 15 '47 110w

"Others, like this reviewer, will find in this book a new and absorbing world. Recommended." Julia Sabine

+ Library J 72:1264 S 15 '47 100w

"One wishes the style were less staccato because the picture itself is so well worth while. The full-page illustrations and the map, in their over-decorative qualities, emphasize rather the idiosyncrasy of the artists than reality of sky, water, trees and living creatures. The chapter head and tail pieces are charmingly Bewickesque. For a minimum of anthropomorphism, and in faithful representation of activities possible in a day in the life of each of these creatures, Miss Carrighar's book deserves a place near the top of fictional natural history." William Beebe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
S 28 '47 360w

"It is a story full of violence and destruction, pursuit and flight. . . In describing these events, Miss Carrighar combines drama with the scientific precision of detail that results from years of study and patient watching."

R. G. Davis

+ N Y Times p34 O 19 '47 700w

"Wise, observant, patient, able to set down what she sees and learns in simple, admirable prose, Mrs Carrighar is like no one else who has ever written about animals, birds and insects. Better still, she has the kind of sensitivity that doesn't need a conflict on man-scale in order to produce tension. It's the smaller animals she chooses to write about. Yet, so well has she understood these, she can build a drama even—well, even around a mosquito." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 25 '47
750w

Wis Lib Bul 43:149 N '47

CARRINGTON, DOROTHY. Traveller's eye.
381p il $4 Pilot

910.9 Voyages and travels 47-3500

Historical study of English travel and travellers, containing excerpts from the work of more than seventy famous travellers. The period covered is from the Renaissance to the present day. Among those quoted are Sir Francis Drake, Captain John Smith, Sir John Mandeville, Byron, Dickens, Mrs Trollope, and Auden and Isherwood. Index.

Kirkus 15:213 Ap 1 '47 160w

"It is delightfully illustrated with over thirty prints, some of them rare. . . Miss Carrington's anthology is crammed with amusing and exotic anecdote culled from wide reading and patient research. As commentator and essayist she is less impressive. When she nods over familiar dates or seems superficial in assessing established reputations (Horace Walpole is one example) one wonders how sound she is as a guide in remoter territory. None the less, this amusing book deserves a successor, for the material is far from exhausted." R. G. J.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 29 '47
120w

"Miss Carrington has carried out an agreeable idea excellently. . . She has produced in illustration of her thesis a fascinating and many-sided book, part anthology from a very wide range of sources, part comment on the passages chosen and the authors. It may, therefore, be read in many ways: as a straightforward anthology; as a study in the development of English prose; as a most subtle record of the Englishman's changing attitudes over four centuries to the world outside his island; and as a history of the spell that certain cities and countries have cast upon him. Rightly, the book begins with the English in Paris." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 33:360 My
17 '47 850w

"A book of this kind could have emerged as a hopeless hodge-podge of quotations contributed by several score of writers were it not for the logical organization that Miss Carrington has given it. . . She has prepared a connecting tissue of biographical and historical essay, spiced with a restrained and puckish humor. She has thus made intelligible and amusing what would otherwise have been a scrapbook of miscellany, the antique and the curious." W. D. Ogdon

+ N Y Times p4 Je 22 '47 600w

"Miss Carrington has produced, from what must have been a vast and untidy mass of material, an orderly, progressive book, in which quotations from the travellers' reports are interspersed with comments of her own that are notable for their style, understanding, and sparkle."

+ New Yorker 23:106 My 10 '47 100w

"Learned but diverting study of English travellers. . . The writer has elucidated them with scholarship, with wit and with a most enviable skill. . . The illustrations form an ideal commentary—nostalgic, extravagant—upon the text and precisely echo the mood of the book. They are beautifully reproduced—the whole volume, indeed, is admirably got up. Only the proof-readers and the printers have let Miss Carrington and her caravan of travellers down: the book is sprayed with misprints and someone has played hell with the index." James Pope-Hennessy

+ Spec 178:340 Mr 28 '47 750w

+ Springf'd Union p19 Ag 14 '47 120w

CARRINGTON, HEReward. Psychic science and survival. 142p $2.50 Beechurst press

133.072 Psychical research. Spiritualism 47-5071

"The battle over whether psychical research is a legitimate science or not has raged for many years. In this book, Dr. Hereward Carrington, Director of the American Psychical Institute and long recognized as the leading exponent of psychical research in this country, discusses this problem in its entirety, lending added weight and documentation to the position that it is a creditable science and should be acknowledged as such." Publisher's note

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p19 Ag 17 '47 900w

Springf'd Republican p12B O 19 '47 150w

CARROLL, CONSOLATA (SISTER MARY CONSOLATA). Pray love, remember; il. by Theresa Kilham. 303p $3 Farrar, Straus

47-4644

Autobiographical novel, based on the author's childhood days in an upstate New York town at the turn of the century. The daily doings of a Catholic family are set forth in episodic style, recalling the days when brides were known to go to church in black silk, and a seven pound tenderloin roast cost $1.50.

"Here is the friendliness, and harmless gossip of a small town, the excitement and minor mishaps of a young bride, the innocence and curiosity of a child, the gaiety and activity of a big family—remembered by a gentle and serene mind. Written by a Catholic nun, the succession of episodic center around her, and the naïveté and charm lift these pieces above the ordinary. For a conservative, as well as religious market."

+ Kirkus 15:185 Mr 15 '47 90w

"Some warm and amusing accounts, but in the main rather stilted. Too much labored remembering in this very homey story, plus too much religion for the average reader. For special tastes." Jayne Doughman

Library J 72:886 Je 1 '47 70w

"The brother-in-law who belonged to the printers' union, dear elder sister Kate, the children, the little nun who deleted the fancy wreath from Viola's veil on her communion day, are only a few of the characters in this affectionate family album of natural, even ordinary, but on the whole contented people who had pretty good consciences and feared neither God nor man but served both in the friendly Irish-American way of life a generation ago." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 J1 13 '47 1000w

Reviewed by C. A. Brady

N Y Times p14 Je 15 '47 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 10 '47 220w

CARROLL, MRS GLADYS (HASTY). While the angels sing. 178p $2.50 Macmillan

47-11768

"Seen through the keen, kindly eyes (and wise heart) of 'Grandma,' a wholesome normal New England household's Christmas preparations reveal the strength of family ties, with each of the three-generation members a distinct and thoroughly likable personality. Romance provided by returning prodigal and spinster neighbor." Library J

Booklist 44:108 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Ralph Habas

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 N 9 '47 500w

"The book contains much of Mrs. Carroll's philosophy, which is one of invincible sweetness and light. It also contains an application of some sane theories about child-rearing and some fresh and lively humor." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 D 6 '47 360w

"A heart-warming story."

+ Kirkus 15:480 S 1 '47 140w

"Perfect answer to a librarian's prayer—well written, delightful contemporary story by a satisfying author; no 'sex,' vulgarity, problems, delinquency, nor war... Sentimental leanings excusable because 'it's Christmas.' Recommended for all libraries." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 72:1469 O 15 '47 110w

"Likeable people—old, young and middling—and a potent dose of Christmas spirit make up this appealing little book. Of course it is sentimental. Most people are sentimental about Christmas, pro or con. In Selena and Julie, Mrs. Carroll shows that the pro side is much the happier." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 N 2 '47 500w

Reviewed by Catharine Brody

N Y Times p26 N 30 '47 470w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 30 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:175 D '47

CARROLL, MRS LEONE (RUTLEDGE). Pressure cookery; il. by Jan Freeman. 171p $2 Barrows

641.58 Cookery, Pressure 47-30106

Describes the various types of pressure cookers now on the market and their operation. Includes recipes and menus, and instructions for cooking meats, and fresh and frozen vegetables. One chapter on canning. Index.

Booklist 43:199 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:5 My '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

Reviewed by Jewel Graham

J Home Econ 39:523 O '47 220w

"The first actual book in the field, a necessary supplement to the leaflets provided with the purchase of pressure cookers."

+ Kirkus 15:95 F 1 '47 80w

"Whether the family is buying its first or second or third cooker, the reliable and detailed description of the different types and their different uses as given in 'Pressure Cookery' will be of value. The family cook may be a new hand or an old hand at this modern way of preparing meals; either will find new ideas here." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p28 F 23 '47 170w

CARRUTHERS, OLIVE. We'll sing one song. 351p $2.75 Bobbs

47-30607

"Though 'We'll Sing One Song' revolves around the lifelong friendship of Wells Wickham and Steve Pickett, it is essentially the story of a town and its people. The town is Bluegrass, seat of Flaget County, Kentucky; the people are a cross section—vivisection might be a better word—of all the segments of its society, from the Negroes in the cabins to the 'first families' in their magnificent old mansions." Chicago Sun Book Week

Booklist 44:90 N 1 '47

"It would be condescending to say of Miss Carruthers—as is so often said of young writers—that she shows promise. 'We'll Sing One Song' is a striking example of both promise and fulfillment in a single book." Ben Kartman

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 S 7 '47 500w

"Powerful novel bound to be a problem child in small libraries." F. A. Boyle

Library J 72:1107 Ag '47 80w

CARRUTHERS, OLIVE—Continued

"We'll Sing One Song" adds up to an entertaining, sometimes unflattering, study of Kentuckians just after 'the noble experiment' was repealed." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p31
O 26 '47 190w

CARSON, ROBERT. Stranger in our midst.
210p $2.75 Putnam

47-23975

The scene is a small divorce-mill town in Nevada. Vincent Bennett, returned from the war, takes up his job at the local radio station, and shortly is involved with two women: Donna Kirby, a thoroughly honest girl, who really loves Vince; and Bridget Baker, a brilliant woman with a past. A tragic suicide finally shows Vince where his happiness lies.

Kirkus 15:316 Je 15 '47 130w

"Everything—or almost everything—in Mr. Carson's story is both real in appearance and thoughtfully interpreted, except the boss's daughter, the boss's wife and the boss himself, who seem to have come straight out of somebody's dream world. But Vince, the red headed war casualty, Vince's friends and all the night life and the gambling in that sparkling, dry, dust-sweet Nevada town, and the town itself, are brightly real before your eyes." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
J1 20 '47 290w

"The talk is casual and pat, as might be expected from Robert Carson, writer of a number of successful movie stories. There seems no reason why this novel shouldn't do well on the screen. On the whole, it makes entertaining light reading, with enough back-hand shots at current problems to give it ginger." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p23 Ag 3 '47 230w

CARSWELL, THOMAS SMYTH. Phenoplasts, their structure, properties and chemical technology. (High polymers; a series of monographs) 267p il $5.50 Interscience

668.4 Plastic materials. Phenols 47-4867

"Physical and chemical structure of the phenoplasts, correlating their structure with their mechanical and chemical properties. Description of the theoretical aspects of the phenoplasts, a compilation from the literature particularly of the past decade. Reference to patents given only when the patent is so basic that it has historical value, or when no other literature is available." Library J

"This book, the first in English on phenolic resins, is a welcome summary of developments in this field. While the title suggests only uses in the plastics field, applications in related fields, as in paints and varnishes, in adhesives, and in ion-exchange resins are also considered. . . . Carswell has done a definite service to those interested in the plastics field in assembling this review. This volume shows the result of considerable thought and makes a laudable attempt to correlate properties with the composition of the molded part. It should be of considerable interest to the plastics-minded." P. O. Powers

+ Chem & Eng N 25:3529 N 24 '47 500w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1273 S 15 '47 70w

CARTER, MRS ANNIE BURNHAM. In an herb garden. 209p $2 Rutgers univ. press 635.7 Herbs 47-4455

Chronicles one full season in the author's herb garden from March thru November. The garden began with a study of sixteenth and seventeenth century gardens, and the book contains many literary and historical allusions. Index.

Booklist 43:342 J1 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 J1 '47

"Mrs. Carter belongs to that stratum of herb growers who are not satisfied with the ordinary run but must seek the far corners of the world for the unusual and rare. . . . Though from Darjeeling, India, she imports and grows seeds of the valerian which, legend says, was the spikenard used in the precious ointment of Mary Magdalene, there is no mention of her trying to whip up an ointment. . . . But these are minor matters when so much practical information about herbs and their growing is furnished with such generosity, when the moods, fragrances, strange and lovely flowering and ancient lore within her herbary's enclosure are captured and set down in such graceful prose." Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
O 12 '47 750w

Reviewed by O. S. Stull

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 1 '47
150w

CARTER, HERBERT DYSON. Sin and science.
216p $2.50 Cattell

176.5 Prostitution. Liquor problem. Russia
—Social conditions 46-4237

This book tells how the problems of prostitution, venereal diseases, juvenile delinquency, free love, and alcoholism are handled in the New Russia.

"Despite the importance of the material with which it deals, and the journalistic style, this book clearly belongs in the propaganda class. This may perhaps be sufficiently suggested in the title, in which sin is equated with sexual immorality, and Soviet methods are supposedly pure science. The subject is of real social significance, and even in this volume it is clear that Russia has made some highly original contributions to the subject. If some or many of them are made at a price which a western democracy cannot pay, that should not deter us from studying those as well as others. What we need, however, is a more objective account than this author can provide." Seward Hiltner
Crozer Q 24:88 Ja '47 430w

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 23 '46 300w

CARTER, HODDING. Flood crest. 278p $2.75
Rinehart

47-12033

A novel about life in the South of not too long ago. The central characters are a Southern politician with an unsavory record, and his attractive, amorous daughter. The story culminates with the rising of the river which threatens to burst the levees.

Booklist 44:151 D 15 '47

"Good reading without being too much of a polemic. There are some pretty raw bits for the conservatives to take. Libraries watch out."

+ Kirkus 15:556 O 1 '47 210w

"Mr. Carter has a sense of timing which carries his story along briskly. He is articulate and his point of view is soundly democratic. But 'Flood Crest' is a less successful novel than the author's earlier 'The Winds of Fear.' The qualities as a writer which Mr. Carter exhibits here are at best those of a good reporter. There is in 'Flood Crest' little of the creative energy at play which would endow the story with more than transient interest. The significance of the milieu and the motivations of the characters go largely unexplored." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p36
D 7 '47 650w

"Mr. Carter well maintains his reputation for intelligent, honest, constructive writing on important Southern themes. . . . He has courage, too, and a good reporter's eye for accurate and revealing detail. It is, as a matter of fact, easy to underestimate the importance of Mr. Carter's accomplishment here and elsewhere." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p5 D 14 '47 700w

"'Flood Crest' is as mechanical and false as a pin-ball machine, and adds up to a melancholy illustration of how conclusively Mr. Carter's second set of beliefs can cancel out the effectiveness of his first."

— New Yorker 23:140 D 13 '47 160w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p22 D 10 '47
750w

CARTER, JOHN FRANKLIN (JAY FRANKLIN, pseud). Catocin conversation; with an introd. by Sumner Welles. 283p $3 Scribner
940.5 World politics. Imaginary conversations 47-1222

Portraits to be a prolonged wartime session of conversation between Franklin D. Roosevelt, Winston Churchill, Harry Hopkins, Bernard Baruch, and "Putzi" Hanfstaengl, with the author himself as moderator. The place of the session is a secluded hunting lodge in the Maryland mountains. The author, who was in the State department during the war, says that some such meeting was suggested, but never took place.

Reviewed by E. T. Douglas

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 F 9 '47
380w

"Once the reader becomes accustomed to the peculiar dialogue technique which Mr. Franklin is forced to employ, he can watch the six men, each blessed with a differing concept of history, make their points. But, after 283 pages of talk, it is difficult to see what has been accomplished." H. S. Hayward

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 7
'47 550w

Kirkus 14:635 D 15 '46 170w

"Splendidly reported, interesting and sparkling talk, profound yet easy reading." A. B. Lindsay

+ Library J 72:223 F 1 '47 100w

"The net effect is to present Roosevelt and Churchill as a pair with the mentality of schoolboys, and rather dim-witted ones, at that, while Putzi Hanfstaengl shows up as an intellectual giant. This seems rather less than plausible. The discussion of the nature of sovereignty is highly entertaining, although not, perhaps, exactly as the author intended, since he shows a rather remarkable ignorance of his own country. It comes down to a curious revelation that the difference between democracy and Nazism i.e., after all, pretty hard to discover, while the difference between the British Empire and the Hitlerian empire is so slight that it is hardly perceptible at all." G. W. Johnson

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
F 9 '47 600w

"It must be said that in 'The Catocin Conversation,' Mr. Franklin has produced a remarkably silly book. At the same time, it must also be said that this is a book sure to appeal to people who think they think; thousands of ladies-club forums will no doubt nibble contentedly at the nougats of political thought it offers. . . On one level, Mr. Franklin is exempt from criticism. Few people are well enough informed to say that Roosevelt, Churchill, et al., didn't or wouldn't have talked as he makes them talk. On a far lower level, the reviewer may feel emboldened to point out that Mr. Franklin seems a little embarrassed about his device of inventing dialogue for real people." Russell Maloney

— N Y Times p3 F 9 '47 600w

"What is fact and what is fancy in this account, therefore, is hard to say. An interesting book."

+ New Yorker 22:102 F 15 '47 190w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 28 '47
950w

Reviewed by Elmer Davis

Sat R of Lit 30:19 F 15 '47 1850w

Time 49:116 F 17 '47 500w

CARY, JOYCE. The moonlight. 309p $3 Harper
47-4403

English novel similar to "The Cherry Orchard" in atmosphere. This version tells of the final tragic days in an English country home soon to be sold at auction. A scholar and her two aunts had seemed to live a placid life there, but thru flashbacks into the Victorian period the reader is shown the conflict between the elderly women and its effect on the niece's outlook on life and love.

Kirkus 15:198 Ap 1 '47 170w

"Cary's characters exist solidly within the context of their own world, and act from motives consonant with the intellectual and moral atmosphere of their time. To recreate this world and demonstrate dramatically its spirit demanded a thorough documentation and a recognition of the significance of the evidence." John Farrelly

+ New Repub 116:27 Je 30 '47 1900w

"At worst, the technique is overcareful, at best, quite fascinating." James Hilton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Je
15 '47 650w

Reviewed by E. S. Holsaert

+ N Y Times p6 Je 22 '47 450w

"Delightfully readable novel."

+ New Yorker 23:123 Je 7 '47 110w

"Mr. Cary has written a dozen novels, but this is only the second to be published in this country. It's quite possible that after reading 'The Moonlight,' you'll say, 'Bring on the rest of them,' for Mr. Cary is an original novelist and a powerful writer." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 22 '47
400w

"It is all true enough as far as it goes. It is also dreary enough in a brilliant way, and it will perhaps be meat and drink to those who take dreariness as a measure of the value of truth. Others of us can perceive in so determined an exhibition of human automatism nothing but the weary art of a generation weary of living. It is perhaps defensible to be weary of living. It is also defensible to be more than a little weary of reading about this weariness." Wilson Follett

— + Sat R of Lit 30:27 Jl 12 '47 900w

Springf'd Union p4 S 5 '47 120w

Time 50:94 Jl 14 '47 330w

CASE, ROBERT ORMOND. Empire builders. 333p $3 Doubleday

979.5 Oregon—History. Oregon—Biography
47-2557

Twenty-five sketches of Oregon history, from Gray's discovery of the Columbia river in May, 1792, to Oregon's attainment of statehood in 1859. The chapters were first presented as a radio serial over a Portland radio station.

Booklist 43:274 My 1 '47

Reviewed by E. S. Watson

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Jl 6 '47
360w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 28
'47 480w

Kirkus 15:89 F 1 '47 100w

"An historical narrative, which flows smoothly and depicts accurately. . . Well recommended." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 72:456 Mr 15 '47 70w

"It is a dramatic headlong story, often grim, occasionally hilarious, veined with hardship and peril. . . It is varied, vivid, full of vanity. It has few hortatory effects and an abundance of good round dialogue and sound prose. It is equally good on the printed page." Walter Havighurst

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
Mr 30 '47 600w

"As radio entertainment those sketches undoubtedly merited the Peabody Award given them in 1944. . . It is only when actual history is translated into radio frequencies that the brows of the reviewer rise. Whence came the story that Capt. George Vancouver—one of the greatest of English navigators—stole Gray's charts of the Columbia and presented them to the Admiralty as proof of his own discovery of the river?" Hoffman Birney

CASE, R. O.—Continued

N Y Times p20 Mr 23 '47 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 25 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:95 Je '47

CASE, SHIRLEY JACKSON. Origins of Christian supernaturalism. 239p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

230.09 Supernatural. Christianity and other religions A46-5976

"The average Christian has seldom had much idea of the religion of the average Gentile in New Testament times, and is amazed to discover many similarities between Christian and pagan supernaturalism. . . The book is a comprehensive study of the growth of supernaturalism in Christianity, always in relation to that of paganism. Few of us realize how much the later Christian idea of heaven in the sky instead of under the earth, largely patterned after the Elysian fields, is of pagan rather than Jewish origin. It is surprising that 'ultimately belief in the eternity and divine foundation of the Roman state became as essential for the Christian theologians as it had formerly been for the old Roman politicians.'" (Churchman) The book "presents a survey of historical data" previously used in the author's Experience with the Supernatural in Early Christian Times (Book Review Digest 1930).

Reviewed by C. H. Moehlan

Ann Am Acad 254:225 N '47 600w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 161:18 F 1 '47 300w

"Apart from the thesis, which perhaps many more readers will welcome than will say so, the great value of this book for every student of the New Testament and of early church history is its detailed and documented survey of the whole field of Hellenistic religious and philosophical culture, a survey which is interestingly written and helps to make vivid the firsthand implications of many a New Testament idea and turn of expression. My only suggestion is that the supernaturalistic element in primitive Christianity itself could have been more strongly presented, i.e., in the very earliest period." F. C. Grant

+ — Crozer Q 24:165 Ap '47 1400w

"It may be said that Dr. Case has produced an eminently readable book, with a good deal of interesting information about the religious movements of the early centuries. As an interpretation of Christian origins, however, it is wholly inadequate and indeed misleading, for its learning is not coupled with sound historical imagination and discernment of things that differ." F. W. Beare

+ — J Religion 27:215 Jl '47 750w

"If this book is beamed in the direction of the current revival of supernaturalism in Christian theology (as distinct from the cults) in an effort to show it to be a movement in regression, Dean Case's failure to make these distinctions defeats his purpose. Contemporary supernaturalism in the school of theology is concerned precisely with redemption from sin and the sources of ethical obligation, although supernaturalism in the religious cults is evidence of reviving interest in magical controls and salvation from the death universal in nature. Against the latter Dean Case's study will have enduring value." Paul Ramsey

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p47 N 24 '46 1000w

"Dr. Case has written a stimulating book which only misses its full effectiveness by not taking account of the middle ground which lies between any form of pure supernaturalism, whether Barthian or American fundamentalism, and the extreme liberal position." R. W. Flint

+ — N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '47 700w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:28 Mr '47 240w

CASEY, ROBERT JOSEPH. More interesting people. 349p $3 Bobbs

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-30899

Further reminiscences of an American newspaperman, following his Such Interesting People (Book Review Digest 1943). His stories in the main are about other men and women of his profession, in Chicago and on the war fronts.

Booklist 44:49 O 1 '47

"This is pure Casey again which is by way of saying that it is very good reading." W. I. Flanagan

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 S 21 '47 380w

"All in all, the newspaper world in all its fascination is presented again for better understanding and greater enjoyment. For all libraries." M. C. Manley

+ Library J 72:1102 Ag '47 110w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 N 2 '47 320w

"Mr. Casey's follow on his 'Such Interesting People' confirms what most newspaper men knew—that no one matches him for journalistic anecdote. He has a free swing in storytelling. His punch-lines have echoing impact, and the incidental backroom terms that creep into his yarns come out astonishingly clean." Meyer Berger

+ N Y Times p4 S 21 '47 800w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 5 '47 470w

Wis Lib Bul 43:139 O '47

CATER, HAROLD DEAN, ed. Henry Adams and his friends. See Adams, H.

CAVANAH, FRANCES, and WEIR, RUTH CROMER, eds. Treasury of dog stories; il. by Wesley Dennis. 256p $2.50 Rand McNally

Dogs—Legends and stories. Short stories — Collections 47-11405

Contents: Hero, by A. P. Terhune; The dog of Pompeii, by Louis Untermyer; All mutt, by H. T. Hilles; War dog, by Bertrand Shurtleft; The street dragon, by Marion Bullard; Wild dog, by R. E. Tanner; Almost an ambush, by Le Grand; A dog named Spike, by Jack O'Brien; Admiral Devey has his fling, by C. R. Brink; Golden Duke, by M. H. Ashworth; Christmas Eve at Reginald's, by E. R. Jackson; Bunker vs. wolves, by Harriet Bunn; A dog for Miss Boo, by M. L. Runbeck; The great Penborough race, by N. B. Turner and Gertrude Nichols; Shep, by M. A. Atwater; Foole and Gallant, pioneer dogs, by C. C. Colblentz; Freddy, the pad dog, by F. B. Kelley; Billy, the dog that made good, by E. T. Seton; The shoemaker's dog, by Elizabeth Curtis; Boots and the cat, by Kitzi Gumensky; Scarlet's sons, by Betty Cavana; The fire fighter, by H. M. Brier; Washing Woogles, by Elizabeth Crannell.

Booklist 44:137 D 1 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week N 1 '47 50w

Kirkus 15:581 O 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by J. M. Smith

Library J 72:1785 D 15 '47 70w

CAVANNA, BETTY. Secret passage; il. by Jean MacLaughlin. 216p $2 Winston

47-15796

Mystery story for girls. The time is 1859; the scenes are laid in Haddonfield, near Philadelphia, and on a Virginia plantation.

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 F 23 '47 160w

Christian Century 64:306 Mr 5 '47 10w

"A good story, with sound analysis of some of the problems of the South, nice boys and girls—and, of course, some spaniels."

+ Kirkus 15:69 F 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by K. H. McAlarney

Library J 72:323 F 15 '47 70w

"This is the sort of story for which libraries are always looking, one that, while keeping the taboos of the 'mystery for girls,' is sound in substance, well written, and likely to be remembered for something other than the solution of a problem." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11
My 11 '47 470w

"Almost any bright youngster will guess the outcome of this very simple plot, but they will like warm-hearted, curious Sally, and Miss Cavanna has a nice sense of period and place which gives flavor to the thin narrative." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p35 F 23 '47 150w

CAVANNA, BETTY. Spurs for Suzanna; il. by Virginia Mann. 222p $2 Presbyterian bd.

47-18674

Suzanna was fifteen the summer she began to grow up. Her father was in the hospital, her mother was working, and Suzanna had to give up her usual summer pursuits and go as paying guest on a farm. She was on the way to a selfish career when her mother's letter arrived asking her to write cheery letters to her father. That was the beginning of the winning of her spurs. Grades seven to nine.

Booklist 43:260 Ap 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 My 25 '47
50w

Kirkus 15:191 Ap 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by J. M. Smith

+ Library J 72:818 My 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
My 4 '47 500w

"An unpretentious but wise story of young people, with a healthy balance of work, fun, riding and problems. Girls will enjoy Sue's struggle to win her spurs, both as a rider and as a friend." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p33 My 18 '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:85 My '47

CEDER, GEORGIANA DORCAS (ANA DOR, pseud), Ya-Ya; il. by Alice Carsey. 63p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

47-30425

Story of a little brownie who sought refuge from the cold in a Finnish farmhouse. The strange happenings of the night were a source of wonder to the farmer and his wife, and of consternation to the brownie. The next day he fled. For ages five to eight.

Kirkus 15:335 Jl 1 '47 100w

"Pleasant, easy-reading story with illustrations that give a glimpse of life in a Finnish farmhouse." E. F. Clift

+ Library J 72:1197 S 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Grace Stevens

San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 16 '47
150w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 16 '47
110w

"Will delight the beginning reader with its fun and pictures. Can also be used as a story to read aloud."

+ Wis Lib Bul 43:132 O '47

CHABOT, ERNEST DANIEL. Greenhouse gardening for everyone. 266p il pl $3 Barrows 635.982 Greenhouses Agr47-71

A handbook for the amateur gardener who would like flowers and vegetables for the winter months. Contains instructions for selection and construction of a greenhouse, heating, preparation of soil, fertilizers, types of flowers and vegetables to be grown, and plant diseases. Calendar for greenhouse planting. Illustrated with photographs and diagrams. Index.

"This volume lives up to its title, giving advice on what to grow and how, in the small and large greenhouse. A sound book for those who do and those who want to." C. R. Everitt

+ Atlantic 179:152 Ap '47 40w

Booklist 43:199 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:7 Mr '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '47

"An excellent manual." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
Mr 2 '47 150w

CHADSEY, CHARLES P., and others, eds.

Words: the new dictionary; new simplified definitions, pronunciations at a glance, self-testing language builder, handbook for secretaries, maps and essential tables [comp. under the general supervision of Harold Wentworth]. 704p il maps $2 Grosset

423 English language—Dictionaries 47-30166

"This small dictionary is 'designed for the man in the street—the business man, stenographer, student, veteran, housewife.' . . . Each entry in the dictionary is in bold-faced type. Words are divided into syllables, and hyphenated words so indicated. The stressed syllable is printed in italics. Pronunciation is shown by phonetic respelling without diacritical marks. The system is similar to that used in language handbooks prepared for the American armed forces during the war. Principal parts of verbs, plurals of nouns, and comparisons of adjectives and adverbs are usually given if irregular. . . . Besides the dictionary proper there are the following special sections: How Words Can Help You, including a pronunciation test and several vocabulary tests; New Words; Handbook of Foreign Sentences and Phrases, giving about 100 phrases in English, French, Russian, Spanish, German and Japanese; world gazetteer with pronunciation and population figures; ten double-page maps of North America; Biographical Dictionary, including about 1000 persons and giving pronunciation for difficult names, pseudonym, birth and death dates and an identifying phrase; Handbook for Secretaries, with rules for capitalization, punctuation, etc.; 1000 Common Abbreviations; U.S. Presidents, Vice-Presidents and Runners-Up 1789 to 1944." Subscription Bks Bul

Booklist 43:218 Mr 15 '47

Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 22
'47 80w

"It does away with diacritical marks, spelling out each word as it sounds in a following parenthesis. It has a provocative 'vocabulary check' for self-scoring and useful sentences and phrases in six foreign languages, including Russian and Japanese, each pronounced for Americans. In short, it is a family book, commending itself, price and all, to a reference-shelf for everyday use at home."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p37
My 4 '47 210w

"The publisher states that the new words section will be revised regularly to eliminate transients, and that words which promise to be lasting will be incorporated in the body of the text. A check shows that of the thirty-two A's all except seven, when used in the same sense, are already in the dictionary proper. This duplication seems unnecessary and confusing to the user. . . . The definitions, which usually include a descriptive phrase and one or two synonyms, are brief and concise. . . . Words is recommended for junior and senior high school students and for adults who want a simple inexpensive dictionary for the essentials of spelling, syllabication, and clear definitions. Libraries will probably wish to buy more comprehensive dictionaries for reference purposes, but will find Words useful for circulation."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:44 Jl '47 800w

"The learned editors' anxiety to be 'different' (in a sense they do not admit) may distract attention from the solid merits of their book. . . . The omissions reflect both obsolescence and American preference. . . . These are not all very grave omissions. The definitions are adequate; they hardly show the minutes, but they strike the hours correctly. A safe enough guide for the million, but not so novel as all that."

CHADSEY, C. P.—Continued

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p617 N 29 '47
1100w

CHADWICK, MRS NORA (KERSHAW). Beginnings of Russian history; an enquiry into sources. 180p $2.75 Macmillan

947 Russia—History

"An attempt to re-examine the main sources of early Russian history and to accentuate, on this basis, certain important trends in the growth of the Kievan state. [The author's] main theme is the meeting of East and West on the Russian soil—the interrelation between the Scandinavian and the Turkic elements in the history of the early Kievan state. The lure of the Orient comes to the fore in her book as one of the primary factors of the Viking expansion in Russia. However, Mrs. Chadwick does not overestimate the role of the Norse element in Russian history. In her opinion, there is enough evidence to assume 'the existence of . . . early pre-Norse communities' in Russia." Am Hist R

"Taken as a whole Mrs. Chadwick's study is full of interesting and stimulating suggestions, and while not all of them may be valid, her book certainly is a welcome contribution to the field of medieval Russian studies." George Vernadsky

+ Am Hist R 52:379 Ja '47 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p315 Jl 6 '46
1150w

CHAMBERLAIN, ELINOR. Manila hemp. 226p $2.50 Dodd

47-4932

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 3 '47
170w

"A jim-dandy." E. H.

+ New Repub 117:31 Ag 18 '47 30w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13
Jl 27 '47 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 Jl 20 '47 170w

"The story is confusing, but it has excellent background."

New Yorker 23:72 Jl 19 '47 100w

"Miss Chamberlain's intimate knowledge of the Philippines (with earthquakes, volcanos, local politics and surviving Japs) manages to lend an appearance of freshness to what would seem, in any other setting, a padded piece of pasteboard." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 20 '47
100w

"Unsurpassed so far this year for rich scenic color, suspense, brooding terror, well-sustained mystery, vital characterizations, and good writing. First class."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 Jl 26 '47 40w

CHAMBERLAIN, MRS HENRIQUETA. Where the sabiá sings; a partial autobiography; sketches by Ken Chamberlain. 246p $3 Macmillan

B or 92

47-2688

Reminiscences of the author's happy childhood in Brazil. Her father was a Southern Baptist missionary, and she was born in Brazil, where she lived until coming to the United States to go to college. Altho she is married now and has three American sons, her thoughts go back to the time when she wanted to be like other Brazilian girls in the land where the sabiá sings.

Booklist 43:307 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 27 '47
400w

Christian Century 64:594 My 7 '47 130w

"A small book, to pack so much enthusiasm and to communicate it so well." M. L. Eglinton

+ Churchman 161:19 O 1 '47 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47

"There is charm without coyness, and this has no relation to the quaint-parents, cute-episodes type of recall, but is an honest, revealing autobiographical account."

+ Kirkus 15:183 Mr 15 '47 240w

Reviewed by Evans Clark

Nation 165:48 Jl 12 '47 800w

"The weather, the heat, the brilliance of growing things are all through the book." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ap
20 '47 1450w

"The average reader, through the feeling of first-hand contact that he derives, will probably absorb more from a volume like this than he would from any number of scholarly tomes on Brazil. . . . There may be no camels or elephants in Brazil, but there are many other things that are quite as exciting, and Mrs. Chamberlain seems to have packed just about all of them, at one time or another, in one way or another, into this well-written, easy-reading, delightfully unaffected and straightforward narrative. The drawings by her painter-husband, Ken Chamberlain, capture the Brazilian spirit admirably and add greatly to the charm of the book. In a season marked by something like a deluge of autobiographies, this unpretending little, one will stand comparison with the best." Samuel Putnam

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 20 '47 500w

Reviewed by J. G. Floyd

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 30 '47
700w

Wis Lib Bul 43:81 My '47

CHAMBERLAIN, LAWRENCE HENRY. The President, Congress and legislation. 478p $5 Columbia Univ. press

323.739 Legislation—U.S. U.S. Congress.
Executive power A46-4849

"The statement is frequently made that the President of the United States is now to be regarded as the chief legislator, dominating the scene, and reducing the Congress to a subordinate and often ineffective role. The present volume carefully examines the validity of this thesis by presenting a cross section of important federal legislation during the past half century. . . . The case studies indicate those laws in which the influence of the President was dominant, those in which the influence of Congress was dominant, those in which both branches of the government shared joint credit, and those whose adoption was due to the power of pressure groups." U S Quarterly Bkl

Reviewed by M. T. Reynolds

Am Pol Sci R 41:132 F '47 1100w

"Interesting and suggestive as are these conclusions of Professor Chamberlain's, they fortify the basic generalization that legislation is manifestly a joint process in which the minds of many men have a part. As a historical analysis of the origins of ninety important legislative enactments, this study has real merit. As a whole the volume is well written, cogently reasoned, and controlled in terms of temper, text, and organization." C. W. Shull

+ Ann Am Acad 249:182 Ja '47 360w

Current Hist 11:402 N '46 60w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:68 Mr '47 240w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL (PHINEAS BECK, pseud). Behold Williamsburg; a pictorial tour of Virginia's colonial capital. 176p $5 Hastings house

917.55425 Williamsburg, Virginia—Description
47-4280

A pictorial tour of Williamsburg, Virginia, with brief descriptive text. The illustrations which make up the book are photographs, pencil sketches, and drypoints, and were chosen from a collection which was more than ten years in the making.

"Mr. Chamberlain has given probably the fullest pictorial representation of the old colonial capital; he has carefully avoided the dual anachronisms of parked cars and costumed ladies; and he has imparted to his tour an informal quality which takes most of the stiffness out of perfection and helps one to feel at home." Dumas Malone

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
N 2 '47 230w

"We have here a beautiful picture book, and Williamsburg restored has never looked better than in the mirror of its pages. As for the text, it is more useful than inspired. But that is what the text of a guidebook is for." H. I. Brock

+ — N Y Times p42 N 23 '47 230w

"Mr. Chamberlain, always on the lookout for the unexpected vista, is never satisfied with one photograph. He includes several of almost every building. His book offers the most extensive pictorial coverage of Williamsburg today." Jane Volles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 24
'47 330w

"Whether or not you have been there, it is an excellent guide or souvenir for the historian, antiquarian, architect, or plain tourist. As Mr. Chamberlain explains, the photographs were taken at intervals from March to November, to provide the best possible views, and he waited carefully until there were no parked cars. Generally, he also waited until there were no human beings, so that, with one or two exceptions, the cumulative effect is that of a ghost town in the Far Western silver or gold mining centers." Beach Conger

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:29 O 18 '47 230w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL (PHINEAS BECK, pseud). Springtime in Virginia; phot; with an introd. by Virginus Dabney. [278p] $4 Hastings house

917.55 Virginia—Views 47-11571

Over 300 photographs of the pictorial, traditional, and historical Virginia. There is no text except a brief introduction.

Booklist 44:132 D 1 '47

"There seems to be some unnecessary duplication. . . But it is a lovely book."

+ Kirkus 15:621 N 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p42 N 23 '47 500w

CHAMBERLIN, WILLIAM HENRY. European cockpit. 330p $4 Macmillan

940.55 Reconstruction (1939-)—Europe 47-30923

"Concise discussion of European situation, following visit of author, well-known journalist, to Europe. Assails Soviet political methods, criticizes occupation policies in Germany, sees necessity for Germany's economic reconstruction. Calls Potsdam agreement 'the most wrongheaded set of decisions,' asserts Atlantic Charter 'has proved to be a negation of the shape of peace to come.' Concludes 'that the world's worst war had been followed by the world's worst peace.' Speaks of 'two worlds'; 'Soviet totalitarianism' and its satellites against 'the outside world which places freedom high.' Favors European federation as check of Soviet expansion." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by N. D. Palmer

Am Pol Sci R 41:1235 D '47 750w

Booklist 44:48 O 1 '47

Cath World 166:379 Ja '48 250w

Reviewed by P. H. Douglas

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 28 '47
700w

"The gleaming of a fertile, receptive mind, but already it seems little more than a sketchy somewhat dated handbook. The text lacks the concrete, documented feel of the human approach—nor, on the other hand, has it the scholarly approach one would expect from a man of such wide experience and informed background."

Kirkus 15:327 Je 15 '47 180w

"Naturally controversial, but sound and stimulating in relating causes and developments." Kurt Schwerin

+ Library J 72:1102 Ag '47 130w

"Mr. Chamberlin visited Great Britain, Germany, France, Italy, Austria, Switzerland and Belgium. His description of conditions in these countries, while revealing nothing new, is a sound workmanlike job. This is particularly true of his chapter on Britain, which contains an excellent analysis of the problems faced by the Labor government and of the methods it has used to overcome them. . . It is only when Mr. Chamberlin turns to those countries of Europe which he did not visit—countries usually described as behind the 'iron curtain'—that he abandons the role of the reporter for which he is so well cast and assumes the role of polemicist." V. M. Dean

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
S 14 '47 1200w

"Mr. Chamberlin's summary of conditions in the western European lands he visited is acute and intelligent. But his criticism of American policy in Germany is too bland, in the mind of this reviewer, and sometimes naive. His demands for a 'just' German peace are certainly generous, and his insistence that denazification has been far too stern and that the Nuremberg trials are unjust is, to put it mildly, debatable. Readers, however, will find this book stimulating to their thinking and their understanding of current problems, even if they often disagree with its author." C. L. Sulzberger

+ — N Y Times p7 S 28 '47 1150w

"Mr. Chamberlin's attitude toward world politics has for a long time been based on a powerful distrust of Soviet Russia, and it is unchanged in this book, which was written after one of those rapid sweeps around post-war Europe that have become the American journalist's Grand Tour. He says much that he has said before, and his conclusions could have been formulated just as easily if he had stayed home and read the newspapers."

New Yorker 23:102 S 20 '47 120w

Reviewed by G. G. Stevens

San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 5 '47
550w

"Mr. Chamberlin is too good an historian to ignore and oversimplify the play of cumulative, historical forces which brought about the present European tragedy, yet, in his crusading zeal to expose Stalin and Soviet 'perfidy,' that is what he unfortunately does. . . With the mature wisdom that comes after the event, Mr. Chamberlin is mercilessly critical of American 'appeasement' at Moscow, Teheran, Yalta, and Potsdam—a major cause of the European cockpit, he alleges. He suggests that had we been 'tough' with the Russians from the very beginning we would have avoided our present headaches and won both the war and peace."

Henry Shapiro

Sat R of Lit 30:21 S 20 '47 1400w

CHAMBERS, BERNICE GERTRUDE, ed. Keys to a fashion career. 238p il $3 McGraw

646 Clothing and dress. Fashion 46-8070

"Edited for the Fashion Group, Inc. An excellent vocational book on training needed and other qualifications necessary for jobs in the fashion business. Describes fashion positions open, procedure followed by professionals in retailing, styling for mills and stores, designing, advertising and promotion, fashion work for periodicals, radio and other phases. Chapters written mostly by leading women in the various fields." Library J

Booklist 43:156 Ja 15 '47

"This book is an inspiration to women intending to make a professional career of the business of fashion. . . The book is a good counselor's reference; could well be used for orientation courses. A sample press release, a radio script, and publicity sketches are some of the many good illustrations. An easy style holds the reader throughout the book." Clarice Lindsey

CHAMBERS, B. G.—Continued

+ J Home Econ 39:363 Je '47 220w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:78 Ja 1 '47 70w

"Advice for the aspiring career girl has seldom been given so compactly and completely as Bernice Chambers, assistant professor at the New York University School of Retailing, gives it in this volume." Annette Robin

+ N Y Times p40 D 8 '46 230w

CHAMBERS, DANA, pseud. See Leffingwell, A.

CHAMBERS, SIR EDMUND KERCHEVER.
English literature at the close of the middle ages. (Oxford history of English literature, v. 2, pt. 2) 247p $5 Oxford

820.9 English literature—History and criticism A46-6172

One volume in the newly begun monumental Oxford history of English literature. "Though his main matter is from fifteenth-century authors, [the author] watches its emergence during the previous 200 years and in one case, the ballad, its fate 300 years on. Sir Edmund's main task is to survey drama (the history of mediaeval drama he has already recorded in two stout volumes), then carol and lyric, then narrative verse, and he rounds off with a chapter on Malory." (Manchester Guardian)

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 5 '47 90w

Christian Science Monitor p16 F 15 '47 1050w

"Though the most expert and the most specialised scholars will profit most from the book (and to them it will be indispensable) all readers with literary interests in mediaevalism will find the volume vastly and yet pleasantly informative. If any such reader should be put off by the massive detail of the book he should turn to the last six pages of the author's chapter on Malory: his dry and dramatic account of the discrepancy between the chivalry of Malory's writings and the escapades to which he was addicted in the flesh is more than Sophoclean." H. B. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 6 '46 220w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 30 '47 360w

"Sir Edmund is past-master of the historical and bibliographical method. His approach, his learning and his caution will serve the specialist and research student; they will hardly fire the imagination of readers with the spirit of mediaeval things. That may not be the object of an academic history; but it is a pity if the comprehensive scholarship of the new Oxford venture is not going to leave room for appreciative criticism of a different kind—a kind old-fashioned, perhaps, but not unfamiliar in the school of Bradley, Ker and Raleigh." John Bryson

+ — Spec 177:44 Jl 12 '46 600w

CHAMBERS, SIR EDMUND KERCHEVER.
Sources for a biography of Shakespeare. 80p $2 Oxford

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Biography—Bibliography [A47-2242]

"One of the greatest living authorities on the medieval and Elizabethan stage and on all phases of Shakespearean scholarship has gathered into a slim volume a series of lectures given at Oxford before the war. In them he discusses the source material of our knowledge of Shakespeare's life." (Theatre Arts) Bibliographical note, Index.

"Highly recommended for all drama collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:1118 Ag '47 20w

"Sources for a biography of Shakespeare is as accurately described in its title as it is economically phrased in its text for the research students for whom it was intended. It properly presupposes a technical knowledge of which the general—and most important—reader of Shakespeare is properly ignorant. . . As one would expect from its author, its text-book value is of the first order. To the rest, the millions of Shakespeare lovers, its interest will lie mainly in Sir Edmund's brief and wisely conservative estimate of the value of tradition and of the 'Sonnets' in separating Shakespeare biography from the Shakespeare myth." H. B. C.

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 28 '46 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 23 '47 30w

"This is a book for scholars and for those fascinated by the techniques of research."

+ Theatre Arts 31:79 Ap '47 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p285 Je 15 '46 420w

CHAMPNEYS, ADELAIDE. Red sun and harvest moon; by the author of Miss Tiverton goes out. 373p $2.75 Bobbs

47-1391

Character study of a meek, down-trodden English woman, whose whole life is one of renunciation. She loses her one love at nineteen and spends years under the heel of a managing aunt. At her aunt's death the role is assumed by her cousin. When she is over forty Mildred is rescued, in a sense, by her step brother and the man she had loved all her life.

Booklist 43:241 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by Marion Strobel

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 F 23 '47 230w

"Much of this is lusty, most of it banal, before one reaches the somewhat unexpected dénouement." D. S.

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 28 '47 190w

"Not of the better brand of English imports."

Kirkus 15:37 Ja 15 '47 170w

"Miss Champneys' particular gift is to build up, stroke by stroke with delicacy and discernment, the interest and importance of people to whom, year in and year out, little or nothing seems to happen. Mildred, with no special gifts and no capacity to free herself from the domination that descended on her, achieves an inner integrity that makes her fate important. It becomes exciting to see what will happen when the tables finally are turned, and Miss Champneys' restraint and subtlety bring the story to a conclusion that is surprising but right. 'Red Sun and Harvest Moon' merits a place in the long and fine tradition of the English novel of character." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Mr 2 '47 650w

"Miss Champneys (whose previous fiction, published anonymously, includes 'Miss Tiverton Goes Out') has written a novel which, presumably, will provide comfort and reassurance for those whose lives have followed such dreary paths of abnegation as Mildred's. Acceptance of one's lot in life is hard come by and is usually prefaced by some storm or questioning. The distraught Mildred is conditioned by heritage and environment to quick surrender of her individuality. Her story, while affecting, is not particularly exciting. And the interest of the general reader may well be dampened by the flow of her easy tears." M. M.

N Y Times p20 Mr 16 '47 470w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 16 '47 100w

Springfield Union p10 My 23 '47 130w

CHANDLER, CAROLINE AUGUSTA. Dr Kay Winthrop, intern. 195p $2.25 Dodd

47-1727

Career story for girls interested in finding out what it may be like to be a doctor.

"As an intern, Kay is hard-working and successful. There is little else to attract readers. Book can be recommended only as a career story." R. M. McEvoy

Library J 72:467 Mr 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 2 '47 240w

CHANSOR, ROY. Hazard. 238p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

47-30573

"Ellen Crane is a girl who will bet on anything. To her the sweetest music in the world is the click of the little ivory roulette ball. . . But when Ellen stakes her maidenly honor on the turn of a card—and loses—she welshes on the bet and skips town. A rugged private detective named John Doe Storm is sent to bring her back. After a series of captures, escapes and recaptures, each of them decides the other isn't a bad sort after all, and Boy Gets Girl." Chicago Sun Book Week

"'Hazard' will no doubt be produced in Hollywood some time in the next year. . . Regardless of what the rose-petal critics say, this shouldn't contaminate the book. It is a fast, clever story, more entertaining than profound, perhaps, but still worth the reading." Clinton Textor

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ag 17 '47 250w

Kirkus 15:292 Je 1 '47 180w

"Mr. Chanslor gives with everything from stream-of-consciousness to jet-propelled wisecracks." George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 24 '47 320w

Reviewed by H. B. Parker

N Y Times p12 S 28 '47 430w

"In the start, a superlative study in the psychology of a gambling obsession, later somewhat softened by the necessities of plot and love; but written throughout with a succinctness, a bite, a tension to leave you breathless. Mr. Chanslor, though an individualist and no mere disciple, presents as serious a challenge as James M. Cain has yet had to face." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 24 '47 120w

CHANSOR, TORREY (MRS ROY CHANSOR) (TORRE BEVANS, MARJORIE TORREY, pseud.). Three little chipmunks [written and ill] by Marjorie Torrey. [37p] $1 Grosset

47-30617

"If you have personal acquaintances among chipmunks you know how little need be done to a picture of one to make it look like a person. Any chipmunk does. Marjorie Torrey makes them look like persons you want to take off the page and carry away in your pocket. This father, mother, two boys and a girl wear clothes, sit around the dinner-table, doze in rocking chairs on the porch, and otherwise disport themselves, all the time looking exactly like chipmunks racing over the page, in lifelike colors and almost as large as life." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 180:144 D '47 20w

Kirkus 15:426 Ag 15 '47 80w

"It is too bad that the story is not as interesting as the illustrations are lovely. Where there is enough money, would recommend buying for the picture book section." K. H. McAlarney

Library J 72:1279 S 15 '47 50w

"This picture-book may not be natural history—but it ought to be." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 N 16 '47 180w

CHAO, BU-WEI (YANG). Autobiography of a Chinese woman; put into English by her husband, Yuenren Chao. (Asia press bk) 327p ill $3.75 Day

B or 92 China—Social life and customs 47-1800

Autobiography of an upper-class, wealthy Chinese woman, who has been at various times the principal of a school, doctor, and traveler. Her medical education was received in Japan, and from there she returned to China to establish a hospital for women. She is married to a Chinese scholar and she and her family have spent some time in the United States.

Booklist 43:240 Ap 1 '47

"It is an entertaining book and might be called the Chinese version of 'The Egg and I.' Every line stresses the humorous aspect of Chinese life which is too little known to the West. In its humor and candor lies its charm, and also its value to the American reader who too often pictures Asiatic life as wholly exotic and seldom free of ceremonial. The defect of the autobiography is its lack of emotional depth." Marie Seton

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 30 '47 330w

"[The] account has strength, humor, and color—but little direction." H. S. Hayward

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 10 '47 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47

Reviewed by D. H. Moseley

Commonweal 45:596 Mr 28 '47 390w

"The book would stand drastic use of the blue pencil, both to tighten it up and to eliminate the 'cutie' elements. In spite of this [Mrs Chao] does contribute to a better rounded picture of the new Chinese."

Kirkus 15:25 Ja 1 '47 250w

"This blandly personal story gives a good picture of life in a well-to-do Chinese family, but is vague and uninteresting concerning an important period in China's history—before, during and after the Revolution. . . Mrs. Chao is not a 'typical Chinese woman' as she says; instead she was principal of a school, doctor and traveler—unusual in any country—justifiably but regrettably self-satisfied. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:384 Mr 1 '47 140w

"By typecasting herself—naively or bravely, it is difficult to say which—she brings China as close as the next-door radio, and does far more to build international friendliness than some ambassadors have done, though many who have known ambassadors will consider this limp praise." Annalee Jacoby

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Mr 16 '47 550w

Reviewed by H. E. Wedeck

N Y Times p12 Ap 27 '47 410w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ap 13 '47 450w

Springf'd Republican p10B O 5 '47 180w

CHAPMAN, BARBARA. Escape from the Nuisance; pictures by Suzanne Dodge. 165p $2 Oxford

46-7877

Story for boys and girls about three English children and one American, who formed an Indian tribe known as the Beavers and carried on their activities in the forests of America, this time situated in England. For grades three to five.

Booklist 43:120 D 15 '46

"Mediocre story. May have appeal to boy and girl devotees of the Indian adventure type of story." A. H. McGinity

+ Library J 72:82 Ja 1 '47 40w

"This is an amusing book with plenty of excitement, which 8 and 9 year old children like very much." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p26 F 9 '47 150w

CHARLES, JOAN, pseud. See Underwood, C.

CHARLY, LOUISE. See Labé, L. C.

CHASE, CARL TRUEBLOOD. Evolution of modern physics. 203p il $2.50 Van Nostrand

530.9 Physics—History 47-1091

"A review of the highlights in the progress of physics, from the time of Thales of Miletus to the present... The author has traced these developments by emphasizing researches and discoveries which are considered landmarks in the history of physics. He has based the book on his earlier work, A History of Experimental Physics [Book Review Digest 1932], but the original material has undergone much rewriting and some condensation. Also, developments since 1932, relating particularly to nuclear physics have been incorporated to embrace such names and topics as Meitner, Joliot, Smyth, atom bomb, plutonium and radar. Although the arrangement is largely chronological, a narrative style has been obtained by grouping together related topics and discoveries. Thus the chapters have such headings as: Light waves; Heat and energy; Molecules; Magnetism and electricity; Radio-activity; The quantum theory; The electron; The atomic nucleus. The book contains full-page plates illustrative of recent physical advances." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:389 Mr 1 '47 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:14 Ja '47

CHASE, EDWARD T. Etchings of the French impressionists and their contemporaries. (Hyperion press bk) 72pl $7 Crown

767.2 Etchings. Impressionism (art) 47-953

Collection of reproductions from the works of French artists of the nineteenth century. There is a brief text. The prints include etchings, stereotypes, copperplates, dry points, woodcuts, and lithographs.

"In attempting to bridge the gap between title and contents, the Introduction tries to persuade the reader that engraving, in its 'generic sense,' includes lithography, a wax-pencil process, and that an impressionist was practically anyone who failed to find space in the official Salon. Actually, fewer than half of the reproduced prints are etchings and only one third of them were made by impressionists." MacKinley Helm

— Atlantic 179:136 Mr '47 240w

"Purely mechanical quality of the reproductions is fair, given the price of the book, but the cheap paper grays the blacks out of all proportion to the whites and blurs the etched line, both of which distortions are unforgivable in a book that tries to make the point this one does. Nor can I believe that Renoir and Toulouse-Lautrec filled in their colored lithographs quite this sloppily." Clement Greenberg

N Y Times p7 Mr 23 '47 750w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 23 '47 220w

"The color plates are mediocre and the paper could be better but the book is a good survey and Mr. Chase's introduction is comprehensive and considered."

+ — Theatre Arts 31:78 My '47 90w

CHASE, GENEVIEVE. Four young teachers. 300p $2.25 Dodd

47-5529

Story based on the search of four young high school girls to locate a satisfying vocation. They visit several types of schools, and their decision is the same: teaching is to be their profession.

"While packed with information, the story is not dull and will be interesting as well as useful to many teen-age girls." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 72:1382 O 1 '47 70w

"Of course, so much is being done that the book is overcrowded, and the intervening narrative has too many irrelevant details. A picture taken under these conditions is rosier than some teachers will see it, and things come so convenient to the search that even the girls say it's 'queer how quickly our wishes come true.' But these are the necessary defects of an admirable quality." M. L. Becker

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 2 '47 470w

"An interesting and lively story; for older girls."

+ School & Society 66:175 Ag 30 '47 20w

Wis Lib Bul 43:157 N '47

CHATFIELD, HERBERT WALTER, and WREDDEN, JOSEPH HUGH. Varnished cloths for electrical insulation. Am ed 233p il $6 Chemical pub. co.

621.31937 Insulation (electric) 47-3018

"British book showing authors' investigations into the use of various fabrics and methods of impregnation in providing good insulating material. Covers manufacturing and use of varnished cloth, chemical and physical properties of fibers and textiles. Large use of photomicrographs to illustrate the nature of fibers and flaws which are present in various varnished cloths. Aim of book is to emphasize the dependence of good properties of finished varnished cloth on choice of raw cloth and proper application and use of varnish." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1111 Ag '47 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:29 Ap '47

CHAVE, ERNEST JOHN. Functional approach to religious education. 168p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

268 Religious education A47-1249

"This book sets forth a functional analysis of religion and a program of religious education based upon that point of view. Its basic assumption is that religion arises in the primary adjustments of life and is pervasive of all life... The particular analysis given herein grew into form over a period of years, and has been used with persons of different faiths and cultural backgrounds, its terminology proving meaningful and usable for the purposes designated." (Introd) Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 16 '47 90w

"Public schools as well as churches, parents and agencies concerned with the nurture of children and young people will find in these outlines an invaluable guide to the cultivation of religion as a pervading quality of experience in every dimension of personal and social living." W. C. Bower

+ Christian Century 64:1048 S 3 '47 650w

"This book admirably fits its title. It conceives of education entirely in functional terms, and relates this methodology to a naturalistic view of religion. It quite clearly is not Christian education, although the wise Christian educator might make use of Dr. Chave's insights into the reactions of various age-groups." R. C. Miller

Churchman 161:18 Jl '47 120w

"In this volume much is said about indoctrination in the traditional approach. There can also be indoctrination in a functional approach! Nevertheless, here is a book which should be read for its clear analysis of religious development and for its sincere attempt to set up a program consistent with modern educational thinking. Would that all educators had the enthusiasm for their task that Chave evidences for his throughout this book." C. E. Batten

+ — Crozer Q 24:361 O '47 500w

Reviewed by G. A. Coe

J Religion 27:296 O '47 750w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 17 '47 130w

School & Society 65:126 F 15 '47 20w

CHEKHOV, ANTON PAVLOVICH. Portable Chekhov; ed. by Avrahm Yarmolinsky. (Viking portable lib) 631p $2 Viking 891.7 47-11301

"Contains twenty-eight short stories, two complete plays ('The Cherry Orchard' and 'The Boor') and a selection of letters. Five of the stories appear in the Constance Garnett translation, revised by the editor, and the rest of the volume is translated by him except for three of the letters." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Booklist 44:111 N 15 '47

Kirkus 15:478 S 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 72:1610 N 15 '47 50w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:28 D 15 '47 600w.

"Since Chekhov wrote nearly eight hundred short stories, it is difficult to represent him in a brief selection, but the 'Portable Chekhov' shows him in most of his best moods and methods."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p36 N 16 '47 100w

"First-rate collection, assembled by a distinguished scholar and translator."

+ New Yorker 23:135 O 25 '47 60w

"A highly satisfactory book." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:25 D 13 '47 330w

CHEMICAL formulary; a collection of valuable timely, practical commercial formulae and recipes for making thousands of products in many fields of industry; editor-in-chief, H. Bennett. 7v ea $7 Chemical pub. co; v 1-3 ea $6 Van Nostrand

660.8 Chemistry, Technical (33-36898)

"This extensive collection of recipes and formulas contains a wealth of information for the manufacturing and processing industries. Seven volumes have been published to date and since new volumes are coming out annually, apparently the set will be continued indefinitely. The set brings together specific information on processes which is widely scattered throughout the vast literature of technology, material that might be difficult to find without its aid. The formulas are gleaned from books, periodicals, and patent literature; those covered by patents are indicated by asterisks in the first volume and by the patent number in the subsequent volumes. The recipes are grouped by broad subjects: Adhesives, Beverages, Cosmetics and Drugs, Emulsions and Colloids, Food Products, Inks, Leather and Fur, Lubricants, Metals and Alloys, Paint, Varnish, Lacquer, Paper, Photography, Polishes, Pyrotechnics, Plastics, Resins, Rubber, Wax, Soap and Cleaners, Textiles and Fibers, and a section of miscellaneous recipes. . . Each volume has its own special index to specific recipes. A cumulative index to the first three volumes is found in the third volume, and a separate cumulative index to the first six volumes has been prepared." Subscription Bks Bul

"The set is designed for the trained commercial chemist or technical worker, but can also be of value to the layman. However, the editor says in his preface: 'To the layman, it is suggested that he arrange for the services of a chemist or technical worker familiar with the specific field in which he is interested.' . . The compiler's habit of using trade names instead of standard chemical terminology might be misleading to the layman. . . The Chemical Formulary contains material similar to that found in Henley's Twentieth Century Book of Formulas, Processes and Trade Secrets . . . but it has the advantage of being more modern and up to date as well as more detailed. Since its compilation is an expensive undertaking, the price while high may be justified. It is recommended for large libraries and for medium-sized public libraries that can afford it."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 17:26 J1 '46 550w

CH'EN, TA. Population in modern China. 135p $2.60 Univ. of Chicago press

312 China—Population

A46-3756

"Dr. Ta Chen is a recognized authority on population problems in his own country. Scientifically prepared demographic data for China have been hitherto conspicuously lacking. Dr. Ta Chen does not concern himself with overall figures, but in certain population features such as statistics of sex, age, size of family, and diversity of population, investigated by persons trained for the task. These and other conditions of population material are described only for the Kunming Lake region. As in certain other areas noted by Dr. Ta Chen, this forms little more than a sampling method. It serves, however, to prepare for nation-wide population studies when the proper time comes. An extremely timely chapter considers the migrations of the war years." Am Pol Sci R

"This valuable study closes with a chapter advocating an advanced population policy which will no longer foster social stagnation. Unconditional and universal increase of population is decried as accountable for the present low living standards of China's masses. Both negative and positive eugenics should be encouraged with a view to promoting population quality. Dr. Ta Chen has made a useful and informative contribution to a subject of wide interest and importance." E. M. Gale

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:367 Ap '47 300w

"While for the most part the materials are handled carefully and critically, there appear to be one or two lapses into negligence. . . These few aberrations are of minor consequence, however in view of the otherwise able presentation of much valuable information on Chinese population. Among its other contributions the book contains revealing descriptions of Chinese data, as in respect to age, marriage, and occupations, which should prove highly useful to Occidental scholars. The discussions of historical aspects of China's population further enhance the value of the volume." A. H. Hawley

+ Am Soc R 12:257 Ap '47 550w

"If the book is a disappointment, it is primarily because the basis for a thorough knowledge of Chinese demography is not available. Perhaps the author shows too little ingenuity in squeezing out valid information from the existing sources, but no amount of ingenuity could compensate for the paucity of information. . . Great caution must be used in handling such data, and the author does not always exercise such caution; e.g., when he takes reported rates at their face value and compares them with rates from other countries likely to be much more accurate. The book gives a useful summary of what is available. From it certain information of importance to Chinese studies can be gleaned. But the uninitiated should tread warily." Kingsley Davis

Ann Am Acad 252:126 J1 '47 360w

Current Hist. 11:331 O '46 40w

Foreign Affairs 25:348 Ja '47 30w

Reviewed by Shannon McCune

Geog R 37:681 O '47 500w

"The reviewer knows of no other book on China's population which will so well repay the reader who would like to know what is happening to it. But the reader should not expect precision where data are so scanty and where there has as yet been so little opportunity to use modern demographic methods of presentation." W. S. Thompson

+ J Pol Econ 55:266 Je '47 600w

Reviewed by C. V. Kiser

Social Forces 25:349 Mr '47 550w

CHERNEV, IRVING, ed. Russians play chess. 200p $2 McKay

794.1 Chess

47-30201

Fifty games of chess, showing the styles of thirty-six Russian master players, are annotated in detail and illustrated with diagrams.

Booklist 43:238 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by Dana Brannan

N Y Times p34 My 4 '47 180w

CHERNEV, IRVING. Winning chess traps; 300 ways to win in the opening. 306p il $3 Chess review, 250 W. 57th st, N.Y. 19

794.1 Chess 47-30183

"Knowledge of opening traps, both setting them and avoiding them, is, in the author's opinion, a vital element of chess tactics. He gives 300 traps, with opening moves and diagrams of the position when the trap is sprung, and concluding moves." Booklist

Booklist 43:238 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by Dana Brannan
N Y Times p24 O 20 '46 140w

CHEYFITZ, EDWARD THEODORE. Constructive collective bargaining. 161p $2 McGraw

331.116 Collective bargaining 47-3253

"Deals with collective bargaining at the plant level and discusses in detail application of modern managerial techniques in the plant in which the union exists, showing the role and responsibilities of management and the union in the w_kshop." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:341 Jl 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1038 Jl '47 60w

"Everyone interested in the problems of labor relations will find this book on collective bargaining at the plant level thought-provoking and stimulating reading." J. K. Loudon
+ Management R 36:498 S '47 1050w

Reviewed by A. H. Raskin
N Y Times p35 N 2 '47 360w

"A clear and concise book, it should prove valuable to industrial labor relations executives." Jackson Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 Jl 6 '47 250w

"Although the book offers comfort neither to antiunion employers nor to 'feather-bedding' unions, it gives an optimistic view of the collective relations which are possible within a developing set of fundamental principles."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:291 S '47 210w

CHEYNEY, PETER. Dark interlude. 212p $2.50 Dodd

47-31037

"Post-war murders of British agents in France by unquenchable Nazi finally stopped by ruthless and resourceful O'Mara and loyal aids." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week p35 O 3 '47 70w

"Those who require torture scenes and other brutality should grab this." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 O 5 '47 150w

"In the Cheyney tradition, the book provides entertainment and gore galore." Jack Glick
+ N Y Times p42 O 5 '47 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 14 '47 160w

"Amplly thrilling."
+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 O 4 '47 50w

CHEYNEY, PETER. Uneasy terms. 222p $2.50 Dodd

47-1013

Detective story.

"Cheyney's plot is emaciated, but instead of feeding it he wraps the invalid in an almost incredible swathing of repetition which, far from nourishing the novelette into a novel, manages only to smother the unhappy thing." James Sandoe

— Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 2 '47 90w

"Since he is a popular detective created by a popular author, Rupert O'Brien (Slim) Callaghan must be what the public wants. He has 'humor lines' around his eyes. He probably has some around his mouth, too, as he grins, grins and grins; that is, when he isn't smashing somebody in the face." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ja 19 '47 230w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p34 Ja 26 '47 210w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p23 F 2 '47 70w

"Stouter than most Slim yarns."
Sat R of Lit 30:32 F 1 '47 50w

CHIANG, KAI-SHEK. China's destiny; authorized translation by Wang Chung-hui; with an introd. by Lin Yutang. 260p $2.75 Macmillan

951 China—History. China—Foreign relations. Reconstruction (1939-)—China
47-30071

"The first authorized English translation of a famous book, originally published in China in 1943, . . . based on the revised edition issued in 1944, with an Appendix giving the original text in each case where revisions were made. . . This is a history of the Chinese nation as seen through the eyes of her great leader, an assessment of China's national heritage, her past suffering at the hands of Imperialism, her present problems, and her future needs." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by H. M. Vinacke
Am Pol Sci R 41:799 Ag '47 800w
Booklist 43:182 F 15 '47

"The book was written for the Chinese people, and is not easy reading for one unacquainted with Chinese history and social thinking. Yet the student of world affairs will find in it much food for thought." Bernard Meyer
Cath World 165:183 My '47 350w

Reviewed by H. F. MacNair
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 F 23 '47 550w

Reviewed by H. S. Hayward
Christian Science Monitor p16 F 7 '47 480w

Reviewed by T. M. Avery
Commonweal 46:218 Je 13 '47 750w
Current Hist 12:237 Mr '47 70w
Foreign Affairs 25:707 Jl '47 50w

"Recommended, but contains much less material than the Roy edition." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 72:222 F 1 '47 100w

"Now that the Generalissimo can be read, if you have patience enough, in both a friendly and a hostile edition, it will be seen, no matter which text you place your trust in, that China's Destiny is an extremely dull, uninspired and uninspiring document, which contemplates the past, present and future of China in almost shockingly commonplace terms. It is chauvinistic, reactionary, small-minded and smugly convinced that it has summed up the wisdom of the ages. . . As dull in its ideas, commonplace in its thoughts and feudalistic in its politics as China's Destiny is, it would be a grave mistake to underestimate it. There may be nothing sensational in its chauvinism, its anti-foreign bias or its glorification of his country's Confucian past, but the Kuomintang leaders who were worried over the book's effect on the outside world knew what they were about." Richard Watts
New Repub 116:37 F 10 '47 850w

Reviewed by Owen Lattimore
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 F 16 '47 600w

"Neither of these translations will be entirely acceptable to scholars seeking a complete and literal rendering of the Chinese text. In a brief examination I have found places where the authorized Macmillan version definitely pulls the Generalissimo's punches." J. K. Fairbank

N Y Times p3 F 9 '47 800w

Reviewed by Nathaniel Pfeffer
Pol Sci Q 62:598 D '47 330w

Reviewed by William Camp
San Francisco Chronicle p11 Mr 2 '47
550w

Reviewed by John Goette
Sat R of Lit 30:21 F 15 '47 380w

CHIANG, KAI-SHEK. China's destiny; and, Chinese economic theory. 347p $3.50 Roy pubs.

951 China—History. China—Foreign relations. Reconstruction (1939-)—China
47-30072

An unofficial translation of this work, with an introduction and commentary by Philip Jaffe, editor of Amerasia. Map on end papers. Index.

Booklist 43:182 F 15 '47

Reviewed by Bernard Meyer
Cath World 165:184 My '47 410w

Reviewed by H. F. MacNair
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 F 23 '47
550w

"In the Roy version, the footnotes are not mere annotations, but vigorous comments as well. In this edition, General Chiang's writings are preceded by a 14-page article by Mr. Jaffe, giving his account of the history, origin and defects of the Chiang opus. Moreover, the Roy edition includes another Chiang work, 'Chinese Economic Theory,' not included in the Macmillan edition. Mr Jaffe regards this treatise as even more revealing and unsavory than 'Destiny.' He goes over the entire ground with a rigorous pen, in a 30-page concluding summary. This sort of commentary carries the Roy book into the realm of criticism, beyond the scope of the unembellished Chiang Kai-shek documentary printed by Macmillan." H. S. Hayward

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 F 7 '47
480w

"Whether Chiang Kai-shek is a great patriot or a ruthless military adventurer is irrelevant for the purpose of this review. The evidence indicates that the Roy edition was issued for the purpose of smearing the Kuomintang Party, and to do so, Mr. Jaffe is willing to make use of half-truths, misrepresentation and verbal confusion." T. M. Avery

Commonweal 46:218 Je 13 '47 750w

Foreign Affairs 25:707 Jl '47 50w

Kirkus 15:18 Ja 1 '47 210w

"Translation is beautifully accurate; excellent notes and commentary succeed in making Chiang's pronouncements not only understandable but fascinating. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:222 F 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 116:37 F 10 '47 850w

"In authoritativeness of translation, there is nothing much to choose between the two editions. Different shadings of emphasis in the translation of an ideographic language like Chinese, in which etymologies are often hopelessly obscure, are inevitable. Both editions provide for comparison between the original text and the revised Chinese edition, but in the Roy edition the textual comparisons are cleaner and more conveniently placed." Owen Lattimore

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
F 16 '47 600w

"Jaffe's volume scores a point by making available, in addition to 'China's Destiny,' a fifty-page translation of Chiang's companion work, 'Chinese Economic Theory,' which is an essential supplement to it. In addition, Mr. Jaffe's explanatory notes make the Roy version more intelligible to American readers." J. K. Fairbank

N Y Times p3 F 9 '47 800w

Reviewed by Nathaniel Pfeffer
Pol Sci Q 62:598 D '47 330w

Reviewed by William Camp
San Francisco Chronicle p11 Mr 2 '47
550w

Reviewed by John Goette

Sat R of Lit 30:21 F 15 '47 380w

Reviewed by J. T. Pratt

Spec 178:754 Je 27 '47 850w

CHIANG, MONLIN. Tides from the West; a Chinese autobiography. 282p $3.50 Yale univ. press

B or 92 China—Social life and customs
47-4798

Autobiography of a Chinese statesman who has been minister of education under Chiang Kai-shek and is at present secretary-general of the cabinet. Dr Chiang Monlin has a Ph.D. from Columbia university, so combined with the history and reminiscence in this volume there is a study in the contrasts between western and eastern ideas. Index.

Reviewed by J. K. Fairbank

Ann Am Acad 253:224 S '47 420w

Booklist 44:10 S 1 '47

Reviewed by D. G. Bennett

Cath World 165:473 Ag '47 420w

Reviewed by H. F. MacNair

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Jl 6 '47
600w

"As would be expected from one with his connections, he gives a favorable picture of the generalissimo and the national government but not what could be called a whitewashing report. The objectivity of some parts of it is surprising. This autobiography is much more a book about the Chinese people than about its author. In that class it is one of those best worth reading."

+ Christian Century 64:656 My 21 '47
220w

Current Hist 12:583 Je '47 70w

"An acute, perceptive commentary on the transforming of China, and the humble, ordinary memoirs of a life well spent."

+ Kirkus 15:119 F 15 '47 170w

"Though the historical background is not complete, his picture of the China of yesterday is highly informative and wholly delightful. . . Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:635 Ap 15 '47 100w

"Dr. Chiang has written a book which I have read with great pleasure and interest, but it is one that I could pass along to very few persons with an honest assurance that they would find it either entertaining or interesting. That is not because it is hard to read. Dr. Chiang is a thoroughly civilized and urbane person, with a tolerant attitude towards all kinds of men and their ideas. . . His style has a peculiar fluid quality, and reading his book is like effortless drifting with a stream. The scenery is pleasant, the company excellent and there are many interesting looking landmarks along the way; but, as a guide, Dr. Chiang does not take the trouble to exhaust the possibilities of any of them." Rodney Gilbert

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ap 27 '47 1100w

Reviewed by Viola Young

N Y Times p21 Ag 3 '47 550w

"[Chiang Monlin] has managed to dissect China through 282 pages without once glimpsing festering politics. . . Though 'Tides from the West' says little about today's China, and though some of that little is not wholly true, the book has some value as a view of yesterday and of America." Annalee Jacoby

Sat R of Lit 30:19 Je 7 '47 750w

CHICAGO, UNIVERSITY. Committee on social thought. Works of the mind. See Heywood, R. B., ed.

CHIDESTER, ANN. Mama Maria's. 219p $2.75 Scribner

47-2361

"A brief but notable story of a high-principled, self-reliant old proprietress of a highway eating shack, her inarticulate, deeply loyal

CHIDESTER, ANN—Continued
hired man, and an unhappy girl who upsets the delicately balanced relationship between the old woman and the man." New Yorker

"For mature readers only."

Booklist 43:272 My 1 '47

"With a tight hold on the concise pattern, the clearly defined characters, this floodlights the influence and power of the road, in bringing together and climaxing the chance fellowships. A certain strength and sureness obviates the sordidness."

+ — Kirkus 15:80 F 1 '47 170w

"Not important." H. G. Kelley

Library J 72:638 Ap 15 '47 90w

"Miss Chidester's writing has originality, sensitiveness, and punch. She gives meaning and drama to the kind of place on the roadside that most people have passed dozens of times without a thought or a glance. Except for a somewhat anti-climactic final chapter, the book is tightly woven and amazingly compact. You will not quickly forget either its episodes or its people." Mary Ross

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
Ap 20 '47 600w

"As in her three previous novels, Miss Chidester's theme is a relatively minor one, but she writes with such purity and directness and with such absence of technical exhibitionism that anyone interested in contemporary American fiction can hardly overlook her talent."

+ New Yorker 23:93 Ap 26 '47 100w

"Miss Chidester gets her story under way with the first sentence, keeping the action and dialogue well paced and beautifully balanced." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 25 '47
130w

CHILD STUDY ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, INCORPORATED. Parents' questions, rev ed 256p $3 Harper

136.7 Child study. Children—Management. Children—Care and hygiene 47-3328

New and revised edition of a book which first appeared over ten years ago (Book Review Digest 1936). "This edition bears on war marriages, and on life with small children in trailers; on self-demand feeding and hospital rooming-in-arrangements for mothers and newborn infants and on father's new share in bringing up baby." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:332 Je 15 '47

Kirkus 15:93 F 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Catherine MacKenzie
N Y Times p23 Je 15 '47 750w

CHILD STUDY ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, INCORPORATED. Read-to-me storybook; il. by Lois Lenski. 146p $2 Crowell

47-31488

"Ten of the stories in this book were especially written for it by authors who have already endeared themselves to children. Others are reprinted here from varied sources because they seem to be permanent parts of the child's world. A few have appeared separately as whole picture books. The verses, traditional as well as modern, represent the timelessness of childhood's interests." (Pref) For ages two to four.

Booklist 44:93 N 1 '47

"A very sound and attractive selection to make bedtime and story hours satisfactory to reader and to the youngsters read to."

+ Commonweal 47:158 N 21 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:391 Ag 1 '47 170w

"A good collection, appealing to preschoolers as well as first and second-graders." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 72:1542 N 1 '47 100w

"Many have been written especially for the collection, while others are old favorites. . . Lois Lenski has provided black-and-white drawings for each story. There are sturdy little boys and girls, lively cats and dogs, all done in her usual humorous style." L. P.

+ N Y Times p40 N 16 '47 160w

"A good deal of effort, thought, and knowledge has gone into selecting the thirty-nine stories and poems in this anthology, which is designed for just-out-of-rompers readers." R. C. Benét

+ New Yorker 23:142 D 6 '47 70w

CHIOTIS, JOHN C., and PELL, JOSEPH C. How to become a policeman; a study aid to help pass examinations; diagrams by John C. Chiotis. 262p il $2.50 Funk, W

351.3 Police—U.S. Civil service—U.S. 47-336

"Material to help the candidate pass physical as well as knowledge tests. Some of the information is in the question and answer form used in civil service examinations and is intended to be representative of these examinations in various parts of the U.S. A selected bibliography." Booklist

Booklist 43:180 F 15 '47

"It leaves the general reader with enhanced respect for what rookies must know."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk p24
Ja 26 '47 90w

CHISHOLM, HUGH JOSEPH. Prodigal never returns. 90p $2.75 Farrar, Straus 811

47-11025

A collection of poems by an American poet who was born in New York city in 1913. Some of the poems in this book have appeared in such periodicals as the Atlantic Monthly, Poetry, the Saturday Review of Literature, and the Yale Review.

"Here is poetry written with wit and intelligence, expressing tersely and epigrammatically the paradoxes of our dark age. Through such lively-mindedness the poems themselves, though not growing into those wonderful revelations we hope for, become real experiences that we need." M. C.

+ N Y Times p18 N 30 '47 390w

"All of the poems in this book evidence the fact that Chisholm is a writer of sensitivity, of talent and of experience. There is an intensity and a bitterness in his comments about our contemporary society, as well as a deftness with imagery and rhythm, that deserve the considerate reading due a thoroughly intelligible modern poet." M. L.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 N 30 '47
400w

CHOATE, FLORENCE, and CURTIS, ELIZABETH. Lysbet; a story of old New York; il. by the authors. 220p $2.50 Lippincott

47-31495

"A story of New York under the Dutch in the seventeenth century. Lysbet is an English girl who was captured by Indians in the Mohawk Valley. She lives with a good Dutch family in New Amsterdam until her English relatives discover her. She goes to them, but one feels that she will come back to the New World." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn BK 24:39 Ja '48 120w

Kirkus 15:431 Ag 15 '47 110w

"Recommended where needed." C. W. Field
+ Library J 72:1693 D 1 '47 70w

"The story is somewhat topheavy with historical matter, not all of it accurate. For instance, the authors appear to confuse the Pacification of Ghent with the Union of Arras. The drawings are attractive." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p61 N 9 '47 140w

Sat R of Lit 30:52 N 15 '47 50w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). Labors of Hercules. 265p $2.50 Dodd 47-4481

Twelve detective stories featuring Hercule Poirot.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week p11 J1 20 '47 300w

"Fine all-around entertainment." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Je 29 '47 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p15 J1 6 '47 170w

"A dozen short stories of the brisk, workmanlike type that Mrs. Christie's admirers have come to expect. All right if you happen to favor Poirot, or mysteries in this abbreviated form."

+ New Yorker 23:68 J1 12 '47 60w

"A uniquely shaped book, richly devious and technically brilliant—by far the best volume yet of Poirot shorts." Anthony Boucher
+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 J1 6 '47 80w

"Characteristic Poirot puzzlers. Classical ties-ins sometimes far-fetched—and collection notable for dullest single Poirot tale ever published anywhere, anytime."

Sat R of Lit 30:34 J1 19 '47 30w

CHRISTIE, HUGH KIDD, and MCKINNEY, JAMES. Railway foreman and his job. 285p il $3.50 Am. tech. soc.

656 Railroads—Management. Foremen 47-4865

"Analysis of the foreman's duties... Outlines the foreman's place in the organization, qualities necessary for a good foreman, his importance and responsibilities. Shows operating practices which constitute success of a railroad." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1376 O 1 '47 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:36 Ap '47

CHRISTOWE, STOYAN. My American pilgrimage. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 264p $2.50 Little

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-1913

The author came to this country from Macedonia as a boy of seventeen, and started out as a factory and railroad worker. In this book he recounts the story of his first five years in America, his attempts to learn English, the loss of his father who had preceded him to this country, and his growing love for the new land.

Booklist 43:271 My 1 '47

"It is a modest autobiography. Such stories have been told many times. But they cannot be told too often, when well done, as this one is. The material for the report is somewhat meager, and a few of the incidents are rather thin. There is a little overstraining. But, in the main, the narrative flows easily and naturally, holding one's interest." R. H. M.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 8 '47 550w

"The intricacies of Americanization, the adoption of a new homeland with whole heart and mind, this has some of the appeal of the Papashvily without the farcical touches."

Kirkus 15:92 F 1 '47 170w

"Recommended." C. C. Gorchels
+ Library J 72:526 Ap 1 '47 120w

"The story of the immigrant has been told and retold, but this is an unusual book: Stoyan Christowe became an ordinary Mister American, not because he expected to pluck dollars from the American trees, but because he fell in love with America at first sight. . . It is a fine book." Stoyan Pribichevich
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ap 13 '47 1250w

Reviewed by Joseph Wechsberg
+ N Y Times p10 Ag 17 '47 750w
San Francisco Chronicle p9 Ap 6 '47 70w

"Stoyan Christowe calls this book 'My American Pilgrimage,' but it is more than a pilgrimage; it is an American testament, a warm, simple, eloquent testament, of faith and belief and discovery. It is a book which those who have faith and belief of their own will read and cherish; and they will wish that those of little faith and thin belief might read it and come to understanding. . . There is no maudlin sentimentality here, no glib glorification of externals. Christowe cuts through the veneer, in his writing as in his thinking." Hal Borland
+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 Ap 12 '47 700w

Wis Lib Bul 43:81 My '47

CHURCH, BROOKE (PETERS) (MRS J. A. CHURCH, Jr). The golden years; the Old Testament narrative as literature. 398p $4 Rinehart

221 Bible. Old Testament. Bible as literature 47-3108

A study of the Old Testament narratives regarded as literature—as biographical, historical, and fictional works. The book is designed for the layman and amateur and not for the scholar.

Reviewed by William Fennell
Canadian Forum 27:166 O '47 350w

"It is a book which should appeal to all lovers of good literature as well as to those who cherish the Old Testament for its religious message."

+ Kirkus 15:161 Mr 15 '47 140w

"This worthy contribution to world of literature reminds us of rich literary treasures disregarded by many because they have considered them only as a religious instrument. As in her Israel Saga [Book Review Digest 1933], Mrs. Church writes as a layman for laymen, without denominational bias. Recommended for public libraries." O. G. Lawson
+ Library J 72:804 My 15 '47 130w

CIARDI, JOHN. Other skies. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 83p $2 Little 811 47-31468

A collection of poems by an American writer covering his war experiences. He saw combat duty as a B-29 gunner in the Pacific. He is now teaching English at Harvard.

"The scientific and machine age is blessed with a considerable number of poets of ability. Some of the best poets writing today in the English tongue served in the armed forces of the second world war. And one of the best of these is John Ciardi." Pearl Strachan
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 20 '47 650w

"Other Skies is one of the most adult, virile and complete collections of verse the war has produced."

+ Kirkus 15:530 S 15 '47 160w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 23:134 N 15 '47 100w

"Unlike Eliot, who is only one of his 'ancestors,' Ciardi likes humanity well enough to satirize with warm wit, rather than with cold distaste. There is throughout his work a personality that expands to encompass the experiences of his fellows." G. P. Meyer
+ Sat R of Lit 30:60 D 6 '47 450w

CIECHANOWSKI, JAN. Defeat in victory. 397p $3.50 Doubleday

940.53438 World war, 1939-1945—Poland. Poland—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations—Poland 47-966

Diplomatic memoirs of the Polish Ambassador to the United States who represented the London Polish-government-in-exile, during the war years.

Booklist 44:11 S 1 '47

CIECHANOWSKI, JAN—Continued

"The very fact that only a minor detail could be questioned in a book which is full of much more 'sensational' revelations and, in addition to it, contains reflections of the highest importance, inspired by a real statesmanship, is certainly a proof of its great reliability. In writing it, the last Ambassador of free and independent Poland to the United States, has rendered a distinct service, not only to his own country, but also to America." O. Halecki

+ Cath World 164:566 Mr '47 800w

Reviewed by Ernest Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 29 '47 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '47

Reviewed by John Broderick

Commonweal 45:651 Ap 11 '47 200w

Current Hist 12:498 My '47 90w

"Mr Ciechanowski's account of wartime negotiations with the American and other Allied Governments is understandably one-sided, but it is nevertheless of prime historical importance."

Foreign Affairs 25:704 Jl '47 50w

"A documentary, of reference rather than news value."

Kirkus 14:587 N 15 '46 160w

"Recommended." W. A. Kalenich

+ Library J 72:158 Ja 15 '47 140w

"Many readers of Mr. Ciechanowski's book will judge the mistakes, and the missed opportunities, of his exile government less gently than he does. But his book will have been useful if it helps to convince enough Americans that evasion and postponement and hypocrisy are bad diplomatic weapons for a democracy which believes in itself and in its cause." Joseph Barnes

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ja 26 '47 1650w

"His thesis is simple, much simpler than the whole truth usually is on the subject of Poland. . . . The author was a party to many important discussions at the White House and the Department of State. A trained observer, his reports of what he personally saw and heard are all valid as one observer's testimony." James Reston

+ N Y Times p7 F 9 '47 1050w

"His long and detailed story includes many fascinating transcripts of secret talks in Washington, London, and Moscow, and, though not concealing the author's sorrow and anger, it is written with a well-bred restraint."

+ New Yorker 22:86 Ja 25 '47 130w

"As Polish ambassador to the United States from 1941 to 1945, Mr. Ciechanowski was an active participant in many of the events which he describes. His account thus gains in vividness and immediate insight what it sacrifices in perspective. For the student of international relations it is, however, an exasperating mixture of first-hand knowledge and of hearsay." P. E. Mosely

+ Pol Sci Q 62:601 D '47 750w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 4 '47 240w

Reviewed by F. C. Weiskopf

Sat R of Lit 30:15 Mr 8 '47 750w

Wis Lib Bul 43:52 Mr '47

CILIBERTI, CHARLES. Backstairs mission in Moscow, 1936-1938; diary of an American worker comp. during three eventful journeys to the forbidden land of the Soviets. 128p il pa $1 Booktab press, 521 5th av, N.Y. 17

914.7 Russia—Description and travel 47-2331

"One of the most surprising and not the least interesting of the things to come out of Joseph E. Davies' ambassadorship to the U.S.S.R. a decade ago is a volume which has just appeared. It is called—with an allusion to the ambassador's own famous book—'Backstairs Mission in Moscow' and was written by none other than the Davieses' personal chauffeur, Charles Ciliberti. Ciliberti, a self-respecting American workingman of Italian parentage, is evidently a person of forthright intelligence and initiative, as well as a good deal of social curiosity. He kept his eyes open on the three trips he made with his employer to Russia, took the trouble to learn Russian, and in a diary written from the unusual point of view of the chauffeur of a great man, he has set down his impressions." Chicago Sun Book Week

"The book has a transparent honesty and a deal of shrewd observation. Ciliberti came to have a great admiration for the Russian people and to despise the Russian government as a dictatorship which holds its subjects in a bloody vise. He gives his reasons for this conclusion and to the unprejudiced reader they will be convincing. This book, modestly in paper covers, is likely to have a wide circulation if a few influential people happen to get hold of it. Ciliberti has the power to hold his readers and to impress them with his unassuming shrewdness in sizing up what he saw in Russia." J. W. R.

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 My 18 '47 230w

"Mr. Ciliberti's diary, which is consistently discreet and respectful in matters touching his ambassadorial master, is described on the cover as an 'astounding document.' Perhaps 'distinctive' would have been a more appropriate epithet; for, although Mr. Ciliberti's views are definite—more so, no doubt, than those of his employer—they emanate from a limited experience. He is a keen observer, but his observations relate what he sees of Russia to what he knows of New York, which hardly makes allowances for longstanding differences of standard. . . . When Mr. Ciliberti breaks out of his own medium with animadversions on the political situation in Russia, on the treason trials, or on the merits and demerits of Mr. Walter Duranty as a Moscow correspondent, he tends to emphasize the limitations of an essentially 'backstairs' point of view." H. J. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 9 '47 390w

CIRACI, NORMA. Detour. 344p $2.75 Doubleday

47-1456

Novel based on the feverish life in a Florida roadhouse in wartime. Tony who owned the place, and Lu, his wife who played the piano, are the central characters. Lu had married Tony, after the end of a perfect love affair with another man. As official hostess of the roadhouse Lu attempted to bring a little stability into the lives of the young women who "followed the troops."

"Miss Ciraci has a familiarity with her material that appears to breed a large measure of contempt for her characters. It is true that she occasionally sets down in a perfunctory fashion their inchoate strivings toward a better life, but the prevailing mood is that of futility and despair. As a tour de force conveying a sense of the heartsick boredom of Lu's 'mad, sick world' and its ineffectual, thwarted people, 'Detour' is more than ordinarily effective, though monotonous going." Jack Conroy

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 F 16 '47 280w

"A first novel with a certain glamour build-up, which carries a kind of 'double scotch' sentimentality. More popular than literary."

Kirkus 14:606 D 1 '46 100w

"Realistic, tinged with melodrama; not much plot but vivid incidents." L. R. Miller

Library J 72:224 F 1 '47 100w

"Having worked as a waitress and taxi driver, the author transcribes with high fidelity the talk of sailors, salesmen and girl friends, and her roadhouse jazz and gin atmosphere is authentically garish. Perhaps Miss Ciraci should have had less coaching and done more cutting, for there is a certain sameness in her long sequence of bedroom and bar adventures." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 F 23 '47 150w

"If, in all this, there is a faint echo of 'The Sun Also Rises,' the candid feminine comment and the gamey background owe nothing to anyone but the author and her talented eyes and ears. The people, too, are all her own, all freshly projected. Her simple, colloquial, ready-made style is remarkably evocative. With so much in its favor, it is too bad that the book as a whole should narrow down into a merely skillful instead of an inspired one." Catherine Brody

+ — N Y Times p20 F 9 '47 380w

CLAPP, FREDERICK MORTIMER. The seeming real (1943-1946). 76p $2.50 Harper

811

47-1816

"This newest volume of poetry by the director of the Frick Collection shows Mr. Clapp constantly developing and refining his individual and highly intellectual poetic idiom. 'The Seeming Real,' like 'Against a Background of Fire,' is the expression of an intelligent, speculative and detached mind, which finds in the language of science—notably of astronomy—the only fitting symbols for the present chaos and future nothingness." N Y Times

"These are poems that do not yield their meaning or their delights without a struggle; they are triple distilled, exactly conceived, tightly written. Their difficulty lies precisely in their concision, not in any use of a private language. They must be read and reread closely, for they (quite rightly) make no concessions. . . In a time when neither the makers nor the readers of literature seem much concerned with thinking 'The Seeming Real' is especially welcome." Milton Crane

+ N Y Times p18 My 4 '47 450w

Reviewed by G. P. Meyer

Sat R of Lit 30:25 J1 5 '47 500w

CLAPP, MARGARET ANTOINETTE. Forgotten first citizen: John Bigelow. 390p $4 Little B or 92 Bigelow, John 47-4375

Biography of John Bigelow (1817-1911) author, journalist, politician, and diplomat, who spent nearly seventy of his ninety-four years in the service of his community and of his country. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. J. Lien

Am Pol Sci R 41:1035 O '47 300w

Booklist 44:14 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Van Allen Bradley

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 29 '47 330w

"John Bigelow is not well known, but Margaret Clapp in her excellent biography has made it quite clear why New Yorkers of 50 years ago called him their First Citizen." M. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 23 '47 480w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 46:432 Ag 15 '47 900w

"In this age of pressure and pace, a worthwhile reminder of the value of public spirit." + Kirkus 15:233 Ap 15 '47 90w

"Although Miss Clapp writes well and does a bang-up job on her subject, her book bears the signs and the limitations of the doctoral dissertation. It is full of New York background (librarians will enjoy especially the chapter about the origin of the New York Public Library) and meaty with facts about turn-of-the-century politics, but it probably will appeal only to experts and scholars, and hence is for large collections only." C. C. Mish

+ Library J 72:957 Je 15 '47 110w

"Admirable biography." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly BK R p3 J1 27 '47 1200w

"Miss Clapp's volume, with its documentation, raises again the question of the responsibility of the biographer to his subject. My point is that no coherent picture of Bigelow's mind emerges from the book. To some extent facts speak for themselves, and as for the events of Bigelow's life. . . Miss Clapp's account is satisfactory. But Bigelow was no politician or general about whom a narrative of action is enough. He was a mind, often a distinguished one and everywhere responsive to the great forces of his day. I come away from the narrative as puzzled as ever, before the enigma of the nineteenth-century liberal American." Perry Miller

N Y Times p3 Je 22 '47 1050w

"Miss Clapp is never carried away by the picturesque and avoids anything that smacks of smartness or sophistication. Writing with clarity and detachment, she has shown how a man reaches full development and fruition. She has done a worthy deed in recalling John Bigelow to the American people." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 J1 6 '47 900w

"Dr. Clapp, in an interesting and readable volume, has given any future student of that type much significant material; and in the process has brought back to life a man who eminently deserves [to survive.]" Rudolph Von Abele

+ Sat R of Lit 30:23 J1 26 '47 550w

Wis Lib Bul 43:173 D '47

CLARK, BARRETT HARPER. Eugene O'Neill; the man and his plays. rev ed 182p il $2.75 Dover

B or 92 O'Neill, Eugene Gladstone 47-31225

"This book, which has appeared in several revisions, was last issued in 1936 as Eugene O'Neill, the Man and His Plays and has been out of print for several years. It is now largely rewritten, with new material incorporated." (Booklist) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest 1933. Index.

Booklist 44:112 N 15 '47

"Informative, readable and thoroughly documented. Bibliographies. Essential for drama collections. Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:1471 O 15 '47 30w

CLARK, BARRETT HARPER, ed. European theories of the drama. new rev ed 576p $3.75 Crown

808.2 Drama—History and criticism 47-1946

This new edition of a standard work first published in 1918 (Book Review Digest 1918) contains a supplement on the American drama including articles by such critics and working dramatists as G. P. Baker, George Jean Nathan, John Mason Brown, Eugene O'Neill, Maxwell Anderson, and others.

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 72:466 Mr 15 '47 30w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly BK R p32 Mr 23 '47 100w

"There is no gainsaying that here is the definitive work of its kind." P. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 25 '47 100w

CLARK, BARRETT HARPER, and FREEDLEY, GEORGE, eds. History of modern drama. 832p $5; lib ed $7 Appleton-Century

809.2 Drama—History and criticism 47-11445

Comprehensive history of European drama, or of drama influenced by the European from the time of Ibsen to the present. The book was written by twenty-four authorities. Bibliography by country. Index.

Booklist 44:130 D 1 '47

Reviewed by Vivian Mercier

Commonweal 47:374 Ja 23 '48 1950w

"The full index by Elizabeth P. Barrett adds to the library value. Recommended for reference use and for circulation for larger libraries." Esther Johnston

+ Library J 72:1781 D 15 '47 210w

CLARK, B. H.—Continued

"The book is one primarily for study and reference. As such it has one lack; the bibliography does not contain any mention of plays available in translation. It is dull business studying about foreign plays with no texts to sample. Of late many Soviet plays have been translated and (we fear) tend to refute Harry Dana's belief in the great advance of Russian drama since the revolution." W. P. Eaton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 D 14 '47 250w

"Here is a valuable theatre book, impressive in scope, encyclopedic in its information." T. Q. Curtis

+ N Y Times p32 N 9 '47 800w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 30 '47 100w

School & Society 66:429 N 29 '47 20w

CLARK, BLAKE. See Clark, T. B.CLARK, CHRISTOPHER. Unleashed will. 280p $2.50 Little 47-2900

Grim story of a high school boy from a small midwestern town who attacked and murdered his younger sister.

"Not only does Clark make Paul Godwin's crime, urged by circumstances, as credible an act as it is insane, but with this book he shows his mastery of an unobtrusive style, possessed of an ease and lack of self-consciousness rarely found in a first novel. His is a mature talent capable of dealing competently with a subject of greater significance than this interesting but slight story." Coley Newman

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 My 18 '47 320w

Kirkus 15:195 Ap 1 '47 160w

"One is never certain, reading this book, whether the author is writing a story of fore-ordained madness rooted in a diseased brain or madness which came as a result of the breaking of adolescent tensions." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 My 25 '47 270w

"Christopher Clark, whose first novel this is, tells the story sincerely in a style more colloquial than colorful. The small-town people he creates are limned by their folksy conversation rather than by an exploring of their roots or by lengthy exposition of their actions. Mr. Clark has an accurate literary eye and is nowhere guilty of hopping up his story in imitation of the motion-picture camera, as so many of his contemporaries do." H. B. Parker

+ N Y Times p14 My 4 '47 450w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 29 '47 120w

CLARK, DELBER WALLACE. World of Justus Falckner, 189p $2.50 Muhlenberg press B or 92 Falckner, Justus

Biography of Justus Falckner, a German Lutheran pastor, ordained in America, who carried on his work among the German immigrants in the Hudson river valley in the early eighteenth century. Index.

"The style of writing is direct and pleasing, picturesque as a romance, using often the vernacular, and having a popular appeal. . . . The fact that the work was published posthumously may condone the erratic spelling of names and inadequate or erroneous citation of source material." V. H. Paltsits

+ — Am Hist R 52:805 Jl '47 360w

Booklist 43:345 Jl 1 '47

"The author of this charming biography—which comes near being literature—is an ex-Maine Baptist turned Episcopalian. He came across Justus Falckner's footprints while serving an Episcopalian parish in the Hudson valley. Many of the Dutch and German families who made up the backbone of Falckner's parish bore names famous in the history of the Hudson valley region, and much of the charm of the book lies in the fact that the author has been able to bring to life these sturdy pioneers. This he has done at the expense of long and careful research in church records and family papers. . . . Here is an understanding study of a noble figure in Lutheran history made by an Episcopalian clergyman. Nothing can more effectively breach denominational barriers than an appreciation of saints outside our own communions." W. W. Sweet

+ Christian Century 64:432 Ap 2 '47 650w

CLARK, MRS DOROTHY (PARK). Roll, Jordan, roll. 224p $2 Doubleday 47-631

Mystery story

Booklist 43:207 Mr 1 '47

"Well-handled material—satisfactory crime." + Kirkus 14:531 O 15 '46 90w

"Interest is strictly equine." Will Cuppy
— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ja 5 '47 140w

"The solution, when it comes may satisfy the reader but one doubts whether it would convince a jury." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p25 Ja 5 '47 140w

"The background makes the book a bit special, but it will probably be entertaining to anyone who can distinguish between a canter and a rack."

New Yorker 22:67 D 28 '46 100w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 5 '47 50w

"Better than most."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 D 21 '46 50w

CLARK, SYDNEY AYLMEY. All the best in France. 365p il $3.50 Dodd

914.4 France—Description and travel 47-30321

Guidebook to present-day France, giving especial prominence to Paris. Includes historical data, as well as the usual tourist information. Based on a prewar knowledge of France, plus a post-war check-up. Index.

Booklist 43:328 Je 15 '47

Christian Science Monitor p7 My 16 '47 80w

"If you have a hankering to go to France this year or next, but are on the fence about whether you should or not, Sydney Clark's book will decide the problem. He flew over there recently to see what is in store for the traveler who wants to get to the boulevards and provinces and the Riviera as soon as he can. What Clark saw surprised him, and his report is enthusiastic." W. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 7 '47 210w

"A genial and enthusiastic guide, Mr. Clark has turned out 'All the Best in France,' a book calculated to aid American tourists [to] see and do a maximum in Paris and the provinces in a minimum of time. The book is packed with extremely useful information about the technicalities of travel in France. . . . Apart from any of the information that Mr. Clark may impart, he is apt to infect the reader with his love for things Parisian." Bernard Frezell

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Je 21 '47 290w

CLARK, SYDNEY AYLMEY. All the best in South America, east coast. 315p il maps $3.50 Dodd

918 South America—Description and travel 47-30217

Revised edition of an earlier book entitled The East Coast of South America (Book Review Digest 1940). This revision contains notes on major changes in transportation and prices.

Booklist 43:257 Ap 15 '47

"Although he has quite evidently given his heart to Brazil of all the South American countries, perhaps he's justified. There's only one Rio, and after you've read what Mr. Clark has to say about that stimulating city, you're likely to feel the same way." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 20 '47
550w

Wis Lib Bul 43:79 My '47

CLARK, SYDNEY AYLMEER. All the best in South America, west coast. 358p il $3.50
Dodd

918 South America—Description and travel
47-1141

"How to get the most out of your trip to Colombia, Panama, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Chile, Argentina." (Subtitle) "This volume is a postwar edition, in new form and under a new title, of The West Coast of South America, first published in 1941. It has been fully revised by the author while on a trip, just concluded, to all the countries discussed." (Foreword) Index.

Booklist 43:257 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by J. F. Rippey

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 15 '47
360w

"Mr. Clark gives some very good background and historical material. . . The illustrations and the index are excellent, but the ending is unforgettably reminiscent of the lantern-slide travelogue of another era." E. J.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 23 '47
150w

CLARK, THOMAS BLAKE. Hawaii, the 49th state. 271p $3 Doubleday
996.9 Hawaiian Islands 47-4377

Tells the story of Hawaii from the early days of the explorers to the present. It contains bits of history, accounts of sugar and pineapple growing, business opportunities for newcomers, politics, life and customs, etc., but in the main it is concerned with Hawaii as a candidate for statehood. Maps on end papers. No index.

Booklist 44:11 S 1 '47

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Jl 13 '47
600w

"The volume is a rather superficial survey of Hawaii's history, resources and current condition. There are interesting chapters on the blundering military rule of the war period, and the successful organization of the plantation workers by the CIO. The fact that PAC, rather than the Big Five as in the past, controls the political fortunes of the islands, is in keeping with a worldwide trend, but is more surprising in Hawaii where paternalistic rule was well entrenched and favored by racial tension in the polyglot population. Aside from these notes of contemporary interest, this book has little to recommend it." J. N. Moody + Commonwealth 46:389 Ag 1 '47 170w

"A fast-reading, revealing handbook."
+ Kirkus 15:251 My 1 '47 150w

"Restrained, well written, informative, it gives a clear, unbiased picture of Hawaii and its problems." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Je 22 '47 950w

"Many books have been written about the lush, volcanic isles that Mark Twain once called the loveliest fleet anchored in any sea; but none, I believe, is more interesting or comprehensive than this new account by Blake Clark. As the title suggests, the volume is a plea for statehood for Hawaii. Yet the argument is so ingeniously woven into a tapestry of humorous anecdotes, dramatic incidents and colorful pictures of island life that the reader will not be disturbed by it." N. B. Beck
+ N Y Times p28 Ag 10 '47 450w

"Clark's book contains a lot of new material he gathered on a recent stay in Hawaii, and it pretty well covers the subject of statehood. . . Clark also has a new way of answering the question as to whether the Big Five would prevent an individual from making a success in an independent business there today. There's a lot of good reporting here, and Clark's latest should interest every Californian." W. M. Camp

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 13 '47
800w

"A third of the book gives a quick backward glance to the era of whaling, missionaries, and monarchy, and here Mr. Clark is obviously more intent on entertaining than informing, as indeed the whole book is directed toward catching the eye of the casual reader who wants more sugar than substance. . . Attuned to the lightness of the matter is a style undecisively simple, the same style that has fastened itself upon the slicks, the Sunday supplements, the digest magazines. . . The volume provides no information for travelers. . . Yet it does convey the picture of a land of interracial friendliness, enlightened employers, and friendly people that, though somewhat optimistic, is essentially true." Bradford Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Jl 5 '47 750w

CLARK, WALTER. Photography by infrared: its principles and applications. 2d ed 472p il $6 Wiley

778 Photography, Infra-red 46-7954

"Revised to include most recent information and wartime literature on the subject published in Europe. A new chapter on camouflage detection and section on forest survey, as well as thorough revision of many other sections. Covers subject well, but probably of limited use." (Booklist) Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

Booklist 43:135 Ja 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1128 S 1 '46 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:65 O '46

"In this book the basic principles are discussed simply; it is both a scholarly and introductory treatment of the subject."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:211 Je '47 200w

CLARKE, LOYAL. Manual for process engineering calculations. 438p $6 McGraw 660.83 Chemical engineering. Chemical plants—Equipment 47-4974

"Practical summary of data to aid engineers and chemists in engineering the development of chemical processes from the research report stage to the final design stage. Features tables, charts and equations of greatest value in process engineering." (Library J) Index.

"This book should be useful to the practicing chemical engineer. In addition, it should be of interest to students since a brief study of its contents gives an excellent idea of the nature of the design engineer's job. The concise statements throughout the book on questions of common engineering practice and the introductory chapter on 'Perspective' in design work should be of particular interest to students." R. L. Pigford

+ Chem Eng 54:266 N '47 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1112 Ag '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:46 Jl '47

CLAYTON, CHARLES C. Newspaper reporting today. 422p $2.50 Odyssey

070 Journalism. Reporters and reporting 47-3871

"Using articles that have appeared in metropolitan newspapers to illustrate his text, the assistant managing editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat tells what news is, how to write it, and gives a clear, comprehensive explanation of 12 different fields of specialized reporting." (San Francisco Chronicle) Index.

"Few books on journalism have more explicit application to the technique of the reporter than this work by the assistant managing editor of The St. Louis Globe-Democrat. It has the authority and detail of a textbook and should not be overlooked by any aspirant to the city room. It also has general readability. . . Mr. Clayton is on debatable ground with some of his story selections, chosen to illustrate his points. But in general his sample newspaper stories and assignment schedule tacked to each chapter should prove illuminating to the student." Bruce Rae

CLAYTON, C. C.—Continued

+ — N Y Times p30 Ap 20 '47 750w

"While this volume is designed as a textbook for the student, it should be on every working newspaperman's reference shelf, or indeed, upon the shelf of anyone who does writing of any kind."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 Ap 6 '47 100w

CLEARY, JON. You can't see around corners. 230p $2.75 Scribner

47-31123

A novel of Sydney, Australia, in wartime. The chief character, a youth of twenty-one, tries to keep out of the army, but is inducted; finds it as bad as he'd feared and deserts; drifts into evil ways of living, finally commits murder and so meets his own tragic end.

Booklist 44:90 N 1 '47

Reviewed by Clinton Textor

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 S 21 '47 370w

"A rather able but unsavory portrait of a heel."

Kirkus 15:347 J1 1 '47 120w

"As a study of a young man of mixed qualities, it resembles one of Farrell's plain-spoken, understanding accounts; but the narrative is swifter and the climax nemesis more apparent." H. W. Hart

Library J 72:1193 S 1 '47 70w

"The novel is Mr. Cleary's first, but in its streamlined plotting, its convincingly realized tough talk, and in its direct representation of action it reveals an expert hand." Stephen Stepanchev

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 O 5 '47 320w

"Mr. Cleary makes his points with a hard, underplayed prose—reminiscent of Hemingway at times, plus a distinctive down-under flavor of its own. His climax is a burst of evil drama, which never strains the reader's credulity, though it includes robbery, rape and murder within a few pages. The pathos of Frankie's death is no less intense for its deadpan treatment. This young author has an ear for the vulgar, and a driving narrative pace." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p20 O 5 '47 180w

New Yorker 23:101 S 20 '47 100w

"Cleary has made McCoy highly attractive to women, and gives rather fulsome accounts of McCoy's love-making. . . For his humor he has drawn upon the vast fund of Digger army wit, as a result of which McCoy's remarks are often mere parrotings, joke-book cracks that beat cornily on the eardrum. On the other hand, Cleary employs a spritely metaphor." Luther Nichols

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 5 '47 900w

CLELAND, ROBERT GLASS. California in our time (1900-1940). 320p il $4 Knopf

979.4 California—History

47-30606

Companion volume to the author's earlier work, From Wilderness to Empire (Book Review Digest 1944) which covered the history of California from 1542 to 1900. Index.

Booklist 44:11 S 1 '47

"Mr. Cleland's is a calm perspective, and he looks with justice and deep insight not only on the scene but on the accumulation of events that makes the scene what it is. This is a sound and (except for the chapter on California literature, which is too cursory) satisfying account of a state in which the kaleidoscopic changes wrought everywhere by the automobile, the movies, the radio, the airplane and all the other electrical and mechanical devices of the past fifty years have been multiplied and magnified as in no other area in the world."

J. L. Duff

+ Commonweal 46:530 S 12 '47 550w

Kirkus 15:329 Je 15 '47 110w

"Dull and dispensable." E. L. Lewis

— Library J 72:1102 Ag '47 70w

"Unfortunately Dr. Cleland's latest volume lacks the uniform excellence of his From Wilderness to Empire. . . Economic developments for the period are solidly blocked in, although the handling of this material is somewhat unimaginative. Hewing to the facts, Cleland too often shows an unreasoning fear of generalization. In dealing with the racial and other minorities, whose history looms so large in this century, Cleland has permitted the traditional point of view to place blinders on his insight and shackles on his understanding. . . Carefully entitled 'A preface,' the chapter on California literature is full of echoes and traditional evaluations. Even in 'a preface,' the omissions are glaring." Carey McWilliams

— New Repub 117:23 S 1 '47 1250w

"'California in Our Time' is an informed, urbane and consistently readable survey of the varied forces that produced this west-coast prodigy, with nothing pertinent omitted, and it is told with a quiet humor and an irony that deftly point up those bizarre aspects of the state that in recent years have so much puzzled the rest of the nation." Oscar Lewis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ag 31 '47 800w

"Robert Glass Cleland's 'California in Our Time: 1900-1940' is informing; its epilogue brings it up to the present, and it is likely to remain the handy exegesis on the State for the next few years." Idwal Jones

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 24 '47 750w

"Dr. Cleland has done just as well with [his second] as he did with his first volume. Together, the two constitute exactly the right history for those who would like to get some idea of California but do not want to dig through too much detail." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 19 '47 900w

CLEMENS, CYRIL. Shillaber. 152p il $3 Int. Mark Twain soc.

B or 92 Shillaber, Benjamin Penhallow

47-2206

"It is perhaps necessary to explain to the present generation that 'Shillaber' was the name of an important early American humorist—his real name, Benjamin P. Shillaber, in a period when most humorists wrote under pen names. Mr. Clemens has done well to revive the memory and tell the story of the editor of the Carpet Bag, New England's first humorous magazine, to which a shy young typesetter contributed under the name of 'Artemus Ward.'" Christian Century

Christian Century 64:496 Ap 16 '47 130w

School & Society 65:166 Mr 1 '47 10w

Springf'd Union p2 Je 23 '47 150w

CLEVELAND, REGINALD MCINTOSH. Air transport at war; foreword by Harold L. George. 324p il $3.50 Harper

940.544 World war, 1939-1945—Transportation. U.S. Army air forces. Air transport command. U.S. Naval air transport service

46-7257

Factual history of the Air transport command and Naval air transport service, with stress on the contributions made by the two services to global military air transportation. Based on official records. Illustrated. Index.

Foreign Affairs 25:522 Ap '47 20w

Kirkus 14:339 J1 15 '46 110w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:389 Mr 1 '47 40w

CLINCHY, RUSSELL JAMES. Faith and freedom. 121p $1.75 Macmillan

230 Liberalism (religion) 47-2885

"The reasons why this generation has lost the essential meaning of liberalism; the conviction that liberalism is a dynamic religious faith; and what the content of the liberal Christian faith and action is; these constitute the theme of this book. . . The main parts of the chapters of this book were delivered as the Enoch Pond Lectures on Applied Christianity, at Bangor Theological Seminary, Bangor, Maine, in January, 1946." Pref.

Reviewed by H. P. Douglass

Christian Century 64:710 Je 4 '47 750w

"Despite the somewhat presumptuous mixture of disciplined thought with unrestrained lyricism, the volume remains challenging, the argument is no small part convincing, and the total impact of the thesis that liberalism needs firmer discipline as well as a new Christian conception of freedom leaves the reader with the sense of having followed an earnest scholar and prophetic leader into green pastures of the spirit." K. M. Chworowsky

+ — Churchman 161:18 Jl '47 170w

"Dr. Clinchy's historical references show both insight and perspective, and he writes, as he speaks, with conviction. One wonders if some of the doctrinal arguments are not a bit belabored or forced, and inconsistent with the general spiritual and moral tenor of the book. Nevertheless, there is here a challenging exposition of a religion and way of life without the strengthening of which democracy cannot revive or endure." D. M. Greeley

+ — Crozer Q 24:377 O '47 200w

"This is not liberalism on the defensive. It is rather a ringing call to a more dynamic and creative faith, a statement of a burning conviction. This should be encouraging reading for liberal liberals."

+ Kirkus 15:60 F 1 '47 160w

Springf'd Union p22 Jl 19 '47 100w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:248 S '47 260w

CLOETE, STUART. Third way. 436p $3 Houghton

301.153 Liberalism. Democracy 47-30107

"This book of over 400 pages by the author of The Turning Wheels is a personal search for values and a warning to all mankind to join this search. Badly wounded in World war I and a participant in the war just past Stuart Cloete joins the growing number of men concerned with an immediate reevaluation of contemporary morals. Author's 'third way' appears to be a passionate plea for a more exacting public and private morality in a world haunted by the atomic bomb." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:199 Mr 1 '47

Current Hist 12:373 Ap '47 90w

"A book compact with much that needs airing; with a few revolutionary ideas; with a sound central thesis. Here is no scarehead shouting of dangers of Communism, but rather a book that shows how we can avoid those failures which alone might make Communism a present peril."

+ Kirkus 15:48 Ja 15 '47 340w

"A sincere, though at times confused confession of faith." J. H. Berthel

Library J 72:158 Ja 15 '47 90w

"While his diagnosis is admirable, his prognosis is pretty fuzzy; he sees what is wrong with the utmost clarity, but what to do about it is hardly more apparent to him than to any of the rest of us. . . The fact is one suspects that part of Mr. Cloete's confusion as to the future may be due to his failure to inform himself as to the present with sufficient exactness. . . He has spoken up bravely and without arrogance; if he is not altogether right, neither is he altogether wrong. He deserves a respectful hearing, not on his own account, but simply because only by the expression of every intelligent and honest opinion can we hope to find a way of escape from the City of Destruction." G. W. Johnson

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
F 23 '47 1250w

Reviewed by John Storck

N Y Times p16 Ap 6 '47 650w

CLOSE, ROBERT S. The dupe; a story of the sea. 277p $3 Vanguard

47-11613

Life aboard ship on a trip from Melbourne to Boston provides the background for this novel by an Australian writer. The master is ill and the brutal first mate practically rules the ship until he is murdered. The ferreting out of the murderer begins, and is fastened on the wrong man, a young runaway apprentice who is made the dupe of a cleverer older man.

Booklist 44:172 Ja 1 '48

"A weird story of Australian waters; vigorous descriptions of shipboard life; occasional spice of adventure as in the contact with an iceberg on a long voyage."

+ Kirkus 15:552 O 1 '47 140w

"Here is a book that is completely masculine, from its absence of a woman character to its dramatic scenes of hardship, danger and brutality. . . But for all its hard-case realism 'The Dupe,' is a sensitive novel and rates well above the 'rattling good sea yarn' tag. . . Mr. Close's descriptions of life aboard ship are terse and vivid. He creates an atmosphere that will receive a nod of approval from any one who has served in sail." Felix Rienseng

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
N 9 '47 350w

"If a story can be said to be of a classic sort, in that kind can be put this story of a sailing ship in hard passage. . . While that's a slight plot, this is still a strong story, very well written. However, it is almost a story for the special reader rather than the one indifferent to its milieu, because the author has chosen to emphasize the details of ship handling to a degree that will probably hamper the reader unfamiliar with the subject." J. R. H. Couse

+ Sat R of Lit 30:35 N 29 '47 300w

CLOUGH, BENJAMIN CROCKER, ed. American imagination at work. 707p il $6 Knopf

398.21 Folklore, American 47-30583

A collection of "tall tales and folk tales" arranged under the headings: American background and American myth; Wonders of nature—and some others; Good yarns grow bigger; From another world: coincidence, clairvoyance, ghosts; Tall tales of America; America's men: explorers and pioneers, benefactors, demigods, supermen, myth-makers, and jokers; Hardy perennials: favorite lies, wandering "pieces," hoaxes, etc. Bibliography.

Booklist 44:10 S 1 '47

"Dr. Clough has chosen his selections with skill and discrimination; his introductory comments are both enlightening and entertaining. . . Some scholars and professional folklorists may cavil at the editor's self-confessed fondness for New England folklore, while others may object to some of his classification methods or his conclusions concerning 'oral transmission' of folk tales and tall stories. The general reader, however, should find this a collection to revel in." William Peden

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 31 '47
380w

"His collection is both extensive and well chosen. From a wide variety of printed sources, he has assembled a wide variety of story." R. M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 23 '47
650w

"Perhaps as many as 200 pieces fill this anthology—which most woefully needs an index; but which is likely just the same to become a source book for many a writer, or even to let loose the avalanche of a new literary movement: a kind of turning back to what is, after all, the leitmotiv of all our history, not vicious lying but the exuberant gasconading of great-hearted, healthy-minded men." David Marshall

CLOUGH, B. C.—Continued

+ Commonweal 46:554 S 19 '47 850w

Kirkus 15:329 Je 15 '47 100w

"Sadly lacks the critical comment necessary to trace any consecutive quality or development in the use of this material over the centuries. Less pretentious and more accurate title would be 'Anthology of Traditional American Humor.' As such, this is a most comprehensive and highly recommendable collection." E. L. Lewis
Library J 72:1102 Ag '47 120w

"Mr. Clough makes only a perfunctory pass or two at analyzing the American imagination. His prefaces and connective passages are very good in themselves, but they establish little beyond his zest in the stuff he deals with and his skill at the odd prestidigitation of the folklorist. They contain enough flats and decretals to provoke the controversies that absorb his species quite as much as folklore does. But he does not follow any inquiry very far and, though his gusto is disarming and even endearing, if you hold him to his implied premise it crumbles away. The book is not a map of the American imagination or even a triangulation, it is only a handful of map data." Bernard De Voto

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ag 24 '47 1050w

"Here is a college professor who deliberately sets out to swarm all over the front yard of expression and does so page after page. Besides his mastery of the footnote, the man is a master phrase-maker in his own right. His indulgence of the maundering, self-convicted liars of the past is real and liberal. So real and liberal, that the reader insists upon protecting and perpetuating the proved untruth, for Clough has given all of these men a sort of hobo license—their stories being known to Clough as 'emancipated' reminiscences. No man since Lincoln has used the word more neatly." Max Wyllie

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 31 '47 1100w

"The folklore student or enthusiast will practically have to have this book. But the general reader with a taste for such things will be a large part of the market too, I should think. And perhaps if this volume does well enough Professor Clough may be prevailed upon to get together a second. If I'm any guesser he must have had to leave out as much as he put in, and probably a great deal more." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 21 '47 600w

CLUGSTON, KATHARINE. Murderer in the house. 256p $2.50 Wyn

47-18545

"Pathological killer moves in on Mass. family and practically wrecks it before he is finally eliminated." Sat R of Lit

"Practically a study of hatred, culminating in intimidation, this is fairly unpleasant—improbable reading."

— Kirkus 15:45 Ja 15 '47 50w

"Unfortunately, Miss Clugston is inept at plotting, and worse than inept with her characters. Young Dr. Craven (after his casual flash of madness in the first chapter) seems a muddled Svengali thereafter. . . . For our money, there's no menace here that a straight one-two wouldn't cure; when it comes in the last chapter, your chief emotion is wonder that it didn't come long ago." C. V. T.

— N Y Times p41 Mr 2 '47 150w

"Convincing picture of warped mind turned loose in household of normal and terrified people. Nervous writing adds to impact of yarn."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 Mr 15 '47 40w

CLUNE, HENRY W. Main Street beat. 269p $2.75 Norton

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-11369

"People are Henry Clune's first, last, and only interest as a reporter and writer. He sees everything in terms of people. That's why his daily column, 'Seen and Heard,' in the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, is a Western New York institution. 'Main Street Beat' is a personal history, but Clune writes about himself chiefly in terms of the people he has met." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 44:182 Ja 15 '48

Kirkus 15:422 Ag 1 '47 170w

"As one expects of a professional, Mr. Clune writes vividly about the Rochester locale. His stories leave a pleasant, minty taste. They are resolutely innocent and cheerful, and by the same token seem curiously remote in time. Mr. Clune belongs to that newspaper generation which is not ashamed to overwrite a good thing, nor to use learned words and stilted turns of speech for comic effect." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p40 O 26 '47 470w

"It is his warm curiosity about his fellow man that has kept Clune contented to amble up and down his beloved Main Street, writing his little pieces. By staying right at home (except for one or two short-lived efforts to 'escape'), he has acquired a considerable (if parochial) fame, and a fair share of the true happiness which has eluded so many of his apparently more successful fellow-townsmen. Clune takes people as they are. He reports them, without worrying about whether they are worth while." V. S. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 N 8 '47 600w

CLYMER, ELEANOR LOWENTON (JANET BELL, pseud). Monday-Tuesday-Wednesday book; il. by Mary Stevens. [30p] $1.50 McBride

47-361

Picture-story book for the very young, describing what David does on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Wednesdays.

Reviewed by M. A. Webb

Library J 71:1807 D 15 '46 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:39 F '47

CLYMER, ELEANOR LOWENTON (JANET BELL, pseud). Trolley car family; il. by Ursula Koering. 256p $2 McKay

47-30611

When buses were installed in place of the old trolley line, Mr Parker, who had driven one of the old cars, chose not to drive a bus, and instead of a month's salary asked for the old car. And then he and his family moved the car out into the country and there they lived happily ever after.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 180:144 D '47 60w

Booklist 44:53 O 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 21 '47

50w

Kirkus 15:427 Ag 15 '47 90w

"The Parkers are an engaging lot, and their adventures are plausible and entertaining. Not a distinguished book, but one which eleven- and twelve-year-olds will enjoy." M. A. Herr
+ Library J 72:1277 S 15 '47 70w

"This is an unusually nice, folksy story of an amusing American family." Phyllis Fennor

+ N Y Times p40 N 16 '47 140w

COALE, ANSLEY J. Problem of reducing vulnerability to atomic bombs. 116p $2 Princeton Univ. press

623.45 Atomic bomb

47-30322

"This information, prepared originally for the Social science research council, covers the many problems of present and future defense, technical considerations involved, and the need for further research. Does not attempt to provide the answer, but presents the problems that must be met." Booklist

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). Maine ways; ill. by Mildred Coughlin. 213p $2.75 Macmillan

917.41 Maine—Social life and customs 47-5093

"In Boston, they have a phrase—'a Maine man,' or 'woman'—that conveys the last word in commendation. In a sheaf of short tales, Elizabeth Coatsworth takes us into the heart of the Maine countryside and its rural populace, into the drama and tragedy of their lives. . . This is not merely a compilation of folk and contemporary tales of a countryside. Strung on the gold thread of the author's own sensitiveness to human values, they give the reader glimpses, and sometimes clear vistas, of that philosophy of gentle living by which man climbs to higher realms." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by A. R. Ginsburgh
Ann Am Acad 254:182 N '47 360w
Booklist 43:326 Je 15 '47

"I found the text very well organized with discussion in logical order and with no serious faults or omissions. It is realistic. Such speculation as is used is reasonable and necessary. I should like to have seen more emphasis placed on the danger of sabotage. A few statements are quoted—e.g., excerpts from current news magazines—which may have no authority and add no scientific weight to the arguments, but most references are authoritative and the text is well documented. Although the language is nontechnical, it does require careful reading. With more care in writing, the book would be read more easily." A. H. Waitt

+ — Chem & Eng N 25:2111 J1 21 '47 320w
"The social scientists responsible for this study have shown that they are ready and willing to help in solving some of the world problems that have been unleashed by the physical scientists. They do not have all the answers, of course, but this little book will aid greatly in their better comprehension and understanding by all of us." S. D. Kirkpatrick

+ Chem Eng 54:267 J1 '47 350w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 1 '47 340w

"The book discusses methods of defense and counter-attack with a good deal of technical detail but with no claim to do much more than suggest the direction for further researches. The author bears in mind that reducing vulnerability is a second line of defense; the first line is to prevent the use of the bombs."

Christian Century 64:769 Je 18 '47 160w

Current Hist 13:35 J1 1 '47 50w

Eng N 139:135 J1 10 '47 200w

Foreign Affairs 26:220 O '47 30w

Reviewed by S. C. Lind
J Phys Chem 51:1217 S '47 370w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1028 J1 '47 60w

Reviewed by Benjamin Harrow
Nation 165:263 S 13 '47 80w

"While much of the content is of first importance, there is evidence of haste and improvisation inexcusable in so serious a study. There is, for example, not a single reference to the Atomic Energy Commission in an essay which purports at least to list the agencies of government responsible for planning the future of atomic weapons in offense or defense. I regret, also that there is no index." J. R. Newman

New Repub 116:28 My 12 '47 1550w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:27 Ap '47

"Pathology is never easy reading. The scientific account of disease is too dispassionately grim for many but the specialists. This small book, written in a clear and cool if somewhat academic style, is an account of the pathology of society. . . The study is organized in highly logical fashion, which emphasizes the likeness to pathology. . . It is too bad that the first report of the distinguished committee on the social aspects of atomic energy under whose auspices this book was prepared, should devote just six out of its 116 pages to the prevention of atomic war." Philip Morrison

+ — N Y Times p7 Je 1 '47 800w

Social Studies 38:288 O '47 30w

"The book is a careful study of this important and difficult problem. It points out a number of directions in which further study is required, and calls attention to a number of important aspects which might easily escape notice. It will be very valuable to all those who have need to go into the matter more deeply." G. F. Thomson

+ Spec 179:312 S 5 '47 1200w

Booklist 44:13 S 1 '47

"This quiet book has an importance of its own that is not unrelated to the tragedy and turmoil of the present world outlook. . . Those who know and love Maine and its beautiful shores will enjoy finding them again in this book, to be savored and contemplated at leisure." E. C. I.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 J1 22 '47 550w

"Anyone lucky enough to have been in Maine in summer will find plenty in Miss Coatsworth's book. . . If you have never been to Maine—or at least some of its states nearby—it will be much more difficult to understand the author's underlying enthusiasm. Yet anyone who loves nature or life on a small farm or people with strong individuality will find a kindred spirit in Elizabeth Coatsworth." E. S.

+ Commonweal 46:364 J1 25 '47 420w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 23:345 S '47 60w

Kirkus 15:269 My 15 '47 120w

"For a transplanted cosmopolitan Elizabeth Coatsworth has adapted herself well to the land and the people she loves, and she gives a delightful picture of the seasons, the people and the legends that make Maine the sturdy country it is. This is a book for young and old and will be read even after most other books on Maine have been read and forgotten. For all libraries." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:1029 J1 '47 80w

"No one who has read Miss Coatsworth's poems will feel any surprise at finding her a sensitive observer of her surroundings, able to set down her observations in a way that is both imaginative and gay, and often very moving. . . The author has a seeing eye for all the little dramas of nature in the world about her, and an understanding heart for its people. Through setting down on paper her interest and enjoyment in her surroundings, she has in an unassuming way contrived to preserve not a little of the native folklore of the region." Elizabeth Toms

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 3 '47 300w

"As in her previous 'Country Neighborhood, Elizabeth Coatsworth writes of a gentle series of refreshing visits with neighbors along the coast of Maine. . . 'Maine Ways' is done kindly and with some awe, but with understanding and poetic reporting. The author has deep feeling for Maine and her people—particularly the people who have been a neglected resource in official State promotion. Enjoyment of the things reported and enjoyment in the reporting are communicated to the reader." John Gould

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 10 '47 350w

"You come away from 'Maine Ways,' whether you have lived a lifetime there or are planning only a week's vacation, with a feeling of envious acquaintanceship. It is as if you had spent the day hearing Elizabeth Coatsworth tell stories about people you had just met or whom you recollect discovering in some far less intimate book." Hodding Carter

+ Sat R of Lit 30:25 S 6 '47 230w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter

Springf'd Republican p13B Ja 18 '48 190w

Wis Lib Bul 43:151 N '47

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). Plum Daffy adventure; il. by Marguerite Davis. 161p $2.25 Macmillan

47-30146

Plum Daffy was a cottage on the Cape Cod dunes where Lydia, Jean, and small Mark spent their summer vacation, with Cousin Mary who kept house. The story, which is for ages seven to twelve, is full of everyday doings of a happy summer, which ends with the children's survival of a hurricane.

Booklist 43:228 Mr 15 '47

"There's humor and friendship and the lively talk of a congenial family on every page of this story. Lifting, imaginative poems set between chapters express the feeling of exhilaration which everyone has out of doors but seldom can put into words. Finding them is like finding small opalescent shells half buried on the beach." Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 2 '47 230w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 10 '47 300w

"The Cape Cod flavor is here, well-drawn grownups and real children to make the story, with Marguerite Davis's happy drawings, ring true."

+ Horn Bk 23:110 Mr '47 90w

Kirkus 15:99 F 15 '47 90w

"Recommended for boys and girls from 8-10." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 72:392 Mr 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 11 '47 320w

"Many of the adventures are so slight as scarcely to rate the term, being indeed more mood than action, as when the children climb for the first time the tower of an abandoned lighthouse or when Mark, in his calm way, makes friends with a crippled wild goose and its mate. Yet Miss Coatsworth writes with such a keen awareness of the revelatory moment in everyday experiences that the thoughtful child must respond to the wonder and beauty of these moments. Thus the whole, while it does not measure up to the author's more substantial stories, is greater than the sum of its parts." E. L. B.

N Y Times p30 Mr 23 '47 150w

"The background of sea and sky and sand-dunes and Cape Cod people is drawn with a humorous and understanding pen. Between the chapters—for good measure—are enchanting little poems. This is a very good book for the younger boys and girls."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:43 Mr 8 '47 90w

Spring'd Union p12 Ag 26 '47 120w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). Up hill and down; il. by James H. Davis. 188p $2.50 Knopf

47-31436

Ten short stories, all realistic, for children of ten to twelve. Most of them are modern, but several have "period" backgrounds.

"Ten very satisfying stories about real children in real and interesting situations. Girls will like them especially. The illustrations could be better, but the stories are good enough to surmount that inadequacy." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 166:237 D '47 100w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:442 N '47 30w

"Delicate little adventures of rather winsome children. . . All rather earnest and doleful little dears who surely go to heaven having worked so hard below. Somehow, one doesn't expect this plaintive note from Elizabeth Coatsworth, who has done better things, with more substance."

Kirkus 15:548 O 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by E. A. Groves
Library J 72:1618 N 15 '47 60w

"The friendship and understanding between a child and an adult, especially an old person, give charm to a number of Elizabeth Coatsworth's stories. . . Her awareness of the viewpoint of an 8- or 10-year-old, and the smooth musical flow of her words, prove her again the expert story-teller." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p47 N 30 '47 110w

"Simple short stories about poor but honest, industrious, and kind American youngsters, which make the point that virtue is rewarded." R. C. Benét

+ New Yorker 23:152 D 6 '47 60w

"The wording is so skilful and so rhythmic that they will be perfect stories to read aloud. The illustrations are delicate pen drawings in black-and-white."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:48 N 15 '47 40w

COBLENTZ, CATHERINE (CATE) (MRS W. W. COBLENTZ). Martin and Abraham Lincoln; based on a true incident; pictures by Trientja. [24p] $1 Children's press

Lincoln, Abraham—Juvenile literature 47-4516

Story of a brave small boy living near Washington during the Civil war. When his father was taken prisoner Martin tried hard to help his mother, but there were limits to what a little boy could do in wartime. Then one day in Washington he met Abraham Lincoln and some pressing problems were solved. Based on a true incident.

"Written for the 5 to 8 year-olds, but anyone will feel warmer of heart for the reading." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week O 18 '47 110w

"Recommended." Anne Izard
+ Library J 72:1473 O 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 N 16 '47 320w

"A simple, touching story. . . For its glimpse, albeit familiar, of Lincoln's sympathetic quality, and even more for its presentation of Snowden, the instinctively generous vegetable man, without once labeling his race or color, 'Martin and Abraham Lincoln' deserves praise." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p43 O 26 '47 110w

COCHRAN, GIFFORD ALEXANDER, and HOFFMAN, FRANCIS BURRALL. Grandeur in Tennessee; classical revival architecture in a pioneer state. 132p il $15 Augustin

720.9768 Architecture—Tennessee 47-944

"Records the development of architectural style in Tennessee from the pioneer seventeenth-eighties to the Civil War. More than forty representative houses, only three of which date prior to 1800, are presented in one hundred illustrations, twenty plans, and twenty measured drawings. Accompanying the illustrations are descriptions and some historical data. In a brief text, the historical background of the state and the stylistic evolution of its architecture are outlined." U S Quarterly BkI

"Though no one but a trained architect can appreciate to the fullest the many measured drawings, anyone can enjoy the dozens of superb photographs. A feast for both lovers of Southern history and fans of American architecture, the book is worth every penny of its impressive price." Wayne Andrews

+ Commonweal 45:550 Mr 14 '47 300w

"A welcome addition to the roster of state and regional books."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 3:225 S '47 280w

COCHRAN, HAMILTON. Rogue's holiday. 297p $2.75 Bobbs

47-2098

Tale of adventure on shore and on the sea in the early years of the eighteenth century. The hero is a lieutenant in the British navy; the heroine is a beautiful American girl. One of the adventures revolves around the famous pirate Edward Teach, known as Blackbeard, who is killed by the hero. The story begins in England and ends in Carolina.

Booklist 43:272 My 1 '47
Kirkus 15:76 F 1 '47 170w

"Hamilton Cochran belongs to the florid school of romance and derring-do and all of 'Rogue's Holiday' is written with a flourish. The style suits the action, a rowdy recital of treachery, abduction, combat and courtship." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
Mr 30 '47 180w

"Afloat or ashore, this is a blood-quicken- ing tale for those who in this day of Diesel engines on the sea and jet-planes overhead will never see the sunlight gleam from tall white sails or hear the stirring cry of 'Out cutlasses and board!' " H. B.

N Y Times p14 Ap 20 '47 280w

COFFIN, ROBERT PETER TRISTRAM. Yankee coast; written and il. by [the au- thor]; abetted by Peggy Coffin. 333p $4 Mac- millan 917.41 Maine—Description and travel.

Maine—Social life and customs 47-4980

"Essays by a native poet on the coastal re- gion of Maine, which he holds in deep affec- tion as 'the rock ribs of democracy.' With a poet's appreciation he describes the country, the foods brought in by hunter and fisherman, the houses which express the Maine character and the people who live in them. Coffin's con- servatism is more exactly an antiquarian love for the survival of old time ways of living which resist standardization." Library J

Booklist 44:13 S 1 '47

"One cannot describe Mr. Coffin's book about coastal Maine without falling (or rising) into an enthusiasm bordering upon burbling in- coherence. . . His Maine is the real Maine with its real people. The only reason his book does not move one to pack up and go there im- mediately is that it gives one to feel how impos- sible it would be to find admission to his Maine unless one could somehow arrange to have about three generations of Maine-born ancestors and so come to that coast not by train or automobile from the outside world but by lineal descent."

+ Christian Century 64:1082 S 10 '47 210w
Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 15 '47 600w

"Coastal Maine is indeed a subject for a man with a gift for narrative and poetic fire; Mr. Coffin has more than done it justice." E. S. Skillin

+ Commonweal 46:387 Ag 1 '47 800w
Kirkus 15:253 My 1 '47 90w

"An informative book on the peculiar identity of Maine, a little hard on the rest of the U.S.A., but worthy of library attention. References to artists and writers who have lived in Maine are of special interest." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:1029 J1 '47 120w

"Now comes the dean of Maine natives, shall we say, to write in his mature years about the life he grew up in, the life he has thought about since childhood, the life he has consist- ently celebrated in prose and poetry. It is a fine piece of work, full of personal crotchets and angles, as a Maine work should be, brim- ming over with the zest of living and the love of human nature. . . I think I have never read a book that touched the significance of the Maine coast more clearly or deeply, yet there are items in it all along which will cause the initiated to smile." Lincoln Colcord

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ag 3 '47 850w

Reviewed by John Gould

N Y Times p6 Ag 10 '47 350w

"Here is a complete refutation that Maine is merely a land of 'tourist and 'taters.'" Here is Maine at its royal, scintillating best, entering somewhat late the competition with all the other storied regions of the world." Owen Brewster

+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 S 6 '47 230w
Springfd Republican p18A O 12 '47 190w
Wis Lib Bul 43:151 N '47

COFFIN, TRISTRAM. Missouri compromise. 315p $3 Little

973.918 U.S.—Politics and government—
1945-. Truman, Harry S. 47-2859

A study of the first twenty months of Tru- man's presidency. In it the author shows the slow but steady disintegration of New Deal policies under the influence of post-war reac- tions. The heroes of the study are men like Henry Wallace and Chester Bowles; the vil- lains the right-wingers like John Snyder and Robert Taft. His views of President Truman's blunders are candidly expressed; but his idea is that the extreme conservatives are far more reprehensible.

Booklist 43:306 Je 1 '47

Canadian Forum 27:140 S '47 600w

Reviewed by Serrell Hillman

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 15 '47 270w

Foreign Affairs 26:224 O '47 20w

Kirkus 15:206 Ap 1 '47 180w

"Style is highly readable and anecdotal, the material fresh and interesting. Roosevelt and Wallace adherents will be delighted at the deft portrayal of Truman's difficulty with Congress, his ignorance and bumbling, his wide-eyed re- spect for army rank; supporters of his present doctrine or New Deal opponents will be equally enraged. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 72:729 My 1 '47 130w

"Mr. Coffin, a radio broadcaster by profes- sion, is a lively and colorful writer. He has the trick of describing a statesman in half a dozen lines with such photographic accuracy that the reader feels that he would recognize the man on the street. He can picture a scene—a meeting in a committee room, Wash- ington in the spring or under a winter rain, a session of the House of Representatives—with extraordinary realism. The result is a book that holds the reader's attention from end to end. The author writes of heavy matters with a light touch; it is a serious book, extremely serious, yet it is the easiest sort of reading." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 My 4 '47 1550w

"His topical account of Washington under the Truman Administration, while it lacks profundity, is informative, lively and, if you are inclined to take him literally, dismaying. . . Mr. Coffin's best talents, and they are consid- erable, are displayed in the chapters dealing with Congressional committee hearings. By an excellent choice of setting, color and dialogue he has managed to make these normally dull proceedings come dramatically alive without either over-doing it or sacrificing accuracy. 'Missouri Compromise' is good, light reading which will reward those with a little more than average curiosity about national affairs." Cabell Phillips

+ N Y Times p6 My 25 '47 750w

Reviewed by W. A. P. White

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Je 8 '47 330w

"The book is pure journalism, in its finest sense. It is dynamic, vivid, enlightened, and courageous reporting of a quality and charac- ter that every honest reporter dreams of being able to do and very few are allowed to do on their papers or on the air. . . One of the most distinctive features of the book is Coffin's skill in pictorializing the settings of the many scenes in which his characters move. This gives the reader a feel and close-up of the Washington arena that contributes much not only to the pleasure of reading the book but to the understanding of the dismal tale it re- lates." R. S. Allen

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 My 10 '47 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 43:115 J1 '47

COGAN, SISTER MARY DE PAUL. Sisters of Maryknoll, through troubled waters. 220p $2.50 Scribner

266.2 Foreign mission sisters of St Dominic 47-2046

Record of the wartime sufferings of these Catholic missionary sisters in wartime Asia. The account is informal, and is based on diaries, personal experience, and letters. Index.

"For many people the book will be a wonderful tonic; it will renew their faith in the goodness and grandeur of human nature, and thus it will make them hopeful and optimistic about the future. Far from being a depressing book, Sisters of Maryknoll shows us the glory in tragedy, and the exaltation of the human spirit in the hour of defeat." J. A. Farrell
+ Cath World 165:282 Je '47 320w

"A skillful, thoroughly professional job. . . Sister Mary De Paul is excellent not only as a compiler but also as a stylist. Some of her passages have elements of beauty and at all times she writes with a blend of rhythm and restraint too rare in this confusing day of journalistic literature and literary journalism. . . Remarkably free of Catholic doctrinal reference, Sister Mary De Paul's book is readily understandable to the readers who are not of her faith and at the same time it does convey the Catholic spirit that motivates the missionary nun." J. O. Supple
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Ja 26 '47 210w

"One might wish that the material contained in this volume might have been placed in the hands of a skilled publicist [who] could have made a much more vivid story out of it. But as it is, we have a sincere and honest testimony to the kind of service rendered by the sisters."

Kirkus 15:64 F 1 '47 170w

"The gaiety with which hardship is taken and tossed away, the sense of vocation which gives the book its strongest impetus, keep it from being painful in spite of all its details and make it indeed as happy a book as one is likely to get from this region."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 Mr 9 '47 360w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 20 '47 120w

COHEN, MORTIMER JOSEPH, ed. See Bible. Old Testament. Selections. Pathways through the Bible

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. Don't ever love me. 209p $2.50 Macmillan
Detective story.

Kirkus 15:202 Ap 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p55 D 7 '47 140w

"Guess who, if you can. It will not be easy. The plot is too well constructed for that." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p34 My 25 '47 160w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 25 '47 70w

"O. K."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:46 Je 21 '47 50w

COHEN, SAM D. One hundred true crime stories; with an introd. by Lewis J. Valentine. 433p $1.49 World pub.

364 Crime and criminals 47-1802

One hundred brief stories of crime, each based on an actual case.

"A hundred bloody little capsules tight with terse adjectives but wanting almost entirely any of the concern with character which makes this sort of account absorbing." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 D 29 '46 100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Ja 26 '47 180w

"True crime narration in the short-short length doesn't leave much room for literary grace or psychological nuances; but Mr. Cohen can pack a lot of story into 1500 words, and most of his cases (which range from San Francisco to Soviet Russia) are interesting and unhackneyed." Anthony Boucher
+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 22 '46 50w

"Bare-bones treatment of most cases, and their understandable sameness, point book more toward researcher than general reader. Adequate reference book."

Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ja 18 '47 50w

COHN, DAVID LEWIS. This is the story; il. by Steinberg. 563p $3.50 Houghton

940.548173 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. Voyages around the world 47-1227

"This book is a personal record. It has to do with a journey that I made in 1944-45 to Great Britain, France, Belgium, Corsica, Italy, Egypt, Palestine, Iraq, Iran, India, Burma, China. . . I have set down my impressions of things heard, seen, and felt; of persons and places; of the American soldier dispersed around the world fighting, dying, playing, working, talking. I have tried to indicate something of the nature of the peoples among whom he moved; what he thought of them and what they thought of him." Foreword

"A book that is copious, farsighted, and at its best, prophetic." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 179:130 F '47 460w

Booklist 43:202 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:11 My '47

Reviewed by J. J. Weinstein
Chicago Sun Book Week p2 F 16 '47 450w

Current Hist 12:371 Ap '47 60w

Foreign Affairs 26:223 O '47 30w

Kirkus 14:567 N 1 '46 210w

"Though somewhat desultory and uneven, a useful and entertaining book." H. W. Hart
+ Library J 72:73 Ja 1 '47 90w

"This practice is to be recommended to all American tourists of the future, even though they write nothing more about it than a few messages on postcards. For, if we are to be worthy of the unsought position of top dog in this wrangling world, the more Americans learn about the woes and worries and workaday handicaps of other peoples the better for all concerned." Edward Angly

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 F 2 '47 950w

"Despite the sorrow, bitterness and bravery of the picture it unfolds, the book's distinguishing characteristic is its charm. Mr. Cohn not only writes with a light touch, but he faces the world agreeably. He is, in the old-fashioned meaning of the word, a gentleman, and what he has written is a gentlemanly volume, a kind of 'Around the World With Walking Stick and Bowler Hat.'" Ira Wolfert

+ N Y Times p3 F 2 '47 500w

"A philosophical, anecdotal, and pretty consistently entertaining record. . . Except that it follows the author's itinerary, the book is put together with hardly any attempt at connected narrative; though ostensibly about the war, it frequently gives the impression of being a series of digressions from the subject, with, perhaps, the merest trace of stuffiness."

+ New Yorker 23:98 F 22 '47 160w

Reviewed by A. D. K. Doughty
San Francisco Chronicle p29 Je 8 '47 170w

"It is unfortunate that 'This Is the Story' will be listed as another book by another war correspondent. Actually it defies classification. It is more Cohn than correspondent, more encyclopedia than exposition—and it is wonderful reading." Ronald Schiller

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 F 1 '47 900w

Wis Lib Bul 43:66 Ap '47

COKER, ROBERT ERVIN, ed. Research and regional welfare; papers presented at a conference on research at Chapel Hill, May 9-11, 1945. 229p il $3 Univ. of N.C. press

304 Research

"The papers deal especially with actual or proposed research in the South in the following fields: health, humanities and social sciences, physical sciences and industry, and biological sciences. Two papers (Craven, 'History and Social Reconstruction,' and Lillenthal, 'The Moral Responsibility of Research') deal with the social functions of research." Am J Soc

"The addresses assembled represent distinguished leaders from the Far West, the Middle States, the Northeastern and the Southeastern Regions." R. F. Harris

Am J Pub Health 36:1448 D '46 420w

Am J Soc 52:380 Ja '47 60w

"Research and Regional Welfare is a report of a conference and not an integrated treatise. No amount of editorial effort could make a continuous logical presentation from a number of papers prepared individually for oral delivery, and the editor has wisely refrained from the attempt. The papers are presented as they were delivered without eliminating the rhetoric of introductory remarks and the inevitable duplications of illustration and emphasis. Thus the reader catches some of the spirit of the occasion even though all the stimulation and intellectual ferment which pervaded the meetings cannot be reproduced on paper." E. W. Williams

Social Forces 25:358 Mr '47 470w

COKER, ROBERT ERVIN. This great and wide sea. 325p il $5 Univ. of N.C. press

551.46 Ocean 47-30257

A survey of modern knowledge about the ocean. Includes chapters on the history of the study and knowledge of oceanography, on relations of sea and land, on the chemistry and physics of sea water, ocean currents, and various forms of life in the sea. Index.

Booklist 43:285 My 15 '47

"Coker has spent most of his life in the study of the sea in various parts of the world. For some years he directed the division of scientific inquiry of the U.S. Bureau of Fisheries. He writes clearly and unpretentiously, with a constant lively sense of the meaning and value of his materials. There is no over-dramatization or cheapening popularization in this book, but a steady, straightforward presentation of the facts, which most readers will find highly acceptable." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ap 27 '47 380w

"Dr. Coker has produced an authentic account of what oceanography is all about. It will serve as a long-needed reference-book on the subject for introductory college courses—but, as a continued story of the sea, it is such a fascinating yarn even the casual reader will want to travel through from cover to cover." H. B. N.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 23 '47 450w

"Coker deals largely with well known facts, but his handling is in the main fresh and as lively as the subject matter well permits." R. C. Murphy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S 7 '47 700w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:54 Jl '47

COLCORD, JOANNA CARVER. Your community; its provision for health, education, safety, and welfare; rev. by Donald S. Howard. 3d ed 263p $1.50 Russell Sage

309.1 Social surveys. Community life. Charity organization. Social work 47-2216

"Revised to accord with new emphasis on social problems, particularly in the fields of housing, medicine, consumer protection, and public assistance." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

Reviewed by M. P. Connolly

Am J Pub Health 37:932 Jl '47 180w

Booklist 43:258 Ap 15 '47

Christian Century 64:528 Ap 23 '47 60w

Social Studies 38:192 Ap '47 20w

"The book fills a place in the literature of social work that is unique. While it was prepared primarily for students and nonprofessional readers, it should be upon the reference shelf of every minister, social worker, teacher, club leader, and all other persons whose activities place them in leadership in their home communities. Perhaps it should be given as a graduating present to every college student along with his diploma. Although the book accomplishes its expressed purpose, it might properly include a section which would discuss in equally lucid fashion the procedures by which social improvements can be brought about." T. L. Swander

Survey 83:213 Jl '47 600w

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD, and POSTGATE, RAYMOND WILLIAM. British people, 1746-1946 [Eng title: Common people, 1746-1946]. rev & enl ed 600p $5 Knopf

330.942 Great Britain—Economic conditions. Great Britain—History. Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain. Middle classes

47-30073

New edition of a work first published in 1938 (Book Review Digest 1939) with the title: The British Common People, 1746-1938. A new chapter has been added on the war years, 1939 to 1946. Bibliography. Index.

"A more accurate title would have been 'Radical movements among the British working classes.' Within this narrow frame the book has a great value, which is hardly lessened by the definitely socialistic slant of the authors. Though their leftist sympathies are frank and undisguised, they are kept balanced and philosophic by sound scholarship, broad interests, culture, kindness, and humor, very much as in the similar writings of Bertrand Russell. Almost the only place where they show acerbity is in criticizing the too feeble leadership of the official trades unions and the Labour party which led, they believe, to a needless surrender in the general strike of 1926, and, again, in the formation of the national government in 1931. In remoter historical periods the history shows admirable candor. . . . Factually, the book is highly accurate, though there are inevitably a few misprints and some careless phrases." Preston Slosson

+ Am Hist R 52:778 Jl '47 330w

Booklist 43:188 F 15 '47

"The book is rich in scenic detail—accounts of events more or less on the order of fiasco in their time, but influential in the general democratic cause."

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 5 '47 220w

Foreign Affairs 26:230 O '47 20w

Kirkus 15:21 Ja 1 '47 90w

"The new edition is illustrated with more maps and charts than the old, and the bibliography has been very considerably enlarged. Comparison of the two texts, however, shows that revisions are quite minor up to the last section, which deals with the years immediately preceding the invasion of Poland in 1939. This has been extensively rewritten so as to give greater attention to trends which, from the vantage point of 1946, seem more significant than they did eight years ago." Keith Hutchison

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 9 '47 900w

"Here is an immensely informative, solidly useful, and richly statistical economic history of a country that has made great social strides during two centuries." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 Mr 29 '47 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p208 My 3 '47 850w

COLEMAN, LONNIE. See Coleman, W. L.

COLEMAN, WILLIAM LAURENCE. Time moving west, by Lonnie Coleman. 248p $3 Dutton

47-11057

Novel based on the lives of the crew and officers of a troop transport, which makes the trip between Oran and the Italian beachheads during World war II.

"A quiet, but telling overall of a ship and her men, this is effective, but probably not sufficiently so to overcome public apathy to books about the war. (Public Libraries may find it strong meat)."

Kirkus 15:346 J1 1 '47 160w

"Much of the reporting is done with a sensitive ear for the true speech and slang, but some of it is done without taste, and all is slightly lacking in direction. . . It doesn't come off." Fredrick Brantley

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30
D 7 '47 180w

Reviewed by George Bartter

N Y Times p24 Ja 11 '48 360w

"The only question is whether the experience itself needs further annotation at this level today. I am afraid that, in spite of the book's technical excellence, most readers will decide that it is not needed; that the questions asked here have been answered—perhaps not to the best interests of civilization, but so thoroughly answered that they need be posed no more." Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 31:16 Ja 24 '48 330w

"Even for those who think they may be sated with war stories, this is one more that can be read with profit if only for the enjoyment of one of the best contemporary talents for dramatic fiction. It is not precisely a 'war story' but rather an excellently done study of character during a time of stress, and one of the best of this year's novels." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p10B N 23 '47
150w

COLES, MANNING, pseud. of ADELAIDE FRANCES OKE MANNING and CYRIL HENRY COLES. Let the tiger die. 224p $2 Doubleday

47-11520

"The imperturbable Tommy Hambledon is at it again. This time his adventures start in Stockholm, whence he proceeds by water to Rotterdam, thence to France, Spain and the Canary Islands. Sometimes he is pursued, sometimes pursuing, and always he is in danger of arrest or worse." N Y Times

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week N 14 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:517 S 15 '47 70w

New Repub 117:28 N 24 '47 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29
N 9 '47 130w

"Lest you fear that this book is too gory for your taste, we hasten to add that there is plenty of laughter along with the slaughter." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p53 N 16 '47 200w

"Exciting in a loose-jointed way."

New Yorker 23:135 N 8 '47 70w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 30 '47
100w

"Top brackets."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 29 '47 50w

COLES, MANNING, pseud. of ADELAIDE FRANCES OKE MANNING and CYRIL HENRY COLES. With intent to deceive [Eng title: Brother for Hugh]. 282p $2 Doubleday

47-2026

"The jocose Tommy Hambledon, of the British Intelligence, collaborates with Scotland Yard in investigating the theft of some funds secreted in South America by the Nazis and brought to England by the thieves. Several murders, complicated by a case of assumed identity, keep Hambledon and his friends on their toes up to the last, explanatory minute." New Yorker

Booklist 44:73 O 15 '47

Bookmark 8:16 My '47

"It is as improbable as Coles' stories usually are and a trifle heavy with its exertion. Hambledon himself takes relatively little part in the action, although he is often present as an amused onlooker while the unhappily baffled Inspector Bagshott strives to cope with sundry sets of rivals." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 9 '47
90w

"One has no doubt that the bored millionaire enjoyed every minute of it and so should the Coles fans. It's as terrific as a really good game of hide and seek." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21
Mr 9 '47 240w

"There is very little mystery about the story, but there is plenty of action of the sort that Tommy Hambledon saw as a secret agent during the war. Tommy is not the most interesting figure in the book, however. That distinction belongs to James Hyde, who undergoes a metamorphosis from a dull creature of routine into a man who lives dangerously and likes it." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 Mr 9 '47 190w

"Fairly satisfactory, if you still hanker for spy stories."

+ New Yorker 23:104 Mr 8 '47 80w

"Far from the best Coles (Tommy Hambledon plays a passive role, and the awkward structure involves telling most events twice over), but still a nice exercise in good-humored implausibility." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 30 '47
100w

"Expert thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 Mr 15 '47 50w

COLLIER, JOHN. Indians of the Americas. 326p il $3.75 Norton

970.1 Indians

47-12014

The story of the Indians of the western hemisphere from prehistoric times to the present. The author was United States commissioner of Indian affairs from 1933 to 1945, and part of his sympathetic study of Indians is devoted to his own works. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:169 Ja 1 '48

"Mr. Collier, in his history, has brought no especially new facts to light, but he has done much to illuminate Indian character by exploring the relation of the individual to the tribe." M. M.

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 13 '47
700w

"Mr. Collier as a sociologist has a proclivity to technical verbiage; as an anthropologist, he sees no need for Christian missionaries; but his heart is with his Indian friend. It might give a new and refreshing twist to our 'West-erns' if they were occasionally projected from the Indian viewpoint." E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 47:331 Ja 9 '48 1000w

Kirkus 15:460 Ag 15 '47 90w

"The first half of Collier's book, treating of the Indian societies of Latin America, is—despite an occasional uneasy corrective—a one-sided and not particularly valuable culling of quotations to bolster his thesis, now from primary, now from secondary sources. But the second half, treating of the North American Indian, makes the book worth every reader's while. To this he has brought his firsthand knowledge, his sympathy and insight into tribal organization, and a much more complete familiarity with the total literature on the subject." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Ja 25 '48 2000w

School & Society 66:462 D 13 '47 20w

"Unfortunately Mr. Collier has been writing a history with one hand and grinding an ax with the other, the ax being his belief that the Indian community life of yesterday and today could well be adapted for national and even world use." R. F. H.

Springf'd Republican p10B N 23 '47
300w

COLLINS, FREDERICK LEWIS. Money town; the story of Manhattan toe; that golden mile which lies between the Battery and the fields. 327p il $5 Putnam

974.71 New York (city)—History 46-8328

Story of the growth and expansion of lower Manhattan from the Dutch West India company's settlement of New Amsterdam to the Wall Street crash of 1929. Illustrated with old prints. Index.

Kirkus 14:321 J1 1 '46 170w

"The part of the book that deals with big finance in Wall Street is diverting but superficial; the rest is better. Well and variously illustrated."

+ New Yorker 22:128 N 23 '46 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 20 '47
120w

COLLINS, MRS. MARY (GARDEN). Death warmed over. 213p $2.50 Scribner

Detective story. 47-2395

Kirkus 15:112 F 15 '47 70w

"Good dialogue and suspense." E. H.

+ New Repub 116:35 Ap 14 '47 50w

"Miss Collins writes an easy, sensible prose with a sharp edge running from forthright to funny and she never spares the sober brain-work in any department." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p42
My 11 '47 270w

"The author has given us a set of very odd characters and has enmeshed them in a mystery which is not easily unraveled." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p36 Mr 30 '47 180w

"Neatly planned, if a bit long-winded."

New Yorker 23:108 Ap 5 '47 90w

"Vigorous character-humor and excellent evocation of atmospheric detail." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 30 '47
100w

COLLINS, NORMAN. Dulcimer street [Eng title: London belongs to me]. 637p $3 Duell 47-30035

A long novel about the lives of a group of middle-class English people, living at 10 Dulcimer street in London. The time covered is from Christmas, 1938 to Christmas, 1940. During those two years each person is traced thru good days and bad. The Jossers, Mrs Vizzard's most important tenants, take the center of the stage, but all the others share in the limelight.

Reviewed by John Cournos

Atlantic 179:143 Mr '47 360w

Booklist 43:170 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:14 Mr '47

"World events from 1938 to 1941 find these Londoners as they are; they become neither pitiful nor really heroic; they remain of very human stature, even if not wholly three-dimensional. This is much more than 'summer reading,' and from glimpses here and there one might expect Mr. Collins' intuitions and a sort of shut-mouthed irony at which he excels to take him far deeper next time. Unfortunately this is his eighth novel and the 'Good Companions' mold may be too deeply set." Dorothy Fraser

Canadian Forum 26:118 Ag '46 420w

Cath World 165:381 J1 '47 200w

Reviewed by Helen Woodward

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Ja 26 '47
270w

"This is a book that can be read at leisure. The author's way is to look in at one apartment after another, pick up the story of the occupants almost in definite rotation, bind the bright with the dark, carry the characters along up-to-date, and weave the threads of their lives together as a part of the vast substance of London. The reader finds himself getting a real affection for many of these persons—especially for Mr. Josses as he trudges along, liking to work and liking to be helpful even at his own expense, and finally getting his cottage in the suburbs. The appeal of 'Dulcimer Street' is both to head and to heart, by a blend of irony and good will." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 22 '47
550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '47

"A comfortable, relaxed narrative that lives with its characters."

Kirkus 14:559 N 1 '46 170w

"This book has charity; these if none exceeds lifeseize, are 1939-40 Dickensian people, with whom, touched by pitying comedy, is a Nazi spy. This is a London-lover's spacious survey of Kennington's London." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 2 '45 300w

"I was continuously interested throughout its six hundred-odd pages and at the end had come to feel that its size was justified by the effect achieved. And all this in spite rather than because of its Grand Hotel story-pattern, which has been worked to death by writers hoping to add cubits to their stature by assiduous paper consumption." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Ja 19 '47 850w

"Miss Collins' story is a piece of social portraiture—which must not be taken to mean that he has painted many portraits and forgotten to tell a story. He has abundant narrative power and abundant matter in which to display it. As the old advertisement used to say, 'every picture tells a story,' and all Mr. Collins' pictures create their own story. . . Mr. Churchill connected the adjectives 'grim' and 'gay' in one of his great wartime speeches, and perhaps it is now a cliché to repeat those two alliterative monosyllables. But 'Dulcimer Street' makes their repetition inevitable. It is summed up in the now famous phrase. Grim and gay we must set it down—both as a street of South London and as a piece of unflinching narration." Ivor Brown

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 12 '47 1450w

"A sound, old-fashioned novel, so like those that were popular family reading three or four decades ago that, despite references to the blitz and other recent phenomena, it is hard to believe that Mr. Collins is not an authentic Edwardian romancer. . . The book is nearly twice as long as it should be and is not too incisive, but it is nevertheless a pleasing, lively narrative, hard to lay down once you get into it. It will probably be equally hard to remember a few months from now."

+ New Yorker 22:84 Ja 11 '47 150w

"Since Mr. Collins is a leisurely writer and generously fills one volume with enough first-rate plots for a dozen novels, the book is necessarily a long one, and a certain amount of skipping from character to character and scene to scene is inevitable. But his quaint and wordy way of weaving the many characters of the story into his overall theme is apt to pall on the reader who is anxious to get on with an exceptionally good story." Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 16 '47
400w

"Mr. Collins has apparently had too good a time recording Dulcimer Street to stay out of it himself. And this is in the tradition too: not the detached and objective artist, but the sentimental and often sententious journalist, molding his material possessively and con amore. It is as this kind of warm, personal, popular (of the people), Dickensian document, that 'Dulcimer Street' will be welcomed by its many readers in this country." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 F 8 '47 700w

COLLINS, NORMAN—Continued

"Readers with a fondness for archery will find that Mr. Collins hits the bull's-eye ninety-nine times out of every hundred shots." John Hampson

+ Spec 175:524 N 30 '45 320w

Time 49:108 Ja 20 '47 380w

"A vast pantechnicon of a novel . . . composed with unflinching comic gusto and good sense. Handsome things in plenty might be said of its several parts, but of the novel as a whole it must needs be said that it is too protracted and shapeless, rather too conspicuously fluent also, to attain that effect of heightened veracity which is, or should be, the goal of naturalistic comedy such as [the author] attempts. In brief, the discipline of the novelist's craft—the 'treatment,' as the term ordinarily goes, of the theme—is here too obviously relaxed. Lively and amusing reading though the book is, shrewd and humane even in its exaggerated fun, it wears an air of improvisation that no novel of this length can really afford."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p521 N 3 '45 500w

"This is a sprawling, formless, diffuse, and unselective book. Its central content of interest is dissipated among nine major characters and scores of minor ones. Nevertheless, a great deal of it is extremely entertaining, lively, humorous, and, in many respects, well done. If only it had been drastically edited!" Orville Prescott

— + Yale R n s 36:574 spring '47 280w

COLLIS, MAURICE. Foreign mud. 300p il maps $5 Knopf

951.036 China—History. Opium trade

47-31165

"Being an account of the opium imbroglio at Canton in the 1830's and the Anglo-Chinese war that followed." (Subtitle) Index.

Reviewed by W. F. Morse

Chicago Sun Book Week O 29 '47 260w

"There's considerable color here, in the amused portrayal of Oriental formalities, of British public decorum and private skulduggery, a quiet irony and wit which lend a certain character to a very minor contretemps, of only conjectural contemporary interest."

+ Kirkus 15:460 Ag 15 '47 150w

"This is a wholly admirable book, admirable as a work of history and admirable as a literary entertainment; in fact the best book of a most admirable writer." A. J. P. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 3 '47 300w

"Mr. Collis writes a lovely luminous prose, so that whether his material be of a Venetian voluptuousness or Rembrandtian gloom, his pictures have the formal clarity of a Canaletto and the softly glowing surface of a Vermeer. Nor is the style merely imposed upon the material. As if long years in the Far East had given the Anglo-Irishman an exquisite appreciation of good manners, there is in all he writes a delicate suggestion of ceremonial."

Ralph Bates

+ Nation 165:388 O 11 '47 410w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 117:29 O 6 '47 140w

Reviewed by John Morris

New Statesman & Nation 33:99 F 1 '47 1050w

"This book of Mr. Collis's is the first readable sketch of a situation, in which there were issues of much greater importance than opium, that is at the same time wholly fair. It is illustrated with black and white reproductions of 20-odd very interesting contemporary paintings." Rodney Gilbert

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 28 '47 1350w

"This book is no dry recounting of history, but an entertaining, readable book about a subject over which in the past there has been too often a veil of silence." Carl Glick

+ N Y Times p48 N 9 '47 750w

Reviewed by Hamilton Basso

New Yorker 23:120 O 11 '47 100w

Reviewed by E. Tainton

San Francisco Chronicle p17 D 21 '47 400w

"His treatment is at once attractive and competent—except for the pidgin English, which is decidedly amateurish. But that does not matter much." E. M. Gull

+ Spec 178:186 F 7 '47 750w

"This diverting account will be read with equal enjoyment by Chinese and by Englishmen; for it tells in the most human and familiar terms a story that has been greatly distorted by less accomplished writers. It is not true that the Opium Wars were fought to force a noxious drug upon a reluctant people any more than it is true to assert that they were fought to protect British lives and property from an intolerable menace. The circumstances can only be understood by sifting contemporary evidence, the result of which, as Mr. Collis claims, is to reveal little malice, little cause for moralizing, but a great deal of humanity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p125 Mr 22 '47 900w

COLLIS, MAURICE. Quest of Sita. See Valmiki

COLTER, ELI. Cheer for the dead. 213p $2.50 Mill

Detective story. 47-16955

Kirkus 14:609 D 1 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Mr 2 '47 90w

"Solution comes by elimination, and surprise ending seems rather unfair, but the story's readable."

San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 9 '47 70w

"Motive aplenty—8,000,000 bucks and missing heir; determined and well-hidden killer; commendable detecting and sufficient suspense."

Sat R of Lit 30:30 F 22 '47 40w

COLUM, MARY GUNNING (MAGUIRE) (MRS PADRAIC COLUM). Life and the dream [memories of a literary life in Europe and America]. 466p $3.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-30184

Memories of the Irish-born writer and critic, Mary Colum, who is the wife of the poet and playwright Padraic Colum. She writes of her early years in Ireland during the flourishing days of the Abbey Theatre; her life in the artistic circles of London; her acquaintance with James Joyce in Paris; and lastly of her years in America. Index.

"The descriptive backgrounds sometimes have the sensuous tang of scenes from Proust. Yet cities and salons are not all; passages like those dealing with the tinkers of the Irish countryside (the memory of George Borrow is here unavoidable) or with the grandeurs of the Hawaiian volcano are unforgettable. Amid the cliques and claques of the literary windmills, Mrs. Colum brandishes no lance. Her remarks on literary works are as sound and impersonal in these pages as in her volume of criticism, From These Roots. Her writers stand out in the clear light of good common sense." Robert Hillyer

+ Atlantic 179:159 Ap '47 500w

Booklist 43:240 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by Theodore Maynard

+ Cath World 165:182 My '47 750w

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 23 '47 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '47

"Life and the Dream" abounds in interesting character portraits and penetrating criticism. For the most part it is sympathetic, for it is written mostly about her friends, but at times she can be sharp and rather bitter. Although Mrs. Colum has lived a long time in the United States, she shows little understanding of American problems and not always of American aspirations. . . Mrs. Colum herself says that she does not know much about politics, and this is evident in her book and will probably be the basis of some adverse criticism, especially from critics of the left. Her book is also perhaps too long, and would have been improved by more severe editing, for it contains duplications. On the whole, however, it is a good job, well done and well worth reading by anyone who is interested in an understanding of the literature of our day." Neil MacNeil

+ — Commonweal 46:41 Ap 25 '47 450w
Kirkus 14:569 N 1 '46 170w

"Mary Colum writes with energy, sometimes wit, and always warmth. . . Recommended for discriminating readers." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:456 Mr 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by Ruthven Todd
Nation 164:551 My 10 '47 650w

New Repub 116:35 My 5 '47 150w

"Everywhere there is point and force, a considerable amount of prejudice, a good deal more of reason and justice. To most Americans Mary Colum will seem incorrigibly Irish, but the Irish make up one of the valuable elements in the total American culture, and this is the best chronicle I know of an individual Irish contribution to the intellectual life of America." Carl Van Doren

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Mr 23 '47 1800w

"The opening chapter, in which Mrs. Colum describes her girlhood in northwest Ireland and her recollection of boarding school years in an Irish convent and in Germany, are probably the most sensitively written of the whole book. Yet perhaps it is as much the spirit of these memoirs as their material that gives them such interest, color and vitality." J. J. Sweeney

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 23 '47 1100w

"A story with a great deal of humor but with not a trace of ill-nature, and a document on her period in Ireland which will, I believe, take its place among the classics of that period's literary history, and which, though it comes belatedly, really belongs to the 'creative' output of that literature itself. I have read 'Life and the Dream' with fascination and something like wonder. It is not great literature like the memoirs of Yeats, nor is Mrs. Colum so accomplished, as she is not so professional, a writer as George Moore in 'Hail and Farewell.' Her writing is sometimes careless: her sentences are not always well handled, and she seems to betray haste by a habit, incongruous in a book which is otherwise so compact, of repeating the same statement in almost the same words in the space of a few pages. . . But she has got into 'Life and the Dream,' as George Moore was unable or did not want to do, the nobility and the fire of the movement, and her pictures of its personalities have more both of humanity and of dignity." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 23:109 Mr 22 '47 1450w

"To have supremely the twin gifts of criticism and enthusiasm is a rare thing; and it is her possession of them which makes Mrs. Colum's autobiography one of the loveliest and most exciting books of recollection I have read. She has other virtues, too, not common in literary reminiscences—a good observant eye for the salient qualities in people, a natural kindness, a lack of egotism and vanity and when a fight is on, a spirit of fairness, and an appreciation of the stand and the skill of the opponent." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 Mr 22 '47 1300w

Reviewed by James Stephens
Spec 179:534 O 24 '47 650w

Time 49:105 Mr 31 '47 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p678 D 27 '47
850w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:146 Je '47 240w

"Vigor not grace is the virtue of Mrs. Colum's writing. Her style is commendably natural: she writes with her eye on the thought, not on the phrase, and in most cases this focus takes proper care of the expression. Not in all, however. Her title itself, for example, is not a clear phrase, for surely the dream is not distinct from, but part of, life. She is not a wit, but a woman of strong intellect, and some of the writing in this book would argue that she has little sense of humor, little faculty to see herself [clearly]. Be that as it may, her autobiography is a book rich in both conscious and unconscious revelation." Horace Reynolds

+ — Yale R n s 37:181 autumn '47 850w

COLUMBIA dictionary of modern European literature; Horatio Smith, general editor. 899p $10 Columbia univ. press

803 Literature—Dictionaries, indexes, etc.
47-30147

"A dictionary of modern European authors with articles on the recent literature of the various countries. The signed entries include biographical and critical summaries and bibliographies. Thirty-one countries and 1200 writers are represented; does not include the British isles. Convenient for reference use, although literary critics may disagree about the authors chosen and the opinions of their work expressed here." Booklist

Am Hist R 52:538 Ap '47 100w

Booklist 43:220 Mr 15 '47

"In every case the critic has read in the original language the author whose books he evaluates and he has not relied upon previously published critical material. This has produced a freshness of approach that makes the 'Dictionary' uniquely valuable as a reference work."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 30 '47
160w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 2
'47 210w

Reviewed by C. G. Paulding

Commonweal 46:101 My 9 '47 450w

"This is a must reference book for all libraries, public and college libraries, and for well-tooled private libraries also. . . Issues of nationalism . . . are treated objectively but sympathetically. The list of contributors bears witness to the breadth of vision—the scope of scholarship which have gone into this indispensable reference tool."

+ Kirkus 15:85 F 1 '47 150w

Reviewed by D. W. Alden

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23
My 13 '47 1200w

Reviewed by Harry Levin

N Y Times p4 F 23 '47 1200w

Reviewed by Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 30:14 Mr 29 '47 1550w

School & Society 65:269 Ap 12 '47 20w

"Some names which one might expect to find are omitted from the Columbia Dictionary. There seems to be an overemphasis throughout on poetry. It may be a trend within this period which needs to be highlighted, but it has developed an unbalanced picture. For instance, in the articles on Hungarian and Portuguese literature, poetry is given more attention than other literary forms. These were the most pronounced examples noted, but in checking the list of authors and the type of literature each represented, poetry predominates. An exhaustive index as well as a very complete cross-reference system would have added to the book's usefulness. . . The make-up of the book is good, the print small but clear, two columns to the page. If the entries were in larger type they would stand out more clearly on a page. . . It is to be hoped that when a new edition is published it will incorporate some of these changes. The omissions, however, are relatively minor in relation to the amount of useful, authoritative information presented in concise, though scholarly, form. The Columbia Dictionary of Modern European Literature is recommended."

COLUMBIA dictionary—Continued

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 18:28 J1 '47 850w

Theatre Arts 31:82 O '47 110w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:216 Je '47 300w

COLUMBIA encyclopedia; Clarke F. Ansley, editor-in-chief. 1949p $19.50 with supplement; supplement 64p; also sold separately, pa $2 Columbia univ. press

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries

"Except for the addition of the 64-page Supplement, the 1946 edition of the Columbia Encyclopedia is, according to the publishers, identical with the original edition. That volume was reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, October 1935. The present review covers only the current Supplement. The Supplement intends to record 'important events from the spring of 1935 through February 28, 1946.' . . . A comparison with the 1942 supplement reveals that careful revision has been carried out and many new articles added. Changes have been made within articles to bring them up to date, e.g., Aden; and others have been expanded and new headings assigned, e.g., Air Warfare, which includes pertinent material from the 1942 article on airpower. Some older material has been omitted, e.g., Aguirre Cerda, Pedro and Helium. The entry for Ickes includes his resignation from the Cabinet in February 1946." Subscription Bks Bul

"The Supplement adds materially to the value of the original volume, and the Columbia Encyclopedia, 1946 edition is recommended for those who do not have the original edition. Libraries having older printings of the Encyclopedia may wish to purchase the Supplement separately."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:1 Ja '47 500w

COLVIN, FRED HERBERT. 60 years with men and machines; an autobiography, by Fred H. Colvin in collaboration with D. J. Duffin. (Whitlessey house publication) 297p il $3.50 McGraw

B or 92 Machine tools 47-3762

Intended first as "a detailed, definitive history of machine tools and their relation to the development of modern mass production in industry," this book in its final form is a mixture of such a history in popular form plus personal anecdotes, sketches of interesting people the author has known, and autobiography. The author is editor emeritus of American Machinist.

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 J1 27 '47 140w

Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 5 '47 420w

Kirkus 15:148 Mr 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:641 Ap 15 '47 50w

Management R 36:501 S '47 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:27 Ap '47

"Quite disregarding the anecdotal and technical attractions of Mr. Colvin's life-story, the book is distinctly pleasing and heartening to read because every line reinforces the impression that Mr. Colvin is both a good man and an American to the core." E. B. G.
+ N Y Times p28 J1 27 '47 500w

COLWELL, ERNEST CADMAN. Approach to the teaching of Jesus. 128p $1.25 Abingdon-Cokesbury

232.9 Jesus Christ—Teaching 47-6524

The Quillian lectures for 1946, delivered at Emory university. The book is a "partial" treatment of the teachings of Jesus, and is designed primarily for Protestant religious workers. "My desire in writing has been to make the reality that I have seen in the historic Jesus vividly present today. With this in mind I have included little scholarly baggage." (p.6) Bibliography. Indexes.

"These Quillian Lectures are provocative and original." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 161:17 N 15 '47 150w

"Without repeating the familiar facts or judgments about Jesus and the gospels the author calls attention to some less familiar ideas which he feels that he can add to the common body of scholarly opinion. With delightful freshness he selects and collects a few features of Jesus' teaching that he has come to recognize for himself. How much better it is to do so than to scatter them in the voluminous pages of a more comprehensive treatise." H. J. Cadbury

+ Crozer Q 25:88 Ja '48 400w

School & Society 66:271 O 4 '47 10w

COLWELL, MIRIAM. Day of the trumpet. 280p $2.50 Random house

47-1207

Novel of life in a Maine coast village, from 1873 to 1888. Two boys, Justin Sand, and his Negro companion Hiram, grow up in the village—Justin determined to make money at all costs; Hiram good natured and loyal all the way. Justin's success brings with it a sense of bitterness when Hiram loses his savings and dies in a storm.

"Here is a novel that is both historical and regional without sacrificing the validity of its characters to concern with time and place." Mary Pinchot

+ Atlantic 180:128 S '47 300w

Booklist 44:16 S 1 '47

Reviewed by S. K. Workman

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 15 '47

250w

"Miss Colwell is fortunate in having already acquired a distinctive style. She tells her story in brief scenes, mostly by conversation, selecting only what suits her purpose, and reproducing the Maine vernacular with exceptional skill. Crisp and economical though her style is, it conveys not only character, but the special quality of the Maine coast in every season. Maine and its people have often been written about, but here is a fresh approach to the subject." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 J1 26 '47 480w

"It is kaleidoscopic, colorful, and colloquial, but in need of direction. A near miss." Kirkus 15:198 Ap 1 '47 150w

"The background of sea and forest, of little people struggling with harsh circumstances, commands your sympathy and interest; author's use of local idiom, experience and thinking gives tang and flavor to the story. Recommended." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 72:886 Je 1 '47 100w

"A distinctive feature of the book is the Maine talk, with laconic cadences and a salty and highly individual phraseology. As unremitting as Justin himself in excluding sentimentality or mere convention, Miss Colwell gives you a clear sense of knowing a time, a place and an individual." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Je 15 '47 360w

COLYTON, HENRY JOHN, pseud. See Zimmerman, S.

COMFORT, MILDRED HOUGHTON. Treasure on the Johnny Smoker; il. by James MacDonald. 219p $2.50 Morrow

47-31078

Sequel to Winter on the Johnny Smoker (Book Review Digest 1943). It is a story of fur trading and freight carrying on the upper Mississippi in the 1870's. There is a mystery, too, about a stolen fur cache.

Booklist 44:93 N 1 '47

"Recommended as background material."

+ Kirkus 15:467 S 1 '47 80w

"Good picture of everyday life in a happy pioneer family, with enough adventure to interest the young reader. Recommended." Margaret Ward

+ Library J 72:1277 S 15 '47 70w

"As a sequel, this is thoroughly satisfying."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 S 6 '47 140w

Springf'd Republican p18A O 12 '47 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:135 O '47

COMMAGER, HENRY STEELE, ed. America in perspective; the United States through foreign eyes. 389p $4 Random house

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. National characteristics, American '47-6240

"From Crèvecoeur to Buchan, Brogan and Vinde, this presents a comprehensive, though necessarily selective reflection of the United States in the eyes of foreign visitors—a reflection emphasizing our role as the land of the continuing experiment and inevitably committed to change." (Library J) Bibliography.

Booklist 44:182 Ja 15 '48

Reviewed by Ralph Habas

Chicago Sun Book Week p5X Ja 4 '48 470w

"These essays reveal, as Mr. Commager points out, that, while America has changed much in the last hundred years, the American has changed little. Americans are crystallizing into a nationality, and this admirable collection of essays throws much light on the process." R. M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 20 '47 950w

Kirkus 15:495 S 1 '47 170w

"Especially timely and useful in this, one of our self-conscious periods when some support and many discern tendencies opposite to what has seemed our fundamental direction. The selections presenting basic conclusions rather than general descriptions are completely tied together by an incisive introduction and illuminating notes. Essential in most collections." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:1536 N 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by George Soule

New Repub 117:28 D 1 '47 210w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ja 11 '48 270w

Reviewed by A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

N Y Times p7 N 30 '47 1050w

"I admire and esteem Professor Commager, but this book is a little too cozy to be historically sound. None of his selections pictures the dirt and brutality that travelers saw—not only on the frontier. No selection, so far as I now recall, hints at gouging parties, lynchings, scalping, murders, and the general brutal violence of half-civilized communities such as Mark Twain knew. . . . As Hardy said long ago, you have to look at the worst if you want to look at the best, and I sadly confess that Professor Commager's job in this volume is just a little more superficial than I want so honest and forthright an historian to be." H. M. Jones

Sat R of Lit 30:11 D 20 '47 800w

School & Society 67:47 Ja 17 '47 30w

COMMINS, SAXE, and LINSKOTT, ROBERT NEWTON, eds. World's great thinkers. 4v ea $2.50 Random house

108.2 Philosophy—Collections 47-30896

The set contains representative selections from nearly 50 great thinkers. "The first volume, 'Man and Spirit: The Speculative Philosophers,' treats of the relationship of man to the world beyond reality; the second volume, 'Man and Man: The Social philosophers,' deals with ethics; the third volume, 'Man and the State: The Political Philosophers,' covers the field of political theory, and the fourth volume, 'Man and the Universe: The Philosophers of Science,' concerns man's relation to the physical universe. Among the great thinkers represented are Hobbes, Locke, Marx, Darwin, Freud, Einstein, Aristotle, Marcus Aurelius, Dewey, Spinoza, Pascal and Hume." (San Francisco Chronicle)

Reviewed by J. R. Newman

New Repub 117:27 N 24 '47 360w

"This set of books, both because of its wealth of material and more importantly because of the discerning principle which underlies the presentation of that material, will surely constitute a valuable addition to any library, personal or otherwise, and merits sincere recognition as an editorial and publishing enterprise well executed." Robert Caponigri

+ N Y Times p12 O 12 '47 1100w

"This set should be a valuable addition to any library." A. Foff

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 9 '47 200w

COMMISSION ON FREEDOM OF THE PRESS.

American radio; a report on the broadcasting industry in the United States [prepared by] Llewellyn White. 259p $3.25 Univ. of Chicago press

384.5 Radio broadcasting 47-19380

"A frank appraisal of the present condition of the radio industry and a suggested program of action which broadcasters, government, and the public should consider." (School & Society) No index.

"Students of public opinion will find no revolutionary recommendations in this report. Nevertheless, it should be on the reading list for every course in public opinion. It is a tremendously valuable source of information, and if the recommendations were put into effect the consequences might be positively revolutionary." E. A. Helms

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1010 O '47 550w

Reviewed by A. M. Lee

Am Soc R 12:487 Ag '47 200w

Reviewed by K. G. Bartlett

Ann Am Acad 254:174 N '47 360w

Booklist 43:303 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by D. J. Heffernan

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 My 18 '47 470w

"This is an authentic, thoughtful, fact-packed book. It will probably make the broadcasters howl as did the publishers and the motion picture producers when the previous commission studies dealing with those fields were published—and because of that fact it is even more worth serious consideration." Margaret Frakes

+ Christian Century 64:1049 S 3 '47 420w

Current Hist 13:35 Jl '47 40w

"Excellent survey of broadcasting, tracing the development as a means of mass communication and analyzing the present status of the radio." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:893 Je 1 '47 70w

"It is a useful if not inspired handbook. The writing is rather uneven because it is apparent that the author has never quite decided—nor does the format make clear—whether he was speaking ex cathedra for the commission or only for himself. This is not to say that the book is inhibited or restrained in tone. . . . Mr. White is at his best in his criticisms of broadcast programs—it is obvious that he put in many long and grueling hours of night work beside his receiver—and he goes to the heart of radio's worst program abuses." J. H. Spingarn

+ Nation 165:260 S 13 '47 1150w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Je 1 '47 600w

School & Society 65:286 Ap 19 '47 30w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 66:250 S 27 '47 90w

"Probably the entire history of radio has never been investigated so thoroughly and presented with such uncensored candor. The result is not always entertaining—Llewellyn

COMMISSION ON FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

—Continued

White writes the careful, qualified prose one finds in a physics textbook—but it is certainly worth several evenings of concentrated reading." Michael Bruno

Theatre Arts 31:73 Ag '47 110w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:297 S '47 280w

COMMISSION ON FREEDOM OF THE PRESS.

Free and responsible press; a general report on mass communication: newspapers, radio, motion pictures, magazines and books with a foreword by Robert M. Hutchins. 139p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

070 Liberty of the press

47-1785

"Interpreting 'press' as inclusive of all major agencies of mass communication, this special report of the Commission sets our present requirements of mass communication, reviews the 'communications revolution' based on new instruments (F.M., facsimile, television, etc.) and growing concentration of media into fewer hands, examines performance of various media and finds performance far short of requirements. Sees a solution in and pleads for self regulation and discipline on part of the press and discards government regulation as a sure road to restrictions on freedom of expression." Library J

Reviewed by H. J. Morgenthau

Am J Soc 53:225 N '47 650w

"The Commission's failure to define clearly the respective roles of government and private enterprise is one of the principal shortcomings of the report." H. L. Childs

Am Pol Sci R 41:559 Je '47 1350w

Reviewed by A. M. Lee

Am Soc R 12:486 Ag '47 750w

Reviewed by William Albright

Ann Am Acad 253:242 S '47 800w

Reviewed by L. M. Lyons

Atlantic 179:148 Ap '47 2300w

Reviewed by L. M. Lyons

Atlantic 180:115 Jl '47 1800w

Booklist 43:236 Ap 1 '47

"So marked is its timeliness and so pervasive and so critical are the issues it treats that self-interest alone would make this book mandatory reading for every thoughtful citizen of the nation." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Mr 30 '47 1000w

"An important study which would have been even more useful if it had confined itself to the press itself rather than spreading out to movies and radio as well."

Commonweal 46:69 My 2 '47 40w

Current Hist 12:501 My '47 110w

"Of direct professional interest to librarians." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:456 Mr 15 '47 150w

Reviewed by A. J. Liebling

Nation 164:427 Ap 12 '47 1100w

New Repub 116:33 Mr 31 '47 900w

"There is little that is new in all this, little in the analysis that cannot be found in Ernst's 'First Freedom,' little in the interpretation and recommendations that cannot be found in the series of articles that 'The Atlantic' published in 1944. What is valuable is that these familiar criticisms and recommendations now come with force and dignity from a group whose impartiality, learning and respectability are beyond challenge." H. S. Commager

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 My 4 '47 1000w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p1 Mr 30 '47 1800w

"An interesting document, but without much wallop."

New Yorker 23:98 Ap 26 '47 140w

"Most of the Commission's recommendations are sound. Some of the 'reforms' suggested are already in effect and others partially so. One feels a disappointment, perhaps unreasonable, that the Commission was not able to propose something more constructive or helpful. The proposal that an independent commission, privately endowed, make an annual report sounds too much like a plea for the continuation of the casual inquiries of the authors of this book. On the other hand, the endowment of a research body, under the direction of competent students of the press who would devote their full time to the work, might lend powerful help to needed reforms." F. L. Mott

Pol Sci Q 62:441 S '47 1400w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 13 '47 350w

Reviewed by Kenneth Stewart

Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ap 5 '47 3100w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 66:249 S 27 '47 330w

Reviewed by Wilson Harris

Spec 179:502 O 17 '47 650w

Springf'd Union p5 Jl 8 '47 250w

Reviewed by Henry Christman

Survey G 36:358 Je '47 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p532 O 18

'47 1450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:182 Je '47 280w

COMMISSION ON FREEDOM OF THE PRESS.

Freedom of the movies; a report on self-regulation [by Ruth A. Inglis]. 241p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

323.446 Moving pictures—Censorship. Motion picture production code 47-30119

"A study of the development and operation of the American motion picture industry's self-regulation of subject, treatment, and taboos in films. Continued self-regulation is recommended, rather than censorship from without, but the matter of regulating the material to be kept out is recognized as a smaller problem than that of raising the quality of motion pictures and making them a more vital means of mass communication." Booklist

Reviewed by R. D. MacCann

Am Pol Sci R 41:609 Je '47 450w

Reviewed by E. C. Jandy

Am Soc R 12:363 Je '47 500w

"This little book, concise in form but broad and discerning in its presentation, is one of the best serious studies of the social aspects of the motion picture industry." R. H. Abrams

+ Ann Am Acad 250:133 Mr '47 360w

Booklist 43:201 Mr 1 '47

"Thorough and objective as it is, the report nevertheless will leave many readers feeling that we are all back again where we started from, with the problem of the Movies laid again in the public lap." Joseph McSorley

Cath World 165:470 Ag '47 470w

"With such questions becoming more vital every day, with the issue coming to be a concern of the public at large, even with those who do not go regularly to the movies, this book is invaluable as background information. Its discussion of the Hays (now Johnston) office is the most objective and frank (particularly in connection with that agency's relation to groups whose support it has solicited and then betrayed) that I have yet seen. As history, it is a valuable reference book. One of its most significant sections is that on the desirability of a more objective and constructive criticism of movies, a criticism which, aside from that in the New York press, scarcely exists in this country today." Margaret Frakes

+ Christian Century 64:305 Mr 5 '47 700w

Current Hist 12:501 My '47 70w

"Miss Inglis thinks it presumptuous or superfluous to take sides, so she has written a book that is competent, but dull." D. T. Bazelon

+ Nation 165:148 Ag 9 '47 600w

Reviewed by Robert Shaw

New Repub 116:34 Mr 31 '47 430w

"Miss Inglis fairly and concisely examines the American motion-picture industry and especially its self-protective mechanism, the so-called 'Hays Production Code'; she clearly and objectively sets forth the repressive tendencies of each, and she makes several practical suggestions for letting fresh air into both." Bosley Crowther

+ N Y Times p20 F 23 '47 600w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 13 '47 160w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 66:250 S 27 '47 90w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:183 Je '47 320w

COMMISSION ON FREEDOM OF THE PRESS. Freedom of the press; a framework of principle, by William Ernest Hocking. 243p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

323.445 Liberty of the press 47-4572

"Another in the series of reports from the Commission on Freedom of the Press. Professor Hocking re-examines the foundations of this freedom, presents several challenging questions which involve its abuse and develops a framework of principles which includes moral responsibility." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Belle Zeller

Ann Am Acad 253:243 S '47 550w

Booklist 44:5 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Robert Lasch

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 JI 27 '47 550w

"Although it follows them as to publication date, this study could profitably precede on one's reading list the other reports so far issued by the Commission on Freedom of the Press. Whereas those reports have discussed specific applications of the principle of freedom of speech to present-day fields of communication—newspapers, radio, motion pictures—Professor Hocking's book goes to the heart of the matter by examining the philosophical nature of that freedom as implied in the Bill of Rights and as demonstrated in historical situations. It is compact reading requiring the utmost in concentration." Margaret Frakes

+ Christian Century 64:1335 N 5 '47 460w

Current Hist 13:357 D '47 70w

Library J 72:1035 JI '47 50w

"It seems to me that Mr. Hocking was doomed to defeat from the beginning because he has assumed an impossible task. He has tried to erect a framework of principle to support what is essentially a matter of expediency. . . In sum, his is a brilliantly powerful and illuminating discussion of freedom of the press; the only objection is that it is irrelevant to the main point." G. W. Johnson
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 3 '47 1200w

"It seems to this reviewer that Professor Hocking walks dangerously close to a limitation of press freedom in the supposed but deceptive interests of greater responsibility. This is, at least, the nub of the question, and it is the nub that this reviewer would like to extract from a discussion that will certainly prove too subtle for the mass reader. . . It seems to this reviewer that what Professor Hocking has lost confidence in is not the press but the public." R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p6 JI 20 '47 1550w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p16 JI 20 '47 600w

Reviewed by M. R. Konvitz

Sat R of Lit 30:41 O 4 '47 750w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 66:249 S 27 '47 330w

COMMITTEE FOR THE STUDY OF RECENT IMMIGRATION FROM EUROPE. Refugees in America; report of the Committee, by Maurice R. Davie with the collaboration of Sarah W. Cohn [and others; sponsored by the American Christian committee for refugees and others]. 453p il $4.50 Harper

940.53159 U.S.—Emigration and immigration. Refugees, U.S.—Foreign population 47-2565

"This objective and impartial survey was made to find out whether the recent wave of immigration made up for the most part of refugees from political and racial persecution in Europe has been an asset or a liability to this country. Information was gathered by questionnaire. The report is comprehensive and scholarly and should prove valuable as a basis for further study." Booklist

Reviewed by Ernest Manheim

Am J Soc 53:231 N '47 800w

Booklist 43:287 My 15 '47

"A book which, if read, will refute most of the malicious misconceptions which have arisen. Of particular value in organizational fields."

+ Kirkus 15:27 Ja 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by W. J. Gold

Nation 164:777 Je 28 '47 1350w

Reviewed by Alfred Werner

N Y Times p10 Ag 17 '47 650w

Reviewed by H. P. Fairchild

Sat R of Lit 30:16 My 24 '47 2700w

Discussion by M. R. Davie and Alvin Johnson

Sat R of Lit 30:23 JI 5 '47 450w

Reviewed by G. B. Johnson

Social Forces 26:109 O '47 650w

Reviewed by W. S. Bernard

Survey G 36:451 Ag '47 600w

Wis Lib Bul 43:113 JI '47

CONANT, JAMES BRYANT. On understanding science; an historical approach. 145p il $2 Yale univ. press

507 Science—Study and teaching. Science—History 47-3334

"Series of lectures delivered at Yale University in which Conant examines the problem of how to give the non-scientific scholar a better understanding of pure or basic science. He maintains that a careful study of the history of the development of science is the best possible approach. On the basis of such study he proposes that courses covering this field—showing the relationship between science and society—be seriously contemplated by our educators." Library J

Reviewed by H. R. Crane

Ann Am Acad 253:246 S '47 370w

Booklist 44:6 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 166:185 N '47 300w

"The book provides a stimulating contribution to the difficult problem of how science can best be assimilated into the cultural pattern and deserves to be read widely by teachers and laymen alike." E. A. Braude

+ Chem & Eng N 25:2320 Ag 11 '47 300w

"The book is well worth reading by all persons who are concerned with the problem of educating both college students and citizens in general to a more correct understanding of the workings of science." Harrison Brown

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 1 '47 600w

Reviewed by H. B. Nichols

Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 6 '47 600w

Current Hist 12:584 Je '47 20w

"The President of Harvard University, a noted scientist himself, offers a provocative and stimulating challenge to the teachers of college science in this series of lectures delivered at Yale."

+ Kirkus 15:118 F 15 '47 160w

"Excellent book for the serious reader and the student of science." W. A. Kalenich

+ Library J 72:635 Ap 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:891 Je 1 '47 40w

Reviewed by Benjamin Harrow

Nation 165:169 Ag 16 '47 750w

Reviewed by J. R. Newman

New Repub 116:26 Je 9 '47 950w

"Dr. Conant's analysis of this teaching problem is masterly and valuable in countering the glib pronouncements on science that pass as understanding. His students would—and do—

CONANT, J. B.—Continued
learn how to think. He will give real impetus to the study of the history of science. But these lectures are addressed to the teachers of teachers and can but slowly affect our secular cultural pattern or the assimilation of science by the broad general public." Gerald Wendt
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
My 4 '47 330w

"It is impossible to do justice here to the many well-fitted pieces of President Conant's tale. It is a worthy advance from the social and historical estimates of science, especially those by British writers like Bernal, Haldane and Crowther. For the independent work of a New England chemist, it is remarkably in the spirit of theirs; and its forthright but thoughtful manner is wholly convincing, as a guide for layman and expert alike." Philip Morrison
+ N Y Times p4 Ap 27 '47 1200w

"Dr. Conant has set forth his arguments in a clear suggestive, and convincing way, and he expresses what certainly has been in the mind of many scientists when they pondered on educational problems. All those who recognize the desirability of leading the layman as fast as possible to the heart of scientific method and development will read this book to their joy and their advantage." H. A. Kramers
+ Sat R of Lit 30:18 Je 7 '47 1000w

School & Society 65:286 Ap 19 '47 30w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:310 S '47 240w

Reviewed by E. W. Sinnott
Yale R n s 37:146 autumn '47 1150w

CONARROE, LEWIS H. Off my sea chest. 283p $2.75 Holt

359.12 U.S. Navy—Sea life 47-3243

Personal narrative of a young advertising man who served three years with the navy.

Booklist 44:4 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Clinton Textor
Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 15 '47
500w

Kirkus 15:150 Mr 1 '47 120w

"Many of us heard ex-servicemen griping about the red tape, confusion, graft, brass, injustice, and all the rest of it time and again, but here it is in print. Some of it sounds unbelievable as the tale unfolds in a breezy and hilarious manner and the individual reader will have to make his own decisions as to the validity of the incidents." W. A. Kallenich
Library J 72:885 Je 1 '47 70w

"A former lieutenant commander of the Naval Reserve has written That Book—the book so many reservists must have sworn they would write some day. 'Off My Sea Chest' is a long, hot, murderously amusing complaint against the armed services, particularly the Navy. It is the Definite Gripe." Herman Wouk
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Je 15 '47 600w

"Those who served in the Navy, especially former enlisted men, will laugh themselves weak over Mr. Conarroe's vitriolics. As for all others, supposing they ever pictured the Navy exclusively in terms of kamikaze attacks, Navy Crosses and the deifs of Admiral Halsey, reading Mr. Conarroe will give them a liberal education. His writing—as satire must be to be effective—is very sharp and clear and neatly timed. . . Mr. Conarroe's debunking, however, is not without flaws. His facts are indisputable, but sometimes his emphasis does not ring quite true." E. B. Garside
+ N Y Times p14 Jl 27 '47 800w

"Though Conarroe's book is one huge gripe, it is an extremely good little book if taken in small doses." Larry Laughlin
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 13 '47
500w

"This book lends comparison to Thomas Heggen's widely acclaimed 'Mr. Roberts.' From the point of telling an amusing story, 'Off My Sea Chest' holds its own. But Mr. Heggen was content to tell his story and leave the moral interpretation to the reader. Mr. Conarroe, on the other hand, overstates his case, editorializing on situations which speak very well for themselves. Mr. Conarroe's case against the Navy might have been more effective had he followed Mr. Heggen's example. The author has plenty to get off his sea chest. And despite his vitriolic outbursts, he has written a highly readable, often hilarious first book." R. A. Low

+ Sat R of Lit 30:39 Je 21 '47 600w

CONDOIDE, MIKHAIL VLADIMIR. Russian-American trade; a study of the Soviet foreign-trade monopoly. 160p $2.50 Ohio state univ. Bur. of business research, College of commerce & administration, Columbus 10, Ohio

382 Russia—Commerce—U.S. U.S.—Commerce—Russia. Russia—Commercial policy. A46-5609

"To student and businessman this small volume seeks to give an understanding of the place that foreign trade occupies in the Soviet economic system. The author outlines in simple terms the methods employed by the USSR in doing business with the outside world, in determining what to export and import, and in operating its foreign-trade monopoly. Essentially the book is a clear and objective report on Russian-American trade relations during the past three decades, and on trade prospects for the future. The history of Russian foreign-trade developments is based on a considerable number of books, pamphlets, and periodicals which are listed in an appendix. The analysis of trade statistics uses twenty-seven comprehensive tables instead of the usual detail of text." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

"On the grounds that Soviet planning aims at a self-sufficient economy, the author rejects two prevalent ideas respecting Soviet trade: first, that Russia offers a vast market for American goods, and secondly, that her goods will displace American products in the world markets. . . He argues further that, without credit, Russian-American trade will be impeded and its volume will remain as insignificant in the total trade of each country as it has been historically. This is sound economics, but it fails to make clear that the underlying determinants in American-Soviet trade relations are the political aspirations of the two nations. Indeed, the weakness of Mr. Condoide's thesis is his failure to weigh adequately the influences of Soviet diplomacy on past and future trade policies." Martin Kriesberg
+ Am Pol Sci R 40:1220 D '46 450w

"The great merit of this study is the brevity and the clarity with which the author presents his material. One will search long to find a better brief description of the Soviet economic system, although it should be noted that no attempt is made to deal with some topics such as collective farms or trade unions." E. C. Helmreich
+ Ann Am Acad 251:193 My '47 450w

Foreign Affairs 25:523 Ap '47 20w

Reviewed by J. D. Coppock
J Pol Econ 55:367 Ag '47 450w

"The book is well balanced, concise, and objective. It carries a note of admonition both for the optimist who sees only 'golden opportunities' ahead in Soviet-American trade, and for the person whose ideological prejudices blind him to the economic gains made under the Soviet system."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:300 D '46 180w

CONDON, ALBERT EDWIN. We called it music; a generation of jazz; narration by Thomas Sugrue. 341p il $3 Holt

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Jazz music 47-31496

Autobiography of a jazz band leader with interpolated chapters on the historical background of jazz—in New Orleans, Chicago and New York—by Thomas Sugrue.

Booklist 44:85 N 1 '47

Reviewed by Ralph Habas
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 O 19 '47
550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47
Kirkus 15:455 Ag 15 '47 220w

"Not only for 'hep-cats,' but will entertain all observers of the American scene." George Hanson

+ Library J 72:1472 O 15 '47 170w

"All jazz writers are arrogant toward others. . . . Fortunately, Mr. Sugrue is largely concerned with the excellent reproduction of the sound of Eddie Condon's reminiscences, and since Eddie has been all over jazz . . . the result is a stout piece of Americana. . . . Simply as a document, the book will delight the jazz enthusiast." Wilder Hobson

Nation 165:565 N 22 '47 850w

"Condon is an artist and a zealot, but he is also a worker and an organizer. His tale is worth reading." John Lardner

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
O 19 '47 750w

Reviewed by John O'Hara
N Y Times p6 N 2 '47 1100w

"Mr. Condon's fast-running and often funny memoirs, which make up the largest and best part of the book, pretty much cover the story of the jazz movement during the past twenty years."

+ New Yorker 23:134 O 25 '47 60w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle
San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 19 '47
1050w

"The story of 'Mr. Jazz,' as Condon has been called on a number of occasions, should make a valuable addition to the chronicles of American music. It does, up to a point, but only up to a point . . . when Condon takes his banjo to Iowa, and later to Chicago and New York, he sounds just a little like a cracked phonograph record." R. B. Gehman

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:28 Ja 24 '48 600w

CONFERENCE ON JEWISH RELATIONS.
Essays on antisemitism; ed. by Koppel S. Pinson; with a foreword by Salo W. Baron. 2d ed rev & enl 269p $2.50 Jewish social studies

296 Jews—Political and social conditions
47-2114

"These essays were originally published in 1942 [Book Review Digest 1942], but most of them have been revised and a highly illuminating article on France by Hannah Arendt, a study of modern German anti-Semitism by Waldemar Gurian, and one on the postwar world by the editor, have been added." Survey G

Reviewed by Henry Reiff
Am Pol Sci R 41:605 Je '47 380w
Am Soc R 12:737 D '47 250w
Booklist 44:36 S 15 '47

"This collection of essays is not very pleasant reading. It will bring tears to the Jewish eye because of the tragic stories it contains and it should cause the sincere Christian to weep for the crimes committed in the name of his faith. It should be in the hands of every Christian minister and should be read by every educator, social worker and statesman, to say nothing of the general public." M. G. Cohen

Canadian Forum 27:118 Ag '47 210w

"This collection of essays, taken together, constitutes the most intelligent, the most dispassionate, the most complete study of the natural history of anti-Semitism that I have ever seen." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 64:625 My 14 '47
1100w

"One finishes reading the essays with a feeling of depression. They are like the case study of a sick man who has no hope of ever being well again, and for whom the doctors themselves have no hope. There is a short chapter on defenses against anti-Semitism, but like the rest of the book it is written without enthusiasm." S. V. McCasland

Crozer Q 24:358 O '47 800w

Reviewed by Irving Babow
San Francisco p22 O 19 '47 650w

Reviewed by E. A. Trotter
Survey G 36:407 J1 '47 700w

CONFERENCE ON SCIENCE, PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION IN THEIR RELATION TO THE DEMOCRATIC WAY OF LIFE, 6th, NEW YORK, 1947. Approaches to group understanding; sixth symposium; ed. by Lyman Bryson [and others]. 858p $5 Harper

301.152 Groups (sociology). Education

"Seventy educators thoroughly explore group life and the contributions which the disciplines of science, philosophy and religion do make or might make to building bridges for understanding in the broadest sense. While papers vary in width and depth of penetration, the whole achieves an encyclopaedic stature, making this volume an essential study for all group workers, not excluding librarians." Library J

Reviewed by Henry Janzen
Am Pol Sci R 41:1027 O '47 550w
Booklist 43:356 J1 15 '47

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 64:1145 S 24 '47 800w

"Unfortunately almost no attention is paid to the socio-sociological aspects of understanding, a real defect, otherwise imposing, marshallng." R. E. Kingery

+ — Library J 72:957 Je 15 '47 110w

"The symposium reveals a wholesome shift of emphasis from sermonizing to a more pragmatic consideration of how bigotry and discrimination hurt our entire society—hater as well as hated, the apathetic bystander as well as the active participant. There is some excellent material on what can be done in intercultural education to promote group understanding."

While the volume contains valuable source material and aims at a synthesis of the thinking of many fields, it touches only lightly upon two significant phases in group relations. One is the political and economic use of intolerance, as developed to a fine art by the Nazis. . . . The other side of the coin is the spread of organizations working for better human relations, and the increasingly widening acceptance of the work being done by groups such as councils for civic unity, the National Conference of Christians and Jews, the Antidefamation League and many others."

Irving Babow
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 10 '47
600w

Reviewed by M. F. Ashley Montagu
Sat R of Lit 30:21 S 27 '47 1150w
School & Society 66:15 J1 5 '47 30w

CONFERENCE ON SCIENCE, PHILOSOPHY, AND RELIGION IN THEIR RELATION TO THE DEMOCRATIC WAY OF LIFE. 7TH, NEW YORK, 1947. Conflicts of power in modern culture; seventh symposium; ed. by Lyman Bryson [and others]. 703p $6.50 Harper

901 Civilization

"Papers prepared for the Seventh Conference on Science, Philosophy and Religion in Their Relation to the Democratic Way of Life. Out of realization that power is now one of the most characteristic elements, and aggression the general pattern of western culture, these sixty-two papers consider the nature of western culture and its power characteristic, and ways in which the fulfillment of achievement can be substituted on international, cultural and individual levels. The effects which religion, philosophy and other social and cultural influences do or could have are assessed." Library J

Current Hist 13:357 D '47 40w

"These conferences in print are essential to any comprehensive collection in religion, philosophy, education and applied anthropology." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:1535 N 1 '47 120w
School & Society 66:366 N 8 '47 20w

CONGRESSIONAL INDEX. Subscription price $40 a year; 10 per cent discount to schools and school libraries. Commerce clearing house

328.73 U.S. Congress

"Congressional Index is a weekly loose-leaf service which indexes all federal bills and resolutions of general interest and lists their current status from introduction to final disposition." . . . The service consists of ten sections: 1. Topical Index, 2. Members of Congress, 3. Senate Bills, 4. Senate Status Table, 5. Senate Committees, 6. House Bills, 7. House Status Tables, 8. House Committees, 9. Enactments, 10. Treaties. From thirty to fifty sheets covering these sections are mailed to subscribers each week. A Report Letter accompanies the sheets, summarizing the week in Congress, and providing filing instructions for removal and insertion of loose-leaf pages. Reports are prepared weekly while Congress is in session and a new volume is started for each Congressional term. The Topical Index is the key to all bills and resolutions of general interest. It is alphabetically arranged by broad subjects and by names of Congressmen in a single list, and references are made to bill or resolution numbers." Subscription Bks Bul

"The service is designed primarily for large business and law firms, and will be found extremely useful to large public and college or university libraries, especially those which serve as government depository libraries. It will provide a valuable index to the stacks of bills and resolutions which arrive daily, and could eliminate some document indexing now done by libraries to make them more readily available. It is recommended for such libraries."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:30 J1 '47 1000w

CONGRESSIONAL QUARTERLY; a service for editors and commentators. Library rate $25 per year for one service, $49 per year for any two services, and $69 per year for all three services. Congressional quarterly, 732 17th st, N.W., Washington 6, D.C.

328.73 U.S. Congress

"The Congressional Quarterly service includes: 1. The Congressional Quarterly, 2. The Congressional Notebook, and 3. The Weekly Log. The three are sold singly or as a group. Only editors purchasing such rights are entitled to make public use of the material without special permission. Libraries and their patrons may use the material for reference purposes, however, and it is not necessary for the library to determine whether or not those having access to the services intend to use it editorially. Congressional Notebook is a weekly report, averaging four to eight pages, in which one major issue before the Congress is discussed each week. . . . Weekly Log, also issued each Tuesday, summarizes briefly major events of the week in Congress instead of dealing with one topic only. . . . The Congressional Quarterly, compiled from the two weekly services, is an indexed summary of Congressional activity and covers current petitions, memorials, press releases and quotations from annual reports and other reports from societies and periodicals." Subscription Bks Bul

"Material in Congressional Quarterly is readable, popular in treatment and well condensed. The editors seem to have succeeded in carrying out their announced purpose of dealing only with facts, not with predictions. There is no evidence of political bias. . . . The format is attractive and readable. . . . Although the Congressional Quarterly is designed primarily for newspaper editors and radio commentators who have purchased rights to the material, it is also a useful library reference tool, particularly with discussion groups and clubs. It is recommended for large libraries needing in convenient outline form up-to-date, detailed information about national political issues."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:32 J1 '47 700w

CONISTON, RALPH A. Future of freedom in the Orient. 233p $3 Norton

950 East (Far East). Nationalism and nationality. Library 47-3757

"A moving plea for the independence of half a billion yellow and brown people backed up by on-the-spot information about British, Dutch and French treatment of the peoples they control in the Orient. Coniston cites lack of education and low standard of living in all these exploited countries, where profits are extracted for the benefit of mother-countries and little spent to help the undernourished and underprivileged." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Mills

Am Pol Sci R 41:1252 D '47 300w

Booklist 43:344 J1 1 '47

Reviewed by C. H. Hamilton

Christian Century 64:901 J1 23 '47 380w

"Some of Mr. Coniston's generalizations may be too broad. Some of his information may need documentation. But he really cares about the East, and the numerous illustrations, drawn from his personal observation and experience, furnish sympathetic insight into the human equation beneath the political rhetoric of Asian leaders. The book's most interesting feature is its well-balanced judgment on the vanishing imperialisms of the past." Robert Peel

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 11 '47 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '47

"Readable protest against white imperialism. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:805 My 15 '47 130w

"It is a modestly intelligent book in its own right, and it has value in emphasizing the difficulties faced by the nationalist leaders following the collapse of the older imperialisms and of indicating again the unanimity with which liberal American observers are coming to recognize the bankruptcy of our policy of supporting reaction in China." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 116:27 My 19 '47 110w

"The points Mr. Coniston makes are neither new nor particularly profound." Nathaniel Peffer

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ag 24 '47 550w

"Unfortunately, the book is not the useful semantic and educative corrective to common misconceptions that it might have been. Mr. Coniston's rambling discussions of the relative merits of white exploitation versus the goods and evils of the new independence movements sound too much like the pleasant but fuzzy 'bull-sessions' this reviewer and fellow-correspondents held abroad. . . . In pointing to the need for more education, especially agriculturally and industrially, among native people, and in noting the handicaps to reform that lie in inborn native fatalism, Mr. Coniston hits on sound themes. But the contradictions he slides into as a result of the loose structure of his book preclude clear understanding of these obscure issues. . . . Mr. Coniston is guilty also of claims that he does not fully explain." Robert Shaplen

— N Y Times p12 Ag 17 '47 750w

Reviewed by Edmond Taylor

Sat R of Lit 30:18 J1 5 '47 500w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein

Springfd Republican p14B N 2 '47 170w

CONRAD, EARL. Jim Crow America. 237p $3 Duell

325.26 Negroes. U.S.—Race question 47-30218

A record of the experiences and observations of a white newspaperman who has worked with the Hearst press, PM, and now with the Negro press.

Reviewed by J. P. Shalloo

Ann Am Acad 254:216 N '47 600w

Booklist 43:249 Ap 15 '47

'Earl Conrad here attempts to shock his readers by crude descriptions of segregation and discrimination at work in America. Though he tries to give the impression that he knows the mind of the ordinary Negro citizen, his book reflects the attitude of the professional Negro leader rather than that of the rank and file of the Negro community." Michael McLaughlin
— Cath World 165:473 Ag '47 370w

"This book is an attempt at autobiography, yet the author more often than not gets bogged down in reconstruction history. Conrad is at his best when he tells of his own experiences. . . The 18 chapters of this book document its conclusion more incandescently than convincingly and most of the material has been better said. . . Yet there is a passion in 'Jim Crow America' which haunts any critic who would dismiss it!" H. A. Jack
Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ap 20 '47 500w

"Knowledge, understanding and foresight combine to make this one of the most revealing books ever written about the Negro situation in America. . . It is written with a commendable clarity of style, concise and graphic in statement, and the treatment of the theme throughout is critical and constructive. Wise and courageous words from the pen of a journalist make the book striking and pertinent at this particular hour." Sam Nader
+ Churchman 161:19 My 1 '47 120w

"This book—properly launched—will start controversy. And that in turn will produce readers. Don't miss it."

+ Kirkus 15:51 Ja 15 '47 340w

"The big-word, anthropology-sociology boys will not think much of this book; it is not 'definitive,' 'systematic' or 'objective.' They must admit, however, that it is readable, revealing and disturbing. . . Well worth reading by all, including the big-word, anthropology-sociology boys." L. D. Reddick
+ Library J 72:457 Mr 15 '47 90w

"In readable journalistic style Earl Conrad has prepared a vigorous indictment of Jim Crow America. While there is little novelty in the indictment, it has been drawn up by a good reporter with an eye for interesting detail and dramatic contrast." Carey McWilliams + Nation 165:20 Ji 5 '47 500w

New Repub 116:29 Je 2 '47 190w

"Conrad has written a book that's more than merely provocative. It's downright disturbing, and intended to irritate. There is one irritating quality in the work that's unintentional. The perpendicular pronoun predominates throughout. . . That fault is one that should have been corrected by a friendly editorial hand. However, as a self-acknowledged zealot, Conrad is probably difficult to curb. And, since the subject matter of his work is profoundly important, since on the whole his exposition is, I believe, accurate on matters that count—it is not too difficult to forgive him even for his excesses." Saul Carson
+ N Y Times p18 Ap 6 '47 650w

Reviewed by E. B. Johnson

Sat R of Lit 30:12 Ap 26 '47 800w

Reviewed by John LaFarge

Survey G 36:308 My '47 650w

CONRAD, JOSEPH. Portable Conrad; ed. and with an introd. and notes by Morton Dauwen Zabel. 760p $2 Viking

47-31195

Contains two novels: The Nigger of the "Narcissus," and Typhoon; three long stories; six shorter stories; and a selection from Conrad's prefaces, letters and autobiographical writings.

Booklist 44:71 O 15 '47

Kirkus 15:349 Ji 1 '47 160w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard, Jr.

Nation 166:21 Ja 3 '48 1300w

"As editor of the Portable Conrad, Morton Dauwen Zabel has achieved a sense of the man, his life and his work, remarkably solid and various, within a single volume." John Farrelly
+ New Repub 117:31 O 27 '47 1000w

"Biographically and bibliographically, Mr. Zabel tells all that could be conveyed in the modest space he claims, and it is all that the nonspecialist reader could require. A few veteran students will perhaps find themselves wishing that the editor had also paid his respects to Conrad on two points of maximum latter-day pertinence: his grasp of the inveterate cynicism of the Russian political temper ('Under Western Eyes') and his prescience of the current stage in the war of classes ('Nostromo'). But the main objective is that many who are not veteran students shall be set to reading Conrad or rereading him." Wilson Folett

+ N Y Times p5 O 19 '47 900w

"Altogether, one of the less successful Portables."

New Yorker 23:110 O 4 '47 150w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 16 '47 470w

"[There] is an excellent introduction by Mr. Zabel, in which the editor discusses Conrad's work in the light of his life and character, examines his moral foundations and technical methods, indicates his recurring themes and problems, admits his lapses, and weighs his peculiar worth. This is a sound critical study, as intelligent as the factual notes prefixed to the individual selections are useful." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 N 15 '47 280w

Springfd Republican p10B O 5 '47 60w

"The range of Joseph Conrad's material, as of his splendid glooms and lucidities in storytelling, could scarcely be better shown than in this collection of eleven long and short tales. . . The editor, one of the best of U.S. literary critics, has shown good judgment in not chopping Conrad's longer masterpieces into incomprehensible fragments just to get them inside an anthology. He has also made room for a score of Conrad's wry and courtly letters and Conrad's most important statements on the art of fiction."

+ Time 50:107 S 29 '47 650w

CONROY, JACK, ed. Midland humor; a harvest of fun and folklore. 446p $3.95 Wyn 817.08 47-11728

Chronologically arranged anthology of humorous prose and poetry, written since the Civil war by authors from Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Missouri, and Ohio. Brief biographical information about the authors. Index of authors.

Booklist 44:169 Ja 1 '48

"Most of the pieces are quite short so that the book becomes an admirable bedside companion and is sure to induce pleasant moods. To judge by the number of pages accorded them, Ring Lardner and Bert Leston Taylor are the editor's favorite humorists. But from Mark Twain to Max Shulman's belabored misrepresentation of fraternity life, there is something here for every taste." J. L. Flanagan
+ Chicago Sun Book Week N 5 '47 490w

Kirkus 15:566 O 1 '47 180w

"A good deal of it is of more historical than literary value, but there is enough in the book to remember and to cherish. The editor has been nothing if not generous in his offerings. In fact, he has been a little too liberal." Thomas Lask

+ N Y Times p33 Ja 11 '48 550w

CONSIDINE, JOHN JOSEPH. Call for forty thousand. 319p il maps $3 Longmans

918 Latin America—Description and travel. Roman Catholic church in Latin America

47-143

The author, in his official capacity as Extraordinary visitor for the inspection of Maryknoll missions in Latin America, visited Brazil, Paraguay, Uruguay, Argentina, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, and Ecuador and along the Caribbean shore thru Colombia, Venezuela, and the Guianas. In his account of his trip he stresses the need for more Catholic priests and supervision of religion in the countries he visited. Index.

CONSIDINE, J. J.—Continued

Booklist 43:253 Ap 15 '47

"A vastly interesting and important book. . . Although the author, by reason of long experience and special opportunities, is himself a sort of expert witness, his testimony would be weightier if he were more precise in naming sources. Moreover, his readers would get greater benefit from his volume if maps and texts were more closely coordinated with one another and if the table of contents were fuller. Even with these minor shortcomings, however, the book as it stands gets across a message that is sufficiently distressing." Joseph McSorley

+ — Cath World 164:470 F '47 700w

"An engrossing travelogue through South and Middle America. . . Despite a few minor errors the picture Father Considine leaves of the Latin American world stands out in full dimensions, disturbingly real and alive." Angel Flores

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 16 '47 150w

"Father Considine's book is one that ought to be read by everyone who is interested in the missionary problem of Latin America, whether the need is viewed from the Protestant or from the Roman Catholic standpoint. His main thesis is that there is a missionary problem." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 64:655 My 21 '47 1000w

"Beginners in Latin American affairs will find Father Considine's book a good jumping-off place. It is entertaining reading, especially in short snatches, for anyone. It is an attractive job of book-making with sixteen pages of rotogravures. For all its lack of depth, it will do its bit to direct Catholic eyes to storm clouds in the South." L. J. Trese

+ — Commonweal 45:331 Ja 10 '47 390w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 2 '47 80w

CONWAY, AINSLIE, and CONWAY, FRANCIS.
Enchanted islands. 280p $3.50 Putnam

918.6 Galapagos islands 47-30258

Personal story of a California couple who gambled all they had on a trip to the Galapagos islands. For five years they lived on various islands in the group, very poorly equipped for their venture, but courageous enough to take the consequences. They are now back in California, teaching, and planning to return some day to the Galapagos.

Booklist 43:288 My 15 '47

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 My 11 '47 290w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47

"Intimate picture of a little known though much publicized part of the world, in terms of daily living."

Kirkus 15:117 F 15 '47 120w

"Small details of daily living under the crudest circumstances make engrossing reading. . . Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:526 Ap 1 '47 130w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 Ap 20 '47 900w

Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47 230w

Time 49:116 Ap 21 '47 440w

CONWAY, BROOKE, pseud. The loving are the daring. 283p $3 Prentice-Hall

47-3151

A story of family life in a midwestern German-American home, during the years 1905 to 1920. The widow Kraemer, with her family of six children, three of them step-children, is the central figure. The novel is similar in type to Forbes' Mana's Bank Account.

Booklist 43:309 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 J1 13 '47 260w

"An unpretentious portrait of unpretentious people, this is genuine."

+ Kirkus 15:171 Mr 15 '47 170w

"The characterization is so-excellent that Mrs. Kraemer, her children and step-children come very much alive. Reader shares their many problems, sympathizes with their hardships, rejoices in their good fortune and revels in their succulent meals. Recommended as a fine family piece of the period." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 72:528 Ap 1 '47 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p54 D 7 '47 200w

"The author knows and understands her people and their problems. While each of the children seems finally to find his own niche, the reader is not conscious of over-plotting or contriving. Life is lived to the full by all the Kraemers; in turn life gives back something to each of them. Brooke Conway understands how to portray the warm, stubborn affection, the deep love, that binds a family together." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p14 Je 22 '47 270w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 31 '47 80w

"While Miss Conway's book is not an important one, it is so fraught, in its telling, with prejudices which still gather, fester, erupt, that it presents a very good example of the serious responsibilities of an author which have, in this case, been rather poorly carried." N. G. Chaikin

Sat R of Lit 30:31 S 20 '47 320w

Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:141 O '47

COOK, ROBERT CARTER, and BURKS, BARBARA S. How heredity builds our lives; an introduction to human genetics and eugenics; with drawings by Clyde E. Keeler. 64p pa 75c Am. genetic assn, 1507 M st, N.W. Washington 5, D.C.

575.1 Heredity

"This interesting booklet is a popular publication presenting human genetics and eugenics in a very complete outline of the field. It is illustrated with excellent charts, plates, and pictures which in themselves tell the story of inheritance. The premise is made that 'not by bread alone' does man live and that the social background—the customs, ideas, and ideals—in which we live affect our human development as well as heredity." J Home Econ

"The section on eugenics is especially valuable to those who already have some background in this important subject. As a device for public health education, the usefulness of the monograph is limited since it does not help much with the problem of improving eugenic practices." C. E. Shepard

Am J Pub Health 36:1072 S '46 190w

"The latter part of the book clears up several fallacies in popular belief concerning inherited factors and is well worth reading for those who are apprehensive concerning their qualities as parents and the future success of their offspring. An interesting discussion of world population is provocative and challenging to the scientist who is interested in the future population and what controls and aids would be necessary to ensure the best kind of people to build a better world. . . The booklet might well be on every teacher's desk and can be recommended as a soundly written, beautifully illustrated, and brief treatise on heredity." Susanne Thompson

+ J Home Econ 39:109 F '47 200w

COOKE, DAVID COXE, ed. Best detective stories of the year 1947. 253p $2.50 Dutton

Short stories—Collections (46-5872)

Contents: The wineglass, by A. A. Milne; Malice domestic, by Philip MacDonald; The murderer, by J. T. Rogers; McGarry, mental giant, by Matt Taylor; Small secret, by Edward Stevenson; The adventure of the three R's, by Ellery Queen; Recipe for murder, by C. P. Donnel, Jr.; The perfectionist, by Margaret St. Clair; Hidden evidence, by William MacHarg; The riddle of the Black museum, by Stuart Palmer; Terror, by W. F. Jenkins; A voice behind him, by Frederic Brown; The watchers and the watched, by Jerome and Harold Prince; Of mice and murder, by C. W. Harrison.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week O 24 '47 70w
Kirkus 15:379 J1 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
O 19 '47 150w

"Whether or not these are the best short detective stories that have appeared so far this year is, of course, a matter of opinion: at any rate, they are all good, and many of them are excellent." I. A.

+ N Y Times p24 S 28 '47 140w

"Mr. Cooke's catholic taste ranges from a neat A. A. Milne shocker to a slapstick bit of research into obscure city ordinances and dumb cops by Matt Taylor. Fine if you like brief and pat stories."

+ New Yorker p23:116 S 27 '47 70w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 12 '47
70w

"Time-passer."

Sat R of Lit 30:26 O 4 '47 40w

COOKE, ELLIOT DUNCAN. All but me and thee; psychiatry at the foxhole level. 215p $2.75 Infantry journal

616.8 Psychology, Pathological. World war, 1939-1945—Psychological aspects Med47-244

"During the first two years of World War II, a serious loss of military manpower was occasioned by the discharge from the armed services of hundreds of thousands of soldiers for psychiatric disability. General Marshall selected the author of this book, an experienced line officer, to study this problem. General Cooke's inquiry took him to military installations all over the United States, to England and North Africa, and included interviews with everybody who could throw light on the problem and suggest possible solutions. In his book, General Cooke recounts his experiences." U S Quarterly Bkl

"Revealing in its figures and percentages, in its fair appraisal of the many sides of the subject, in its footnote to the recommendations that where there are too many NP cases there is usually inadequate leadership. An interesting handling of the subject."

+ Kirkus 14:532 O 15 '46 170w

"The book is written with a light touch that would make it both amusing and entertaining if the problems were not so starkly serious—problems that include both war and peacetime living." H. A. Rusk

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 30 '47 600w

"At the end General Cooke reports on what he had to tell General Marshall. He had much to say on how not to handle psychoneurotics, and a good many wise things to say about what the army should do about them. With the point of view of General Marshall and General Cooke that the problem goes beyond the Army and that it is one for the nation at large to consider, all psychiatrists will surely agree. . . . At any rate this book is full of an agreeable frankness, and a truth-telling that is all to the credit of the Army, its chief of staff, and the author." E. D. Lewin

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 D 21 '46 850w

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:95 Mr '47 170w

COOKE, VIVA JANE, and SAMPLEY, JULIA MAY. Palmetto braiding and weaving. 127p il $2.75 Manual arts

677.543 Weaving 47-2913

"A complete guide to the use of palmetto fronds which are available in many parts of the southern U.S., giving patterns and color combinations for making hats, bags, pocket-books, and articles for decorative purposes." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:286 My 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1376 O 1 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:50 J1 '47

COOLEY, HENRY BELL. Freight transportation for profit. 206p $5 Cornell maritime

385.24 Freight and freightage 46-8351

"A comparison of the factors in the cost of operations for railroad, truck, water, and air carriers and an analysis of the advantages and disadvantages that each type has for the loading and handling of particular commodities. Chapter titles are: Competition in transportation; Characteristics of carriers; Loading characteristics of transportation vehicles; Transportation cost characteristics of commodities; Cost determination for specific operations; Cost characteristics of commodities in loading, unloading, storing and handling; Containers; Labor cost in transportation; Cost characteristics for different types of carriers. The book will be of value to traffic men, operating personnel, and shippers." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 31:68 O '46

"It was written particularly for those who realize the immediate need for overhauling costly wartime operational procedures, for introducing coordination and efficiency in organizations confronted by keen and growing competition. Like its companion volume, Transportation Management, this book is up to date, practical and embodies years of experience in transportation."

+ Special Libraries 38:51 F '47

COOLEY, HENRY BELL. Transportation management. 183p $5 Cornell maritime

387 Transportation 46-8300

"This discussion of the principles of business management is intended for transportation executives. It is not a handbook of detailed procedure, but rather a general summary of well-known concepts and techniques such as any mercantile or industrial corporation employs in the supervision of its business. The first half of the book outlines the organizational plan with its delegated duties and responsibilities, and points out the functions and interrelations of the traffic and operating departments with those of the treasurer and the comptroller. The second half reviews goals and methods in personnel work; wage systems and incentives; control of purchases, stores, and repairs; preparation and revision of the budget; establishment of standards for cost comparisons; and the make-up and use of reports." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:68 O '46

"An invaluable guide to modern management of air, water and truck transportation companies. It contains no theories which the author has not tested and is therefore eminently practical. While written for everyone concerned with materials movement, it is of greatest importance to those in the traffic, operating, treasurer's and comptroller's departments."

+ Special Libraries 38:51 F '47

COOMARASWAMY, ANANDA KENTISH. Am I my brother's keeper? with an introd. by R. A. Parker. (Asia press bk) 110p $2.25 Day

901 Civilization 47-2629

A collection of essays by this half-Hindu, half-English scholar who has lived in the United States for many years, and has been, since 1917, connected with the Boston Museum of

COOMARASWAMY, A. K.—Continued
Fine Arts. The essays deal in general with the conflicts of modern civilization, comparisons between Occidental and Oriental ways of thought. Contents: Am I my brother's keeper?; The Bugbear of literacy; Paths that lead to the same summit; Eastern wisdom and western knowledge; East and West; "Spiritual paternity" and the "Puppet complex"; Graduation, evolution, and reincarnation.

Reviewed by J. C. Archer
Christian Century 64:829 Jl 2 '47 800w

"Highly literate, esoteric."
Kirkus 14:584 N 15 '46 80w

"Recommended only to those who do not object to reading needlessly difficult material."
Anne Whitmore

Library J 72:158 Ja 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by Albert Guérard
Nation 164:634 My 24 '47 400w

"These seven essays, presented under a not altogether inviting title, are yet the most provocative, most exciting, and at the same time, most calming book of the year for me. A great portion of its worth is in its foot-notes which are a delight, a cloud of witnesses gathered from the ends of earth and time. They are an invitation to further search for the way out of the world's crisis, an introduction to a goodly company of poets, seers and scientists, some living, and others not less alive though long since dead, some familiar and some strange." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Mr 16 '47 1250w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:249 S '47 260w

COOMBS, MRS ANNA OLSSON. Modern Swedish cookbook. 196p $2.50 Current bks.
641.5 Cookery, Swedish 47-4261

"As a Swedish-born American wife, Mrs. Coombs understands the foods and cooking methods of both her native and her adopted country. With this knowledge she is able to give the best of Swedish recipes in terms which Americans can follow. Where necessary she skillfully substitutes ingredients easily obtained in local markets for those obtainable only abroad." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 44:6 S 1 '47

"Oddly enough, this is—so far as I know—the only Swedish cookbook in English—and that, when Swedish specialties have for years held high honors. The thing that distinguishes this from the average run-of-the-mill cookbook with a foreign flavor, is that the author has wisely included little that might be found in any cookbook, and kept to dishes characteristic of her homeland."

+ Kirkus 15:230 Ap 15 '47 160w

"Cooks looking for something new and good to serve will try these well presented and well chosen recipes." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p24 Je 15 '47 150w

"Should serve as an excellent reminder of unusual and tasty dishes for the cook who likes a change now and then. You'll find the book particularly good on ideas for smorgasbord (naturally) and on fish dishes." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 3 '47 100w

COOMBS, JOHN WESLEY. Baseball; individual play and team strategy. 2d ed 340p il $3.50
Prentice-Hall

796.357 Baseball 47-30148

"This revised edition of a practical baseball handbook will appeal to coaches, professional and amateur players. Detailed instructions for each of the nine positions of the team, accompanied by clear photographs and diagrams, will prove invaluable to the reader. Contents: 'Defensive Game,' 'A Mythical Baseball Game,' 'Official Scorers,' 'Practical Problems,' 'Treatment of Minor Injuries,' written by a physician. Use of book should not be limited to juvenile readers." Library J

Booklist 43:227 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by Margaret Miller
Library J 72:393 Mr 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Harold Kaese
N Y Times p20 Mr 23 '47 600w

COON, HORACE. Columbia, colossus on the Hudson. 388p il $4.50 Dutton 47-2259
378 Columbia university

The first volume in the American college and university series is devoted to the history, early troubles, and present policies of Columbia university in New York city. Has many stories of the men who have helped in the university's growth. Index.

Booklist 43:267 My 1 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 8 '47 130w

"Mr. Coon interests especially when he is writing, not about the events, but about the men involved in the story of Columbia University. . . Mr. Coon cannot say enough good about Columbia's teachers. Probably he is a little too effusive, just as he is a little too abrupt in his treatment of Columbia's officers. Yet he does not seem bitter toward them, and his criticisms have the constructive flavor of an alumnus who is fond enough of his school to want to improve it." M. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 3 '47 550w

"A biography of the most fantastic educational empire in the world, this book is a friendly but objective interpretation of the character and influence of Columbia University on American life and thought by one of her sons. Without any pretense at exhausting the subject—the story of Columbia is inexhaustible—Mr. Coon has written a lively, incisive account of the Aladdin era in education, not only for Columbia, but all America." L. R. Middlebrook

+ N Y Times p10 My 11 '47 650w

"With so much to cover, Coon, a graduate of Columbia's School of Journalism, sets a brisk but comprehensive pace. He doesn't stop in arid regions of academic pomposity nor for long listings of curricula, and the oases of incident, humor, and vivid biographical sketches are frequent enough to keep both author and reader fresh throughout the journey." Luther Nichols

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ag 31 '47 800w

"Mr. Coon has written an engaging book on a formidable subject." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 30:20 Je 28 '47 1150w

School & Society 65:334 My 3 '47 30w

"Perhaps the most entertaining chapters are those which describe, at times in a jocular fashion, the life of the undergraduate students, and the great teachers. A few of the character sketches are particularly good, and there is a full-length portrait of 'Nicholas the Miraculous' Butler. The general reader who is unfamiliar with it may be startled by the intimate picture presented here of the fast, rough, and occasionally dirty politics of a great modern university."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:272 S '47 320w
Wis Lib Bul 43:78 My '47

COOPER, JOHN COBB. Right to fly; global charts by H. Lester Cooke, under supervision of John Q. Stewart. 380p $5 Holt
358.4 Air power. Aeronautics, Military 47-4916

"Author defines air power as the 'capacity to fly' and as not divisible into civil and military. He reviews development of basic principle that each nation controls airspace over its territory and territorial waters, hearkens to 1919 when this principle plus our mistaken belief that air power could be divided set stage for German rearmament and points up implications of all this to any peace treaties written out of World War II. . . Twelve global charts and important documents from Paris Convention of 1919 are included." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:28 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Lafeton Whitney
Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Ag 3 '47
700w

Kirkus 15:324 Je 15 '47 190w

"Air Equivalent to Mahan on sea power. . . This is a careful study of a crucial problem." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:1041 Jl '47 190w

"Mr. Cooper's training as a lawyer and business diplomat is reflected throughout most of his book in a thoroughgoing yet restrained, if not actually cautious, handling of the internationally comprehensive subject matter with which it deals. But, because he feels so strongly about bungling misconceptions of what air power really is and the dire future consequences that may come of them, he occasionally steps out of this character and does some solid slugging for what he thinks ought to be done to avoid another Versailles—and another Luftwaffe. . . 'The Right to Fly' is a clearly written and carefully annotated volume." C. B. Allen

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Jl 27 '47 700w

"Mr. Cooper is well equipped for the task he has undertaken. A legal scholar now at the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton, he spent most of his adult life with aviation, first with the Navy in World War I and then with Pan American Airways, of which he came to be vice president before his retirement last year." John Stuart

N Y Times p6 Jl 27 '47 700w

"The publishers of Mr. Cooper's book claim that it does for air power what 'The Influence of Sea Power upon History' by Admiral Mahan did for sea power. That is an overstatement. Admiral Mahan was a professional sea fighter who turned out a textbook on his trade. Mr. Cooper is a lawyer with generous experience in the administrative end of commercial aviation, but his book is essentially for those who lean toward academic concepts of international law. . . The book is over-long and repetitious. It establishes some excellent points, but in the piled-up mass of the obvious they are as hard to get at as the proverbial needle in the haystack." H. C. Adamson

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:15 Ag 9 '47 1000w

COOPER, LETTICE ULPHA. Black Bethlehem. 324p $3.50 Macmillan

47-11336

"Each of the three independent stories in this book forms part of the allegorical theme of the basic evil underlying modern civilization. Prologue shows Man's confusion and desire for understanding in wartime Britain; thoughts of some of the characters recall Philip Gibbs' material after World War I. Here the readers begin to wonder how far we have actually progressed along the road of civilization. Author's answer is found in the three stories, The Man, The Woman, The Child." Library J

"The factors of setting and medium do not promise a wide market for this."

Kirkus 15:405 Ag 1 '47 120w

"Smooth writing. Recommended." C. W. Roth

+ Library J 72:1193 S 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 My 2 '47 270w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

N Y Times p28 N 30 '47 550w

"The middle section of the book, which contains a chilling picture of some waspish activities in a British war agency, builds up to a firm and credible climax, but the other stories fade out along the way. And so does a trail of allegory that is apparently meant to link the three parts and lead to some conclusions about the evil in modern society."

+ — New Yorker 23:110 N 1 '47 120w

"Well written though the book is, it leaves an impression of confusion, of an urgent message not quite made clear."

Times [London] Lit Sup p249 My 24 '47 650w

COOPER, MRS LOUISE (FIELD). Summer stranger. 261p $2.75 Harper

47-18675

Picture of life in an exclusive summer colony on Long Island Sound, as viewed thru the eyes of an unsophisticated young girl who goes to spend the summer with wealthy relatives.

Booklist 43:255 Ap 15 '47

Bookmark 8:15 My '47

"The author's understanding of Emily is profound as well as delicate. But . . . she loads the dice, so that you catch yourself occasionally wanting to shake poor little Emily. Louise Field Cooper has an eye for detail. Her paragraphs are worked out like jewels—but there are too many and they are too balanced. She not only sees all, she also tells all she sees. Sometimes she has a lovely humor. Uncle Joseph catching fire is very funny. There are charming touches, as when the Hewitt boy, just to please Emily, stops wearing red bathing trunks. . . In short, Mrs. Cooper, whose light touch and delicate irony make such agreeable New Yorker pieces, hasn't knitted together a novel. For one thing, it is a shock in this light book to find yourself suddenly face to face with a murder. There are hints, but they are so written that they should lead up to a suppressed desire for murder, not to an actual one." Helen Woodward

— + Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 10 '47 290w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 28 '47 250w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn BK 24:68 Ja '48 70w

"Delicate—to deft—social comedy, edged by mockery."

Kirkus 14:622 D 15 '46 90w

"Gay, fragrant and simple as a bunch of summer field flowers, Mrs. Cooper's idyll of youth and the seashore is ingeniously constructed and deftly written. But it is more than that: the lucidity and honesty with which its unpretentious characters and scenes are revealed are quite striking. The curl of wave, the bitter-sweet griefs and ecstasies of a lonely young girl confronted by natural beauty, the cruelty of a closed group of people toward an outsider are set down with unusual skill." Iris Barry

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Mr 16 '47 500w

Reviewed by B. V. Winebaum

N Y Times p16 Mr 23 '47 600w

"A novel that is lighter than air and at the same time sharp, witty, and wholly pleasing."

+ New Yorker 23:116 Mr 15 '47 120w

"Before you swear off for all time from books concerned with a poor young girl's visit with veddy rich and veddy social relatives, you might look in on 'Summer Stranger.' You'll never find a better example of what a really capable writer can do with a subject that is staler than hot cross buns on Christmas Day." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 4 '47 170w

"'Summer Stranger' is an excellent study of summer resort life, done with meticulous detail, unexpected depth, and a surprise in the way of a grim ending." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 Mr 15 '47 750w

Springf'd Union p9 Ap 10 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:98 Je '47

COOPER, MORLEY. Cruising to Florida via the intracoastal waterway. (Whittlesey house publication) 201p il $3 McGraw

917.5 Atlantic coast. Yachts and yachting 46-8562

An account of the author's cruise along the intracoastal waterway from Cape May to Florida. "Mr. Cooper made the run last year in a thirty-seven-foot power cruiser and kept a careful log, noting where such things as mooring facilities, service stations, navigation aids, and native manners were good and where they were not." (New Yorker) Index.

COOPER, MORLEY—Continued

Bookmark 8:12 Mr '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p1 Ja '47

"I can recommend his book heartily for anyone planning to cruise to Florida. Although his book is meant to be practical rather than amusing, I read it as I would an adventure novel for I made the trip in reverse and without the benefit of any such guide as his. In general his findings checked with my own and I agree that the Florida jaunt is not a picnic by any means." W. J. Marx

+ Commonweal 45:378 Ja 24 '47 950w

Kirkus 14:511 O 1 '46 120w

"Politely and firmly, the author of 'Cruising to Florida' tells landlubbers and radiator-hugers that this book is not beamed in their direction. . . Politely but firmly, Mr. Cooper is hereby informed that non-voyaging readers are going to enjoy these chapters regardless of his brush off. Because he is an authority on his subject, writes with detailed competence and is quite unable to dissemble his zest, his book has fascination. The illustrations are mainly of wharfs, basins, anchorages, coves and canals, and you can smell the sea."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 F 16 '47 150w

"Mr. Cooper's story is a combination of advice to yachtsmen, a list of his own misadventures and one-man crusade against inefficient oil company service, poor mooring facilities, speeding yachts and Government 'interference.' . . Most of the author's complaints, unfortunately, are well taken, as any yachtsman who has made the cruise can testify. But this repetition seems to be at the sacrifice of cruising details. . . A good index for handy reference has been included." Theodore Sweedy

N Y Times p20 Ja 5 '47 500w

"A valuable book for the small-boat skipper who plans a trip South along the Intracoastal Waterway."

+ New Yorker 22:95 Ja 18 '47 100w

COPPEL, ALEC. Over the line [Eng title: Man about a dog]. 191p $2 Doubleday

47-12359

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week D 19 '47 170w

Kirkus 15:588 O 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 D 14 '47 150w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p21 Ja 4 '48 180w

"A London psychiatrist tries his hand at a perfect crime, with his wife's lover as the victim, and carries out his scheme in a fashion that suggests that he isn't free from psycho-neurotic symptoms himself. His activities are related in a roguish style, apparently patterned on Noel Coward's, and the result may leave you feeling more queasy than alarmed."

New Yorker 23:148 D 13 '47 70w

"Beautiful example of story that jumps traces merrily, violates hoary 'rules' and, despite annoying stylistic mannerisms, packs huge kick."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 D 20 '47 40w

CORBETT, LUCY (MRS SIDNEY CORBETT) and CORBETT, SIDNEY. Pot shots from a Grosse Ile kitchen; il. by William Thomas Woodward. 213p $2.75 Harper

641.5 Cookery

47-31438

When Sidney Corbett, a former salesman-ager for General Motors, was doomed to a wheel chair for the rest of his life he turned to writing. He and his wife, following a natural bent for cooking, write feature columns about food and philosophy for the Detroit News. The chapters here are full of early Michigan history, recipes for good food, and friendly descriptions of visitors and friends.

Booklist 44:63 O 15 '47

"The repasts sound ravishing, nourishing and easy. . . No ABC nor standardized culinary handbook, this is a book for those who like even just to read about 'vittles' and cooks who like to cook."

+ Kirkus 15:383 Jl 15 '47 180w

"Wood cuts by William Travers Woodward, make this book something to look at, as well as something to read, and a manual for making a better world of tastes and smells and comradeship." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 N 2 '47 320w

Wis Lib Bul 43:148 N '47

CORBIERE, TRISTAN. Poems; tr. by Walter McElroy. 65p $3 Banyan press, 239 E. 29th st. N.Y. 16

841

47-29172

"A selection from the writings of the Breton poet, whose work, complex and primitive, sincere and harsh, has induced the admiration (and imitation) of modern English as well as French poets, notably T. S. Eliot. Corbière, until his death in 1875, at the age of thirty, conducted a continual rebellion against life's more hypocritical and hideous aspects." New Yorker

"It is wonderful to have some translations of Corbière's published 'Poems.' . . No poet of half his greatness is so underrated and unread. Mr. McElroy's translations are fond but, sometimes, foolish; there are horrible mistakes and additions, and the translator is not poet enough to keep within miles of Corbière in all the extraordinary passages that raise one's eyebrows or make one's hair stand on end. Mr. McElroy mistakenly decided to rhyme his translations, and he has a complaisance toward rhymes that beats anything that I, a liberal enough rhymmer, have ever imagined." Randall Jarrell

Nation 165:424 O 18 '47 950w

"Despite his extraordinary powers and influence, this great poet has remained more or less unread in this country, and it is pleasant to welcome a bilingual edition, admirably selected of his finest work. . . Except for Baudelaire he is the French poet of the last century most important to us; his qualities are not to be found in English poetry. The book is well made, cheap enough, and the translations are competent." John Berryman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 O 12 '47 470w

Reviewed by Randall Jarrell

N Y Times p5 S 28 '47 650w

"The translations are clear and direct."

+ New Yorker 23:128 O 18 '47 90w

CORBUSIER, LE, pseud. See Jeanneret-Gris, C. E.

COREY, PAUL. Shad haul. 218p $2.50 Morrow

47-30678

Two boys who want to earn money toward their college education form a community co-operative to fight the unscrupulous man who has had a monopoly on the Hudson river shad fishing. They have some exciting experiences, and learn a lot about shad fishing, and earn money besides. Grades seven to nine.

Booklist 44:74 O 15 '47

"The sound business aspects and the fine co-operative spirit of parents, boys, and girls, make this an unusually good story."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7a N 19 '47 150w

"While the action is the main element in the book, the characters show persistence and a good spirit of comradeship." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:446 N '47 120w

"Good storytelling without much attempt at characterization below the surface, but with sound character building values."

+ Kirkus 15:471 S 1 '47 100w

"It is without distinction as far as character portrayal is concerned, but the author seems to know his Hudson and one does learn about shad fishing." M. B. Snow

— + Library J 72:1279 S 15 '47 70w

Sat R of Lit 30:52 N 15 '47 50w

CORK, JAMES MURLE. Radioactivity and nuclear physics. 313p il $4 Van Nostrand

539 Radioactivity. Nuclear physics 47-2322

"Essentials of radioactivity and nuclear physics simply presented. Various particles and radiations produced by radioactivity are described and their properties are explained. Numerous photographs and line drawings illustrate the theory of operation of various devices, records and apparatus. Includes tables of isotopic masses, energies and energy-range relationships for electrons and heavy particles. Applications are shown in chemistry, metallurgy, botany, astronomy and other sciences." (Library J) Indexes.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:813 My 15 '47 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:14 Ja '47

CORLE, EDWIN. Three ways to Mecca. 337p $3 Duell

47-4555

"Novel with philosophical and psychological approach. Author takes a fairly reasonable plot and tries to expound his theories on life. Maintains that there are three ways which may yield ultimate salvation; intellectual, spiritual and sensuous. He then presents his own ideas on the problem of life and salvation." Library J

"This is not a tiresome book. But it is a rather annoying second-rate mixture of Thorne Smith, Aldous Huxley, and Elliot Paul, with a dash of Evelyn Waugh and a sprinkling of Lloyd Douglas. You can imagine such a punch would be interesting and might possibly be potent. Corle never quite succeeds in being intoxicating... There are bright spots. Sometimes the dialogue is really clever. Quite often the scenes are delightfully ludicrous, and deftly done. And if you are the kind of person who would like to wear a dog suit occasionally, you'll get a number of chuckles. Nevertheless, one can't quite see the reason for such a book, unless it is designed for summer vacation reading, when the weather and languor compete with the printed word, and one is often quite happy to let the former win." T. E. Cassidy

Commonweal 46:315 Jl 11 '47 330w

"The Paris episode is the best part of the book, all the right names are there, and there's none of the burlesque which often makes one wonder just whom Corle is ridiculing—you or me."

Kirkus 15:200 Ap 1 '47 150w

Reviewed by W. A. Kalenich

Library J 72:887 Je 1 '47 60w

"This writer has a respectable reputation for several previous books with which I'm not familiar, but the present novel can only do that reputation a disservice, and the best it can hope for is to be happily ignored. But its faults seem to me to represent in a compact and exaggerated form the weakness of much contemporary fiction, which is the excuse for mentioning it." John Farrelly

— New Repub 117:28 Jl 21 '47 1200w

"'Three Ways to Mecca' is more than averagely amusing in some spots, but discouragingly dull in others. Its gay social satire and its steady, good humor may amuse you considerably." F. H. Bullock

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Jl 6 '47 550w

"The author may have had a satiric purpose in mind when he wrote 'Three Ways to Mecca.' It fell by the way, smothered in hair of the dog." B. V. Winebaum

N Y Times p19 Je 8 '47 470w

"Commonplace, witless story."

— New Yorker 23:97 Je 14 '47 70w

"Sounds too much like pure fantasy for you? I don't think so. Try it, anyway, and see. It isn't often that satire is so excellently interwoven with story, nor often that a novel which seems pure story succeeds in saying so much. You'll miss something if you miss 'Three Ways to Mecca.' Take my tip. Get hold of it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 11 '47 850w

CORNELL, FELIX M., and HOFFMAN, AL-LAN C., eds. American merchant seamen's manual for seamen by seamen. 4th ed 834p $4.50 Cornell maritime

656 Merchant marine—U.S. Seamen. Navigation 46-21499

"The revised fourth edition of this guide to seamanship is a valuable handbook for men in the merchant marine service. It can be used as a study guide by seamen seeking promotion; and is, in fact, used as a standard text in Maritime Service Training schools. Chapters on seamanship cover essential knots, methods of splicing, the handling of blocks and tackle, and ship machinery. There are instructions, with diagrams, on the stowage of various forms of cargo; and a discussion of paints and painting. Theory includes a chapter on navigation, the weather, laws concerning merchant seamen, rules of the road, ship construction and stability, and miscellaneous pieces of useful information. A chapter called 'The tankerman's guide' contains special information for men who are working for a tankerman's certificate, including sample examination questions. The new chapter on safety lists hazards aboard ship, suggests preventive measures, and demonstrates safety equipment." (N Y New Tech Bks) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

Booklist 43:188 F 15 '47

N Y New Tech Bks 31:67 O '46

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 23 '47 150w

CORNELL, JULIEN DAVIES. New world primer. 174p $2 New directions

341.1 International cooperation. United nations (organization) 47-6980

A criticism of the organization of the United Nations and suggestions for the formation of a world government in its stead. Bibliography.

"No one who has watched the proceedings of the United Nations can overlook the inadequacies cited by Mr. Cornell... The plain fact is [however] that the United Nations is as far as the people of the world want to go, for the time being at least. Even so, the five great powers reserved to themselves the veto, which means that none of them has to accept a United Nations decision which it doesn't like. The more powerful a world organization, the greater the number of escape hatches such as the veto, that would be required. Furthermore, although the United Nations is going through a critical period, champions of world government are hurting their own cause when they heap too much scorn on the U.N. Only if it works is there any chance whatever of increasing its powers." T. J. Hamilton

N Y Times p20 Ag 24 '47 700w

"What he has to say is nothing that hasn't been said before, and generally speaking he has had to leave the same important questions unanswered as have others airing their views on this subject." A. K. D.

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Jl 13 '47 200w

CORNFORTH, MAURICE. Science and idealism: an examination of pure empiricism and modern logic. [Eng title: Science versus idealism] 267p $3 Int. pubs.

190 Philosophy. Dialectic materialism

47-31166

"This book examines a particular trend in modern philosophy—the trend of 'empiricism'

CORNFORTH, MAURICE—Continued
or more precisely of 'pure empiricism.' I have tried to trace the process of the development of such theories, to show where they go wrong, and to suggest the right way of dealing with the question at issue. More specifically, the purpose of this book is to examine and to criticise that tendency of modern philosophical thought which, taking its origin in the materialism of Bacon and his successors, Hobbes and Locke, turned from materialism to subjective idealism, gave rise to the various subjectivist theories of Berkeley, Hume, Mach and the agnostics, and is still alive today, giving rise to fresh philosophical theories in the same tradition." (Introd) Index.

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 10 '47 150w

"While it is to be hoped that Mr. Cornforth will allow himself to be roused from his dogmatic slumbers in respect of questions that transcend the physical sciences, his vigorous rejection of philosophic nihilism is welcome."

Times [London] Lit Sup p406 Ag 9 '47 1600w

CORWIN, EDWARD HENRY LEWINSKI. See Lewinski-Corwin, E. H.

CORWIN, EDWARD SAMUEL. Total war and the Constitution; 5 lectures delivered on the William W. Cook foundation at the Univ. of Mich, Mar. 1946; with an introd. by E. Blythe Stason. 182p $2.50 Knopf

353.03 U.S. Constitution. U.S.—Constitutional law. Presidents (U.S.)—Powers and duties 47-777

"Documented analysis of impact of total war on powers and structure of national government as set by the Constitution, based on developments of World War II with some attention given to Civil and First World wars. See developments as the extension of scope of legislation ad infinitum, of Presidential stimulation of 'the positive exercise of this indefinite power for enlarged social objectives,' the right of Congress to delegate powers to the President and then to recover them through concurrent resolution, the broadened Presidential prerogative to meet 'emergencies' and the replacement of judicial process by administrative methods." (Library J) Index.

"Total War and the Constitution gives a realistic picture of the effect of emergencies and wars upon our Constitution. Though prepared primarily for students of law, the lectures appear in this excellent volume in a form that will interest and instruct laymen." Isidor Loeb

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:775 Ag '47 800w

Columbia Law R 47:1093 S '47 80w

Current Hist 12:374 Ap '47 80w

"Informed and thoughtful little book." Milton Katz

+ Harvard Law R 60:662 Ap '47 1350w

Kirkus 15:21 Ja 1 '47 80w

"Of first importance but of limited appeal and use." R. E. Kingery

Library J 72:222 F 1 '47 140w

"This book is an analysis, not a blue-print for action. But those who have the responsibility for making our national policies will find this analysis of great help." T. K. Finletter

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ap 13 '47 1150w

Reviewed by Jerome Frank

N Y Times p35 My 4 '47 1050w

"Professor Corwin's book will have great value in so far as it portrays the course of events connected with total war and the line of interpretation marked out by Supreme Court decisions. For it will probably not be highly influential in so far as it is devoted to constitutional exegesis." C. B. Swisher

+ — Pol Sci Q 62:305 Je '47 1000w

"All this, if true, is clearly portentous; but it is kept from alarmism by the author's scholarship, his temperament of sweet reasonableness, his whimsy of good humor, perhaps in part here by being addressed to lawyers, and most of all, it may be, by his having constructive notions as to how to keep the bad from becoming the worst. But that is for the reviewer another story, and for the author another volume. Long may the flow continue from Edward Corwin's gifted pen." T. V. Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 30:19 Mr 15 '47 330w

Reviewed by J. P. C. Carey

Survey G 36:489 S '47 600w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:171 Je '47 280w

CORWIN, NORMAN LEWIS. Untitled, and other radio dramas. 558p $3 Holt

792 Radio plays 47-3323

Seventeen broadcasts which have been given on the air during the last three years. Each is followed by a description of the circumstances of the broadcast and the actors' names. Glossary of terms.

Booklist 43:305 Je 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Je 29 '47 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47

Kirkus 15:120 F 15 '47 150w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 72:961 Je 15 '47 30w

Reviewed by Norman Rosten

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 My 4 '47 850w

"There is a missing ingredient in this book—Mr. Corwin's 'little guy' (who is everywhere) does not come alive. There is too much sameness, and it is all too studied and intellectualized." J. A. S. Kenas

N Y Times p21 Jl 13 '47 450w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 20 '47 220w

"Sometimes the eloquence that sounds just right on the air turns out to be a trifle cloying in cold print, but in the main Mr. Corwin ranks as an artist of the first." R. F. H.

+ — Spring'd Union p2 Je 23 '47 120w

"During the war years almost all the Corwin broadcasts had to do with war or events growing out of it. And his personal urgency and sincerity are so clear in his work that you do not need his assurance that the scripts were an act of conscience. That is what gives them—and the broadcasts that have followed in the search for peace—such power not only over the air but on the printed page." E. J. R. Isaacs

+ Theatre Arts 31:67 S '47 550w

CORYN, MARJORIE. Alone among men. 313p $3 Appleton-Century

Napoleon I, emperor of the French—Fiction 47-30572

Romance based on one month in the lives of Napoleon Bonaparte and Josephine. It is the thirty-two days in 1799 between Napoleon's return from Egypt and the coup d'état which made him First Consul.

Booklist 44:50 O 1 '47

Christian Science Monitor p16 O 11 '47 600w

"A highly successful blend of history, period politics, and character interplay."

+ Kirkus 15:402 Ag 1 '47 130w

"Interplay of political intrigue and promiscuous philandering is adroitly handled. Skillful characterization of an irresistible Josephine and the crafty members of the Directory; but Napoleon himself is shown as man of nervous mannerisms rather than an inevitable leader." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 72:1193 S 1 '47 100w

"Marjorie Coryn did a good job with her 'Good-bye, My Son.' . . . 'Alone Among Men' is a totally different affair. Here the personal, the romantic element is reduced to a minimum; the one great scene, Napoleon's forgiveness of Josephine, is not effectively treated. The rest is political history, a field for which Marjorie Coryn does not seem particularly qualified." Albert Guerard

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 21 '47 440w

Reviewed by Helen Parker

N Y Times p18 D 28 '47 270w

"Miss Coryn doesn't do much to clarify the events of those historic thirty-two days, for she presents them in a series of little peep-shows. . . It is all doggedly aimed to entertain you, and unless you like your history so neat, it may rather set your teeth on edge."

New Yorker 23:85 S 6 '47 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 16 '47 210w

COSTAIN, THOMAS BERTRAM. The moneyman. 434p $3 Doubleday

Coeur, Jacques—Fiction 47-4818

Historical romance of fifteenth century France, during the reign of Charles VII. The central figure is Jacques Coeur, a fabulously wealthy merchant, who instigated the trade with the Levant which brought so much wealth to him and to the France he loved. He was also the king's moneyman, and financed the renewal of the war with England, during which cannon were introduced and made possible the French victory at Rouen. The lovely Agnes Sorel, the king's mistress, had come to her final illness, and part of the story concerns The Moneyman's attempts to find an intelligent successor to the woman who had been the power behind the throne.

"This is a kind of 'hindsight' historical novel. The present is always with us, looking down its nose at the past. . . Neither we nor the author is in or of the period described. The book is well enough documented as to manners and customs, the clothes and the armor, the food and the gallantry, but it is all objective. Nothing is taken for granted. It has to be explained. . . This objective, hindsight historical novel writing has its obvious virtues and advantages, but it is hard to write from that standpoint and produce a work of art." A. W.

Atlantic 180:122 S '47 1300w

Booklist 44:16 S 1 '47

"Save for a passing slur at the Church, which has ever been fair game for writers of medieval novels, The Moneyman well repays a reading."

+ Cath World 165:572 S '47 230w

"The Moneyman" is a good novel. It lacks the sweeping genius of a Scott or Dumas, but it has the logical precision found in the historical novels of Flaubert and Gautier. It lacks local color to a lamentable degree, but the rapidity and interest of the story make up for that." N. M. Minn

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Jl 13 '47 470w

"Mr. Costain unfolds a great variety of scenes, he is adroit in his use of conversation, and he creates or revivifies characters that are substantial but not too subtle for the general reader. . . In 'The Moneyman,' the high point is historical fact, though elaborated, namely, the trial of Jacques Coeur for the murder of Agnes Sorel and his acquittal; and the fabric of the story is much enriched by the author's research in the field of fifteenth-century domestic life, houses, food, and dress." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 30 '47 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '47

Reviewed by T. E. Cassidy

Commonweal 47:51 O 24 '47 260w

Kirkus 15:260 My 15 '47 210w

"Good character sketching. Excellent portrayal of the period. Recommended for all public libraries." H. A. Carpenter

+ Library J 72:1033 Jl '47 80w

"Thomas Costain always tells a good story, and 'The Moneyman' is no exception equaling (and in some ways surpassing) 'The Black Rose.' Historical background is authentic, characters perform as real men and women, fascinating details are unobtrusively introduced, and plot interweaving is skillfully contrived. The siege of Rouen, where cannon were effectively employed as a prelude to chivalry's doom at Ravenna nearly a century later, is superbly described. A book full of the glamour and excitement of olden times." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Jl 13 '47 650w

"Mr. Costain's alchemy is his own, and no paraphrase can do it justice. Less nimble practitioners have ventured among the stacks to revive a dusty century—and choked their readers with the dust. It is this novelist's achievement that he can bring the faded colors to instant life, that he can resurrect princes and popinjays again in all their gaudy, human splendor. 'The Moneyman' makes the plight of Jacques Coeur as real, and as important, as the fall of a liberal in tomorrow's headlines." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p1 Jl 13 '47 1200w

"The scenes of the trial, a grim and farcical example of justice on a holiday, which gave Coeur no opportunity to refute the manufactured evidence offered against him, are as good reading as you'll find anywhere and stamp the author as a first-rate historian and novelist. . . Then, too, the trial brings the spotlight back to Jacques Coeur, where it belongs, for it is essentially his story, and as long as he is in it, it is superb. Without him, in spite of excellent writing, it is pretty cold potatoes." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 20 '47 600w

"The Moneyman's plot deprives it of the breadth and the epic sweep of the few modern costume novels that can compare with 'Gone with the Wind' or Feuchtwanger's 'Power,' but it nevertheless has all the elements that make it as exciting and as worth while as any of its kind written today." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 Jl 12 '47 1150w

Time 50:94 Jl 21 '47 220w

Wis Lib Bul 43:141 O '47

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 37:189 autumn '47 40w

COULTER, ELLIS MERTON. Georgia; a short history; rev. and enl. ed. of A short history of Georgia. 510p il $4.50 Univ. of N.C. press

975.8 Georgia—History 47-2917

Revision of a book first published in 1933 (Book Review Digest 1934). The "revision consists for the most part of bits of additional information interspersed through the original text. There are still the same thirty-one chapters, with the identical headings of the first edition. In a few pages, [the author] briefs a million years of Georgia history, then details in five hundred pages, with many illustrations, the occupation of Georgia since the Spanish explorations. The enlargement is chiefly in the last chapter, 'Up to Now,' which includes the Annall administration. He does not cover the notorious election of 1946 nor the dual governorship of 1947." (Am Pol Sci R) Select bibliography. Index.

"No footnotes distract the lay reader, but the scholar will find useful the select bibliography of primary and secondary sources. Professor Coulter handles his subject-matter with a deftness conveying the impression of the times in a pleasant style. The treatment is summary and factual rather than interpretative or critical, but provincial gloss is avoided and an effect of objectivity achieved by careful inclusion of economic and social analysis in each period." M. D. Irish

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:811 Ag '47 300w

"Dr. Coulter writes as a Southerner, as he should. He writes as a scholar, too, with an almost invariable detachment, which is welcome, except when the reader is confronted with a contemporary Georgian or two who may seem to get off lightly. One might wish that he had further enlarged the book so as to discuss Georgia's cultural history at greater length and to tie more closely together the economic malpractices and resultant human erosion that have plagued Georgia and the whole South." Hodding Carter

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 20 '47 1150w

COUNCIL ON BOOKS IN WARTIME. History of the Council, 1942-1946 [written by Robert O. Ballou from a working draft prepared by Irene Rakosky]. 126p $1 Bowker

655.5 World war, 1939-1945—Literature and the war. Publishers and publishing 47-30207

"The record of a unique chapter in the history of book publishing and distribution, which had as its objective the effective use of books as weapons in the war of ideas. This tells of the organization of the Council, the use of radio forums and films, cooperation with the government, and the publication of the Armed services editions and the overseas editions, with lists of the titles in these editions and a financial statement." Booklist

Booklist 43:237 Ap 1 '47

"Although of special value to those originally concerned with the project, to publishers and others connected professionally with books, this work will be of interest, also, to the layman concerned with the advancement of knowledge through books."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:272 S '47 320w

COUPLAND, SIR REGINALD. Livingstone's last journey. 271p il $3.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Livingstone, David 47-2208

"For this account of the last journey to the sources of the Nile undertaken by the great English African explorer and missionary, Dr. David Livingstone (1813-73), Sir Reginald Coupland has made use of much new material from the papers of Livingstone's two friends and collaborators, Waller and Kirk. It is a record of almost unparalleled human fortitude. An account of the adventurous journey of Stanley, the American journalist who set out in 1870 to find Livingstone in the African jungle, is also given, with a comparison of the characters of the two men." (Am Hist R) Index.

Am Hist R 52:366 Ja '47 90w

Cath World 165:477 Ag '47 220w

+ Christian Century 64:715 Je 4 '47 210w

"Sir Reginald tells a plain, straightforward story, which presents the full facts without overstatement or emotional emphasis. When it comes to the sequel, to Stanley's visit to London, which resulted in so much scandal and controversy, Sir Reginald states his own opinion candidly. His chief service here is to emphasize once again that Sir John Kirk, Consul at Zanzibar and Livingstone's great friend, who was accused by Stanley of slackness in forwarding supplies to Livingstone, was in no way to blame. The facts have been too often ignored since, and a restatement of them was needed. Nor does Sir Reginald fail to do justice to the humbler friends of Livingstone, among whom were Chuma and Susi, the two natives who served him with such incomparable loyalty." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 19 '46 600w

Reviewed by William Hayes

Churchman 161:19 Je 15 '47 150w

Reviewed by Charles Keenan

Commonweal 46:242 Je 20 '47 650w

"Sir Reginald Coupland has written a scholarly, indeed a brilliant account of this last phase of Livingstone's life, examining patiently all the controversies, bringing together the extraordinary elements of the story, and pausing from time to time to build up Livingstone's character as it moved from one disaster to the next. . . The story of Livingstone has been told many times, but the Kirk and Waller papers made it possible to reconsider many earlier judgments; the attraction and value of Sir Reginald's book lie in the handling of the new evidence, in the freshness and fairness of the narrative. There is no attempt to draw a full life portrait; but the mystical Livingstone of the last phase, at any rate, is put before us in all the moving reality of the known facts." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 31:304 Ap 27 '46 1200w

"In his last years David Livingstone became obsessed with the idea that somewhere in the spongy swamp south and west of Lake Bangweolo lay the 'fountains' of Herodotus and the ultimate source of the Nile. The thought fired his stubborn imagination. The last journey of which Professor Coupland writes was his forlorn attempt to capture that dream. . . Professor Coupland, who holds the chair of Colonial History at Oxford, tells the story of this quest with a simplicity and directness that enhance its inherent drama." J. B.

+ N Y Times p23 Je 8 '47 750w

Reviewed by Goronwy Rees

+ Spec 176:146 F 8 '46 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p594 D 15 '45 2300w

Wis Lib Bul 43:173 D '47

COUPPEY, MADELEINE. Rumor in the forest; tr. from the French by Marguerite Waldman.

152p $2 Scribner

47-6455

An allegory in which the characters are a rabbit, a pigeon, a cat, and a dog. They escape from domesticity and live in the forest, where they probe the meanings of freedom, love, and renunciation, in their several ways. Translated from the French.

Reviewed by Henry Rago

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 31 '47 380w

"Throughout the book animals remain animals and the author's sensitivity is delightfully attuned to their reactions." C. H. Bishop

+ Commonweal 46:579 S 26 '47 240w

"The market for this very special genre is limited."

Kirkus 15:201 Ap 1 '47 120w

"Style lacks continuity, giving reader the impression that book has either been poorly translated or cut without due consideration to the ideas the author wished to convey. Not recommended." H. R. Forbes

— Library J 72:1033 Jl '47 80w

"An allegory of extreme sensitivity, written by a young French girl whose poetry is apparently already highly regarded in her own country. It is concerned with freedom, renunciation and love; and while I am not sure that, after one reading, I have fully grasped all its implications, it is clear that it could have been written only by one who endured great mental suffering during the German occupation. . . The translation, by Marguerite Waldman, has been beautifully done." John Morris

+ New Statesman & Nation 33:299 Ap 26 '47 150w

"Madeleine Couppey has written an engaging, unobtrusive tale, which makes its point steadily but without damage to the lyric enchantment of the forest, which she describes as if she had herself abandoned it to live in service to man. Marguerite Waldman has translated the story into sensitive, evocative English. It is a book for the whole family to be read aloud if possible." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 31 '47 650w

"A simple story, quite charmingly told. Nevertheless, the reader may be profoundly disturbed by a feeling that the little furry meanings that peep from behind the foliage are not nice, meek animals at all, but monsters of doctrine." Donald Barr

+ N Y Times p22 Jl 13 '47 600w

"This is a book far removed in subject matter and theme from recent French literary importations. Yet the mystical love for nature which permeates it stems from a long and rich French tradition. One has the feeling that it could have been written one or two hundred years ago, as well as now. There is nothing in it that makes it timely; the truths it tells have been told all through the centuries. It is a strangely beautiful little book and a difficult one to classify. Perhaps it should be placed near 'The Wind in the Willows' on the bookshelf, although it is not the same thing at all. 'Rumor in the Forest' has its own curious charm." Hollis Alpert

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 J1 12 '47 650w
Time 50:96 J1 14 '47 500w

COURLANDER, HAROLD, and HERZOG, GEORGE. Cow-tail switch, and other West African stories; drawings by Madye Lee Chastain. 143p $2.50 Holt

398 Folklore, West African 47-30108

Collection of folk tales from "that part of West Africa bulging into the Atlantic."

Booklist 43:209 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 F 23 '47
230w

"The seventeen stories, mostly gathered in the Ashanti country, are fresh to collections and are told with humor and originality. Their themes, chosen with discrimination, are frequently primitive explanations of the origin of folk sayings and customs, or show examples of animal trickery and ingenuity. Black and white drawings decorate this well-made book, written by writers who have a scholarly interest in folklore."

+ Horn Bk 23:113 Mr '47 100w

Kirkus 14:522 O 15 '46 80w

"An unusually fine collection of folk tales told simply, directly and with beauty." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 72:323 F 15 '47 40w

"The West Africans whose folk tales are retold in this book by Courlander and Herzog may have a limited vocabulary for generalized thinking, but the process itself is vigorous and its expression vivid. Ideas are expressed in direct images, in powerful parables. Image and concept coincide so neatly that the meaning of incident is inherent in the incident itself. The 'Cow-Tail Switch' stories are noteworthy examples of wisdom, irony, and craftsmanship." Virginia Mishnyn

+ Nation 164:430 Ap 12 '47 700w

"Children will of course enjoy these tales, but so will older people; children who read them now will remember them later. Some are sheer fun, some point a moral, some are tall tales—one about a bull as remarkable as Bunyan's Blue Ox—but each one means something and is worth remembering for what it means. It will be, because it comes straight out of simple human experience, largely of what it will pay to do and what it won't." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
F 23 '47 340w

"Folktales from West Africa, skillfully retold by a specialist in folklore and an anthropologist. Those who know the Negro's rich humor will not, of course, be surprised by this, but they will be amazed at the ease with which primitive people spin parables on such abstractions as time and sleep, or juggle possibility and probability against certainty. . . . The tales are prepared primarily for children of the middle years, but wise parents will read them aloud so that the whole family will enjoy their special flavor. This richly varied collection has been given added distinction by Madye Lee Chastain's illustrations, authentic in detail and very decorative." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p26 F 9 '47 240w

"Harold Courlander has retold these folktales from the people of West Africa so well that not one word is out of place—or out of rhythm. Children who like the crisp humor of a folktale and their elders who are interested in folk literature and folk art set the seal of their approval on Courlander's retelling of the Haitian folklore in 'Uncle Bouqui of Haiti' when it was published in 1942. This collection is even more appealing. It has, probably, an even greater value." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 30:46 F 15 '47 500w

Wis Lib Bul 43:56 Mr '47

COURNOS, JOHN, and CURNOS, HELEN SYBIL NORTON (KESTNER), eds. Best world short stories, 1947; stories by Ciro Alegria [and others]. 258p $3 Appleton-Century

Short stories—Collections

The first of a projected series of annual volumes which are planned to present the "best short stories" published anywhere in the world. In this volume there are (in translation) stories by Ciro Alegria (Peru), Ilya Ehrenburg (Russia), Eduardo Mallea (Argentina), Lau Shaw (China), as well as stories by English and American authors.

"Mr. Cournos and Miss Norton have not traded good writing for popular sensationalism. 'The Best World Short Stories 1947' is a generally worthwhile collection, garnered with care and excellent taste." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Commonweal 46:290 J1 4 '47 450w

Kirkus 15:111 F 15 '47 120w

"Though only seven countries are represented and five of them scantily, there is yet a slightly greater variety, a slightly smaller number of titles already over-familiar than is usual between the covers of such a collection. Those names already well known to American readers are followed in each instance by stories worthy of their talents. . . . Of the less-known names, and especially of the authors whose stories are given in translation, Ciro Alegria of Peru, Eduardo Mallea of Argentina, Lao She (Lau Shaw) of China, and Ilya Ehrenburg are a quartet no editors of the world collection could well ignore." E. R. Mirrieles

+ N Y Times p5 Je 29 '47 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 D 7 '47
220w

COWARD, NOEL PIERCE. Present laughter. 222p $2 Doubleday

822

[43-12063]

Play depicting the antics of an aging actor, who cannot say "no" or "goodbye." His friends manage him as well as they can, but over his amorous adventures they have no control.

Booklist 43:166 F 1 '47

"Only the mildly amusing complications of bedroom farce. If there is to be a second lost generation, it needs to find a new dramatist. Coward seems to be a bit run down." W. P. Eaton

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13
Ja 5 '47 450w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p12 Ap 6 '47 50w

"My complaint against 'Present Laughter' is that, though it makes every panting effort to be gay, I found it difficult not to be serious in its presence." J. M. Brown

— Sat R of Lit 29:24 N 23 '46 1650w
(Dramatic criticism)

COWARD, NOEL PIERCE. This happy breed; a play in three acts. 223p $2.50 Doubleday

822

47-4549

"'This Happy Breed' is in the 'Cavalcade' tradition—a panorama of 20 years in the lives of the members of one family and their next-door neighbors—the 20 years between World War I and World War II." San Francisco Chronicle

Kirkus 15:205 Ap 1 '47 30w

"This is a lower middle class Cavalcade but not as good. Recommended, however, for drama collections which desire completeness." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:811 My 15 '47 40w

"At times the atmosphere of the play is far more like 'Fumed Oak' than 'Cavalcade.' Never, indeed, does it reach the dramatic poignancy 'Cavalcade' achieved with the Queen's funeral and the scene on the deck of the Titanic." W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27
My 25 '47 160w

COWARD, N. P.—Continued

"This theatregoer, for one, would venture to guess that Mr. Coward's American public has forgiven him Brooklyn long ago. It can hardly forgive this present dullness." C. V. Terry
— N Y Times p12 Ap 6 '47 110w

"Mr. Coward's undoubted talent for character study has been lavished on this play with a prodigal hand, and from that standpoint alone it makes for extremely worth-while reading, if one likes to read plays. If you're looking for a rip-roaring plot to go with it don't bother." P. S.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 18 '47
180w

COX, CHARLES RAYMOND. Laboratory control of water purification. 386p il $4 Case-Shepherd-Mann pub. corp. 24 W. 40th st, N.Y. 18

628.16 Water—Purification 47-902

"Geared directly to the needs of the practical water works operator, this manual provides readily understandable guidance for the solution of daily problems. Starting with basic rules of chemistry the author deals successively with all subdivisions of water purification control in logical and easy steps. The final chapters cover corrosion and bacteriology concisely and simply." Eng N

Reviewed by J. F. Norton

Am J Pub Health 37:1345 O '47 230w

"Although this text is designed for the operator, busy engineers, who have forgotten once-studied laboratory techniques, will find it a handy reference to grasp quickly the chemical bases of the design of water treatment facilities."

+ Eng N 138:96 Ap 3 '47 110w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:813 My 15 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:40 Ap '47

COX, JAMES MIDDLETON. Journey through my years. 463p $4.50 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 47-58

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Reviewed by R. E. Noble

Ann Am Acad 262:136 Jl '47 360w

"Journey Through My Years is a book for the winter fireside and a thoughtful mood. It portrays a generous, courageous spirit, an expert grasp of political realities, a liberal faith, and a fine sense of humor." J. H. Powers

+ Atlantic 179:143 Mr '47 550w

Booklist 43:204 Mr 1 '47

"Cox has kind words for Alfred E. Smith; harsh words for the friends and associates of Warren G. Harding. He has no compliments for Harding, either, but the book is free from bitterness. Franklin D. Roosevelt is repeatedly praised; letters that passed between the two men are reproduced. The reason for the hiatus between 1922 and 1940 is not given. Were there no letters during that long interval? The great and the near great march through the pages; American history since 1900 is given a fresh and interesting interpretation. It's a good thing that Mr. Cox wrote it." Paul Kinery

+ Commonweal 45:548 Mr 14 '47 390w

Foreign Affairs 26:225 O '47 30w

"It is an intriguing narrative, recorded with candor and with an amiable discretion that does credit to a man who has fought hard and suffered no few disappointments. But this same virtue of discretion detracts from the value of the book as history." Louis Wasserman

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 26 '47
300w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:146 Je '47 360w

COX, SIDNEY. Indirections for those who want to write. 139p $2 Knopf

808 Authorship 47-1350

Brief chapters on the discoveries which "the writer makes about his craft by practicing it, with some that he makes about life by living it." The author is professor of English at Dartmouth.

Booklist 43:287 My 15 '47

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 12 '47 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47

Reviewed by C. G. Bolté

+ Nation 165:167 Ag 16 '47 800w

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

N Y Times p3 Mr 9 '47 850w

"Written as a man might talk, given exactly the right audience, this little book is one every writer might read and read again for its author's unusual ability to start the spark in the fuse that leads to independent thinking about how to write. . . 'Indirections' is one of the most closely packed books in any field that I have ever come across. You may read its slim 140 pages in an hour or less, just as a physical exercise. But you might well give a year to the book and still not exhaust all the avenues down which his stimulating suggestions will send your mind off exploring. That, precisely, is why it is a book for everyone who has ever written or thought about writing." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 19 '47
750w

COX, VIOLA LURCH. Wealth through education. 331p $3.75 Stephen-Paul

378.362 Student loan funds. Credit 47-30854

"Author's thesis is that in order to attain the three objectives necessary for peace and prosperity in America—economic opportunity, adequate debt service and spiritual world leadership—a new philosophy of creative productivity must be developed. This can be realized through the production of credit for enterprise and education. Opportunity for education is to be supplied by individual loans obtainable for age groups from ten to twenty-four years, secured by notes and payable after twenty years. Her belief that education should be more widely distributed at higher levels is generally held, but her economic reasoning is somewhat faulty." (Library J) Index.

"Of interest to teachers' colleges." Walter Hausdorfer

+ — Library J 72:958 Je 15 '47 130w

School & Society 66:175 Ag 30 '47 30w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. Fashioned for murder. 260p $2.50 Knopf

47-5388

Detective story.

Booklist 44:135 D 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p35 O 17 '47
70w

Kirkus 15:409 Ag 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32
O 26 '47 130w

"The story is closely integrated and full of action and suspense." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p30 S 21 '47 170w

"Mr. Coxie always delivers the goods." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 S 21 '47
120w

"Rewarding."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 S 13 '47 40w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. Fifth key. 247p $2 Knopf

47-803

Detective story.

Booklist 43:207 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Mr 16 '47
70w

Kirkus 15:14 Ja 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
F 23 '47 190w

"Mr. Coxé tells the story with a narrative skill which even makes his red herrings seem not in the least fishy," Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 9 '47 180w

"Good, traditional tough stuff."

+ New Yorker 22:100 F 8 '47 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 9 '47
70w

"Few so good."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 F 8 '47 50w

COXE, LOUIS OSBORNE. Sea faring, and other poems. 55p $2.50 Holt

811 47-30427

"The first book of a young New Englander whose poems, closely associated with the sea, were written from 1941 to 1946. Many of them come from the Pacific where Coxé served on a PC boat and they carry the apprehensions and the acuteness of observation of one who sails toward danger." Library J

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 S 28 '47
40w

Kirkus 15:361 Jl 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald

Library J 72:1196 S 1 '47 50w

"Obscurity, in a first book of poems, may be the price of an original style. Mr. Coxé unmistakably has a style of his own. There are echoes of Hart Crane and Auden, but only echoes. His verse is without clichés, never sprawling; is stripped of the sentimental and the obvious. But these are negative virtues. It is a verse without graces: unenticing, unspectacular, humorless, lacking either the charm of the casual or the shock of the accidental. The poet is too busy crowding ambiguities into his line, layer on layer, to attend proportionately to questions of music or communication." Selden Rodman

+ — N Y Times p6 Ag 17 '47 650w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

New Yorker 23:119 S 13 '47 110w

"Mr. Coxé's volume presents a problem to the conscientious reviewer. It is undoubtedly an important first book. There are two longer poems which touch greatness and several shorter ones of unusual merit. But certain faults, typical of the times, are obvious. The title poem is not successful. It is too much a catalogue of unresolved associations and impressions. It has as much of the sea in it as a modern sailor has knowledge of sailing. Something of the push button mechanism of the modern warship interposes itself between the sea and the poet." Robert Hillier

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:30 S 6 '47 550w

COXERE, EDWARD. Adventures by sea; a relation of [his] several adventures by sea; foreword by H. M. Tomlinson; ed. by E. H. W. Meyerstein. 190p $2.50 Oxford

910.4 Adventure and adventurers 47-167

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Booklist 43:183 F 15 '47

"This book has both literary and historical value. Written merely as a personal record of an unusually eventful life there is charm and vigor in the directness of the style with its seventeenth century mannerisms. The rugged and resourceful character of the author is everywhere apparent but perhaps the most dominant feeling of continuity lies in the moving background of the sea itself, which flows through the manuscript from beginning to end. The original spelling has been modernized and notes have been added by the editor, verifying dates by reference to other sources and correlating the events recorded with the history of the period." Alan Creighton

+ Canadian Forum 26:47 My '46 370w

"Coxere was an interesting character, Mr. H. M. Tomlinson tells us in his delightful foreword. He was the sort of man, smelling of his trade, that Whitman was hearty about.' Coxere's journal is more than an adventure tale. It is literature." H. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 24
'47 370w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 31:162 Mr 2
'46 550w

"Edward Coxere, whose journal has been admirably rendered into readable English by an authority upon 17th century seafaring, is a good example of the mariner who, like the fabled Irishman, was willing to slug it out with anyone who came along." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 F
2 '47 470w

Springf'd Union p11 My 5 '47 130w

"The book has been admirably edited by Mr. Meyerstein who, by searching Quaker records, has been able to confirm and supplement much of the historical material it contains."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p90 F 23 '46
2350w

COYNE ELECTRICAL SCHOOL, CHICAGO.

Coyne radioman's handbook. 355p $3.25 The school, 329 S. Wood st, Chicago 621.384 Radio—Handbooks, manuals, etc.

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"Although the book is not intended for the beginner or for the layman, every effort seems to have been made to reduce complicated radio terminology to understandable language. It does not try to cover the subject as comprehensively as the more advanced handbooks by Henney, Morecroft or Sterling, but it contains the essential information needed by the practicing radio service man. An analytical index with cross references facilitates reference use. . . . Coyne Radioman's Handbook is a useful addition to material in its field. It is recommended for radio repair and service technicians, for technical libraries and for public libraries having a demand for technical data books."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:14 Ap '47 300w

CRAIG, CLARENCE TUCKER, ed. Challenge of our culture. (Interseminary ser) 205p $1.50 Harper

261 Church and social problems 47-1239

"Six U.S. Christian leaders outline the challenge of increasing mechanization, materialism, racial conflicts, and personal tensions to the Christian church and particularly to American Protestantism. This is the first in the Interseminary series, prepared by 34 contributors and issued as the basis for study for a conference of theological students in June 1947. The books are designed to be informative and conducive to discussion and should prove stimulating to Christian readers in general, as well as to students. Suggested reading at the end of each chapter." Booklist

Booklist 43:216 Mr 15 '47

"One could point to a number of limitations of this little book, but recognition that it is a diagnosis to be followed by other volumes which are to be prescriptive would make this gratuitous. One could also express minor disagreements, but the general excellence of the whole would render them captious. If the other numbers of the series are as adequate as this first of the 'Interseminary Series,' all who care for people will be deeply in the debt of Robert S. Bilheimer, executive secretary of the National Interseminary Committee, and his colleagues." W. W. Sikes

+ — Christian Century 64:47 Ja 8 '47 900w

"The high promise of this volume, as the first in the Interseminary Series, has been amply fulfilled in the subsequent volumes of the series. . . . The purpose of this initial volume is to diagnose the diseases of our culture. It is therefore not a particularly cheerful symposium. Its title might not inappropriately have been, 'What's wrong with everything?' This concentration on the evils and perils of the present situation does not indicate a pessimistic outlook, for the editor and contributors did their work in full awareness that their special assignment was to show into what a mess the world gets itself when it does not even seriously try to create a social order consistent with Christian principles. It was left to the other books in the series to indicate the resources of Christianity for meeting this situation." W. E. Garrison

CRAIG, C. T.—Continued

+ Crozer Q 24:255 J1 '47 1500w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:249 S '47 100w

CRAIG, SIR JOHN HERBERT MCCUTCHEON.

Newton at the mint. 128p il $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Newton, Sir Isaac [47-263]

"Newton became Warden of the Mint in 1696 and Master in 1699, holding the latter post until his passing in 1727. During these years, the position provided his chief occupation, apart from mathematical and scientific pursuits, and supplied the greater part of his income; but, as Sir John Craig points out, Newton's work at the Mint has received little attention from his biographers, and such accounts as exist are largely inaccurate. Sir John has put that right, for he gives us here all the facts; but it is not difficult to understand, after reading him, the reason for this neglect on the part of the biographers. For even Sir John has not been able to add much of significance to our knowledge of the man except that, as Master, the great Newton appears rather unexpectedly as an ultra-conservative bureaucrat." Christian Science Monitor

"Craig's specialized study highlights an unfamiliar aspect of Newton's career, but aside from a digression on the controversy with Leibnitz over the discovery of the calculus, and a more diverting one on the liaison between Newton's niece and the Whig leader, Lord Halifax . . . there is little of general historical interest." R. Walcott

Am Hist R 53:156 O '47 240w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 5 '47 150w

"Of the human side of this genius, of his personal relations with his colleagues at the Mint, we hear little; and, even though Sir John is admittedly dealing with the 'Master' and not with the man, it is none the less a trifle disappointing. Perhaps the most interesting pages, so far as Newton is concerned, are those dealing with his successful attempts to check the activities of coiners and clippers, and with his work in connection with the recoinage of the Scottish currency. . . On the whole, however, it is the Mint itself, at this period, that bulks largest. . . These little known matters Sir John relates lucidly, keeping us curious to know more; but there is much else that will appeal only to those who are particularly concerned with the history and problems of English currency." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 21 '46 600w

"Sir John Craig has written an indispensable commentary on this side of his life." K. B. McF.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 5 '46 330w

Times [London] Lit Sup p560 N 16 '46 750w

CRAMER, HARALD. Mathematical methods of statistics. 575p $6 Princeton univ. press

519 Mathematical statistics A46-5922

"This volume, the offset edition of a work originally published in Sweden in 1945, presents an exposition of the mathematical theory of modern statistical methods as based on the concept of probability. The author assumes a sound knowledge of differential and integral calculus, algebra, and analytic geometry, but additional requisite mathematics is reviewed in part I. Part II contains the general theory of random variables, and part III deals with the theory of sampling distribution, statistical estimation, and tests of significance. A ten-page bibliography is included." N Y New Tech Bks

"The organization of the material is a magnificently successful job and is one of the reasons why the book will be for some time to come, in this writer's judgment, the outstanding expository treatise on the subject." B. D. Mudgett

+ Ann Am Acad 249:203 Ja '47 1100w

Eng N 138:95 F 6 '47 160w

"This book meets an important and long-felt need for a really basic treatment of modern statistical theory. It brings into a mathematically satisfactory unity the diverse developments which, during the last quarter-century, have been changing the face of the statistical world. The material here at last assembled in book form must certainly be read by all who aspire to a full understanding of the logical and mathematical bases of recent developments in statistics. . . This is a book to be commended especially to teachers of statistics and to all who need a clear understanding of fundamentals." Harold Hotelling

+ J Pol Econ 55:393 Ag '47 1850w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:67 O '46

CRAMPTON, GERTRUDE, comp. Golden Christmas books; il. by Corinne Malvern. (Big golden bks) 96p $1.50 Simon & Schuster

394.26 Christmas 47-12012

A collection of stories, songs, poems (old and new), riddles, puzzles, and things to do for Christmas. Piano accompaniments for the ten Christmas songs are given. The illustrations are in color and in black and white.

"Here there is something for every kind of child, doer and dreamer alike, and a Christmas tree that pops up the minute you open the book." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 166:239 D '47 110w

"A good, big Christmas book with fun for the whole family."

+ Kirkus 15:584 O 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 72:1783 D 15 '47 70w

"It is pretty to look at, amusing, sensibly chosen, and put together firmly enough to keep after New Year's, for another year's use." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 D 14 '47 110w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer

N Y Times p50 D 7 '47 140w

CRANDALL, FRANK GUILFORD. It's an allergy. 313p $3.50 Murray & Gee

615.37 Allergia Med46-38

"Study of a West Coast allergist on allergy, replete with case histories. Written for the layman, with chapters on common manifestations as asthma, hay fever and many other allergic conditions describing conditions, symptoms, diagnosis and treatments." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:389 Mr 1 '47 40w

"This approach is sensible, and, it may be added, of particular value to the one whose allergic reaction takes the form of bronchial asthma—an affliction which frightens people out of all proportion to its seriousness." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 13 '46 170w

CRANE, CLARKSON. Naomi Martin. 228p $2.50 Harcourt

47-2412

"Presents a few months in the life of a casually promiscuous young girl in San Francisco back in the winter of 1914-'15, in the early months of World War I." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"This cliché narrative is related in cliché terms. Nothing is contributed by it to any fund of human knowledge, insight or entertainment. It may, as an exercise in kindness, be said to be a work of insipidity, ineffectuality and seeming interminability." R. J. B.

— Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Mr 23 '47 140w

"A book neither for pleasure nor profit."
— Kirkus 15:140 Mr 1 '47 80w

"If you do not find Mr. Crane's well developed penchant for the unpleasant too disturbing, you should find the material, and his able if somewhat cold-blooded use of it, of authentic interest." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Mr 16 '47 700w

CRANE, MRS FRANCES (KIRKWOOD). Murder on the purple water. 247p $2.50 Random house

47-4061

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:266 My 15 '47 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Jl 20 '47 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 Jl 20 '47 140w

"Pleasantly nautical, if rather short on clues."

New Yorker 23:72 Jl 19 '47 70w

"Jean and Pat Abbott act obscurely to solve case. Constant shift between first and third persons confuses narration. Good points: Florida atmosphere and several mouth-watering recipes." L. G. O.

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 20 '47 80w

"Standard brand."

Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 16 '47 50w

CRANE, JOHN, and KIELEY, JAMES F. West Point, the key to America; foreword by the President of the United States. (Whittlesey house publication) 319p il maps $6 McGraw 355.07 U.S. Military academy, West Point

47-11176

An illustrated history of the United States military academy at West Point, from the proposal of Secretary of War Knox for a military academy in 1776, thru its various vicissitudes to 1945. No index.

Reviewed by F. L. Oliver

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 7 '47 550w

"Libraries will want it for both adult and children's rooms. Recommended for all over ten years of age." G. E. Cartmell

+ Library J 72:1544 N 1 '47 50w

"This book should interest laymen as well as the professional soldier. . . The book is handsomely gotten up." J. J. Bradley

+ N Y Times p43 O 19 '47 330w

CRANE, MILTON, ed. Roosevelt era; with a foreword by Jonathan Daniels. standard ed 626p $4.75 Boni & Gaer

973.917 U.S.—History—1932-1945 47-12013

"This is an effort to communicate, through the words of many writers, something of the ideas, the problems, and the actions of men and women in Franklin Roosevelt's America between 1932 and 1945." Editor's note

"Dr. Crane's method is not to juxtapose clashing pieces by Heywood Brown and Westbrook Pegler, let us say, and then quietly wash his hands of the matter; he has himself a strong editorial point of view and expresses it both in interjected comments and in the selection of the material itself. Once this is understood, the book can be appraised and recommended accordingly and, from the material to which it is limited, Dr. Crane has made judicious and entertaining selection." R. L. Strout

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 D 15 '47 360w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 72:1780 D 15 '47 40w

"While it is clearly worth reading just on the strength of its individual contributions, The Roosevelt Era, for all its comparative sketchiness, has the immense cumulative virtue of adding up to an impressive reminder, at once cheering and chastening, of the emotional and intellectual ferment of a stirring 13 years in the national annals." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 117:25 D 1 '47 1600w

School & Society 67:29 Ja 10 '48 20w

CRANE, MILTON, ed. Sins of New York. 278p $2.75 Boni & Gaer

364 Crime and criminals—New York (city) 47-12073

A collection of stories of celebrated New York crimes of the last 150 years. Partial contents: The murder of Elma Sands: 1799, by Russel Crouse; The Twenty-third street murder, by Edmund Pearson; The fight for Erie, by Matthew Josephson; The Wars of the Tongs, by Herbert Asbury; The murder of Arnold Rothstein: 1928, by Russel Crouse; Robbery in Brooklyn, by Jack Alexander.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 30 '47 200w

"'Sins of New York' is more than just a collection of pieces about the city's rugged individualists. It is proof again, if still needed, that the crime reporters are the best in the business. They have an enthusiasm for their trade not found in the ranks of, say, the art critics, and a delight in the morbid peculiarities of their subject." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 25 '48 250w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p24 D 7 '47 220w

CRAVEN, AVERY ODELLE, and JOHNSON, WALTER. United States; experiment in democracy. 886p il maps $5 Ginn

973 U.S.—History 47-31124

A comprehensive one-volume history of the American people. Illustrated. Maps. Selected bibliographies at end of each chapter. Index.

"A recent text, written by two outstanding historians from the University of Chicago . . . manages, in spite of the necessary condensation and generalization, to tell a coherent and interesting story. . . As a textbook, this volume has both the strengths and weaknesses of many other college texts in American history." R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 O 30 '47 480w

School & Society 66:350 N 1 '47 10w

"Gifted with the ability to tell an interesting story in graceful language, the authors present the history of the United States from its inception to Hiroshima. . . The maps are easily read, clear and uncrowded. The book is equipped with a useful index." R. S. Solis-Cohen

+ Social Studies 39:38 Ja '48 300w

CRAWFORD, KATHLEEN. Straw fire. 249p $2.75 Morrow

47-30873

The setting is a conservative Virginia town. The heroine is the daughter of a hidebound elder, and the first question they differ about is the Negro problem. Fundamentally they think enough alike, so that there is no open warfare here. But when Frances falls in love with a Jewish violinist, there is controversy, and the half-hearted liberal, Frances, is badly burned.

Booklist 44:68 O 15 '47

CRAWFORD, KATHLEEN—Continued

Reviewed by Thomas Daffron

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 S 14 '47
320w

Kirkus 15:402 Ag 1 '47 170w

"Around [an] unlikely situation Miss Crawford has written an astonishingly good novel—one of the best on the problem of prejudice to date. Not only is her heart in the right place; her head is too. She writes simply, with no slick mannerisms. . . This is a novel about people, not merely about a problem." J. M. Morse

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S
21 '47 500w

"Miss Crawford writes neatly and with spirit. Perhaps her antagonists are arrayed a bit too neatly at times: her tories' diatribes, and her crushing rejoinders, spurt a bit too glibly from the page. . . Unfortunately, Miss Crawford seems no wiser than her heroine, and her rage goes no deeper. . . The rampant young revolutionary, who plans to go and do likewise day after tomorrow, will find no signposts here." James MacBride

+ — N Y Times p20 S 7 '47 450w

"The first half or two-thirds of the book will show you that Miss Crawford is better equipped than most first novelists. It's my guess that she will do much better, and that the publisher has found in her the makings of a good writer." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 22 '47
550w

CRAWFORD, NELSON ANTRIM, comp. Cats in prose and verse; drawings by Diana Thorne. 387p $5 Coward-McCann

636.88 Cats—Legends and stories. Literature—Collections 47-5209

An anthology of prose and verse about cats. Contributors include T. S. Eliot, C. D. Warner, Agnes Rothery, H. P. Lovecraft, S. T. Warner, E. A. Poe, Algernon Blackwood, Saki, Colette, S. V. Benét, Lewis Carroll.

Booklist 44:63 O 15 '47

Kirkus 15:251 My 1 '47 120w

"A good collection."

+ New Yorker 23:64 Ag 2 '47 100w

CREATORE, LUIGI. This world is mine. 245p $2.50 Rinehart

47-1211

Victor Blake, coming out of a movie house, realizes that he has lost his memory. In sailor clothes, with an identification card in his pocket, he knows his name is Victor Blake, and that he is a pharmacist's mate 1/c, and so he finds his way to the psychiatric ward of a naval hospital. There for weeks he and the doctor work to bring back his memory with eventual success. The story of their labors is contained in this short novel, based on fact.

"This is Luigi Creatore's first novel. For a first novel it is technically incredible. The story moves crisply, surely. Characters are sketched deftly, suspense is adroitly handled. There is an artistic maturity throughout that one just doesn't expect to find in a first novel." Wendell Johnson

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 3 '47
320w

"A tensely nerved, single-focussed story of dislocation; compelling reading."

+ Kirkus 15:39 Ja 15 '47 170w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
Ap 20 '47 250w

"Well-written, well-planned first novel. . . Like a stretch of 'automatic writing' which Mr. Creatore offers as a sample of his protagonist's groping, the finale seems far too easy for conviction. However, the first-hand reporting of Victor's case history itself more than atones for the packaged ending." H. B. Parker

+ — N Y Times p14 Mr 23 '47 500w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 16 '47
70w

"The novel [is] a series of good stories. . . The case history value of the book, however, is minimal; fiction completely obscures what ever clinical interest the true story might have had." B. D. Lewin

Sat R of Lit 30:54 Ap 12 '47 230w

Spring'd Republican p10B S 28 '47
90w

CREEKMORE, HUBERT. Long reprieve, and other poems from New Caledonia. 67p $2.50 New directions

811

47-6463

"This is Hubert Creekmore's third book of poetry, the earlier titles being Personal Sun and The Stone Ants. . . During the war Creekmore was stationed at our naval base in New Caledonia, which serves as the background for many of these new poems. They are not war poems, however, in the ordinary sense. The poet has sought rather to transmit the feelings of an individual into comprehensible form." Publisher's note

"Partly because of their setting, and partly because of the poet's serious attempt to integrate the events and meanings of the past with those of the present, several poems in 'The Long Reprieve' are among the most remarkable to come from a war experience." Ruth Lechlitner

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
O 26 '47 750w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

N Y Times p10 My 11 '47 550w

"Creekmore's expression is frequently impeded by his interest in prosody as such, but his seriousness and powers of observation are apparent, in spite of his often baffling form and overwrought language."

+ — New Yorker 22:99 F 8 '47 70w

"Concert at Sea is perhaps the most interesting and exacting poem in the collection, though a failure. In it, Creekmore combines most nearly successfully the speculation with the execution, most nearly fuses the two disparate: the idea per se and the poetic idea. Even though the fusion does not occur, it is in such a poem that Mr. Creekmore may find his fate as a poet—and in more such poems that he may find his next book." Harvey Breit

Poetry 70:50 Ap '47 370w

Reviewed by A. M. Sullivan

Sat R of Lit 30:36 Mr 22 '47 330w

CREEKMORE, RAYMOND. Little Fu; lithographs by [the author]. [40p] $2 Macmillan

Little Fu describes his adventures on his first trip down the river to Foochow with his father, when he goes to sell tea. Illustrated with lithographs. For ages six to eight.

Booklist 44:174 Ja 1 '48

Kirkus 15:648 D 1 '47 80w

"Recommended for ages 4-7." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 73:48 Ja 1 '48 40w

"The story is told by little Fu himself and on every page is a lithograph that gives a vivid impression of life on a Chinese river. The story is so simply told it can be understood by little children."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:33 D 13 '47 90w

CREEL, GEORGE. Rebel at large; recollections of fifty crowded years. 334p $3.75 Putnam

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.

Autobiography of an American writer and newspaperman, which is at the same time a history of the last fifty years in America. The author began his public career when at twenty-three he became owner and editor of the Kansas City Independent, and since that time has held several government offices, has written for many magazines and papers, and has been a well-known fighter against political machines. Index.

Booklist 44:105 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Ralph Habas

Chicago Sun Book Week p7X D 21 '47
500w

"The reader must select the chapters if he comes out with a single opinion of George Creel's fifty years as a free lance, a social rebel. He must select the chapters because when Mr. Creel is good, he is very good, and when he is terrible, it is best to open up all the doors and windows. . . . Select your chapters and take your choice. It is about even." George Streator

Commonweal 47:285 D 26 '47 450w

"Social and political commentary and memorabilia, flavored with rugged individuality and old American tradition, this is definitely of interest to his own contemporaries."

+ Kirkus 15:566 O 1 '47 170w

"In general the story of his boyhood is delightful, as authentic a bit of Americana as anything in 'Tom Sawyer.' . . . It is the more regrettable that when he comes to the period of the second world war he lays it on his successors as recklessly as the Republicans of 1920 laid it on him. . . . This reviewer can't go along with Mr. Creel quite that far, but he confesses having enjoyed the book. It is the first volume of fine, old-fashioned fury that has come along in quite a while and there is a nostalgic charm about it that is irresistible." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
N 9 '47 1000w

"Bias is rampant in the book, rising to the pitch of absurdity where the author asserts that F. D. R. 'invariably' consigned recalcitrant reporters to the dunce's corner. It happened once, possibly twice. Presumptively, however, Mr. Creel does not expect to be taken au pied de la lettre in his carefree reflections. . . . One offense cannot be charged against him: dullness. Implicit acceptance of his book as reliable history would be inadvisable. But it is, in its way, a pertinent record of stirring times, intensely personal and therefore brisk and readable." S. H. Adams

+ — N Y Times p6 N 22 '47 1100w

"Highly entertaining first-hand history."

+ New Yorker 23:136 N 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 12 '47
950w

"Mr. Creel was eye-witness to much of the vast excitement of the first half of the twentieth century—an era that took America, in spite of herself, out into the world. Historians of that era (no one will envy them their job) will regard him as a competent reporter who has written a useful book." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 N 22 '47 650w

CRESPI, PACHITA. Wings over Central America [il. by the author]. 169p il $2.75 Scribner 917.2 Central America—Description and travel 47-30952

"Pachita Crespi, who is a native of Costa Rica, describes a trip by airplane through the six Central American Republics. It is an intimate, colorful story of the land and its people." Sat R of Lit

"The material is well selected but largely factual and presented in textbook style. . . . The author treats all religious aspects of her journey by air through the Central American republics with respect, but without any apparent Catholic insight. This book, however, can be recommended for use in geography study." B. J. Thompson

+ — Cath World 166:236 D '47 150w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:448 N '47 80w

Kirkus 15:507 S 15 '47 130w

"Even solid information on such subjects as education and the development of resources is given in a disarming, informal style that makes it easy reading. The armchair traveler of 10 to 14 will find this an absorbing book." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p27 S 28 '47 160w

Reviewed by Jewel Gardiner

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 30 '47
220w

"Illustrated with many drawings printed in sepia and stunning endpaper in color."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:62 N 15 '47 50w

CRESSON, MRS. MARGARET (FRENCH). Journey into fame; the life of Daniel Chester French; with a foreword by Walter Prichard Eaton. 316p pl $4.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 French, Daniel Chester 47-30328

"The life of Daniel Chester French, by his daughter. The sculptor's journey was not a long one, for he became famous in his early twenties, when he completed the Minute Man in Concord. From then on, with few pauses, he went from triumph to triumph, reaching his peak with the colossal figure of Lincoln in the Lincoln Memorial." New Yorker

Booklist 43:345 J1 1 '47

"A definitive 'Life' with extended comment on the 174 works will, no doubt, be written. But this charming volume cannot be superseded. It is the intimate and glowing evocation of the man. With it, one can look at the famous statues with new understanding. It proves, to those who doubt, that an artist can live his life in the open, can accept the restraints and responsibilities of upright living, and be both great and happy." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 16
'47 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '47

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 72:1035 J1 '47 100w

"A pleasant and unpretentious account of the life and work of her father, Daniel Chester French. . . . The author includes only a few critical analyses of works of sculpture, the excellence of her father's work being taken for granted, as are also the aesthetic standards of the culture of which they were parts." Joseph Hudnut

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
Ag 3 '47 1200w

Reviewed by W. G. Dooley

+ N Y Times p6 Je 15 '47 750w

"Mrs. Cresson writes tenderly and uncritically (her father had more doubts concerning his genius than she has) about a modest, retiring Yankee Puritan who nevertheless managed to get quite rich. Except for a complete lack of perspective as to French's permanent place in American art, and an arch chapter or two in which the author figures in the third person, the book makes an engaging memoir."

+ — New Yorker 23:80 Je 28 '47 150w

"It could have been a dull and talky book; instead it is bright and eminently readable."

+ Springfield Union p5 Ag 12 '47 130w

CRESSON, WILLIAM PENN. James Monroe. 577p il $5 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 Monroe, James 47-652

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"To bring Monroe out of his 'curiously misunderstood and shadowy' position in American history, to borrow phrasing from one of Cresson's earlier books, was no easy task. Monroe confided few of his innermost thoughts and feelings to paper, and the height of his public career, his presidency, is one of the least studied and most misunderstood periods in American history. Despite these difficulties, Cresson has made an important contribution to a better understanding of his times. The book has the added virtue of being well written and of being attractively printed and bound." C. S. Sydnor

+ Am Hist R 52:518 Ap '47 650w

"The volume is a faithful chronicle of the numerous public services and missions in which this patriotic American spent more than fifty years of his life. It is largely a factual and narrative biography rather than one of analysis, interpretation, and objective evaluation. Especially for this reason, it can hardly be thought of as definitive, although certainly the most valuable and complete life of Monroe thus far published. The text is liberally infiltrated with quotations from the sources. . . . The author indulges in no speculation; but readers (who ought to be many) can find here a stimulating and challenging assignment by using these copious materials as a basis for determining whither and how far Monroe would have gone had he travelled entirely on his own power and without the charts, predetermined courses, and guidance supplied by his distinguished predecessors and contemporaries." A. J. Lien

CRESSON, W. P.—Continued

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:138 F '47 700w

"In a sense, the personality of James Monroe is one of the riddles of American history. . . . It cannot be said that the biography under review throws much light on the matter. It was prepared by Mr. Cresson more than fifteen years ago, and was not finished at the time of his death. It has undergone two revisions and expansions, and is in a sense a composite work. It is only fair to say that it lacks the vivacity and literary charm which distinguished some of Mr. Cresson's earlier publications. . . . The book is well illustrated and well printed." Dexter Perkins

Ann Am Acad 250:164 Mr '47 340w

Booklist 43:204 Mr 1 '47

"Important and interesting as was the public service of James Monroe, he has never received much attention from biographers. There are many monographs which reflect light on segments of his career; there have been a few biographical attempts. One of the reasons for this biographical neglect undoubtedly has been the fact that Monroe is difficult to understand, especially as an individual. He left a large mass of letters and public papers, but the reader of them is seldom rewarded by a glimpse of the personality of the writer. W. P. Cresson's work is the latest attempt to provide a biographical interpretation of our fifth President." R. A. Brown

Christian Science Monitor p10 F 8 '47 850w

Reviewed by Adrienne Koch

N Y Times p6 J1 6 '47 1050w

Springf'd Union p2 Je 23 '47 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p640 D 13 '47 1200w

"The present biography approaches Monroe from the author's knowledge of international affairs, and treats Monroe primarily as a public man, with much attention to the setting. It is carefully documented with references to published and manuscript sources."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:35 Mr '47 320w

CRILE, GEORGE WASHINGTON. Autobiography; ed. with sidelights by Grace Crile. 2v il $10 Lippincott

B or 92

Med47-2476

"With the exception of the sidelights and transitions, [written by his wife] this is the Chief's own story as he himself wrote it in notes, diaries, letters, case histories, accounts of his experiments and expeditions. Much of it has, therefore, the freshness of contemporary writing for it mirrors events as they were taking place." (p. vii) Index.

Booklist 44:105 N 15 '47

Springf'd Republican p11C D 7 '47 150w

CRISPIN, EDMUND, pseud. See Montgomery, R. B.

CRISPIN, FREDERICK SWING. Dictionary of technical terms; containing definitions of commonly used expressions in aeronautics, architecture, woodworking and building trades, electrical and metalworking trades, printing, chemistry, etc. 7th ed rev 427p il $2.75 Bruce pub.

603 Technology—Dictionaries

46-7263

This edition "contains many terms and definitions not found in the earlier editions; particularly in relation to aeronautics, auto mechanics, electricity, plastics, and welding." (Pref)

Booklist 43:225 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1627 N 15 '46 60w

CRISWELL, CLOYD MANN. Asiatic station; poems. 97p $2 Press of James A. Decker 811

47-5850

Collection of lyrics by an American poet. They range from hunting butterflies in the jungle, to the Egyptian room of a New York museum, or the joys of country pursuits.

Reviewed by W. J. Smith

Poetry 70:112 My '47 140w

"There is not a phony attitude, or a phony phrase or word, in his book. His is not a soaring imagination. He hasn't emotional intensity in the fine excess that great poetry needs as fire needs fuel. There is no verbal sorcery in his lines. The touch of wildness is lacking. Yet somehow, almost unconsciously, almost by a reverse twist, he is able to translate death into life." Starr Nelson

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 Mr 1 '47 550w

CRITCHELL, LAURENCE. Four stars of hell; with a foreword by Lewis Brereton. 353p maps $3.75 McMullen

940.542 U.S. Army. 501st parachute regiment. U.S. Army. Parachute troops

47-4596

An account of the battles of the 501st Parachute Regiment of the 101st Airborne Division in France and Germany during 1944 and 1945.

Reviewed by H. A. DeWeerd

N Y Times p24 J1 20 '47 650w

"It is a personalized record, told in terms of the men of all ranks, of how they trained and fought and died. The author's own participation in events is modestly concealed. Despite its dramatic title, literary character, and lack of such scholarly credentials as documentation, bibliography, and index, the story has an authentic ring."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:273 S '47 240w

CROCKER, WALTER RUSSELL. On governing colonies; an outline of the real issues and a comparison of the British, French, and Belgian approach to them. 152p $2.75 Macmillan

325.315 Colonies. Africa—Politics [47-4390]

"A comparison of British, French and Belgian colonial policy in Africa, by a member of the British Colonial Service who on the whole believes that European rule has been beneficial to the Africans." Foreign Affairs

"The book is sometimes controversial but always readable and informative." Ernest Manheim

+ — Am J Soc 53:311 Ja '48 500w

"This is an interesting book; it is well written; if the author upon occasion has indulged in simplification and generalization, it must be remembered that the very subject defies brief treatment." C. G. Post

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1050 O '47 380w

Foreign Affairs 26:232 O '47 40w

Reviewed by Rita Hinden

New Statesman & Nation 33:300 Ap 26 '47 650w

Reviewed by E. H. Keeling

Spec 178:440 Ap 18 '47 850w

"The European record in Africa is, everything considered, not a bad record. It is better than the African record in Africa. All the European Powers with colonies have done more good than evil to their charges, and they all to-day show concern, though not always either wise or sufficient concern, for their well-being." Colonel Crocker's tolerant, humane study begins with this rather defiant aphorism and is developed from his observations made during a number of years in British, French, and Belgian Africa. He is no respecter of persons and gives many a sly dig at the theorists who are so sure about what is wrong with the Colonial Empires."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Ap 12 '47
700w

CROFT-COOKE, RUPERT. Miss Allick [Eng title: Octopus]. 248p $2.75 Holt

47-1964

The story of a clever English woman, Miss Allick, during the years between the two World wars. At first Miss Allick appears as the typical, mousy governess; her only differences being the book she is writing, and her love for one of her pupils. When Miss Allick's dull book proved a huge success, she took two years in which to educate herself and then appeared with a new book and a new décor. Each time fashions in literature changed Miss Allick was a bit in advance of the game and made a success; and with each success she changed her own personality and surroundings. The story is told by the older brother of her first charges.

Booklist 43:241 Ap 1 '47

"The story of Miss Allick's progress from pince-nez to no glasses to horned rims is both funny and real. The love affair, which is woven in with this, is not so convincing. The book would have been better without it. But aside from that 'Miss Allick' is a good job with a fresh plot and a subtle sense of character." Helen Woodward

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ap 13 '47
270w

"The book is an ironical thrust at the public who snaps up meretricious values; it is a lament on the deterioration of literature—and with it all, it is good entertainment, spiced with sarcasm and trimmed with good British decor, in subtle style. Not for everyone—but those who will appreciate it will have a good time."

+ Kirkus 15:13 Ja 1 '47 190w

"Mr. Croft-Cooke's outline of the modern writing career might have been funnier, but it could not have been more accurate or better calculated to demonstrate the way in which literature marks our political directions; whatever liveliness is missing from 'Miss Allick' is more than compensated for by its intelligence." Diana Trilling

+ Nation 165:22 Ji 5 '47 470w

"The book is funny, bitter and biting and only preachy at the end. The author's point—which readers and critics may brood on—is that since the First World War the line of demarcation between art and popular literature has been erased and for the past 25 years we have been sold into accepting best-sellers as masterpieces and mediocrity has become our touchstone."

+ New Repub 116:35 My 5 '47 180w

"A novel about a novelist, this new book by Mr. Croft-Cooke begins in a sprightly and even promising manner, grows progressively less interesting, develops into a bad-tempered homily and ends in a long and frenzied shriek of abuse. Its argument seems to be that popular fiction is at the root of all evil in the modern world and even—though this is by no means quite clear—responsible for everything unattractive about it, including mass-production and immorality." Iris Barry

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
Ap 27 '47 500w

"Mr. Croft-Cooke's lampooning is better than his character-drawing—but perhaps that is all any mere male can hope for, especially if he has the bad luck to be writing novels nowadays. It's high time that an Allick's pelt was nailed to the barn door, for all the world to see; and we can only be grateful to this hunter for a neat job. But we'd have enjoyed listening to her heartbeat as well." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 27 '47 700w

"A clever, literate satire that pillories the tribe of best-selling lady novelists and at the same time preaches a stern and eloquent sermon against the tastelessness of our times."

+ New Yorker 23:124 Je 7 '47 90w

CROFTS, FREEMAN WILLS. Death of a train. 271p $2.50 Dodd

47-1210

Detective story.

"Except for a shabby finale in which sense and probability blow up with Inspector French's hand grenades, Death of a Train is an uncommonly absorbing tale." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 16 '47
100w

"Unless you're a glutton for railway stuff you may find yourself skipping in the first part of this all-wool tale where it offers almost too generous detail about what the author calls the conception, birth, life, death and burial of some rolling stock. If you crave same be assured that it is all authentic enough. . . Good old French is in at the kill, ready to sacrifice his life for the plot. It's 'pure detection,' with warlike trimmings." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
Ja 19 '47 270w

"This is not one of Mr. Crofts' best efforts." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 F 2 '47 180w

"Very satisfactory, in an old-fashioned, easy-going way."

+ New Yorker 22:96 Ja 18 '47 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 F 2 '47
60w

"Initial plowing through railroad technicalities slightly boring. French's later detecting is sound but affair as whole is rather pedestrian."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ja 18 '47 40w

CROMWELL, GERTRUDE E. Health of the school child. 256p il $2.50 Saunders

371.71 School hygiene. Children—Care and hygiene 46-5618

"This book on school nursing is based on progressive and sound principles. The discussion centers around the needs of the child while he is in school and various ways school personnel, particularly the school nurse, can foster his optimal growth and development." Am J Pub Health

"For the most part the author has a well rounded point of view and presents the results of the more important of modern studies in the field. The great need for more scientific and definitive studies is clear, but the author of this volume cannot be held responsible for the fact that there is often little but opinion to guide her. That she has chosen so wisely is the reader's good fortune. This reader, however, wondered why so much emphasis was given to the Snellen test for visual acuity and the Massachusetts Vision or other screening tests were not discussed. Similarly there was no mention of the pitch tone audiometer, or newer methods of treatment of scabies and pediculosis. The problem of tuberculosis in school personnel was not discussed. . . But such minor omissions should not retard the wide use of this excellent little book by school nurses, doctors, health officers, health educators, school officials, and others interested in the health of school children. It is probable that the book will prove most valuable to interested lay persons." Leona Baumgartner

+ Am J Pub Health 37:466 Ap '47 270w

"The clear type and well organized general facts under topic headings add to the attractiveness of this small, compact book. Physical health is stressed, but mental health is implied. The illustrations are up to date, and some of the material is based on recent findings. The book is direct and sticks to the subject." Katharine Roy

+ J Home Econ 38:604 N '46 160w

CROOK, W. MELVIN. Power for the small boat. 169p $3 Dodd

623.823 Marine engines. Gas and oil engines 47-3211

Information on the mechanics of engines for the owners or prospective owners of inboard-

CROOK, W. M.—Continued
engined boats. Covers engine selection, installation, maintenance, and care.

Booklist 43:326 Je 15 '47

"It is written for the individual with little knowledge of machinery and leads him, child-like, through the intricacies that bother most part-time sailors. Installation methods, types of controls, ignition systems, ventilation and tips on maintenance are covered. The illustrations are easily understood." Theodore Sweedy

+ N Y Times p12 Je 29 '47 100w

CROSS, JOHN KEIR. Other side of Green Hills; il. by Robin Jacques [Eng title: Owl and the pussycat]. 190p $2.50 Coward-McCann

47-30953

A fantasy in which five English children, spending the Christmas holidays in an old house in England, establish contact with forces they do not understand. They are almost to the edge of disaster when they are rescued by the powers of good on Christmas morning. For imaginative children.

"A beautifully written story of mystery and magic, or, in the words used by the children, 'Something kind and quiet and far away, something out of another life, dealing with secret, lost enchanted things.' Like all deeply imaginative books written for children, this will appeal to adults as well." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 D 11 '47 250w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:443 N '47 150w

"A few sensitive souls of all ages will respond to its charm, distinction, and even wisdom." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 72:1475 O 15 '47 70w

"A dream-world atmosphere, enhanced by confused and ghostly illustrations, pervades the trance-like story. Imaginative older children and many adults will find it fascinating, but literal readers will be baffled by a complete absence of explanations." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p33 S 14 '47 270w

"It is not an altogether pleasant story, and parts of it are beyond the comprehension of most children. The illustrations are interesting, but they, too, have little appeal to childhood."

Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 15 '47 50w

CROSS, MILTON JOHN. Complete stories of the great operas; line drawings by Dolores Ramos. 627p $3.75 Doubleday

782 Operas—Stories, plots, etc. 47-12361

The stories of seventy-two operas, many of them in the repertory of the Metropolitan opera company. Three chapters give brief comments on: how to enjoy an opera; a brief history of opera; and the ballet in opera. Selected reading guide. Index.

Booklist 44:180 Ja 15 '48

"The large volume of questions Cross receives from listeners has enabled him to select what he thought would best help and interest opera fanciers. The book is general enough in its coverage to provide the novice with the essentials for understanding opera. At the same time it is thorough and well-grounded enough to guide the serious and advanced opera devotee in further study."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p15A D 3 '47 110w

Kirkus 15:614 N 1 '47 80w

"On reading these libretto digests you realize how much a script, even a straight one-man narration, owes to the delivery of the narrator. In black and white, robbed of Milton Cross' famous and slightly florid oratorical style, the stories make rather dull reading, especially as the author (outside of giving dates of first performances, etc.) has extremely little to say about the music. . . In addition to the opera plots, Mr. Cross' book contains a hurried and therefore inadequate history of opera and a history of ballet in opera which is scarcely more rewarding. There is also a chapter 'How to Enjoy an Opera,' in which Mr. Cross suggests that librettos and recordings are most helpful." To this thought no one will take exception." M. C. Hastings

— + N Y Times p9 D 28 '47 430w

CROSSMAN, RICHARD HOWARD STAFFORD. Palestine mission; a personal record. 210p maps $2.75 Harper

956.9 Palestine—Jewish-Arab problem. Zionism. Jews in Europe 47-2304

"British member of the Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry regarding the problems of European Jewry tells the story of 100 days of committee deliberation in Washington, London, Vienna, Cairo, Jerusalem and Lausanne. Though reconstructed from Crossman's personal diary, no secret documents or secret sessions are reported. A record of an honest man's tussle with a problem almost insoluble. In final analysis author feels outcome of Palestinian problem depends on success of One-World idea." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:269 My 1 '47

Reviewed by Robert Lasch
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ap 20 '47 360w

Reviewed by Ernest Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 29 '47 240w

"This is a chatty, breezy book marked in places by pungent insights and profound observations. Its pages are marred, at times, by errors concerning the U.S.A. which might have been prevented had Crossman been a bit more painstaking in composition or had asked an informed American to read proof on his manuscript. The book is, however, an earnest though not entirely successful effort to plumb to the depths of an age-old problem: 'Must the Jew choose between Zionism or cease to be a Jew?'" C. H. Voss

Churchman 161:17 Je 1 '47 240w

Foreign Affairs 25:706 Jl '47 110w

"He speaks openly of the perils of the transition years, and sees the Arab position much more clearly than does Crum. But somehow, his book lacks the fire of conviction; one feels the somewhat coldly analytical detachment that robs his words of the fighting spirit which is so characteristic of the other book."

Kirkus 15:119 F 15 '47 130w

"Unbiased, sensible study of perhaps the most confused problem in the postwar world. Will not appeal to extremists in either Zionist or Arab camps. But will prove of interest to man on sidelines who wants to know what it is all about." J. C. Shipman

+ Library J 72:526 Ap 1 '47 140w

"Mr. Crossman is at his best in showing how the Palestine problem affects different minds and in explaining the different approach of the British, with their natural sympathy for the under-dog, and the Americans, with their traditional respect for the pioneer. . . Mr. Crossman's conclusions are now well known; they are almost the same as those advocated by the 'Manchester Guardian' for some time. But this book is warmly recommended to all those who are interested in the Palestinian problem and to the minority (now rapidly increasing) who are interested in Mr. Crossman." J. M. D. P.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 27 '47 390w

Reviewed by Richard Watts
New Repub 116:31 Ap 14 '47 900w

"One good thing has come out of an otherwise futile mission. It has given Crossman the material for the most illuminating book about Palestine published for many a long year. It is unique in this, that though its author was not and did not become a partisan, he none the less arrives at clear-cut conclusions. His account of how he reached them is the best introduction to this thorny subject the unbiased reader could desire. My only regrets are that Crossman discusses neither the difficult details of partition nor the promise of the Jordan Valley scheme. But where he has given so much and told his tale so well, why ask for more?" H. N. Brailsford

+ New Statesman & Nation 33:399 My 31 '47 1300w

"This is a brilliantly written and intriguing book. Its searching analysis will provoke both enthusiastic approval and violent dissent among the experts but will aid the objective reader to a fuller understanding of the complicated and baffling problem of the inter-related and conflicting aspirations of Jews and Arabs in the Holy Land and of the great powers whose rivalries set the Middle Eastern stage. . . A connecting thread through the book is the author's personal and often surprisingly frank confessions of his developing attitudes toward the several characters in this drama." J. G. McDonald
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1
Ap 6 '47 1600w

"It is a brave man who writes about Palestine these days without taking sides between Jew and Arab. This means that the lambasting comes from every direction. Richard Crossman is not going to be thanked for this book by Jew or Arab, Zionist or anti-Zionist, American or Briton. For that reason, as well as for others, it ought to prove a controversial as well as a valuable work." H. L. Matthews
N Y Times p7 Mr 30 '47 1450w

"Crossman devotes more attention [than Crum] to the evolution of his own thought as he struggled to comprehend the world-wide Jewish predicament, Zionism, and the situation in the Middle East. . . Crossman's volume, too, can bring its actors to life and describe with freshness, verve, and humor the trials and adventures of a committeeman, but its chief appeal will be to those who are seriously concerned with the Jewish problem and the situation in Palestine." P. L. Hanna
+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 My 3 '47 600w

"The sorry truth is—and it is reinforced in this book—that the committee was animated, even dominated, by political considerations. Some persuaded themselves that they were being impartial, but compromise resulting from refusal to admit maximum claims by either side is not impartiality. It is not even, pace the two Judges who sat on the Commission, judiciality. It may be folly, if conclusions do not follow evidence. And if ever recommendations were divorced from analysis, they were so in the report of the Anglo-American Committee. But Palestine Mission, which, for Mr. Crossman, is really Palestine Admission, makes lively reading, and few will fail to benefit from its pages." Kenneth Williams
Spec 178:598 My 23 '47 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p276 Je 7 '47
1350w

Wis Lib Bul 43:79 My '47

CROUSE, WILLIAM HARRY. Automotive mechanics. 673p il $4.50 McGraw 629.28 Automobiles. Automobiles—Repairing
46-8284

"Textbook on the construction, theory of operation, testing adjustment, repair and maintenance of automobiles presented in understandable language. Maintenance testing and repair procedures are based on practices approved by car and equipment manufacturers. Comprehensive treatment of trouble shooting. Review and study questions." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:164 F 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 70:1135 D 1 '45 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:56 O '46

CROWE, JOHN. Book of trout lore. (Sportsman's lib) 233p il $3.75 Barnes, A.S.

799.1755 Trout fishing Agr47-9

Advice on how and where to fish for trout, written for the amateur. Illustrated with photographs and drawings. Index.

Booklist 43:305 Je 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 73:42 Ja 1 '48 20w

"It is a clean, concise primer, written primarily for inexperienced fishermen, and it describes successful fishing techniques patently based on personal experiences. The veteran angler, however, will find many excellent hints." Herman Forster
+ N Y Times p24 My 18 '47 90w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ap 27 '47
200w

CROWELL, MRS GRACE (NOLL). Wind-swept harp. 76p $1 Harper
811 46-8132

Collection of quiet, reflective poems. Some of the poems have been previously published in farm and church papers.

"As always, on a sustained high level of thought and expression."

+ Christian Century 63:1504 D 11 '46 20w

Wis Lib Bul 43:19 Ja '47

CROWELL, PERS. Six good friends; a story of circus horses [il. by the author]. (Whitlsey house publication) 63p $2.50 McGraw

Horses—Legends and stories 47-5958

"Strictly speaking, this is not one story but six sketches, in words and pictures, of five horses and a little brown mule, all bound together by friendship under the big top." N Y Times

Booklist 44:93 N 1 '47

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 166:236 D '47 60w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn BK 23:442 N '47 120w

Kirkus 15:429 Ag 15 '47 110w

"Recommended." Helen Kremer

+ Library J 72:1473 O 15 '47 70w

"The stories have the ring of authenticity; the many pictures, in color and in black-and-white are realistic, if not exactly sensitive, and full of action. Seven-to-10-year-olds who like C. W. Anderson's book will also enjoy this one." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p43 O 26 '47 180w

Springfd Republican p13B Ja 18 '48
90w

CROY, HOMER. Corn country. (American folkways ser) 325p $3.50 Duell

917.7 West. Corn (maize) 47-3772

"In the American Folkways series some writers have emphasized history and at least one has been strong on economics. Croy sticks to folkways; his is a friendly, folksy picture of mid-America. In familiar, flavorsome style he writes about town names, corn-belt words, popular fallacies, cornhusking and hog-calling contests, deep wells and grasshoppers." Library J

Booklist 43:357 J1 15 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 22 '47
360w

"Most readers like short sentences, short paragraphs, short chapters. Most readers don't like dates. Most readers like humor. Most readers don't like theories; they prefer them in the guise of facts; then they don't know they're theories. Mr. Croy obliges on all four counts. The absence of dates gives his account an Expressionistic air: like the spiritual world of the Transcendentalist, Mr. Croy's Corn Belt is a world in which time and space do not sunder kindred things. He is the reporter and humorist turning out a regional portrait. It is sure to be one of the most popular in the series." Horace Reynolds
Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 7 '47
1150w

CROY, Homer—Continued

Reviewed by A. W. Taylor

Churchman 161:16 Ag '47 210w

Kirkus 15:180 Mr 15 '47 110w

"Much of it is exceedingly useful and all of it is fascinating and difficult to find elsewhere. The corn belt stretches from western Ohio to eastern Kansas but Croy dwells mainly on rural Iowa and Missouri. Don't fail to read the index! Recommended." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:730 My 1 '47 130w

"Homer Croy has written a grand book." Russell Lord

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 My 18 '47 1050w

"'Corn Country' is going to make a lot of people homesick, many who never knew a husking hook from a hack saw." Mari Sandoz

+ N Y Times p16 Je 1 '47 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 27 '47 300w

Wis Lib Bul 43:95 Je '47

CRUICKSHANK, ALLAN D. Wings in the wilderness. 125p il $6 Oxford

598.2 Birds—Pictorial works 47-5963

Over a hundred striking photographs of birds taken by a famous ornithological photographer, with brief descriptive text. "His bird pictures, among the finest in the world, have appeared in newspapers and magazines in many lands. They have been reproduced in advertisements and on billboards, they have appeared in encyclopedias, have provided illustrations for half a hundred books. They have even added life to a mathematics text." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R)

Booklist 44:84 N 1 '47

"A new collection of what are probably the 125 most magnificent bird photographs in the world, taken by Allan D. Cruickshank, who is certainly the most magnificent bird photographer in the world." J. C. Cort

+ Commonweal 47:202 D 5 '47 650w

Kirkus 15:417 Ag 1 '47 170w

"A deluxe edition of a fine book with rare photographs of birds in unusual poses." J. F. Kennedy

+ Library J 72:1695 D 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 73:41 Ja 1 '48 30w

"In a handsome, large-sized format, with superior reproductions, 'Wings in the Wilderness' presents 125 of Cruickshank's pictures to excellent advantage. It is a superb volume that will take its place among the outstanding photographic books of nature literature." E. W. Teale

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 N 9 '47 600w

"Mr. Cruickshank's captions are chatty, charming, and instructive."

+ New Yorker 23:110 O 4 '47 30w

Reviewed by Stanleigh Arnold

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 14 '47 200w

CRUM, BARTLEY CAVANAUGH. Behind the silken curtain; a personal account of Anglo-American diplomacy in Palestine and the Middle East. 297p $3 Simon & Schuster

956.9 Palestine—Jewish-Arab problem. Palestine—Politics and government 47-2305

"This is the record of what one American found when he went behind the silken curtain of secret diplomacy, censorship, and propaganda which veils the problem of Palestine and that of the homeless Jewish displaced persons of Europe. It is a picture of the Arab and Jewish cases and of the problem of anti-semitism in Europe." Publisher's note

Booklist 43:269 My 1 '47

Reviewed by Robert Lasch

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ap 20 '47 450w

"Mr. Crum writes with a captivating human warmth and directness, and with an unusual gift for portraying personalities and capturing the peculiar atmosphere of such different places as a Palestine 'Dibbutz' (community settlement) and President Benes's office at the Royal Castle, in Prague." Ernest Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 29 '47 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '47

Foreign Affairs 26:231 O '47 50w

"A fighting book which should be required reading for everyone who feels himself competent to discuss the question of a solution in Palestine; a book to inform one's opinions, to help one arrive at a constructive American point of view, a sound foreign policy which alone can end the Palestinian crisis. . . . A prejudiced book—perhaps. But he convinces by incontrovertible evidence. A book that, properly and fairly launched, should do much to clear the mists of misconception and confusion from our eyes."

+ Kirkus 15:84 F 1 '47 400w

Reviewed by Marvin Lowenthal

Nation 164:661 My 31 '47 2100w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 116:31 Ap 14 '47 900w

"'Behind the Silken Curtain' begins quite disarmingly. The author, a San Francisco lawyer of distinction and a man well known for his independence of thought and his interest in broad political and social questions, opens by presenting his facts with as much lack of passion as if he were pleading an equity case in the courts. But it is only fair to warn the reader not to undertake this book at all unless he is prepared to be carried along by simple and persuasive eloquence that is a natural consequence of the marshaling of eye-witness facts, unaffectedly but cogently put. . . . Mr. Crum has made our obligation—British and American—penetratingly clear." Harold Ickes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ap 6 '47 1150w

Reviewed by Marquis Childs

N Y Times p6 Ap 13 '47 1200w

"Directly and simply written, the book not only covers the author's service on the committee and the story of what he saw and heard and learned, but makes very plain his stand on what should be done in Palestine and why." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 9 '47 1000w

"Neither Crum's 'Behind the Silken Curtain' nor Crossman's 'Palestine Mission' is objective history. Crum gives more attention to externals and plays up the dramatic episodes of the committee's work in Washington, London, Central Europe, Egypt, Palestine, and Lausanne. . . . Crum's book tells an interesting story and tells it extremely well." P. L. Hanna

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 My 3 '47 600w

Reviewed by Blair Bolles

Survey G 36:309 My '47 310w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:284 S '47 440w

Wis Lib Bul 43:95 Je '47

CRUM, WILLIAM LEONARD, and SCHUM-PETER, JOSEPH ALOIS. Rudimentary mathematics for economists and statisticians. 183p $2.50 McGraw

311.2 Economics, Mathematical 46-5615

"This book represents a revision and expansion of a volume originally issued as a supplement to The Quarterly Journal of Economics. The original purpose has been retained: to present rudimentary ideas and operations essential to any effective mathematical reasoning by economists and statisticians. The material of the book has been organized to develop the mathematical topics from the simplest types of charting of elementary algebraic expressions, and related notions of analytic geometry, through the central and vital treatment of limits and rates and derivatives, up to a brief consideration of the location of maxima and minima and the formulation and solution of simple problems by the method of differential equations." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 43:6 S '46
Eng N 138:95 F 6 '47 130w

"Any book which serves to stimulate students' interest in the mathematical approach to problems of economic analysis is useful but, of the various ways of teaching elementary principles of mathematical economics, this volume by Professors Crum and Schumpeter is one of the less desirable. . . . A basic textbook for econometrics and mathematical economics still remains to be written." L. R. Klein
J Pol Econ 55:392 Ag '47 800w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:825 Je 1 '46 50w

CUBER, JOHN FRANK. Sociology; a synopsis of principles. 590p $4 Appleton-Century
301 Sociology 47-19378

A textbook for college students by the associate professor of sociology at Ohio State University. Suggested readings at chapter ends. Indexes.

"Cuber's objectives are stated simply, sincerely, and honestly. . . . The organization of the materials, while not original, is clear and well-defined. . . . Here and there one wishes that the author could have been more razorlike in his exposition. For example, the reviewer searched for a succinct, logical distinction between sociology and other social sciences which apparently the author attempted to make. All this is minor, however. Within its framework the job has been well done." J. B. Gittler
+ — Am J Soc 53:321 Ja '48 360w

"In most respects this is a text 'for the student.' It is clear and interesting. It contains most of the topics usually found in an introductory sociology, but there is no treatment of the geographic environment and there is a disappointing lack of any discussion of instinct. These topics deserve some mention when a whole chapter is devoted to each of the following: 'Ethnocentrism,' 'Attitudes,' 'Wishes,' 'Individuality.'" Oscar Wesley
+ — Ann Am Acad 252:159 J1 '47 400w

"A college textbook, much more concrete in its materials and specific in its interpretations than the subtitle would suggest. 'Textbook' should not frighten away the intelligent reader. A systematic general textbook in sociology is everybody's needed guide for the study of specific social problems in relation to the total situation."

+ Christian Century 64:657 My 21 '47 60w
School & Society 65:268 Ap 12 '47 20w

Reviewed by H. E. Moore
Social Forces 26:103 O '47 460w

CUDDEBACK, JANE. Unquiet seed. 293p $3 Pellegrini & Cudahy
47-20010

"Tobacco raising holds the center of the stage for a northern New York family, until a hired girl arrives to help the sickly wife—then the women vie with the crop for first place with the men. Much of the tragedy is interpreted through the frustrated bewilderments of an adolescent daughter." Library J

Reviewed by Warren Beck
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ap 27 '47 370w

"Atmosphere wins out over everything else. So exacting is the task imposed by that capricious money crop that what it costs the family in sweat, dirt, back-breaking and anxiety hardly seems worth it. Miss Cuddeback makes it all seem very real."

Commonweal 46:76 My 2 '47 70w

"First-hand details of tobacco farming expertly handled. Perhaps the snail's pace plot development parallels the tempo of tobacco raising; but a novel half the length would have made a more vivid impression." L. R. Miller
Library J 72:528 Ap 1 '47 80w

"Miss Cuddeback's style is simple and vigorous. Hers is a new talent worth watching." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 S 28 '47 500w

"'Unquiet Seed' moves slowly, but it gathers force. Jane Cuddeback writes of farm people and farm life with a sureness that amounts to instinct. Her novel is a rewarding human experience and a glimpse of the work and pain behind L.S.M.F.T." Richard Match
+ N Y Times p12 Je 1 '47 550w

"It will be a pity if the blurb on the dust jacket of this book, which describes it as concerned with a 'family whose life is rooted in the tobacco crop,' puts people with a substantial lack of interest in tobacco crops off an unpretentious, perceptive first novel."

+ New Yorker 23:117 Ap 12 '47 110w

CULLEN, COUNTTEE. On these I stand. 197p $2.50 Harper

811 47-30109

Collection of poems selected from his works by this Negro poet shortly before his death. Six poems never before published are included.

"When the observation contained in the poems is direct and personal, dealing immediately with people seen and events that really occurred, the poems emerge movingly. Too often, however, the treatment is marred by a taint of 'artiness' that is too obviously derivative. . . . This taint of artiness, an overready reliance on the poetic cliché, a weakness for bookish literary forms, and a regrettable insensitivity to the spoken language flaw too many of the poems. It is for the one poem in ten that emerges whole that Countee Cullen will be remembered." John Ciardi
— + Atlantic 179:144 Mr '47 300w

Booklist 43:208 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:9 My '47

Reviewed by A. J. Green
Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Mr 9 '47 190w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47

"This collection of [Cullen's] own choice of the best of his verse shows again his unmistakable gift of lyricism, his romantic passion for his people. He has been greatly influenced by the Victorian romantics in style, but his material is essentially his own, his feeling authentic."

+ Kirkus 15:19 Ja 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald
Library J 72:322 F 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 31 '47 270w

"As one rereads Mr. Cullen's verses, deploping the pity that so real a talent should have been lost in early death, one is bothered by various doubts. Would his talent have matured if he had lived? Was it ever more than a skill at echoing, at assuming the poetic attitudes of the late Victorian and the Georgian past? Is not this verse pretty thoroughly undergraduate—smooth metric, pretty imagery, college Lit. diction? Mr. Cullen wrote like all of one's favorite poets of the traditional order; but faintly, but in what dilution!" Dudley Fitts
N Y Times p26 F 23 '47 380w

"Probably no-one can tell just how or why Cullen's promise faded into mediocre fulfillment, but it is possible to suggest some of the reasons. Cullen neither accepted nor developed a comprehensive world-view. As a consequence, his poems seem to result from occasional impulses rather than from direction by an integrated individual. . . . Cullen was singularly unaware of what was going on in the world of poetry. In the age of Pound and Eliot, he tortured syntax. . . . Perhaps because of his failure to absorb the technical discoveries of his contemporaries, he was singularly unselfcritical and could allow such monstrosities as Dear Friends and Gentle Hearts to be printed. Certainly his failure to study carefully what other poets did is in part responsible for his never developing a style peculiarly his own. Even the good poems in On These I Stand could have been written by any other talented craftsman, they bear no stylistic signature." H. C. Webster

CULLEN, COUNTÉE—Continued

— + Poetry 70:222 J1 '47 1050w

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 27 '47
80w

Reviewed by Arna Bontemps

Sat R of Lit 30:12 Mr 22 '47 1150w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:242 S '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:65 Ap '47

CUMBERLAND, MARTEN. Hate will find a way. 239p $2 Doubleday

47-5248

Detective story

Kirkus 15:266 My 15 '47 60w

N Y Times p23 Ag 10 '47 150w

"Good, unostentatious detection against a convincing background."

+ New Yorker 23:68 J1 26 '47 70w

"Another of Mr. Cumberland's highly successful efforts to enliven the best features of the solid British school with a deft touch of Gallic irony." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 3 '47
80w

"Entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ag 9 '47 40w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN (GARTH HALE, pseud). Death of a bullionaire. 226p $2.50 Dutton

47-5730

Detective story.

"Everything that was richest about the earlier Cunningham stories is missing from this piece of mechanical mystifying." James Sandoe
— Chicago Sun Book Week p43 O 10 '47
140w

Kirkus 15:350 J1 1 '47 50w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 O
5 '47 140w

"Back in Kentucky, where he comes from, Jess Roden used the methods of the Indian and the backwoodsman . . . but the Texas landscape and the sandstorm baffle him, and he has little use for his peculiar talents. Even though he does eventually point out the murderer, he is no longer the Jess Roden we knew in Mr. Cunningham's earlier stories. To this extent, the book is a disappointment." I. A.

N Y Times p34 S 21 '47 190w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p26 O 5 '47
80w

"Satisfying."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 S 27 '47 40w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN (GARTH HALE, pseud). This pounding wheel. 314p $3 Dutton

47-3531

A tale of railroading on the Chesapeake and Ohio at the turn of the century. A three cornered love story in which a division superintendent plays an important part, occupies the center of the stage.

Reviewed by E. S. Watson

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 3 '47
280w

"A maximum of drama worked into an authentic-feeling railroading tale, possible for women, but a novel especially for masculine tastes."

Kirkus 15:200 Ap 1 '47 120w

"Cliché-laden story. . . Not recommended." C. W. Roth

— Library J 72:960 Je 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13
Ag 3 '47 110w

CUNNINGHAM, ELIJAH WILLIAM. Pearl of her sex; il. by Gardner Rea. 182p $2.50 Putnam

817

47-31152

The author is on the staff of the Boston Herald where he has written both sports news and national and international commentary. This volume is composed of biographical and autobiographical sketches in light vein, some of which have appeared in his columns in the Herald.

"Mr. Cunningham is the master of pathos, of humorous anecdotes about his own frailties, of two-fisted patriotism, of decontrolled anger, and of the jargon of the bleachers and the bookmakers. He writes in a lingo all his own. Frequently described as racy and inimitable, his style consists in part of not calling a spade a spade if six other words can be found which convey the same meaning more obliquely. . . For those who swear by Mr. Cunningham, and their numbers are legion, the book will be as welcome as a backstage visit with the man himself." E. L. Jones

+ Atlantic 180:182 N '47 420w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11
Ja 18 '48 140w

"This little volume is your dish if you wish a more intimate knowledge of the Cunningham household—pets, diets, quarrels, vacations, finances, illnesses and marriages. There is even a handsome tribute to the lady who presides over the Cunningham kitchen." Russell Maloney

+ N Y Times p52 N 9 '47 420w

"All told, the book makes a very human, homey and frequently highly amusing story of Cunningham's married life." E. A. F.

+ Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47
300w

CUNNINGHAM, JAMES VINCENT. Judge is fury. 54p $2 Morrow

811

47-23699

A book of poems by one of the younger American poets. "The poems excel in a field that today other poets—except Frost, on occasion—have left untended: the epigram. The verse is hard and classic. The wry analysis of emotion, the Platonic humor, are akin to Santayana; the deftness of the cool and clipped syllables brings Landon to mind." (Sat R of Lit)

"This book will attract a few cultivated readers but it has no large appeal."

Kirkus 15:124 F 15 '47 140w

"A book as distinguished as this one is a delight whenever it comes, but especially so at the moment for the relief it brings: there is in it neither proselytizing nor masochistic exhibition." Henry Rago

+ Poetry 71:50 O '47 950w

"Mr. Cunningham is classically stern and rigid; his aphorisms and epigrams are extremely fine, within the tight form that he has set for his work." George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p20 J1 13 '47
60w

"My only complaint is that Mr. Cunningham introduces identical rhymes as lavishly as a French poet. He is too fine an artist to have done this unintentionally, but the effect in English still sounds weak in my ear. Mr. Cunningham's book will probably not attract a large modern audience, but he should have the satisfaction of knowing that he is carving—even if not always with perfection—in stone, while so many of his contemporaries are still dabbling in the sticky dough left from the Romantic popover." Robert Hilley

+ Sat R of Lit 30:35 Je 28 '47 150w

CUNNINGHAM, VIRGINIA. Paul Laurence Dunbar and his song. 283p il $2.75 Dodd

B or 92 Dunbar, Paul Laurence 47-5509

Biography of an outstanding Negro poet, from Dayton, Ohio. "Paul Laurence Dunbar's verse, delightful to late Victorian audiences, survives now only in a few scattered song lyrics. But his gentle, sensitive spirit won for his race a new appreciation of the Negro's culture who came after him." (N Y Times) For young people's collections.

Booklist 44:37 S 15 '47

"Comprehensive bibliographies. Recommended for high school and young people's collections." E. M. Gordon

+ Library J 72:1475 O 15 '47 40w

"Miss Cunningham traces his every step, from cradle to early grave, with loving care and a wealth of authentication." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p35 S 7 '47 170w

"The reader closes the book feeling that he has learned to know an admirable man and a gifted poet. It is a well planned book that is based on a wealth of research. It is to be regretted, perhaps, that more of Dunbar's poetry is not included. There is, however, a complete bibliography. It is a valuable book for libraries."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:59 N 15 '47 320w

Wis Lib Bul 43:157 N '47

CURLE, RICHARD. Stamp-collecting; a handbook. Am ed 174p il $3 Knopf

383.22 Postage stamps 47-3252

"This guide for the beginner by a British philatelist covers the usual subjects but it is written with an easy simplicity, yet without oversimplification. The English edition has been revised for American publication; it is inevitable that the point of view is that of the English collector." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:324 Je 15 '47

"Excellent introductory material to a popular fascination in which many indulge, this should have a long-term sale."

+ Kirkus 15:206 Ap 1 '47 80w

"Splendid chapter on how to become a specialist. Prices in pounds. Indexed. Philatelists consulted approve." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 72:964 Je 15 '47 80w

"It's a volume of sound scholarship, gentle charm and firm integrity, to arouse respect in the most scornful outsider and stir nostalgic yearnings in anyone who has ever licked a hinge." A. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 20 '47 70w

CURRIER, JAY L. Cargo of fear. 215p $2 Messner

47-18543

Mystery story.

"A style that tries to be smutty and smart, but ends up by just being trying."

+ Kirkus 15:45 Ja 15 '47 40w

"Fast, readable mystery-adventure tale, with lifelike scenery in such spots as Mazatlan, Acapulco and Guadalajara." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 Ap 13 '47 110w

"The pace is fast and furious and buckets of blood are spilled along the way." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p34 Ap 20 '47 150w

"Tough and torrid."

Sat R of Lit 30:68 Ap 12 '47 40w

CURTIS, CHARLES PELHAM. Lions under the throne; a study of the Supreme court of the United States, addressed particularly to those laymen who know more constitutional law than they think they do, and to those lawyers who know less. 368p $3.50 Houghton

347.99 U.S. Supreme court. U.S.—Constitutional law 47-1977

"This is not a history of the Court, but an analysis of the role played by it in the Government of the United States, and its function in our developing democracy from the day of John Marshall to that of Chief Justice Stone." Publisher's note

"The broadly and zestfully elaborated theme of Mr. Curtis' book is vastly stimulating, but equally productive of doubts. The notion that courts of law and policy-making agencies are generically different institutions seems to rest upon one of those legalistic abstractions which Mr. Curtis deprecates. . . One may likewise question the reality of the distinction between the absolutist and the (so to say) 'relativist' schools of judges. . . Finally, the reader may ponder whether or not judicial review is substantially reconciled with democratic dogma by converting it into an instrument for authenticating and enforcing 'our creed for the era.' A skeptic will argue that the many-sided American creed offers even ampler scope for judicial predilections than the generalities of the constitutional text. These and other questions posed by this book do not detract from its value. Its witty and vigorous argument will entertain and stimulate even those who doubt or dissent." J. A. Schroth

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:777 Ag '47 700w

"If the title will attract the casual reader, the style and content will hold the interest of searchers for truth and lovers of vivid prose. It is a remarkable book, and on the whole a remarkably good one. The author is a lawyer of distinction whose admiration for drama has not been desiccated by the chores of his profession. He has taught at Harvard, but he has also hunted big game in Africa. His combination of skills reaches an apotheosis in this volume, which deals with subtle abstractions or with militant facts with equal pungency. Sometimes the style, in its simplicity and power, leads to disdain of meticulous detail. Perhaps only the savant would have it otherwise. Certainly a discriminating reader—and no other should tarry with these pages of logic—will find here a brilliant interpretation of American constitutional development. He will find more: here is a summary of the power methods, problems, and personalities of the Supreme Court. This is a book filled with ideas, richly described in magnificent patterns." F. L. Burdette

+ Ann Am Acad 252:111 Jl '47 360w

"[This book] is wise and witty, warmed by the sunny lights of high literature and philosophy. Mr. Curtis's special note is urbanity. He is alive to the intellectual currents of the Western world, and he is neither a cynic nor a Utopian. He seeks out with a positive good will what he can admire; and he chides departures from perfection ever so gently. It is in this spirit that he writes of the Supreme Court." L. L. Jaffe

Atlantic 179:148 My '47 1300w

Booklist 43:267 My 1 '47

Reviewed by W. T. Gouch

Cath World 166:92 O '47 410w

Reviewed by C. H. Pritchett

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ap 13 '47 320w

"This book, written especially for the layman, is timely and will have a wider audience today than would have been the case a few years ago." A. W. Eckman

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Mr 27 '47 600w

Reviewed by R. J. Purcell

Commonweal 47:258 D 19 '47 700w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 12:497 My '47 650w

"Even those readers who are not persuaded by the point of view of the whole or who are distressed by occasional errors of fact and grammar will read the book with interest and profit. Though some of Mr. Curtis's answers seem inadequate, he has asked all of the significant questions." M. D. Howe

+ Harvard Law R 60:999 Jl '47 1700w

Kirkus 15:146 Mr 1 '47 170w

"Untechnical language, lucid and often entertaining presentation make book not only intelligible but palatable reading for educated layman. With our modern trend away from laissez faire greater understanding of country's highest tribunal is essential. Strongly recommended for law, educational and large public libraries." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 72:316 F 15 '47 80w

"At a time when the United States is proposing to export democracy all over the world, this examination of how democracy works in the United States deserves the most careful attention. It is effective proof that democracy is still growing and changing, and may take a variety of forms. The book is also delightful reading." C. E. Noyes

CURTIS, C. P.—Continued
+ Nation 164:453 Ap 19 '47 550w

"The book is written with wit and elegance. It is a penetrating analysis, with philosophic overtones, of the operation of the Court in applying legal concepts to constitutional issues." T. I. Emerson
+ New Repub 116:26 Je 2 '47 650w

"It is a lively book, and a wise one. There are, unfortunately, a number of errors of fact or of inference. Jurisdiction over bankruptcy was not taken away from the state and given to the Federal courts by the Constitution. Justice Johnson was from South Carolina, not Virginia. . . All these are, perhaps, minor matters—but there are too many of them, and they suggest a carelessness regrettable in a book otherwise so admirable." H. S. Commager
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 6 '47 1600w

Reviewed by J. N. Frank
N Y Times p6 Ap 20 '47 1700w

"There are some inaccuracies in this book. . . Though Curtis' playful prose is often puzzling, his observations are astute and challenging even to those who do not agree with him." W. G. Tyrrell
+ — Pol Sci Q 62:629 D '47 600w

"This is certainly recommended reading for those juridical stuffed shirts who resent a change in the status quo, and who fondly hold to the idea that what was good enough for their forefathers is good enough for the rest of us." Paul Speegle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 My 17 '47 500w

Reviewed by L. K. Garrison
Sat R of Lit 30:9 Mr 29 '47 1250w

"The treatment of specific cases and problems in the final portion of the book is clear, interesting, and penetrating, and is well worth the effort of following the author through the complicated preliminary discussion. The book should prove profitable reading to lawyers and laymen, alike."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 3:284 S '47 280w
Wis Lib Bul 43:93 Je '47

Reviewed by C. E. Clark
Yale R n s 37:141 autumn '47 900w

CURTIS, LIONEL. War or peace? 72p $1.25
Oxford
321.041 War. International relations
[47-25421]

"Mr. Lionel Curtis has been for many years past an eloquent pleader for the world State as the cure for war. His present pamphlet is in the main a recapitulation of arguments with which his readers are already familiar; indeed most of the references in its footnotes are to an earlier work from his pen. What may be called his maximum programme is a complete world State or federation with its capital at Quebec; short of this, he would like to see a union of all the democracies . . . and as a minimum programme he calls for a federation of Great Britain with the democracies of Western Europe as a nucleus round which a larger federation might ultimately grow." Times [London] Lit Sup

Foreign Affairs 26:219 O '47 30w

"In Mr. Curtis's world there are no divergences of social structure, of economic interest, or of political philosophy; and his world government is a laboratory experiment conducted in a social, economic and ideological vacuum such as exists nowhere in nature. Any concrete plan of world government evolved to-day in Washington, in Moscow, or elsewhere would necessarily reflect the beliefs and interests of its sponsors, and would be resisted by others in the name of their perhaps equally valid interests and beliefs. It is true that the objections of the weaker might be overruled. The real protagonists of world government in history have not been men like St. Pierre or Kant or Mr. Curtis, but men like Alexander, Napoleon and Hitler."

Times [London] Lit Sup p594 N 30 '46 700w

CUTHRELL, FAITH (BALDWIN). See Baldwin, F.

CYCLOPEDIA of insurance in the United States, 1946-1947; ed. by G. Reid MacKay and C. S. Rosensweig. (V56) $4.75 Index pub. co, 123 William st, N.Y. 7

368 Insurance (1-15269)

"The Cyclopaedia of Insurance is a compilation of information about insurance companies in the United States which has appeared annually since 1891. The 1933 edition was reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin in July 1933 [Book Review Digest 1934]. The volume is divided into seven sections: fire and marine companies; life insurance companies; casualty, surety and miscellaneous companies and organizations; legal decisions; definitions of insurance terms; biographical sketches of persons prominent in the field; index to biographies in earlier volumes. No sources are given for statistics, which are quoted throughout as of December 31, 1945. . . Much general, unrelated information is also found in these sections. . . The inclusion of additional sub-sections with more specific headings might have made this information more accessible. One noteworthy feature is the cumulative listing, following the biographical section, of biographies which have appeared in previous editions." Subscription Bks Bul

"The awkward arrangement is aggravated by the absence of a complete analytical index. To verify the accuracy of the statistical information approximately one hundred entries were checked with Best's Insurance Guide and Insurance Reports and with the Insurance section of Moody's Manual of Investments. The figures corresponded in every instance except that in some cases round numbers were quoted instead of complete figures. More thorough indexing, arrangement by more specific topics and the use of cross references would have made the book a more adequate reference tool. As it is, much of the miscellaneous information is easily overlooked. In spite of these defects, which were also emphasized in the earlier review, the Cyclopaedia of Insurance in the United States is recommended as a source for up-to-date and accurate data regarding insurance companies and insurance personnel."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 18:33 Jl '47 700w

D

D., H. See Doolittle, H.

DACHS, DAVID (DAVE STANLEY, pseud), ed. Treasury of sports humor; introd. by Ted Husing 487p $3 Lantern press (NY)

Short stories—Collections. Humor 46-8231

Anthology of sports stories. Partial contents: The fifty yard dash, by William Saroyan; The milk pitcher, by Howard Brubaker; Mr. Tutt collects a bet, by Arthur Train; Winning sequence, by Margery Sharp; Gambler's sad saga, by Jimmy Cannon; Football girl, by Katharine Brush; Horseshoes, by Ring Lardner; Mr. Dooley on athletics, by F. P. Dunne; On skating, by C. O. Skinner; 60 ways to lose a horse bet, by Tom O'Reilly; God hit a home run, by Robert Fontaine; "Some bum might mistook me for a wrestler," by Joseph Mitchell; A bat and a prayer, by Howard Breslin; Jackpot vs. Yellowstrike, by Michael Oblinger; The snatching of Bookie Bob, by Damon Runyon; Mrs. Packletide's tiger, by Saki; Trout widows, by Corey Ford; Guinea pig, by Ruth McKenney; A cure for lumbago, by Charles Van Loan.

"The most humorous contributions in the whole book are by the four feminine authors: Margery Sharp's story of the two London spinsters who unwittingly find themselves at the horse races; Katharine Brush's biting little satire on a girl at a football game; Cornelia Otis Skinner's account of her experiences in learning to ice skate, and Ruth McKenney's sketch—from 'My Sister Eileen'—of the time she was made the guinea pig for a girls' life saving class. All but about half a dozen of the book's 37 pieces are fiction—and only a couple of that number have more than a remote connection to fact. Basketball, soccer, archery and mumble-the-peg fans may be disappointed because their sports aren't represented, but all the others are. Dave Stanley has done a job of authorizing that long needed doing and one that in less competent hands could have fallen far short of the high standard he set for himself." Howard Rissler
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p30 N 10 '46 370w

Kirkus 14:431 S 1 '46 90w

"Most of the tales embraced by the 'Treasury' are fictional rather than factual, which omission, to at least one reader, is regrettable. Unless memory is vagrant the book could have been enlivened by some of the racier of the stories about the fabulous Babe Herman of the Dodgers, the erratic exploits of Phil Douglas, 'Bugs' Raymond and 'Rube' Waddell. These characters had the stuff of true comedy in their bloodstreams, demanded little in the way of invention on the part of their biographers." Richard Maney

N Y Times p26 F 16 '47 600w

DAESEN, JOHN R. Galvanizing handbook. 166p il $5.25 Reinhold
671 Galvanizing 46-8288

"Galvanizing is the most effective and most popular method of corrosion protection of iron. This handbook specifically designed for practical plant use, will fill a distinct need for an up-to-date treatise. It presents basic principles involved in galvanizing and demonstrates with outstanding photographs the nature and cause of many defects encountered in a varied field. Some chapters are variations in the iron or steel bases, heat treatment of the coatings, cleaning and pickling and hot dip coatings with other metals. Most of the chapters include references to related literature and there is a bibliography on hot tinning in the appendix. Illustrated." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:78 Ja 1 '47 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:61 O '46

DAGGETT, STUART, and CARTER, JOHN P. Structure of transcontinental railroad rates. 165p maps $4 Univ. of Calif.

385.1324 Railroads—Rates 47-30310

"This describes the railroad freight rate system known as the transcontinental rate structure, which controls the exchange of goods between the Pacific Coast, especially California, and eastern states. The book presents adequate samples of specific rates by the methods of analysis, description, and comparison. Physical characteristics of the western territory and principal routes are described, as well as the mechanism of transcontinental rate making, terminal rates, rate groups, profiles, and comparative levels of class and commodity transcontinental rates." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

Reviewed by A. D. Angel

Am Pol Sci R 41:595 Je '47 240w

Reviewed by D. P. Locklin

+ Ann Am Acad 252:147 Jl '47 340w

"Concise and scholarly study. . . Although the subject is technical, the book is readable and especially well adapted for economic reference, transportation and traffic classes and students, and possibly as a stimulus to others who might be interested in preparing similar studies of regional phenomena and economic problems, for it serves to present incongruities of the rate structure and consequent effects upon business."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:155 Je '47 220w

DAHL, BORGHILD MARGARETHE. Karen. 313p $2.50 Random house

47-5201

"Refusing to sacrifice herself for her family, this young Norwegian girl came to the United States about 1870, hired out as a servant and eventually established herself and her impractical husband in the Dakota Territory. A story of courage, hard work and singleness of purpose, written as a tribute to the pioneer women of Scandinavian birth who helped to build our country." Library J

"The lesson of Karen's courage, honesty, and capacity for hard work is badly needed today." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 166:237 D '47 60w

"Karen's experiences have the ring of reality and will make absorbing reading for older girls in less demanding circumstances who can but admire her optimism and integrity." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:446 N '47 120w

Kirkus 15:342 Jl 1 '47 120w

"Recommended for girls of 14 [and] up." Ruth Bostwick

+ Library J 72:1475 O 15 '47 70w

"The author doesn't probe very deeply into Karen's emotions—but she has told a vigorous story, engrossing in detail, of a stout-hearted woman, of the kind who built not only homes but communities and thus a nation." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p27 S 28 '47 210w

"This is an absorbing novel of pioneer days in the Middle West, of the part that an intrepid woman played in the building of her home and her community. It is written with such skill as to be more than just another pioneer story."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:50 N 15 '47 280w

DAHL, FRANCIS WELLINGTON. Brave new world; cartoons; text by Charles W. Morton. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 127p $2.50 Little

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 47-11145

Francis Dahl, artist of the Boston Herald, and Charles Morton, associate editor of the Atlantic Monthly, examine the brave new world in cartoon and text.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 D 7 '47 50w

"Mr. Dahl's drawings are frequently farcical, but they are also frequently skillful satire. Mr. Morton's text is in a sense cursory and occasionally overdoes the sophisticated burlesque, but generally it is shrewd comment on the cosmic follies of modern civilization. It is an unusual combination of easy humor and thoughtful frowns." C. B. Palmer

+ N Y Times p24 N 16 '47 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 29 '47 150w

"Ordinarily I am not interested in comic strips. . . On the other hand 'Dahl's Brave New World' held my attention and aroused many a chuckle. It is one of the most virulent, good-natured attacks on the machine age, the age of peace (?), of automobiles, of gadgets, and of fashion, housing, and radio since Philip Wylie brought out his 'Generation of Vipers.'" S. J. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 30:19 N 1 '47 600w

DAICHES, DAVID. Robert Louis Stevenson. (Makers of modern literature) 196p $2 New directions

823 Stevenson, Robert Louis 47-11770

A study and re-interpretation of Robert Louis Stevenson and his literary output. The major works are analyzed one by one, tracing their growth in awareness and character portrayal. Bibliographical note, Index.

DAICHES, DAVID—Continued

Booklist 44:148 D 15 '47

"In discussing the Scottish novels, Mr. Daiches has the immense advantage of a Scottish background, which enables him to appreciate, and to convey to the American reader, the subtle skill with which Stevenson employed dialect for the heightening of dramatic effect without falling over in the indecipherable excesses of the Kailyard School. His book has set at least one reviewer to re-reading his Stevenson with fresh interest and heightened appreciation. And that, after all is what a work of interpretative criticism ought to do." Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
D 14 '47 400w

"Daiches' elasticity of mind is remarkable as well as his courage in turning from work based upon an eminently individual vision of reality such as Virginia Woolf's—the subject of his former book in this series—to an equally sympathetic and perceptive study of Stevenson's work, the outcome of a more conventional view of reality. . . Such fault as may be found in the book springs from the rare virtue of relevance. Nothing is included that fails to bear directly on the theme." Edith Finch

+ — N Y Times p5 Ja 4 '48 550w

"Mr. Daiches is one of the most capable of the younger critics. His critical method is painstaking and his writing clear, but when he puts all his heavy apparatus to work on a solemn and intensive literary dissection of 'Treasure Island,' the outcome is somewhat farcical."

+ — New Yorker 23:93 D 20 '47 100w

Time 51:104 Ja 19 '48 850w

DAKIN, ARTHUR. Calvinism. 228p $2.75 Presbyterian bd.

284.2 Calvinism 46-3553

"This is the first American edition of a book that appeared in 1940. The author is the president of Bristol Baptist College. Part I, 'Calvinism as a Dogmatic System,' is mainly a condensation of the final edition of Calvin's Institutes, but includes also a necessary minimum of interpretation. . . In Parts II and III Dr. Dakin presents respectively a brief historical treatment of 'Calvinism as an ecclesiastical system' and a series of short essays on 'aspects of Calvinism.'" Christian Century

"The work [in Part I] is done sympathetically and with sound understanding of Calvin's points of emphasis. . . The book will serve a useful function as a primer of Calvinism." J. T. McNeill

+ Christian Century 63:718 Je 5 '46 800w

Reviewed by George Gordh

J Religion 27:140 Ap '47 470w

DAKIN, EMMA SAHLER. Figure and landscape. 32p $1.50 Fine editions

811 46-6560

"A first selection from the poems of Emma Sahler Dakin. . . The past rather than the present engages Mrs Dakin's fancy, in her recollections of travel, reading and reflection, but the expression is contemporary and intense. Several of the 14 short verses are in sonnet form and several use the sea as a symbol. Two are reprinted from 'Contemporary American Poets,' these being 'The Mediterranean' and 'Orestes.'" Spring'd Republican

"The poet's style and language are 'poetic' in the conventional sense of the word, and for readers whose minds reject tougher fibre in their intellectual fare this slim volume will make an ideal gift. Bearing a memorial dedication, and containing a foreword by David Morton, its format is exquisite in every detail." Starr Nelson

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 Mr 1 '47 120w

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Ag 19 '46 270w

DALE, EDGAR. Audio-visual methods in teaching. 546p il $4.25 Dryden

371.335 Visual instruction. Teaching—Aids and devices 47-619

"A book for teachers in which visual materials have been fitted into the 'broad concepts of education and methods of teaching.'" (School & Society) Index.

Booklist 43:236 Ap 1 '47

"Teachers have long awaited this graphic and authoritative textbook by the man best equipped as teacher and practitioner to write it—the head of the bureau of educational research of Ohio State University. . . The volume will become and remain for many years the standard treatise in its field. Although designed primarily for public school and college teachers, religious educators and ministers will find it invaluable." Fred Eastman

+ Christian Century 64:178 F 5 '47 850w

"This book's excellence lies in its practical, everyday value as a guide which every teacher has been seeking. It is interestingly written and abounds with anecdotes and pertinent illustrations." Bess Exton

+ J Home Econ 39:237 Ap '47 110w

"Mr. Dale is addressing himself to teachers and to potential teachers. To a certain extent he writes in the particular language of the profession but librarians will find much of what he has to say comprehensible and applicable to the problems of informal adult education." Kurtz Meyers

+ Library J 72:382 Mr 1 '47 240w

School & Society 64:424 D 14 '46 20w

Reviewed by S. M. Corey

School R 55:198 Ap '47 600w

Reviewed by W. H. Hartley

Social Educ 11:96 F '47 100w

DALGLIESH, ALICE, ed. Enchanted book; il. by Concetta Cacciola. 246p $3 Scribner

398 Folklore, Fairy tales 47-11397

Selection of old folk and fairy tales which have been favorites with the compiler. Partial contents: The wild swans, by Hans Christian Andersen; Snow-White and Rose-Red, by The Brothers Grimm; East o' the sun and west o' the moon; retold by George Dasent; The history of Dwarf Long Nose, by Andrew Lang; The tinder box, by Hans Christian Andersen; The Twelve dancing princesses, by The Brothers Grimm; Beauty and the beast, an old French tale; The twelve months, retold by Parker Fillmore; The white cat, by Countess D'Aulnoy.

Booklist 44:137 D 1 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:37 Ja '48 30w

Kirkus 15:502 S 15 '47 80w

"These stories, beautifully printed and charmingly illustrated, make the collection a first-purchase item for any library. The pictures by Concetta Cacciola are full of imagination and beauty." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 72:1690 D 1 '47 60w

"The pictures, chiefly full-page, are in luscious colors and shapes that, while just strange enough to mean magic, are not beyond affectionate recognition by a dreaming child. This is a book of beauty, made to last and well assured that it will." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
N 16 '47 170w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:149 D 6 '47 40w

"Illustrated by a young artist who has given to them imagination, humor, and a strong feeling for design. The color plates are especially interesting. A handsome book and one that boys and girls are sure to approve."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:62 N 15 '47 50w

DALLIN, DAVID JULIEVICH, and NICO-LAEVSKY, BORIS I. Forced labor in Soviet Russia. 331p il maps $3.75 Yale univ. press 331.51 Labor, Compulsory. Labor and laboring classes—Russia 47-30389

"Authors trace the origin and growth of forced labor in Russia, consider in specific detail the extent and significance of such labor and exile (Siberia) in the Soviet Union today. They view forced labor as creating a social system based on slavery and as closely related to the five-year plans and the iron curtains. A considerable portion of the book is concerned with the forced repatriation of Russians after the war." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by George Lenczowski
Am Pol Sci R 41:1038 O '47 750w

Reviewed by E. C. Helmreich
Ann Am Acad 254:199 N '47 550w
Booklist 44:45 O 1 '47

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 166:85 O '47 750w
Christian Century 64:1021 Ag 27 '47
280w
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 8 '47
650w

Kirkus 15:413 Ag 1 '47 120w

"Essential, seemingly incontrovertible and not pretty at all." R. E. Kingery
Library J 72:1102 Ag '47 70w

"It is a comprehensive, factual and devating account. . . A system of labor that cannot be defended in a democratic state has long been a recognized, however deplorable, Russian institution. Mr. Dallin is entirely justified in stating that any picture of the Soviet Union that ignores its labor camps is not a true picture and may be deliberately misleading. Filling in this supposed gap (there have been other accounts of forced labor in Russia) his study thoroughly covers the subject and includes a good deal of sensational detail." F. R. Dulles

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15
S 14 '47 330w

"The sections of the book devoted to the mining of gold in the Kolyma area are the best documented and the most complete.
Mr. Dallin and Mr. Nicolaevsky write moderately about a subject that could be presented emotionally." Brooks Atkinson

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 31 '47 1350w

"A conscientiously documented and appalling report on slave labor in the corrective camps that the Soviet secret police runs for the government. Many of the books that the authors use as sources have had wide circulation outside Russia during the past decade, but even this old material has been well correlated and put to vigorous use."

+ New Yorker 23:127 O 11 '47 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 26 '47
350w

"In the absence of any reliable studies to the contrary, the Dallin-Nicolaevsky book with all its apparent learning and documentation is likely to become the standard reference work on the subject until, at least, another George Kennan shows up. Both its authors are distinguished Russian social-democratic emigrés who left their country early after the revolution, and are sworn enemies of communism, have been battling it ever since. . . It is highly regrettable, in so serious a study and so deadly an indictment of the Soviet Union as the book purports to be, that a rather large number of unnecessary inaccuracies should have occurred which, of course, may affect the credibility of the whole thesis." Henry Shapiro

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 O 4 '47 1200w

Time 50:84 S 1 '47 1100w

"One could wish, perhaps, for a different arrangement of the material, with personal narratives and strictly factual information segregated from the author's own comments.
As it is, the book is somewhat lacking in structural unity. But this is a minor flaw in a work of such importance. It certainly must be read by anyone who wants to form an honest opinion of the present Russian régime." Michael Karpovich

+ Yale R n s 37:145 autumn '47 500w

DALLIN, DAVID JULIEVICH. The real Soviet Russia; tr. by Joseph Shaplen, rev & enl ed
325p $3.50 Yale univ. press

947.084 Russia—History—Revolution, 1917-
Communism—Russia 47-3023

A revised edition of a book which first appeared in 1944 (Book Review Digest 1944). The author, a member of the Moscow soviet from 1918 to 1921, in the opposition, left Russia in 1922. In his preface to the new edition he says:
"A real and durable resolution of the increasing international tensions can come only from Russia, in the shape of an internal transformation. . . Either an internal transformation of Russia's political system will prevent a war, or a war will lead to an upheaval in Russia.
Another war would certainly mean a gigantic defeat for her; in the course of such a war much more would be buried than Sovietism and Stalinism. From such a war Russia would emerge divided into several states, surrounded by hating nations, pushed far back into the East, impoverished and drained of blood. It would be a terrible and tragic ending of a great and glorious revolution. This is the dilemma. To the world the solution of it means peace or war. To Russia it means peace or defeat and degradation." Index.

Booklist 43:332 Je 15 '47

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
Ap 6 '47 170w

Reviewed by Paul Winterton
Spec 179:114 Jl 25 '47 310w

Times [London] Lit Sup p399 Ag 9 '47
850w

DALRYMPLE, BYRON W. Panfish; the art and enjoyment of light-tackle fishing for the common fishes of the United States. (Whittlesey house publication) 398p il $4.50 McGraw 799.12 Fishing. Fishes 47-4230

Guide to the taking of the common fishes, written for the amateur. Contains advice on light tackle and the fly rod in angling. Index.

Booklist 43:343 Jl 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

"This is a generous compendium which combines facts about species, identification, methods and sport, with a certain amount of personal recall by a man to whom fishing has been a lifelong avocation. . . There's a bit of philosophy—some anecdote—a mood of nostalgic memories of boyhood."

+ Kirkus 15:150 Mr 1 '47 110w

"An excellent book for the man who goes after the less expensive (to catch) fish. Attractively illustrated." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:42 Ja 1 '48 20w

Reviewed by Herman Forster

N Y Times p24 My 18 '47 170w

"In informed and sensible book on a humble but interesting subject."

+ New Yorker 23:118 My 17 '47 60w

DALY, ELIZABETH. Night walk. 196p $2
Rinehart 47-30853

Detective story.

Booklist 44:135 D 1 '47

"Henry Gamadge is a pale, effectual shade whose final summary is skillful enough to be worthy of a more telling motive." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 14 '47
80w

Kirkus 15:350 Jl 1 '47 50w

"Another top-drawer Daly item with human characters, Grade A detection and a garnishing of young love. Two killings." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17
S 21 '47 110w

"It is a good story, beautifully told." Isaac
Anderson

+ N Y Times p32 S 14 '47 230w

DALY, ELIZABETH—Continued

"Very self-consciously literary."

New Yorker 23:107 S 20 '47 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 12 '47 100w

Sat R of Lit 30:30 S 27 '47 40w

DAMROSCH, FRANK. Faith of the Episcopal church. 146p $1.50 Morehouse

283 Protestant Episcopal church—Doctrinal and controversial works 46-22619

A brief statement of the faith and practice of the Episcopal church. No index.

"It is surprising how many Catholic tenets are defended in this book. . . He argues with a persuasive deftness that is admirable. . . Catholics cannot accept the author's propositions: (1) that Christ's sacrifice was not vicarious; (2) that extreme unction is a form of spiritual healing intended for all who are sick; (3) that Anglicanism and Catholicism are two branches of the one same church; (4) that Anglican clergy have valid orders; (5) that in Anglicanism there is true unity; and (6) that the pope is merely the equal of other bishops."

+ — Cath World 164:478 F '47 220w

Christian Century 63:1345 N 6 '46 90w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie

Churchman 160:17 N 15 '46 90w

DANA, DORATHEA (MRS BELA DANKOVSKY). Sugar bush; il. by the author. 174p $2.50 Nelson

47-30259

An Americanization story for grades four to seven. The Kolochecks, a Polish family, move to a Vermont farm, and there settle down to learn American ways, especially the joys of making maple sugar.

Booklist 43:296 My 15 '47

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 My 25 '47 50w

"This book not only tells more clearly than I have ever read before just how maple sirup and maple sugar are made, but it is also a delightful tale of a community working together to restore the old Meeting House on the Hill. This is a story for boys and girls from 8 to 12, warmly recommended for its fun and its facts and its warm feeling for true Americanism."

F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 24 '47 240w

"Alive with the very spirit of the Vermont hills, Sugar Bush gives a fascinating picture of an industry always attractive to an outsider." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:215 My '47 170w

Kirkus 15:165 Mr 15 '47 110w

"Good characterizations, attractive illustrations and wide margins. Recommended." C. W. Field

+ Library J 72:817 My 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 11 '47 430w

"This story is one that will be a favorite with 9 to 12 year olds from now on. It will be loved for its feeling of family unity and warmth, reread for a repeat visit to the Allans' farm and long remembered for its exciting description of making maple sugar. Although the author-artist's black-and-white illustrations have been blurred in reproduction those in color have lovely tones and a joyful sense of busy activity to match the story." V. H. Mathews

+ — N Y Times p33 My 18 '47 180w

"An unusually fine picture of community life is presented in this story, which includes good characters among both young and old, and plenty of fun."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:244 S '47 80w

DANA, JULIAN. A. P. Giannini, giant in the West; a biography. 345p $4.50 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Giannini, Amadeo Peter 47-3170

Biography of an Italian-American banker, Amadeo Peter Giannini. He was born of an immigrant family on a small farm near San Jose, California, in 1870. As a young man he founded the Bank of Italy, now the Bank of America, and established the idea of branch banking. Today, altho over seventy, he is still a power in the financial world. No index.

Booklist 43:345 Jl 1 '47

Reviewed by Edward Spear

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 15 '47 400w

Kirkus 15:210 Ap 1 '47 160w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 72:730 My 1 '47 140w

Reviewed by Carey McWilliams

Nation 165:317 S 27 '47 1200w

"Mr. Dana's approach to his subject is just this side of idolatry. A cathedral hush pervades his prose. This is relieved occasionally by coquettish interludes, in the manner of some underpaid wretch cackling dutifully at the boss's joke. It is a peculiar and puzzling performance." Edward McQuade

— San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 18 '47 1600w

Springf'd Union p15 S 24 '47 300w

DANBY, HOPE (MRS C. G. DANBY). Illustrious emperor. 281p $3 Ziff-Davis

T'ang Hsüan-tsung, emperor of China—Fiction 47-1264

Romance of life in China at the court of "the illustrious emperor" Ming Huang, twelve hundred years ago. The emperor and his Exalted Imperial Concubine, Bracelet of Jade, are the central characters.

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 F 23 '47 130w

Library J 72:225 F 1 '47 20w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 F 23 '47 210w

"Mrs. Danby writes lucidly about the philosophy and customs of the age and some of the humanity of Bracelet of Jade comes through, as well as a little of the Emperor's difficulties. The story, however, is told in a staid and even fashion, which may imitate the classic Chinese but fails to anchor the attention, and the stylized dialogue, while not as irritating as that kind of thing can be adds nothing to the excitement." C. B.

N Y Times p16 F 23 '47 500w

DANE, R. E. Divide the heart. 183p $2.50 Reynal

47-1729

Seven short stories about Americans in France and the Basque country, all of which take place at a time during or shortly after the late war.

"Worth reading—both for stories and style."

+ Kirkus 14:560 N 1 '46 170w

"Apart from the bright success of 'The Miracle of Arcachon'—which is propaganda in its finest form—these stories can hardly be measured against the best ones to have come out of experience in this war. But in their unpretentious way, they do make another bridge, however slight, over the gulf which, if it exists, must never be allowed to widen between America and France." Virgilia Peterson

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 F 23 '47 750w

"Subtitled 'Stories of Americans in France,' [the book] sounds as if it should be the latest contribution to this literature, but it is only incidentally so. Not all the stories, as a matter of fact, deal with American characters in France. . . The subtitle suggests a unity of subject-matter—and perhaps of tone—that the book signally lacks. . . Mr. Dane at his most successful presents the French four-square and independent, capable of a simple and terrifying heroism ('The Miracle of Arcachon') or of a wonderful, amused self-complacency ('The Time of Urrugne'). These stories, conceived and written with admirable consistency of tone, succeed remarkably in evoking character and atmosphere." Milton Crane

+ — N Y Times p31 Ap 13 '47 450w

"Mr. Dane has been writing for many years — poetry and short stories for such magazines as The Southern Review, Southwest Review, Virginia Quarterly and others. This collection suggests, by the way, as some short-story collections do not, that Mr. Dane is one writer of short stories who will do a good novel." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 25 '47 500w

"There's so much that's good, so much that's brilliant in these stories that it seems impossible for their total impact to be so feeble." Jack Iams

— + Sat R of Lit 30:58 Ap 12 '47 550w

DANIEL, HOWARD. Hieronymus Bosch. See Bosch, H.

DANIELS, JOSEPHUS. Shirt-sleeve diplomat. 547p $5 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 U.S.—Foreign relations—Mexico. Mexico—Foreign relations—U.S. 47-30330

"In this volume, the fifth of my autobiography, there is compressed what 'me befell' in the years 1933-1942, when I was Ambassador from the United States to the Republic of Mexico. . . I tell of the things I saw and of the people with whom I was in contact in both countries, with chief emphasis upon what was happening around me in Mexico in relation to officials, fellow diplomats, the Mexican people, and the American colony." (Foreword) Index.

"The description of embassy life and of his beloved wife's part and of informal diplomatic procedure are excellent, but too little credit is given to those who labored at secondary 'career' jobs. . . The faults of the book (poor arrangement, jumbled chronology, misplaced photographs, absence of a map and occasionally needed translations, repetitions, digressions, and unimportant inconsistencies) are primarily those of the publishers who should have given the dear octogenarian more assistance in tightening and polishing the manuscript even though he is one of America's most famous newspapermen." C. W. Williams

+ — Am Hist R 53:186 O '47 240w

"The book is handsomely illustrated and well printed. It is a useful volume to add to the Mexican shelf, but the student of that country will need others before he can feel assured of any adequate comprehension of Mexico and its problems." R. H. Fitzgibbon

Am Pol Sci R 41:807 Ag '47 300w

"As is to be expected of 'the Tar Heel Editor,' the presentation of his subject is interesting and often absorbing. There are many interesting stories and anecdotes illustrative of the problems connected with the conduct of a foreign diplomatic mission; but more important are the many bits of fact, hitherto unknown, which help to explain one of the most important chapters in our diplomatic history." J. L. Mecham

+ Ann Am Acad 254:205 N '47 750w

Booklist 43:329 Je 15 '47

"The book is full of delightful incidents about the life that flowed around the embassy and the people, humble and distinguished, who passed through the embassy doors during those years. Every page implicitly, if not in so many words, debunks the 'sacred person' of the diplomat, recreating him in the terms of the everyday man." A. T. Hobart

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 1 '47 470w

Christian Science Monitor p18 My 31 '47 480w

Reviewed by J. M. Hayes

Commonweal 46:388 Ag 1 '47 650w

Foreign Affairs 26:225 O '47 30w

Kirkus 15:303 Je 1 '47 190w

"Longer than necessary, ill-documented, Daniels' fifth autobiographical volume abounds in pen anecdotes of leading Mexicans—Rivera, Aleman et cetera. Recommended." Joseph Borme

+ — Library J 72:805 My 15 '47 140w

"Mr. Daniels's book has unusual interest both for the United States and for Latin America. Written with good faith from the first to the last page, it will be read with pleasure by every American of good-will and with equal satisfaction by liberals of whatever nationality or language." Andreas Iduarte

+ Nation 164:745 Je 21 '47 1440w

"The autobiography of Josephus Daniels has plenty of faults. Its literary style is not polished, its factual information is not always reliable, its judgments are frankly biased. Perhaps it could have been written better in half the number of words. Yet for all that, it is a real achievement that will preserve his fame among scholars when many of his Cabinet colleagues and those who held lordlier embassies have vanished into the mists of oblivion." G. W. Johnson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Je 8 '47 1250w

Reviewed by G. A. Craig

N Y Times p3 Je 8 '47 950w

Reviewed by Mark Watson

Sat R of Lit 30:14 Je 7 '47 1450w

U S Quarterly BkI 3:256 S '47 280w

DANIELS, LALAH LEONE (MRS. MEAD) (NANCY STONESTREET, pseud). Blue remembered hills. 151p $2.50 Coward-McCann 47-3616

"Deborah is the chief and almost sole character in this sketch of a child eight, going on nine. A cat, a dog, mother, doctor and several elderly ladies known as grandma are present, but not too important. The child's preoccupation with kindness and determination to keep others from being cruel to mankind or animals pervades the story." Library J

Booklist 43:256 Ap 15 '47

"It was clearly the author's intention to depict Deborah, the 8-year-old protagonist of 'Blue Remembered Hills,' as an enchanting, even a uniquely enchanting little girl. Unfortunately she did not succeed. Deborah emerges an articulate young prig, easily the most unlikely fictional child since Elsie Dinsmore." A. J. Hiken

— Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Mr 23 '47 230w

Kirkus 15:43 Ja 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by M. P. McKay

Library J 72:464 Mr 15 '47 70w

"There are times, indeed, when Debby seems objectionably smug in her self-conscious missionary zeal to improve the world she lives in. She fights her friend, Jamie, who has hurt her dog; she teaches the boys not to throw stones at a cripple; she befriends Hughie, a social outcast; she gets into a battle with two bullies who called the Italian grocer a 'wop.' It is clear that Mrs. Stonestreet is trying to paint a portrait of a child precociously aware of the injustice in the world, but her pigments are overloaded with sweetness and sentimentality. Possibly children might like the portrait of Debby." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 Mr 30 '47 330w

"An idyllic story in its simplicity, its lovely interpretation of the country through the cycle of the seasons, this is also a haunting reminder of the joy and the sorrow that we experience in the fierce intensity of our growing years. Deborah is a living person who will long remain with the reader. A charming, thoughtful book, this will probably appeal to older children and to grown-ups."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:35 My 17 '47 160w

Springf'd Republican p5B S 14 '47 90w

DANK, MICHAEL CARLTON. Adventures in scrap craft; il. by [the author]. 376p $4 Greenberg

680 Handicraft 46-8162

"Useful handicraft book with 105 projects on how to make inexpensive toys and useful articles from waste or discarded materials, where to get 43 kinds of scrap materials, tools to use and directions for making. Illustrated." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1627 N 15 '46 40w

Wis Lib Bul 43:19 Ja '47

DANKOVSKY, DORATHEA. See Dana, D.

DANNECKER, HAZEL I. Fisherman Simms; pictures by Margaret Bradfield. [24p] $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

47-30426

Picture storybook showing how Mr Simms, who liked to fish but did not like to walk three miles each day to the lake, moved nearer and nearer to the scene of his work. For ages four to seven.

Booklist 44:53 O 1 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week N 8 '47 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '47

"Children will like the sense of home coming at the end. Pretty pictures by Margaret Bradfield make this good value at this price."

+ Kirkus 15:335 Jl 1 '47 90w

"This picture storybook has more plot than is usually found in a book for grades one and two. Text is simple, however, with a rhythmic quality. Useful for storytelling, reading aloud and for remedial reading. Recommended." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 72:1197 S 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by S. C. Gross

N Y Times p36 O 12 '47 130w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 16 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:132 O '47

DANTE ALIGHIERI. Portable Dante; ed. with an introd. by Paolo Milano. (Viking portable lib) 662p $2 Viking

851

47-30282

"The divine comedy, complete, translated by Laurence Binyon, with notes from C. H. Grandgent; La vita nuova, complete, translated by D. G. Rossetti; excerpts from the Latin prose works." Subtitle

Booklist 43:292 My 15 '47

"Much could be said about the translations. The Divine Comedy is given as an English poem in Laurence Binyon's version. If a translation should aim at reproducing the metrical form of the original, this is a commendable effort. But triple rhyme is not suited to the English language—witness Dryden's own attempt. And the exact meaning of Dante's words is too often lost. Nevertheless, in format, printing, manufacture, and content, this is a fine way to get to know Dante." Nancy Lenkeith

Commonweal 46:76 My 2 '47 260w

Kirkus 15:204 Ap 1 '47 90w

"The Divine Comedy is published in Laurence Binyon's verse translation. This is a remarkably skillful work, in Dante's verse form, which retains the clarity of the best prose translation, but which probably gives a better idea of the original than any other version." John Farrelly

+ New Repub 117:30 Ag 18 '47 230w

"Of all the volumes issued so far in the admirable series of Viking Portables, this one, in my opinion, is the best." W. H. Auden

+ N Y Times p4 Je 29 '47 1300w

"An excellent idea of the power and variety of 'The Divine Comedy' can be gained from Laurence Binyon's lucid and intelligent version in terza rima, to which notes from C. H.

Grandgent are appended. . . The editor contributes an introduction and notes on the most enlightening contemporary Dante criticism. All that is lacking is the original texts, with which interested readers can, of course, easily supply themselves."

+ New Yorker 23:118 My 17 '47 100w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:25 Je 14 '47 360w

DANTE, JAMES, and others. Nine bad shots of golf and what to do about them. (Whittlessey house publication) 189p il $2.50 McGraw

796.352 Golf

47-2634

"Book to be used by beginners as well as experienced golfers. Fundamentals of grip, stance, and swing are explained carefully before the bad shots are analyzed and corrected by thorough directions. Tips on iron play, putting, and bad lies. Exceptionally clear illustrations from every angle, including the golfer's own, add much to the book's usefulness." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:286 My 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '47

Kirkus 15:148 Mr 1 '47 160w

"The book is amply illustrated; the style is simple and clear." W. D. Richardson

+ N Y Times p30 Je 8 '47 270w

Springf'd Union p11 My 5 '47 150w

D'ARCY, MARTIN CYRIL. Mind and heart of love; lion and unicorn; a study in Eros and agape. 333p $3.50 Holt

177.6 Love (theology). Love

47-1845

"The master of Campion Hall (Oxford), author of several religious and philosophical works, discusses human and divine love—Eros and Agape—disclaiming the theory that they are opposites which can never meet, maintaining rather that they really complement each other—that through Eros or earthly love one may arrive eventually at divine love." Library J

"A deeply beautiful and greatly needed performance."

+ Commonweal 46:71 My 2 '47 40w

"Well organized and clearly written, but difficult for those not used to philosophical writing. Recommended for religious, scholarly and large libraries." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 72:316 F 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 4 '47 1500w

"In this powerful study . . . the great English Jesuit teacher and philosopher, M. C. D'Arcy, has presented a stimulating exposition of a challenging subject. It is the more stimulating because the author makes no attempt to pander to the current taste for sugar-coated or capsule learning but flatters the reader by assuming he might enjoy the mental exercise involved." J. W. Chase

+ N Y Times p7 My 18 '47 1250w

D'ARFEY, WILLIAM, pseud. Curious relations; ed. by William Plomer. 210p $3 Sloane 828

47-30219

Series of portraits of lively and humorous doings among the author's highly unconventional relatives, living in late Victorian and Edwardian England.

Booklist 43:251 Ap 15 '47

"William Plomer is one of the most active of the English literary excavators of our time. Some of the things he has turned up are duds, or nearly so. Here he may not have a gem that burns with a clear white flame, but at least it smolders murkily. 'Curious Relations' will rank well to the top of any list of the funniest books of the season." Kenneth Rockwell

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Mr 16 '47 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '47

"'Curious Relations' is more of an effort to exploit than to understand." Riley Hughes
— Commonweal 46:41 Ap 25 '47 200w

"For clinical case histories in hyperbole, this is gaspingly funny, tragic, serio-comic, shocking—in as unlovely a series of family portraits as could be found anywhere."

Kirkus 15:86 F 1 '47 150w

"In his efforts to 'make a good story' of a story that was already good, the author embroidered with more gusto than tact. . . And as a result sometimes an incident that would have been delightful is made incredible, not to say tedious. This reservation made, I can recommend the book as hugely entertaining."

Raymond Mortimer

+ — New Statesman & Nation 30:392 D 8 '45 650w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
Mr 9 '47 1200w

"Except for haemophilia, practically all the horrors of overbreeding are here; and still, as family spokesman, Mr. d'Arfey remains gracious, ever aware, and pleasantly moribund. The precision of the writing, as well as the subject-matter, is in the tradition of Harold Nicolson's 'Some People,' or possibly sections of Lord Berner's autobiographical 'A Distant Prospect.' To the Sitwells, as well, in their autobiographical writing and their studies of English eccentrics, Mr. d'Arfey must have looked. But the unifying thing, after all, that all these writers have chosen for their examination, as Mr. d'Arfey knows, is the certain level, unique, of financial and social affluence."

B. V. Winebaum

N Y Times p35 My 18 '47 600w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

Sat R of Lit 30:19 My 3 '47 500w

"This agreeable and enchantingly frivolous book will bring much gaiety into the minds of those who are fortunate enough to read it, and I hope the publishers will be able to meet the inevitably tremendous demand. It is, in its way, a minor masterpiece. Never was a livelier family capriccio more brilliantly executed." C. E. Vulliamy

+ Spec 175:440 N 9 '45 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p604 D 22 '45
240w

DARGAN, MRS OLIVE (TILFORD) (FIELD-ING BURKE, pseud). Sons of the stranger.
405p $3 Longmans

47-11379

"The setting is the Rockies (not far from Denver); the period the turn of the century; the theme, labor's struggle for a voice, with union organization coping with unscrupulous use of spies, good squads, Negro scabs; with crooked politicians playing both sides. The story concerns chiefly Dal MacNair and his conflict as he tries to play a part in the miner's battle, while finding a place for himself in the world of the operator's sister, Kathryn. Set against his passion for Kathryn is his deepening love for Fai, brought up as virtually a sister."

Kirkus

"Miss Burke's intention to write what is called an epic novel is so clear that the reader cannot help noticing that she has not done so. The tough, authentic background of labor war is diluted by the author's romantic view of her characters, and the characters themselves dissolve into shadows against the realistic background. The author's sympathies are warm, and always on the right side, but they have led her into exploring far too many aspects of a period that was complicated enough at the simplest level." P. L. Adams

Atlantic 181:124 Ja '48 300w

"A turbulent novel, written in an intensity of realization of conflicts within man's relation to man. . . There is compelling force to the story, but it is uneven in the telling, confusion engendered by too many ramifications, too unfocused a cast of characters. But throughout burns the vitality of kinship among workers. Not for all readers."

Kirkus 15:513 S 15 '47 180w

"In the beginning prose of beauty and breadth places the work on a par with How Green Was My Valley. However, it becomes undermined as an unnecessarily intricate network of minor themes are drawn in. Author's tendency to waver between specific petty problems and the universality of humanity's struggle for a decent life leaves the reader confused, if not dissatisfied." C. W. Roth

Library J 72:1374 O 1 '47 70w

"In the chapters dealing with the strike, with the high hopes that preceded it and the brutality and suffering which followed, Miss Burke is at her best. . . Miss Burke's romantic inventiveness, unfortunately, leads her into numerous extravaganzas." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19
N 9 '47 380w

"Racial tolerance, equality of man, the right of labor to organize—all are excellent themes for a novel. When all three, plus some timid social comments, are combined between two covers only confusion can result." Hoffman Birney

N Y Times p16 D 14 '47 290w

DARINGER, HELEN FERN. Adopted Jane; il.
by Kate Seredy. 225p $2 Harcourt

47-30260

Jane was a plain little girl with beautiful eyes and a large fund of integrity. Ever since she could remember Jane had lived in an orphanage, and she longed for a family and a dog of her own. There came a summer when she had the blissful experience of having two visits to real homes, and at the end she has acquired both a home and a dog. The time of the story is about 1900. For grades four to six.

Booklist 43:296 My 15 '47

"This account of a little girl's summer is not only a good story, it is a portrait of a sensitive child, drawn with integrity, humor and deep understanding, and Jane, the quiet little girl with the honest gray eyes, remains with us long after the book is closed. The author writes with real beauty of phrase and an instinct for the right word. There are many pleasing pictures by Kate Seredy." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 24
'47 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '47

"Helen Fern Daringer has drawn lifelike characters in unstrained situations. A very real little girl is shown in Kate Seredy's drawings, too." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:216 My '47 90w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 23:256 Jl '47 320w

"While the story is a rather original one and one with various things to recommend it, somehow it doesn't quite come off."

+ — Kirkus 15:190 Ap 1 '47 170w

"Although Jane's gentle manners and thoughtful ways are almost too good to be true, modern harum-scarums will find her adventures interesting. Story has quaint, old-fashioned atmosphere, and its emphasis on the qualities that make even the humblest into a real lady is needed and timely." Gertrude Andrus

Library J 72:737 My 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
My 11 '47 370w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hodges

N Y Times p35 My 25 '47 200w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:155 D 6 '47 70w

"This is a refreshing story, told skilfully and with a flair for creating amusing and interesting people. Kate Seredy's drawings make the period around 1900. But wherever and whenever Jane lived, she would be well worth knowing."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 My 17 '47 230w

Springf'd Republican p14B N 2 '47
100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:84 My '47

DARK side of the moon; with a pref. by T. S. Eliot. 299p $2.75 Scribner

940.53438 Poland—History—Russian occupation, 1939-. World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, Russian 47-1221

An account, written anonymously, of what Soviet Russia did to the Polish people when as a result of the 1939 pact with Germany, the NKVD entered Poland, arrested thousands, and deported them to labor camps in Siberia.

"The Dark Side of the Moon is an extremely important book, required reading for anyone at all concerned with the immense problems confronting us today." Frederick Morgan
+ Cath World 165:377 J1 '47 410w

Reviewed by Warren Beck

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 J1 6 '47 380w

Reviewed by Gregory Smith

Commonweal 45:568 Mr 21 '47 320w

Current Hist 12:582 Je '47 80w

Kirkus 14:635 D 15 '46 160w

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin

New Statesman & Nation 31:473 Je 29 '46 2150w

"It is a more horrible tale than that of war itself. The depressed reader, regardless of political ideologies, can only ask himself, is this really the twentieth century?" F. R. Dulles

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Mr 9 '47 1000w

"Soviet partisans undoubtedly will point in scornful rebuttal to the fact that the authorship of this book is anonymous. While anonymity usually is no credit to a work, in this case it does not seem to impugn it. The book was compiled in England (and first published there last year) by a Polish woman—guarding her identity against reprisals—with the highest references from General Sikorski, the late Polish leader who supplied her with some of the material." Gladwin Hill

N Y Times p4 Mr 9 '47 800w

New Yorker 23:98 Mr 1 '47 110w

"This volume is undoubtedly one of the most affecting and important books published in many years. . . Of the suffering, hunger and misery which these Poles experienced, this book tells in simple human terms, but this is not its most important aspect. Much more vital . . . is the volume's revelation of how the Soviet pattern of life is imposed upon a conquered people, and of the cost that results." Harry Schwartz

+ Pol Sci Q 62:602 D '47 600w

"It is much too much to hope, I am afraid, that American liberals of the left will benefit from reading 'The Dark Side of the Moon.' For they are as wilfully blind to the uglier side of Russian Communism as the American Bundists were to the evil aspects of German National Socialism. Doubtless they will call the whole thing a vicious fabrication and denounce it as a typical piece of Polish anti-Russian propaganda. But on those of us who have not yet enlarged our definition of democracy to include one form of dictatorship, the book cannot fail to make a profound impression. Its sincerity is too evident, its restrained eloquence too convincing, to leave any doubts in our minds of its essential truth. It is one of the most terrible indictments of a tyrannical government ever written." Varian Fry

Sat R of Lit 30:16 Mr 15 '47 1100w

"The anonymous Polish author . . . has lifted her narrative high above vain partisanship. She has created a lofty memorial to her fellow-countrymen who suffered and died in the cruel landscape of their nightmares, and she has also provided what was very badly needed—a basis for serious thinking about Russia; which is to say, about the future of our civilisation. . . It could be, in a word, the most valuable contribution yet made to a proper understanding of Russia. It could also prove a final barrier to such understanding. It all depends on the strength and discipline of imagination in each separate reader." Edward Crankshaw

+ Spec 177:16 J1 5 '46 1350w

Time 49:106 Mr 10 '47 650w

"In a brief prefatory note Mme. Sikorska explains that the anonymous author was given access to the relevant official material and documents by the late General Sikorski, who had the utmost confidence in her integrity and fairness of mind. Certainly her work bears an accent of strong and scrupulous sincerity, of reasoned and conscientious statement. She writes extremely well, often with a power and eloquence that spring only from a genuine depth of humanity, and no reader can be insensitive to the persuasion that resides in feeling at once as passionate and as controlled as hers. What may be even more important, however, for the normally unsentimental person is the evidence of her grasp of the impulse of Soviet development."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p363 Ag 3 '46 850w

DAUPHIN, FRANCINE LEGRAND. French ABC; pour pouvoir lire tous les beaux livres apprenez l'alphabet! [il. by the author]. [56p] $3.50 Coward-McCann

448 French language 47-6185

"This book, printed and illustrated in color, is designed 'to teach children the French alphabet, together with some words.' A double page is devoted to each letter: on one side, several words beginning with the letter are illustrated; on the other, an alliterative sentence, stressing the letter and describing a large picture on the same page is given in French and English." N Y Times

Booklist 44:74 O 15 '47

"A picture book of distinction and rare charm. . . Only someone who knows and enjoys boys and girls could have drawn these pictures, whether it is Kiki walking on a snowy road, Denise making a mess of things in 10 minutes, or Gilbert with a sweet tooth for cake, they are real children, very much alive." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 S 30 '47 360w

"Expensive but worth it. . . A test for anyone who used to speak French if set upon by a proud possessor of the book."

+ Commonweal 47:151 N 21 '47 60w

"A French ABC is a major contribution to books of international interest and value. Humor, fine intelligence and true feeling for little children and their ways set this book apart from the many picture books which appear to have no point." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 23:345 S '47 220w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:439 N '47 40w

"I have very mixed feelings about this book. The idea is such a good one—the format is so enchanting—that I'd like to recommend it wholeheartedly. But the execution of the idea leaves a good deal to be desired."

+ Kirkus 15:472 S 1 '47 340w

"The illustrations are childlike in interpretation and simplicity of design, but the vocabulary is beyond the comprehension of almost any child and completely confusing, since the words and phrases do not match the illustrations. A very expensive book. Its only use would be in a special collection to be used as an example of modern French illustration." Helen Kremer

Library J 72:1380 O 1 '47 70w

"So droll, so gay, so charming a picture book for little folks seldom comes their way. They may not learn to speak French through it—though they may pick up various useful words—but they will meet any number of energetic little French children up to all sorts of things readily recognizable." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O 5 '47 360w

"The idea is an interesting one, but the words and pictures illustrating each letter have, in many cases, been unwisely chosen. One trouble is that many of the pictures attempt to illustrate abstract nouns. Generally, too, so many objects are shown in each picture it is impossible to know what is being illustrated." N. K. B.

N Y Times p37 S 21 '47 230w

"A fresh and cheerful way to teach the alphabet in French." R. C. Benét
+ New Yorker 23:144 D 6 '47 80w

Reviewed by Florence Little
San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 30 '47 180w

"This is one of the loveliest of the year's picture books. We turn its pages with a feeling of gratitude that once again the distinction and beauty of French picture books are available to American children."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:37 N 15 '47 150w

DAVENPORT, MRS GWEN (LEYS). Belvedere. 247p $2.75 Bobbs

47-3923

The Kings, Tacey and Harry, had their troubles with their three small children, in their home on Hummingbird Hill. It was war-time; help was hard to get or keep, and Tacey was showing the effects. So they advertised for a "mother's helper" and captured a genius instead. Lynn Belvedere wanted to write the greatest book of all time, and he hated small children. The situation was hilarious and yet it worked out.

Booklist 43:347 J1 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Je 22 '47 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 J1 6 '47 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 10 '47 110w

"Mrs. Davenport writes without rancor without ever forgetting the real forces of men at war, and without any plea for pity. Her novel is simply a factual, fairly appraised segment of the conflict. It is at once witty, warm, and loving. Harry and Tacey are joyous company, really good people, and, fortunately for the country, legion. Due to Mrs. Davenport's taste and emphasis, it would be difficult for anyone either to resent or to fail to understand their annoyances." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 30:23 Je 21 '47 450w

DAVENPORT, MARCIA (GLUCK) (MRS R. W. DAVENPORT). East side, west side. 376p $3 Scribner

47-11088

Novel of New York city life shortly after the war. The heroine is the charming daughter of a beautiful Jewish actress and an Irish contractor. Jessie herself, married to a philanthropic member of a prominent New York family, keeps up the fiction of her marriage until she meets a famous war hero, also born in New York of mixed heritage. Together these two fine people decide to make a new beginning.

"The diverse origins of her people give Marcia Davenport the opportunity to describe New York at several levels and at several periods. She does it wonderfully well, shifting from past to present, from slum to desiccated women's club to first-night party, describing all of them with enthusiasm and a sharp, affectionate, ruefully cynical eye." P. L. Adams

+ Atlantic 140:178 N '47 360w

Booklist 44:90 N 1 '47

"Being that rara avis, a native resident, it was with great delight that this reviewer sat down to read what purported to be a real story about New York. In this happy anticipation she was not disappointed. Mrs. Davenport knows her town. She has re-created its distinctive physical atmosphere; some of her descriptions are photographically clear. . . The author draws for you a woman who wins your admiration and sympathy at once. At last, you say, someone has given us a heroine who is a good woman, natural, beautiful, forthright and wise, a real human being. . . Alas! the type we are always hoping for has not emerged in this book, and though it is written with skill and analytical excellence we cannot recommend it." M. E. Brennan

Cath World 166:282 D '47 500w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun Book Week O 20 '47 370w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Commonweal 47:176 N 28 '47 600w

Kirkus 15:446 Ag 15 '47 250w

"Recommended for general purchase to meet current requests." Mary Clark

+ Library J 72:1269 S 15 '47 40w

"Jessie is a fastidious person, morally, mentally, physically. But to me she seems to be in her fashion quite as self-indulgent and sterile as the people whom she excoriates. . . If Miss Davenport was trying to point out—as I think she was—who the 'real' people of New York now are, she accomplishes this far more effectively through her sketchy portraits of the vital Bohunk family of Uncle Ales Vanicek . . . than she does in the carefully drawn character of the superfastidious Jessie Bourne." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 N 2 '47 950w

"Mrs. Davenport's style runs to the copious, her disdain seems occasionally excessive, she is apt to use irritatingly inclusive words like 'famous' and 'great.' This can easily be overlooked. 'East Side, West Side,' because of its highly specialized principals, may not have the wide appeal of 'Valley of Decision,' . . . but it will recall in its subjective intensity a much beloved earlier work, 'Of Lena Geyer.'" Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p4 O 19 '47 850w

"Real moral stamina, a lot of overeasy writing, more taste than is commonly met with in current novels, and an almost complete absence of humor come into balance in Mrs. Davenport's highly readable new work. . . The author's excursions into political ideology are a hindrance to the story, but her picture of the greedy, reckless life in this city in the first days of peace is admirably done."

+ New Yorker 23:133 O 25 '47 130w

"The reader is carried along, day by day, with a sureness of touch that is the property only of a novelist who knows her business and knows it well. It's all rather in the fashion of a week's vacation in New York and what could be more wonderful than that?" Guy Patrick

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 11 '48 800w

"'East Side, West Side' may, of course, find favor with a large public for the perfectly good reason that it describes with gusto, with vivacity, and in detail whole chunks of Manhattan life. As an animated travelogue-cum-etiquette-book it is highly successful. Few writers could do this sort of thing one-half as well as Marcia Davenport does it; though, to be sure, few serious writers would care to try. . . But as a serious novel [it] is scarcely afloat before the exacting waters run it hard aground." George Dangerfield

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 N 22 '47 800w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 16 '47 120w

"The comparison between the bad rich and the good poor is far too familiar and too pat. The characters she means to portray sympathetically emerge as sentimentally unreal."

— Time 50:112 N 3 '47 230w

DAVIDSON, DAVID. Steeper cliff. 340p $3 Random house

47-5079

Lieutenant Cooper, an American army officer, was sent to Germany after the war, to help reorganize the newspapers in Bavaria. A neurotic, he had an almost morbid desire to prove the courage he knew he lacked. In identifying himself with a lost anti-Nazi Bavarian newspaperman he hoped to gain some knowledge of the man's inherent bravery. He even fell in love with Lorenz's faithful wife, Brigitte. When Lorenz finally returned, Lieutenant Cooper had found his answer.

"For all its groping on its main theme, The Steeper Cliff remains a sensitive, at times brilliant, novel on a great moral subject." John Ashmead

+ Atlantic 180:127 S '47 390w

Booklist 44:108 N 15 '47

DAVIDSON, DAVID—Continued

Reviewed by Van Allen Bradley

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Jl 27 '47
270w

"The critics have lately been loud in their acclaim of The Steeper Cliff. This time the critics have undoubtedly justice on their side. For this novel has originality, it has daring and, because of its setting and its theme, it has extraordinary importance; although, in accordance with so much modern writing, it is offensive in its brutality and coarseness. Yes, one understands the excitement of the critics." Margaret Williamson

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 5 '47
600w

Kirkus 15:289 Je 1 '47 210w

"This first novel gives a decidedly interesting and illuminating picture of life in American-occupied Germany, but some of the language is tough even by present-day standards. Perhaps readers are inured to it by now." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 72:1033 Jl '47 100w

"'The Steeper Cliff' is not the distinguished literary performance it is being said to be. Nevertheless, the enthusiastic reception it has received can be read as one of the happier signs of the times. . . [It] is also unusually interesting as a piece of reporting; here is a first-hand account, with a sharp ring of authenticity, of Germany under American occupation. Beyond this, except to say that the book sustains a nice narrative excitement, I cannot go. Mr. Davidson is obviously aware of the rich texturing of our lives but he is not yet able to recreate this richness in his writing." Diana Trilling

+ Nation 165:188 Ag 23 '47 410w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:30 Ag 11 '47 950w

"The tone of the book is earthy, not mystical. Cooper's behavior in his search for Lorenz, on the other hand, is motivated with surpassing skill. . . Excellent, also, is the presentation of subsidiary characters. . . Finally, the author knows how to tell a good story. He never bogs down in characterizations or subjective analysis. There is plenty of legitimate suspense in the book, excellent pace is maintained and the narrative moves toward its climax with mounting intensity." Jennings Rice

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly R p1 Jl 20 '47 650w

"On first reading this novel, one is impressed by the solidness of the background, the convincingness of Cooper and some of the other characters, and the skillful relationship between inward and outward action in which the physical quest mirrors the spiritual one. But one is also aware that . . . many of the people are stock characters. . . These weaknesses harm this book, but they do not need to harm the next one." D. S. Norton

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 20 '47 1000w

"Sharp, convincing novel. . . A neatly handled study of a psychological dilemma, and a timely and provocative closeup of some postwar Germans."

+ New Yorker 23:66 Jl 19 '47 140w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Jl 27 '47
600w

"I would like to recommend to you, with only minor reservations, an interesting first novel. . . Mr. Davidson has equipped a difficult theme with a good, solid, sensitive, cooperative prose, a prose which gives shape and impact to his realism, and Brigitte comes into the story all wrapped in cellophane, untouched by the author's human hand; and she stays that way. Andrew Cooper fell in love with her, and that was his business, and he had his own good and complicated reasons, but I wish Mr. Davidson hadn't. Otherwise I go on record in praise of a thoughtful, better-than-average, damn-good-in-fact, job of writing." John Woodburn

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ag 2 '47 900w

"This is perhaps the best novel yet written by an American about postwar Germany. It is sometimes too stagey, often too self-consciously penetrating in its analysis of character. But it is honest, observant, and has a theme at once simple and troubling."

+ Time 50:83 Ag 4 '47 700w

"One of the finest first novels in many months. It is not without its imperfections (chief of which are the unconvincing characterization of its heroine and the improbable nature of her relationship with the hero); but its virtues far outweigh them." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 37:192 autumn '47 380w

DAVIDSON, LEVETTE JAY, and BLAKE, FORRESTER, eds. Rocky Mountain tales; with drawings by Skelly. 302p $3 Univ. of Okla. press

398.21 Tales, American. Folklore—Rocky mountains 47-3645

Tales, yarns, legends, and other accounts of the ways of living in the Rocky Mountain sections of the United States. The material has been taken from newspaper files, clippings, local magazines, diaries, letters, scrapbooks, and some from the files of Federal Writers project for Colorado. Index.

Booklist 43:354 Jl 15 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Jl 27 '47

350w

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 12 '47
300w

"The usual tales of early Western trails—of Indian troubles, pony express, stage drivers, prairie fire, shootings and hangings, and railroad work—here take on freshness from their origin in little-used sources. The tall tales printed here about old Jim Bridger are not so fresh, but those about Sergeant O'Keefe, the 'Pike's Peak Prevaricator' are bright enough. . . Few of the tales, as would be expected, reach to beauty of either sentiment or style. Western sentiment has been sparsely recorded, and the bits that have been are usually drippy. . . The illustrations, having little of the Western spirit, could well be traded for a few line maps of localities and a picture map of Colorado." H. G. Merriam

+ N Y Times p10 Je 22 '47 650w

"Two members of the faculty of the University of Denver have done the work of collecting the material, and a former Denverite has done the illustrations. The result is a book of perhaps limited interest but an admirable volume within those limits. And I think not only students but any American who likes to read about pioneer life and times in the Rocky Mountain region will have a lot of fun with the wealth of material Messrs. Davidson and Blake have got together." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 25 '47
800w

"It gives rare insight into the homely wisdom and the boundless humor of folk who were forced to provide their own entertainment, often, of course, as a means of strengthening morale in times of privation and hardship. Revealed also is the roistering spirit and swagger of frontier life, with its many paradoxes and its great demands on heroism, faith, industry, and the other storied virtues of pioneer life."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:240 S '47 260w

DAVIDSON, ROBERT FRANKLIN. Rudolf Otto's interpretation of religion. 213p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

201 Religion—Philosophy. Otto, Rudolf 47-30875

"Exposition of Otto's thought organized around cardinal concept of autonomy of religion. According to Davidson, Rudolf Otto's interpretation of religion is an insight available for those spiritual needs brought into relief by present crisis of nations and individuals. His major work, The Idea of the Holy, published in 1917, translated into seven languages and reprinted many times, was an antidote to disillusionment of World War I. His portrayal of the autonomy of religion, the author thinks, will act as a corrective to the new Supernaturalism gradually taking shape in British and American theological circles." Library J

Reviewed by W. D. Wallis

Ann Am Acad 254:226 N '47 180w

"It seems to this reviewer that Davidson has presented a very thorough and a very appreciative account of Professor Otto's important contribution to religious philosophy. His enthusiasm has not led to a wholesale acceptance of everything Otto has said. His evaluation is a critical one." C. H. Patterson

+ Christian Century 65:16 Ja '48 950w

"The work shows evidence of careful study, and it should be read by everyone who is interested in philosophy of religion. . . Valuable as is Davidson's work in correcting popular misconceptions of Otto's thought and in contributing to an appreciation of his insight into the unique and autonomous 'holy,' it is far from definitive, as will appear from a consideration of some of its defects. The order of subjects in the outline is based on no clear developmental or logical principle. . . Davidson may be praised for pointing out many of the right problems, but blamed for not pursuing them. He discusses reason and the irrational, but fails to explore their definitions critically. . . Despite defects which this review has stressed, the book is informing and often enlightening, and should not be neglected. It may well initiate fresh studies of one of Germany's truly noble and profound scholars in the field of religion. It is much better in its discussion of The Idea of the Holy than in dealing with Otto's other contributions, but Otto's mind and thought are not treated either as a developing or a logical whole." E. S. Brightman

+ — Crozer Q 25:74 Ja '48 900w

"Recommended for theological seminary libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 72:1264 S 15 '47 100w

DAVIE, MAURICE REA. Refugees in America. See Committee for the study of recent immigration from Europe

DAVIES, VALENTINE. Miracle on 34th Street. 120p $1.75 Harcourt

47-4221

Short novel, adapted from a motion picture story, describing what happened when Kris Kringle of the Maplewood home of the aged became Macy's Santa Claus.

Booklist 43:359 Jl 15 '47

Christian Century 64:1145 S 24 '47 130w

"The simulation of sweetness, of innocence, may appeal to some—though on the whole this is seasonally untimely."

Kirkus 15:316 Je 15 '47 90w

"Nice blend of fantasy, fun and humor with the universal and wholesome appeal of the Christmas spirit." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 72:1033 Jl '47 80w

"The story is unabashedly foolery for grown-ups, with enough spice under its sparkling sugar coating so that most but the senile will find it thoroughly enjoyable." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly BK R p14 Jl 20 '47 240w

"Valentine Davies' story will hardly create competition for Charles Dickens, come next Yuletide. Written in scenario-thin prose, it is a harmless little extravaganza in defense of good-will and imagination that manages in passing to poke fun at three high-pressured aspects of American life: advertising, politics and psychology. . . Curiously enough, in the process of such fun-poking, Mr. Davies has made kindness itself seem synthetic. If one must 'prove' Santa Claus by due process of law and altruistic logic, one might just as well not believe at all." Nona Balakian

N Y Times p23 Ag 3 '47 380w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 21 '47 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:141 O '47

DAVIES, WILFRED WAECHTER. Cargo aircraft. 216p il $6 Pitman

387.743 Aeronautics, Commercial 47-30074

"Early development, cargo carrying equipment, present and future and fundamentals of cargo aircraft from operational and designer's point of view with analysis of operating cost. Book also includes loading methods, handling and stowage and outline drawings of representative air carginers. Illustrated." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:181 F 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:226 F 1 '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:55 O '46

DAVIS, ADELLE. Let's cook it right; good health comes from good cooking. 626p $3 Harcourt

641.5 Cookery 47-4048

"A cooking guide—for the beginner or the experienced cook that shows how to prepare delicious, attractive-looking foods and apply the principles of good nutrition at the same time." (Publisher's note) For easy use, ingredients are printed in heavier type. The index is arranged for quick reference.

Booklist 43:304 Je 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '47

Kirkus 15:255 My 1 '47 230w

"No cook can help taking a greater interest in each dish that she prepares after reading 'Let's Cook It Right.' Guidance toward the best in cooking is given through friendly, firm, often amusing advice. There is a rich supply of appetizing recipes, with variations to avoid monotony." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p28 My 25 '47 110w

DAVIS, ALLISON, and HAVIGHURST, ROBERT JAMES. Father of the man; how your child gets his personality; with a chapter by Helen Ross, psychoanalyst. 245p $2.75 Houghton

136.7 Child study 47-2527

A study of the effects of cultural environment and family life on the personalities of children. Studies particularly four girls, two from a poor family and two from a middle-class family.

Booklist 43:267 My 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '47

"There's some intensely interesting material here, both physical and sociological, making this a genuine contribution to the field of child development, and of practical assistance to the parent in its suggestions appended at the close of each chapter."

+ Kirkus 15:52 Ja 15 '47 180w

"A serious synthesis of cultural and psychological factors in child growth is not attempted. More case histories, a less episodic treatment of the cases presented, a choice of children at the same age level, a greater sampling of equivalent institutions in a primitive culture would have made a better book." J. E. Bardin

Nation 164:523 My 3 '47 500w

School & Society 66:79 Jl 26 '47 20w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 66:329 O 25 '47 360w

Wis Lib Bul 43:77 My '47

DAVIS, CLYDE BRION. Jeremy Bell. 313p $2.75 Rinehart

47-30110

Two farm boys, Jeremy Bell and his friend Sam, grow restive doing all the familiar things and go to Chicago for a trip. There they are practically shanghaied into working in a Southern lumber camp. From the horrors of that experience they finally escape, and end by enlisting in the army. The time is the early days of the Spanish-American war.

Booklist 43:205 Mr 1 '47

DAVIS, C. B.—Continued

"I know Clyde Brion Davis wasn't there but his new book manages to have exciting realism and conviction." Leo Kennedy

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Mr 9 '47 420w

"The style in which Mr. Davis has told his story is clear and invigorating, uncompromising, but sometimes vulgar in its descriptions of life in the lumber camp. He writes with the cold fury of a crusader, exposing a blot on American civilization, at least as it existed fifty years ago; but in the foreground are always the decent, sun-touched homes of Dawn's Mill, like hundreds and thousands of others in villages all the way across the American continent." W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p22 Mr 20 '47 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '47

"Very good reading in good hairbreadth Harry tradition."

+ Kirkus 15:9 Ja 1 '47 180w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 72:319 F 15 '47 70w

"Mr. Davis has written with the usual economy, hewing close to the story line, and by the time Jeremy and Sam have found a solution—and a dubious one, at that—to their problem, the reader has spent several harrowing hours in their company." Jennings Rice

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Mr 2 '47 700w

"The loveliest thing in the book is the town of Dawn's Mill; the finest character is Grandpa Bell. . . . Jeremy is a likely youth, tall and strong and honest. At the present rate of telling his story should last through a large number of volumes. It is to be sincerely hoped that in the course of these installments Jeremy occasionally gets back to Dawn's Mill. Such a town, once created, should not be abandoned." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 2 '47 550w

New Yorker 23:94 Mr 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 11 '47 550w

"This is unhappily the kind of parable that is apt to be a true story. It could be documented with a thousand footnotes. Mr. Davis has told it without the footnotes, simply, intensely, with horror. Like the others of his books that I have read, it has an undisguised vein of ethical iron. It is a preaching on the dangerous ambushments that still threaten democratic man, and nothing could be more contemporary." N. L. Wroth

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 Ap 12 '47 500w

DAVIS, EILEEN. Happiness around her; a tapestry of youth. 208p $2.50 Random house 818 47-3532

Brief sketches or stories of a young girl's life, probably based on the author's own childhood. The girl's warm-hearted Irish father, and her fastidious, gentle mother, are clearly portrayed.

Booklist 43:330 Je 15 '47

"Minor memoirs, but with a very special, tranquil tone, which should command an audience among older readers."

+ Kirkus 15:230 Ap 15 '47 160w

"A book for readers who appreciate good character writing touched with humor and who do not demand a plot." M. A. Johnson

+ Library J 72:805 My 15 '47 80w

"Its nine sketches or stories give the memories and patterns of a girl's youth but, more important than that, its writing has a quality that holds the delicacy and tenderness of a sweet May day. It is in some ways a gay book, but near the surface of its gaiety lies a wistfulness that's close to tears." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Je 1 '47 600w

"Miss Davis' book is not robust in its humor, but it is happy in a quiet and sensitive way." Florence Crowther

+ N Y Times p10 Je 1 '47 550w

DAVIS, ESME (MRS ROBERT F. MATZ, jr).

Seed of the serpent. 323p $2.75 Bobbs 47-11572

The life story of Lola Bazil, an Andalusian gypsy beauty, who won renown as a dancer and snake charmer. The time and scene are late nineteenth century Europe.

Booklist 44:134 D 1 '47

"Unfortunately, Miss Davis' skill in writing does not equal her theatrical sense of timing nor her perception of dramatic highlights."

E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 72:1193 S 1 '47 70w

"There are exciting flashes. . . . But for the most part the Spanish and European backgrounds of Lola Bazil's early days are something else again." Catharine Brody

+ N Y Times p18 D 7 '47 400w

Springf'd Republican p8B D 21 '47 120w

DAVIS, FREDERICK BARTON. Utilizing human talent; armed services selection and classification procedures [prepared] for the American council on education Committee on implications of armed services educational programs. 85p pa $1.25 Am. council on educ.

371.26 Ability—Testing. Personnel service in education 47-3045

"Intended to help school administrators, guidance counselors, test constructors, and employers who are concerned about making a better use of human resources. For the convenience of readers of different interests and purposes, the report is divided into three parts. Chapter I, 'Selection and Classification Procedures,' is a brief description of methods used by the armed forces in selecting and classifying all personnel. . . . Chapter II, 'Implications for Civilian Education,' is organized under ten headings, under which the broader implications are rather fully discussed. Some of the principles set forth in this part of the report as having been used successfully by the armed forces are not new but had been advocated in the past by educators and psychologists. . . . The last part of the report is devoted to two important subjects. In Appendix A, the topic 'Some Technical Problems of Measurement,' is grouped under headings and discussed. Appendix B, 'Technical Note on Test Construction,' is a discussion of certain basic principles of test theory underlying the construction of tests for educational and vocational purposes." (El School J) Bibliography.

"This is a unique and valuable publication. It shows clearly the procedures employed in the selection and the classification of several million men and women in the armed forces during the war and gives the implications of methods used and how the procedures might be made applicable to the American educational system. The report will be of particular interest and help to persons in schools and colleges who have the responsibility of directing and developing human talent." R. A. Holy

+ El School J 47:534 My '47 550w

School & Society 65:197 Mr 15 '47 20w

DAVIS, FREDERICK CLYDE. Detour to oblivion. 218p $2 Doubleday 47-30698

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 14 '47 140w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 O 26 '47 130w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p12 Ag 31 '47 180w

"All very satisfactory, once you're used to the comic manner of speech affected by Hatch's assistant."

+ New Yorker 23:68 Ag 30 '47 120w

"Interesting puzzle and background, marred by singularly heavy and graceless style, far from Mr. Davis' blithe early manner." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 31 '47 80w

"Good enough."

Sat R of Lit 30:32 S 20 '47 50w

DAVIS, FREDERICK CLYDE. Thursday's blade. 250p $2 Doubleday

47-1992

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 16 '47 140w

Kirkus 14:627 D 15 '46 90w

"At any rate, Mr. Davis does his darndest to mix deadly razors and fun." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 F 16 '47 180w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 F 9 '47 150w

"The reasons for the culprit's career of blood-letting turn out to be rather illogical. A tricky idea, not too deftly handled."

New Yorker 22:100 F 8 '47 90w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 16 '47 50w

"Swift and deadly action; interesting people—especially pugnacious radio commentatress and erring hubby; hard-to-guess solution . . . and fairly foggy motive."

Sat R of Lit 30:28 F 8 '47 50w

DAVIS, HAROLD LENOIR. Harp of a thousand strings. 438p $3 Morrow

47-6457

A novel of the French revolution. Three American seamen met in a warehouse in Tripoli during the Barbary war. One was unable to travel and the others stayed to protect him. Tallien, a petty Tripolitan official keeps them diverted with the story of his part in the revolution and in the government of post-revolutionary France.

Booklist 44:108 N 15 '47

"'Harp of a Thousand Strings' . . . is prose of a rareness in our time. It is prose in contemplation, commentary. It is prose that has life around it and in it." Riley Hughes

+ Commonweal 47:378 Ja 23 '48 500w

"Confusing and difficult reading."

— Kirkus 15:513 S 15 '47 120w

"It is not an easy novel to read. Characters are introduced abruptly, there are random digressions that seem to have little to do with the main narrative, and the writing, always of a schooled intelligence, makes no concessions to the reader who is unprepared to use his own. . . Mr. Davis is not afraid of coincidence; indeed, the plot of his story is somewhat top-heavy with it. . . The real merits of the story lie elsewhere—in the subtle (occasionally oversubtle) delineation of character, in the play of an intricate mind over an intricate situation, [and] in the scrupulous assessment of human motivations." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 N 2 '47 800w

"Mr. Davis' virtuoso style, biblical in its cadences, is a continuous joy. When he describes the three founding fathers in their dotage, it is in the garrulous, inventive, mirthful ramblings of a frontier tale. As the scene shifts to France, the language takes on an epigrammatic, paradoxical elegance. Making no attempt to reproduce the idiom of the age, Mr. Davis writes dialogue that is like a chant with its insistence on one fatal word. . . In revitalizing the intangible rather than the intimate aspects of the past, and in proposing that a dream can possess the unlikelyst of men, Mr. Davis has attempted a theme that is worthy of his creative art." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p18 N 16 '47 800w

"A novel about the French Revolution, which is several cuts above the costume-ball type of historical novel, but probably won't duplicate the literary feat that the author achieved in 1935, when 'Honey in the Horn,' his only other work of fiction, won him both a Pulitzer Prize and a Harper Prize."

+ New Yorker 23:131 N 8 '47 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 19 '47 800w

"For anyone who likes rugged effort and artistic conscience, it is rewarding. For it represents more than modest intellectual effort, and it penetrates beneath the surface. It has substance as well as shine. 'Harp of a Thousand Strings' is, indeed, a most unusual tale."

T. C. Chubb

+ Sat R of Lit 30:46 D 6 '47 700w

DAVIS, MRS HARRIET IDE (EAGER). World on my doorstep; a venture in international living. 274p $3 Simon & Schuster

B or 92

47-31116

The author is the wife of Malcolm Davis who has been for many years connected with various peace organizations and was during the 1930s representative and reporter at Geneva for the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Mrs Davis' reminiscences combine an account of their home life in Geneva with her personal observations on international affairs and politics.

Booklist 44:49 O 1 '47

Kirkus 15:331 Je 15 '47 250w

"Mrs. Davis will irritate some and delight others by the way she paints the panorama of Geneva. One chapter will deal in the greatest detail with a maid servant's love affairs; the next will string together anecdotes of encounters with headline politicians and occasional statesmen, or sketch the daily life of specialists, journalists and the wives of permanent officials and visiting delegates of all nations, and a third will give a colorful account of parts of the international apparatus. But there is method in her entertaining expository madness. She makes it easy for Mrs. Babbitt and me to identify ourselves with the author, to get the vicarious experience of living abroad while being weaned from merely private life and to take thought and responsibility as citizens." Rhoda Pratt

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 O 19 '47 600w

"Our chances of avoiding World War III will gain by a measure if 'World on My Doorstep' is read by all who are absorbed in something 'more interesting and lucrative than internationalism.'" Alan Cranston

+ N Y Times p40 N 23 '47 550w

Springfld Republican p11C D 7 '47 310w

DAVIS, MRS HELEN CLARKSON (MILLER) comp. Constitutions, electoral laws, treaties of states in the Near and Middle East. 446p $5 Duke univ. press

342.5 Constitutions, Treaties, East (Near East) 47-1695

"Formal legal texts of treaties and other official documents providing basis for present political structure of Arabic speaking lands, Egypt, Turkey, Iran, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Afghanistan, Palestine, Syria, and Lebanon. Includes many state papers never before published in English; some retain original French. Since Arab countries are center of many pressing world problems this collection will answer many questions regarding systems of governments in ancient crossroads of civilization." (Library J) No index.

"A result of laborious search for documentary sources (not an easy task in the Orient), the book constitutes the first very successful and truly scholarly codification of the fundamental legal instruments of ten countries in the Middle East." George Lenczowski

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:596 Je '47 550w

Foreign Affairs 26:231 O '47 20w

DAVIS, H. C. M.—Continued

"A book for the student of Near Eastern affairs and for reference use." J. C. Shipman
+ Library J 71:1462 O 15 '46 120w

"Many of the papers are still inaccessible to the general public, and these translations should be invaluable to scholars in the field."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:285 S '47 240w

DAVIS, HERBERT JOHN. The satire of Jonathan Swift. 109p $2 Macmillan 827 Swift, Jonathan. Satire 47-2180

Three lectures delivered at Smith college in May, 1946. Contents: Literary satire: the author of A Tale of a Tub; Political satire: The Examiner and M. B. Drapier; Moral satire: Lemuel Gulliver.

Booklist 43:251 Ap 15 '47

Christian Century 64:272 F 26 '47 80w

"A cool, classical examination and elucidation of Swift as a literary, political and moral satirist. The author, President of Smith College, is an authority on Swift. . . For students and specialists in this field."

+ Kirkus 15:19 Ja 1 '47 160w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
My 18 '47 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ap 20 '47
70w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:132 Je '47 160w

DAVIS, JOHN D. Westminster dictionary of the Bible; rev. and rewritten by Henry Snyder Gehman. 658p il maps $3.50 Presbyterian bd.

220.3 Bible. Whole—Dictionaries and encyclopedias 44-8645

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"Among noteworthy features of the dictionary are the chronologies, an illustrated article on versions of the Bible, charts of the line of high priests, tables listing the miracles of Christ and the parables, and a harmony of the four gospels. The inclusion of many minor places and persons also adds to the book's usefulness. . . This up-to-date work contains a wealth of reliable information, at a reasonable price. It is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 17:20 Ap '46 340w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). Melody. Mutton Bone, and Sam; il. by Paul Brown. 245p $2.25 Doubleday

Horses—Legends and stories 47-11177

A story about horses, summer vacation days, including a slight mystery, for grades four to seven.

Booklist 44:116 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p17a D 3 '47
60w

Kirkus 15:467 S 1 '47 120w

"Wholesome family story." Dorothea Dawson

+ Library J 72:1691 D 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:156 D 6 '47 50w

"Many spirited sketches by an artist who knows horses."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:54 N 15 '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:177 D '47

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). Roger and the fox; pictures by Hildegard Woodward. (Junior bks) [42p] $2 Doubleday

47-11631

Roger was aged seven and he wanted very much to see a fox. The hired man on his father's Connecticut farm said a city boy couldn't see a fox. But he did give Roger some pointers on animal lore and Roger learned fast. In this picture-story book for five-to-eight-year-olds the story of Roger's success is told.

Booklist 44:156 D 15 '47

"This is a good long story for a long reading time with all the fun and feel of a snowy Connecticut landscape." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p31 D 20 '47
50w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:34 Ja '48 90w

Kirkus 15:599 N 1 '47 80w

"Recommended for ages 5-9." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 72:1690 D 1 '47

Reviewed by Marjorie Burger

+ N Y Times p19 Ja 4 '48 140w

"The author has a real feeling for the country and expertly conveys the smell of fall and winter in Connecticut. The writing is adept and the pictures are much better than average." R. C. Benét

+ New Yorker 23:145 D 6 '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:176 D '47

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). Taste of vengeance. 185p $2 Doubleday 46-8484

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 D 22 '46
90w

"Here is entertaining small town life and amateurish sleuthing for rather pleasant case-work."

+ Kirkus 14:530 O 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
D 22 '46 150w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 D 15 '46 140w

"Quiet, cumulative novel, written with skill and great warmth." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 5 '47
50w

DAVIS, ROBERT. Partners of Powder Hole; il. by Marshall Davis. 167p $2 Holiday

An orphan boy and a lobster fisherman on Cape Cod are the partners. The story is one of adventure, rescue, salvage, and fish hijacking. For grades seven to ten.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 180:148 D '47 120w

Booklist 43:312 Je 1 '47

"The atmosphere surrounding this tale is as real and vital as the sea and sand of which it is part."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 My 25 '47
190w

"A capital shore story, with real Cape flavor, for boys who like small boat adventure." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:265 Jl '47 150w

Kirkus 14:543 N 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by Margaret Miller

Library J 72:894 Je 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
My 11 '47 360w

"The heart-warming relationship between this salty, moody Cape fisherman and the boy Sam makes a story of unusual charm. Young readers will enjoy it. So will their parents." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times p23 Je 1 '47 190w

"This is a good story, with plenty of excitement. It is illustrated with effective line drawings."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:37 O 18 '47 130w

Wis Lib Bul 43:100 Je '47

DAVIS, ROBERT L., and BECK, RONALD D. Applied plastic product design; a simplified presentation of plastic product design principles for use by engineers and students in plastics. 285p il $6 Prentice-Hall

668.4 Plastics. Plastics industry. Design. Industrial 47-1025

"Fundamentals of practical production design of articles made from plastic materials showing design limitations and possibilities and proper application of plastics. Takes into consideration methods and types of molds and details of use of inserts, tapped holes, location of parting lines, draft, ribs, gates, etc. and methods of lettering and decorating plastic parts. Illustrated." (Library J) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 43:249 Ap 15 '47

"Its clearly written, nontechnical language and good format make it so easily read that the owner will make frequent use of it. The 373 illustrations and diagrams are an important contribution to its clarity and ease of reading, although some of the illustrations can be improved upon." J. O. Reinecke

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1974 Jl 7 '47 270w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:389 Mr 1 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:14 Ja '47

DAVIS, WILLIAM ALLISON. See Davis, A.

DAVY, COLIN. Shrimp Harris. 282p $3 Putnam 47-30348

A story of a young English boy who becomes a famous jockey. For a long time Shrimp ran an honest course and rightly earned his position as favorite, but eventually he yielded to temptation and was saved only by chance from disgrace.

Booklist 43:359 Jl 15 '47

"Colin Davy's style is not the crispest you'll ever see, and at times his tale is only a step or so removed from the sort of thing the American Boy used to print. But in 'Shrimp Harris' he is writing about something he obviously knows and loves, and his honesty and good will shine in every sentence." Clinton Textor

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Jl 6 '47 270w

"Except for the fabricated finale, an authentic picture of the sport, and the men who manipulate it, with moments of excitement." Kirkus 15:261 My 15 '47 150w

"Racing is a job of physical and nervous tension, demanding skill and stamina and cunning. . . Colin Davy's novel of the English turf is an informed, frank and most illuminating study of the breed." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 N 9 '47 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 21 '47 90w

DAWES, CHESTER LAURENS. Course in electrical engineering; v. 2, Alternating currents. new 4th ed 708p il $5 McGraw

621.3 Electric engineering (47-2248)

"Revised to cover recent developments by 'expanding the fundamental material and by showing in more detail its application to the study of electrical machinery and apparatus.' Preface." (Booklist)

Booklist 43:293 My 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:641 Ap 15 '47 70w

DAY, DONALD. Big country: Texas. (Am. folkways ser) 326p $3.50 Duell

917.64 Texas 47-4831

"An American Folkways book devoted to the unlimited horizons of Texas. 'Texas is Texas anyway you mix it' but the main ingredients are cattle, cotton and oil. Day describes the people of the cattle empires and the oilfields, of the cotton belt, the piney woods and the sea of grass, as individualists with a Texan state of mind. A sense of bigness, still at work on their folklore, has lured Paul Bunyan from the North Woods and set him to drilling oilwells and laying pipe lines." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:13 S 1 '47

Reviewed by H. T. Kane

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Jl 27 '47 450w

"If Mr. Day hasn't been as truly critical of Texas as he might be, I dare say it's because he loves the place so. His book is a bit rambling and repetitive, but it draws charm and humor. It's a good look-around-and-over the State." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 31 '47 700w

"The latest addition to the extensive American Folkways Series of regional studies is undoubtedly one of the most amusing for those who like the simple humor and the tall tale of the frontier."

+ Commonweal 46:315 Jl 11 '47 110w

"A vigorous job on a vigorous state—but more specifically for that region's readers than for the general public."

Kirkus 15:267 My 15 '47 150w

"Recommended as a popular approach to Texas through history, geography, politics and folklore." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:385 Je 1 '47 100w

"Mr. Day's summary of the cattle, cotton-farming and oil influences on Texas is logical enough, though by no means comprehensive. It is when he attempts to give a picture of Texas today, the people who run the state, and the opposing forces and amusing counter-currents, that he appears to have bitten off more than he can conveniently chew." Stanley Walker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p36 N 23 '47 550w

"This is probably the best general account of Texas which has been written. It is accurate, vigorous, comprehensive, well planned; it stands out particularly in contrast to the many dull or sentimental pieces that have been written about the state. Here, at last, is a thoroughly realistic story of 170,000,000 acres and its people." G. L. Joughin

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 27 '47 450w

"A member of the American Folkways Series, 'Big Country' is better than some, not as good as others. It's a long way from Carey McWilliams' book on 'Southern California Country,' for example, which is one of the best of the lot. On the other hand, it's a better job than, for example 'Far North Country' or 'Ozark Country' as I remember those. Perhaps Texas is just too big to get into a single book. At any rate, Mr. Day has made a better-than-fair try." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 8 '47 500w

Reviewed by Stanley Walker

Sat R of Lit 31:27 Ja 3 '48 270w

Wis Lib Bul 43:139 O '47

DAY, RICHARD RIGGS. Summer landmark. 106p $2 Macmillan

47-31038

The story of one week in the life of an observant ten-year-old boy. He visits his uncle on an Iowa farm, meets his stately Welsh great-grandmother, and other relatives, visits a carnival, attends a water witching, and notes the madness of the hired man.

Kirkus 15:262 My 15 '47 160w

"Mr. Day, who was born in Iowa, in this brief first novel sustains admirably the tone of a troubled dream reviewed and memorialized." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 72:1033 Jl '47 70w

"Richard Day has made a little book that is real, imaginative and unusually appealing."

Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 21 '47 380w

DAY, R. R.—Continued

"A slight but fairly charming first novel. . . The author's description of a child's mind grappling with the strange adult world is done with better than average ability, and his handling of some episodes involving a marvellous carnival and a wonderful hired man—both of them standard elements in a story of this kind—is very nice, too. It would take a more unusual talent, however, to make you forget that you have read something very like this many times before."

+ — New Yorker 23:100 S 20 '47 100w

DAY-LEWIS, CECIL (NICHOLAS BLAKE, pseud.). Poetic image. 157p $3 Oxford

808.1 Poetry 47-11628

"This volume is a revision of lectures delivered at Cambridge University, in which Mr. Lewis discusses the nature of the poetic image and the use of it by English poets, past and present. . . In the final chapter, Mr. Lewis deals with the archetypal theory of images, but insists that the poet, though being advised and strengthened by the past, must then get on his way to the light and living. He ends with a constructive appeal to poets of the atomic age to give to their own generation 'images of virtue—natural, consoling, heartening.'" Christian Science Monitor

"In 'The Poetic Image,' Cecil Day Lewis shows the same power of lucid exposition which he has shown in his earlier books, such as 'Poetry for You.' But, on this occasion, he has chosen a single difficult aspect of poetry and set himself to penetrate right to the bottom of it in 150-odd pages; such a book cannot be easy reading. . . The many examples with which he illustrates his points sometimes overload the text, but they are always apt." P. J. H. H.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 My 31 '47 420w

"Should prove unusually helpful and enlightening. But it is far more than a guide through present obscurities. By his study of poetic imagery in all times Mr Lewis reveals the nature of poetic activity with a sensitive intimacy only possible to a poet who has finely pondered the art he practices and the creative principle that underlies it." H. I.A. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 13 '47 190w

Reviewed by Lionel Cranfield

New Statesman & Nation 33:417 Je 7 '47 3400w

"Reading this serious, witty and extraordinarily perceptive little book is an experience rarely, in these days, available." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p8 D 28 '47 950w

"Mr. Day Lewis manages to illuminate the poetic process and its varied productions in a fresh and readable manner. The text is thickly sown with charming poetic illustrations."

+ New Yorker 23:138 N 15 '47 80w

"Thoughtful, logical, sensitive, intelligent, this poet's interpretation of a basic constituent of poetry should find a wide audience. It is full of suggestion for the already well-informed, and is also clearly intelligible to the unenlightened." V. Sackville-West

+ Spec 178:436 Ap 18 '47 650w

"Nothing so good in its kind has appeared since Axel's Castle, nothing written with such ease and authority. The tradition whereby good poets write good prose has been ably maintained, and it is to be hoped that a rarer tradition may have been established. For this is evidently one of the cases where a good poet also made a good lecturer."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p156 Ap 5 '47 1150w

DAY-LEWIS, CECIL (NICHOLAS BLAKE, pseud.). Poetry for you. 122p $2.50 Oxford

808.1 Poetry 47-4961

A well-known English writer here presents "a book for boys and girls on the enjoyment of poetry" with chapters on: What is the use of poetry? How poetry began; Poems that tell a story; Poetry with a purpose; When is a poem not a poem? etc.

Reviewed by John Holmes

Atlantic 180:136 O '47 420w

Booklist 44:73 O 15 '47

"Not for every child, but it is an excellent book to have on the family shelves if there is one in the household who is especially interested in poetry or likes to write." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 166:237 D '47 90w

"Newcomers to poetry can read 'Poetry for You' with pleasure and instruction. Confirmed readers will be reminded at almost every chapter of some essential they've forgotten." Leo Kennedy

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 S 21 '47 400w

Reviewed by Pearl Strachan

Christian Science Monitor p15 N 1 '47 550w

"Recommended for use with young people interested in poetry and a boon for English teachers." M. M. Smith

+ Library J 72:1383 O 1 '47 90w

"The poems he quotes to make his points are aimed at the high-school level. Indeed, it is this determination of Mr. Lewis to maintain a chatty, school-age tone that has led him to blight his book. . . This misplaced confidence in homely colloquialisms and playful tag lines to establish rapport with his readers gives Mr. Lewis' otherwise honest discourse a considerable tinge of that very falseness he so rightly scores in bad verse." A. S. Morris

— N Y Times p14 N 16 '47 330w

"C. Day Lewis has done the cause of literature a real service in bringing out this study of the art of poetry. Although 'Poetry for You' is written for young people and uses a tone of gentle authority and an argument readily understandable to a child, Mr. Lewis has, it appears to me, done more than to write a mere treatise for children. In the course of stating the case to people who have had as yet little contact with literature he has written a most single-minded account of the causes, means, and purposes of poetry." Martha Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 O 4 '47 550w

DEAN, AMBER. Foggy foggy dew. 192p $2 Doubleday

47-11519

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:517 S 15 '47 40w

"The first word of the title of this book is an apt description of the author's narrative style which makes reading as difficult as driving a car when fog obscures the view. . . The dénouement, dramatic as it is, leaves a fringe of loose ends dangling." I. A.

N Y Times p26 D 7 '47 200w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 16 '47 100w

"Entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 22 '47 50w

DEAN, LEON W. Pirate lair; il. by Kurt Werth. 246p $2 Rinehart

47-1583

This adventure story for young readers combines a tale of mystery and intrigue in Vermont with experiences of a young lad fighting in the war against the Barbary pirates.

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 12 '47 180w

"This is a disappointing jumble of hackneyed plot situations and people without any balance in enlightening research to give freshness to the settings. . . Along with the questionable value of the elaborate plotting, there is the further undesirability of too evident sectional provincial arrogance, and the concept of white prestatant superiority."

— Kirkus 15:32 Ja 15 '47 170w

"Twelve-year-old readers will find the plot involved and the telling rather dull and slow. Reference to German characteristics in the early pages seems very unnecessary." K. H. McAlarney

— Library J 72:645 Ap 15 '47 80w

"The book, though dramatic, is not theatrical, but a good yarn with history taking place in it." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Ap 27 '47 320w

"Leon Dean, who has previously demonstrated his knowledge of Vermonters and his ability to spin a yarn that will capture the imagination of any adolescent boy, here demonstrates equal ability to describe life and warfare on the high seas. The action is swift, the plot skillfully designed to capture and hold interest, the historical background is authentic, and the characterization is deft." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p40 Ap 13 '47 190w

DEAN, MRS VERA (MICHELES). Russia: menace or promise. 158p $2 Holt
947.084 Russia—Foreign policy. Communism—Russia 47-2254

Information on Russia given in question and answer form, concerning the people of Russia, how Russia is governed, how the Communist party works, and how Soviet economy functions. Appendixes: Constitution of the U.S.S.R., and Aims of the fourth Five-year plan. Bibliography. No index.

"Placed in the hands of every high school senior and college freshman, as well as in those of every man and woman in the land, this 'Headline Book' of the Foreign Policy Association would prove a valuable contribution to a more enlightened public opinion on American-Soviet relations." Martin Kriesberg

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1042 O '47 370w

Reviewed by Charles Prince
Ann Am Acad 254:200 N '47 260w

Reviewed by Bernard Pares
+ Atlantic 180:120 JI '47 400w

Booklist 43:253 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by G. M. A. Grube
Canadian Forum 27:91 JI '47 280w

"Simple in both form and writing, 'Russia: Menace or Promise' is informative and readable." F. R. Dulles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7
My 25 '47 370w

Reviewed by Edgar Snow
N Y Times p7 Ap 6 '47 800w

"The only flaw in this otherwise excellent little book is the inaccuracy of some of Mrs. Dean's references to Russia's pre-revolutionary history. One would expect her to know that Lake Peipus and not Ladoga was the scene of Duke Alexander's victory. She ought also to know where Bonaparte was in 1799, even if she has forgotten the names of the French generals Suworov fought in Italy in that annus mirabilis of Russian military glory." D. F. White

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:14 My 3 '47 700w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:172 Je '47 250w

DEAN, MRS VERA (MICHELES). United States and Russia. 321p $3 Harvard univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Russia. Russia—Foreign relations—U.S. 47-11573

"Author describes the present status of Russia—the land, people, political and economic systems; considers Russia's actions as a world power, and probes the problems of Russo-American relations. Sees basic conflict as one of ideas—between our belief in individual liberty as a road to material prosperity and the Russian socialist democracy aiming at mass welfare. Argues for an American course sympathetic to necessary change and not automatically supporting status quo, based not on reaction to Russian initiative but on our own aims and interests." Library J

Booklist 44:127 D 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p19A D 3 '47
150w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 14:36 Ja '48 450w

"Any customer asking for one comprehensive book on relations between the United States and Russia could safely be given this volume."

+ Kirkus 15:526 S 15 '47 170w

"Searching, scholarly and balanced analyses... Constructive and unemotional, with statistical appendix on Russo-American trade and a lengthy, useful list of suggested readings. A needed book in all collections." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:1371 O 1 '47 140w

"Handy and readable volume." Bjarne Braatoy

+ Nation 165:603 N 29 '47 360w

"A book which treats every aspect of American-Russian relations with both reasonableness and sober hope. These are the two chief qualities of Mrs. Dean's new book. It is a useful working handbook for any one who wants to know the details of the Russo-Swedish trade treaty, or the Moscow agreement on Korea, or what has happened to the Romanian oil fields. It is also a clear and simple job for scholarly writing. But its basic merit is that Mrs. Dean neither screams nor wrings her hands. Instead she explains patiently how we and the Russians have locked each other politically in a full-nelson and a stranglehold, and how we could still untangle ourselves with a minimum of bruises." Joseph Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
D 14 '47 1050w

"A compact, factual and objective book. Nothing could be more generally useful at the moment." Brooks Atkinson

+ N Y Times p5 N 23 '47 1650w

"This book is a much needed summons to a thoughtful, unhysterical reexamination of the issues which divide Soviet and American policy today. It is also an earnest effort to provide a background of information for worried fellow-citizens who wish to understand this menacing aspect of world politics and to contribute their bit of thinking to the formulation of a constructive policy." P. E. Mosely

+ Sat R of Lit 31:12 Ja 17 '48 1000w

DEANE, JOHN RUSSELL. Strange alliance; the story of our efforts at wartime co-operation with Russia. 344p $3.75 Viking

940.532273 World war, 1939-1945—Russia. U.S.—Foreign relations—Russia. Russia—Foreign relations—U.S. 47-30037

Major-General Deane, now retired from the army, was head of the American military mission in Moscow from 1943 to 1945. This is his account of his attempted collaboration with the Russians. "General Deane found that positive and firm action makes a definite impression on the Russians, who are determined that the USSR will occupy a dominant position in Europe in the postwar era, and advocates that we adopt such a policy in our dealings with them." (Library J) Index.

"For the historian, one of the merits of General Deane's book is the information which he provides about the full-dress meetings at Teheran, Yalta, and Potsdam. The author took part in the conferences, but he has not depended upon memory alone. It would appear that he has had access to the official records." R. C. Loehr

Am Hist R 52:711 JI '47 550w

"Deane's interpretations of what he saw and his conclusions show a certain dogmatism that is surprising in the light of his evident intellectual honesty, indicated by many aspects of the account. This reviewer hopes that American policy will not be based on Deane's interpretation of Russian 'racial characteristics,' described in a letter to our present Secretary of State (p. 85) and emphasized elsewhere in his analysis of the factors influencing Soviet policy... Nevertheless, the reader will find in this report many significant facts upon which to base his own interpretations of Soviet policy and of American-Russian relations." Barrington Moore

DEANE, J. R.—Continued

Am Pol Sci R 41:377 Ap '47 400w

"A frank and interesting book." D. F. White

+ Ann Am Acad 250:150 Mr '47 400w

Booklist 43:167 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:9 My '47

Cath World 166:379 Ja '48 170w

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ja 26 '47 380w

"His book is an authoritative record of the invaluable work done by American liaison agents in the Russian Capital in those crucial latter years of the war, and, as such, it is of immense importance. But it is even more important as a commentary on the transcendental question of our relations with the Russians. It should be read by everyone seriously concerned with the development of a lasting American-Russian accord." Homer Metz

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 13 '47 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '47

"The chief importance of the book happens to be its main shortcoming, at least as a basis for American policy towards Russia and the world. General Deane, although now retired, quite frankly voices the view of the military. He has many side comments to make on the ability of Russia to wage a war outside of her own borders, and his chief view of American policy is that it must protect 'American security.' There is nothing especially to be criticized in such an attitude. After all such is the task of the military. But the military problem is, or should be, only one aspect of the over-all foreign policy. General Deane mentions only in passing the importance of the United Nations." Otto Bird

Commonweal 45:426 F 7 '47 900w

Current Hist 12:237 Mr '47 50w

Foreign Affairs 25:699 Jl '47 90w

Kirkus 14:567 N 1 '46 220w

Reviewed by W. A. Kalenich

Library J 72:73 Ja 1 '47 140w

"This book is a contribution of first importance to students of world politics. Lest this verdict unduly startle and dismay the author, let me add at once that it appeals also to a much wider audience, that it has wit, humor, and a shrewd wisdom not wholly unmixed with subtlety. The writing too shows simplicity and grace. And yet, unlike most of the 'now it can be told' genre with which it might otherwise be classed, it is unusually significant for the light it throws upon the most crucial of all current political problems—whether we can get along with Russia, and how to go about doing so." Bernard Brodie

+ Nation 164:224 F 22 '47 1200w

New Repub 116:38 F 24 '47 380w

"It is a fascinating chronicle delineating what General Deane felt to be American friendliness and Soviet suspicions, American brilliance and Soviet bureaucracy, American patience in the face of Soviet stubbornness, a record of endless wrangling and broken pledges. Written with frequent warmth and humor, the controversial material is presented as clearly and objectively as an American military man like General Deane could possibly report such events." R. E. Lauterbach

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ja 12 '47 1500w

Reviewed by Harrison Salisbury

N Y Times p20 Ja 26 '47 1450w

"When the author is discussing military and diplomatic matters, he is informative and often entertaining; in his concluding chapters, in which he takes up the ideological confusion of the postwar world, he is something less than weighty."

+ New Yorker 22:71 Ja 4 '47 120w

Reviewed by Alex Inkeles

Pol Sci Q 62:307 Je '47 650w

"Anybody who thinks it should be easy to get along with Russia will do well to read

Mr. Deane's account of how he tried." Marvin Sargent

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 26 '47 1050w

"Frank and very interesting book. . . This valuable volume should be widely read by all interested in our relations with Soviet Russia. And who isn't?" D. F. White

+ Sat R of Lit 30:137 Ja 11 '47 1050w

"This book avoids both of the rocks that seem so often and so successfully to render testimony valueless. The author was in an unusually favourable position to do a good job and has done it. . . He is a good reporter, tells an interesting story, is objective, and above all seems to be free of doctrinal prepossessions." Norman Angell

+ Spec 179:594 N 7 '47 650w

"The strangeness and the strain of the U.S. wartime alliance with Soviet Russia was guessed at by the U.S. public, but the public had only suspicions to go on. Now in a sober, fact-packed book, a man who knows a great deal about it, Major General John R. Deane, describes what was perhaps the most one-sided friendship in history."

+ Time 49:104 Ja 13 '47 950w

"In his narrative and in his suggestions, General Deane is moderate and sensible; as a whole, the book provides important documentation on the most important problem facing the United States and the world."

+ U S Quarterly Bk 3:285 S '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:52 Mr '47

Reviewed by P. E. Mosely

Yale R n s 36:533 spring '47 650w

DE ANGELI, MRS MARGUERITE (LOFFT).

Jared's island. 95p il $2.50 Doubleday

47-11632

Story of a young Scotch boy who is wrecked off the coast of New Jersey in 1760. He is rescued by a young Quaker and stays for a time in his home near Toms River. Later he runs off and lives with the Indians, but eventually returns to his friends, finds his own brother, and some hidden treasure.

Booklist 44:137 D 1 '47

Reviewed by J. B. Thompson

+ Cath World 166:240 D '47 100w

"Marguerite De Angeli is not only an expert storyteller. She fills each story with so many nice everyday details that all of the happiness which lies deep down in living seems to crop out."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3a N 19 '47 230w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 12 '47 150w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:38 Ja '48 90w

Kirkus 15:625 N 15 '47 90w

"Recommended for grades 5-7." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 72:1783 D 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:150 D 6 '47 60w

"The book ends on a note of security and happiness for Jared. It is an appealing story. In words and in the delicate, expressive drawings it gives a vivid picture of early America and its people. End-paper maps show Barnegat Bay and the New Jersey coastline."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 15 '47 230w

Wis Lib Bul 43:177 D '47

DE ARMOND, FRED. Executive thinking and action. 251p $3 McGraw

658.01 Executive ability. Leadership 46-8662

"Successful business methods used by executives in business, voluntary associations, government and military are appraised by the author. The way of the top men in getting things done is reduced to simple principles of procedure common to these fields with illustrations from actual practice." Library J

Booklist 43:200 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:226 F 1 '47 40w

Management R 36:121 F '47 70w

"Executive Thinking and Action" is by a successful trade-organization administrator and former associate editor of Nation's Business. It is a refreshing addition to the literature on executive advancement in that it steers a skillful course between the usual inspirational tract of much pep but little content and the equally usual recital of dull and ponderous business precepts." H. J. Bresler

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 6 '47 500w

DE BELL, JOHN M., and others. German plastics practice; a record, rewritten and amplified, from the Quartermaster reports. 554p il $7.50 De Bell & Richardson, box 240, Springfield, Mass.

668.4 Plastics industry 46-8279

"This volume, which is a reprint of an official report issued in a limited edition, contains a comprehensive description of the German plastics industry as it existed just after V-E Day. The investigation was made between May 20 and September 1, 1945, for the Quartermaster Corps, and is based on a study of important plastics plants in operation at that time, and on conferences with leading German technologists. The authors have dealt with those plastics materials which showed the greatest technical advancement, and which were considered of most interest to American industrialists. The discussion locates the centers of the industry, enumerates production figures and describes methods of production, plants, and products. Numerous photographs of plastics manufacturing equipment are included. A glossary of technical terms is included." N Y New Tech Bks

"The authors have done an outstanding job of presentation with sufficient detail to convey a thorough practical working picture of the plastics industry in Germany at the close of hostilities." Bradley Dewey

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1470 My 19 '47 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

"As evident from abundant references and credit acknowledgments, this book represents the work of many American and British investigators, but it is not a hodge-podge of unrelated material. Its real value lies in the fact that the authors have confined themselves to the most recent developments and have presented them in interesting, readable fashion." S. D. Kirkpatrick

+ Eng N 54:301 My '47 400w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1112 Ag '47 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:14 Ja '47

DE BOTH, JESSIE MARIE. Modern household encyclopedia; with over 200 il. by Frances Dayton. 347p $3 J. G. Ferguson

640.3 Home economics 46-4111

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"Material is entered under catchword phrase subject headings, and there is considerable unorthodoxy in their selection and in the use of cross references. . . Information on related subjects is frequently scattered under a number of headings and not cross-referenced sufficiently. . . Though the book cannot be used as a regular cookbook, many cookery tricks and wrinkles are explained which can be readily followed by experienced cooks. The household suggestions also are very helpful. Some of the home remedies, however, seem very old-fashioned. . . The quality of the Encyclopedia would have been much improved by rigid editing, both for subject headings and for sentence structure and phrasing. In its present form it is very difficult to use for quick reference purposes. A homemaker with leisure to browse can undoubtedly find many useful hints, but neither the librarian nor homemaker could depend on finding wanted information in a hurry. For this reason, though the Modern Household Encyclopedia may be useful and helpful in the home, and for circulation by the public library, it is not recommended as a reference book."

— Subscription Bks Bul 18:19 Ap '47 650w

DECKER, DUANE WALTER. Good field, no hit. 208p $2.50 Mill

47-30656

"Johnny Madigan was a snappy, well-liked third baseman, but because he was no hitter his chances of staying in big league baseball were slim, especially when Mike Marnie who was powerful at the plate was competing for the same position. The author has broken the continuity of Johnny's story by inserting the complete shorter stories of several other players who were also on the spot at various times." (Booklist) A novel for boys and men.

"The author knows baseball and its language but the book would have been more effective if the material had been better integrated. Baseball fans will like it anyway."

+ — Booklist 44:52 O 1 '47

"The ball game lingo will defeat those not in the know. But those who understand and like it pronounce this a first rate yarn, fast paced, sound on fact and on the spirit and psychology of players, managers, sports writers, fans and even hecklers."

+ Kirkus 15:471 S 1 '47 130w

"Well written, not too slangy. Recommended." R. M. McEvoy

+ Library J 72:1199 S 1 '47 40w

Wis Lib Bul 43:157 N '47

DEEP-RIVER JIM, pseud. See Ernst, C. H.

DEEPING, WARWICK. Laughing house. 218p $2.50 Dial press

47-31135

An elderly English Tory, with one interest in life—his country home—is furious when the house is requisitioned by the government during the war. But a warm-hearted young woman and her wounded officer-husband bring Sir John around to a more human view of life.

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 13 '47 500w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 S 21 '47 90w

"Warwick Deeping makes a pleasant tale of the worrying, wangling and incidental romance that go into the rejuvenation of the old house—and incidentally the regeneration." Barbara Bond

+ N Y Times p26 N 16 '47 290w

"The molasses is pretty thick."

— New Yorker 23:112 S 27 '47 110w

DE GOUY, LOUIS PULLIG. Gold cook book; introd. by Oscar of the Waldorf. 1098p $7.50 Greenberg

641.5 Cookery 47-31465

A special cook book for people who "want to cook rare dishes, strange and fine ones, foods that have foreign names, and so-called exotics. This book tells you how to make them at home. The author, a master-chef, has lived long enough in this country to know the things the housewife can buy so that she can make these rare dishes, the specialties of great chefs, right in her own kitchen. It is a complete cookbook with the exception of breads, game, and ice cream desserts, which the author has already treated more fully in separate books." (N Y Times) Index.

"Mr. De Gouy has written a useful, thorough, as well as concise section on herbs and spices, frozen foods, and use and cooking of nuts, etc. In his chapter on pressure cooking he has practically condensed a full-sized pressure cook-book into fifteen large charts." H. L. Mason

+ N Y Times p56 N 9 '47 200w

DE GOUY, L. P.—Continued

"Anyone who has got past the fundamentals of cookery and wants a definitive cook book in which informed opinion plays as large a part as How To Do It directions, should find 'The Gold Cook Book' worth adding to the kitchen cookbook shelf." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 O 2 '47 550w

DE GUINGAND, SIR FRANCIS WILFRED.
Operation Victory. 488p il maps $3.75 Scribner

940.54 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English 47-30898

Marshal Montgomery's chief of staff here records his experiences from a visit to France and Germany in 1937 to and thru World war II. In his foreword he says: "In writing this book I have aimed at giving an accurate account of some of the great events of the war as I saw them. I have tried to blend history with a measure of personal reminiscence. I have stuck to that part of the war of which I had first-hand knowledge, and have refrained from probing into affairs about which I would have had to rely upon the opinions of others." Index.

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 25 '47 800w

"Add another book to your war library. . . It is by Montgomery's Chief of Staff, General de Guingand, who writes in a pleasant, plain way. It is full of tactics, full of easy comment, full of good sense. It is also great proof of the intangible qualities that make a great staff officer. General de Guingand was known during the war to very few, except those who knew that the greatness of a commander was aided frequently by the anonymous brilliance of his right bower. Not many knew de Guingand by name, particularly those below high headquarters. But many knew of 'Monty's Chief of Staff.' It is a good thing, therefore, that he emerges now as a bright and shining recorder of great events." T. E. Cassidy

+ Commonweal 46:626 O 10 '47 1050w

"Written from vantage point of a top-ranking officer and limited to the events in which he personally participated it may be accepted as authoritative and authentic primary source material. While it is extremely difficult to assay the permanent value of the many similar volumes now appearing, this seems to be a well-balanced and judicial estimate of Anglo-American battle operations and military leadership as seen by an Englishman." H. A. Lancour

+ Library J 72:1189 S 1 '47 130w

"A lucid, easily read book, not at all brass hat and modestly critical of operations and personalities." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 165:319 S 27 '47 650w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 33:378 My 24 '47 360w

"With charming, apparently naive, simplicity, with an air of inoffensive innocence which conceals a deadly pen, Major General Guingand carefully and thoroughly dissects in very small pieces Ralph Ingersoll and other critics of the presumably incomparable 'Monty.' It is all without harshness or vituperation, supremely effective." P. J. Seales

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 7 '47 1150w

"There is small wonder that Generals Eisenhower and Bradley and Gen. Bedell Smith, Chief of Staff to Eisenhower, have all praised this book and the man who wrote it. For this personal record of Field Marshal Montgomery's Chief of Staff is more than a literate, accurate and temperate war memoir. It is the statement of a loyal subordinate who is nevertheless far-seeing and independent of mind, and who most evidently desires to present the truth as he remembers and sees it." J. I. Greene

+ N Y Times p6 O 5 '47 800w

"General de Guingand, as you might expect, views his former boss as a more nearly perfect human being and soldier than Lieutenant Colonel Ralph Ingersoll did. He has a greater interest in strategy than in gossip, however, and as a result has turned out one of the most thorough and informative records of the African and European campaigns that have appeared so far. The author's style, which sometimes reminds one of a letter to the London Times, gives the book an odd charm."

+ New Yorker 23:122 S 13 '47 160w

"De Guingand has done a splendid job of reporting the victory in the West. . . Incidentally, he has also given us an excellent handbook of British military slang, some of which is extraordinarily palatable." Larry Laughlin

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 23 '47 500w

"'Operation Victory' is sometimes weak because in his desire to be loyal to his chief and to be fair to both sides, General Guingand does not always speak with complete candor. Its strong point is not so much in the excellent eye-witness accounts of the war . . . but rather in the picture it gives of a soldier who, although frequently ill, contributed mightily to the planning of victory." F. C. Pogue

+ Sat R of Lit 30:10 S 27 '47 700w

"A certain vividness of apprehension combined with an invincible simplicity and common sense make almost everything he writes significant and rather exciting. What he has to say about the campaign in Greece and the battle of Crete, for instance, may not be the last word; but it will not be ignored by the historian any more than by the ordinary reader. There is sufficient of the background of the war outside Africa to provide the due setting, and the writer has the invaluable gift of knowing the wisdom of silence where he was not in possession of reliable knowledge."

+ Spec 178:246 Mr 7 '47 800w

"The strength of Operation Victory lies in its author's appreciation of the human element in command. Without descending to the sensational, he shows how the personal element still influences the conduct of war. When he interrupts his narrative to sum up the qualities of his chief, he makes a memorable contribution to the reader's knowledge of the most outstanding soldier produced by this country in modern times. Otherwise the most interesting part of the book is its account of the campaign in Greece, which is full of acute and even acrid criticism of the initiation of that disastrous venture."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p99 Mr 8 '47 300w

DE HEGEDUS, ADAM. See Hegedus, A. de

DE HUSZAR, GEORGE BERNARD. See Huszar, G. B. de

DE JONG, DOLA (MRS JAN HOOWIJ). Return to the level land; with pictures by Jane Castle. 152p $2.50 Scribner

47-11424

Continuation of The Level Land (Book Review Digest 1943). In this book a year has passed since the surrender of the German armies. The Van Oordts are still living in the Level Land. A young Jewish refugee boy comes to them, and the story is partly told as things appeared to him. It is the tale of people of fine potentialities struggling to get back to a normal life after the war.

Booklist 44:137 D 1 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:40 Ja '48 150w

"A sincere but somewhat dull presentation of the problems of young adolescents returned to normal life in Holland after invasion, famine, flood, and Nazi occupation."

Kirkus 15:601 N 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by B. W. Bell

Library J 72:1783 D 15 '47 60w

"Difficult as such a story as this may be to write, it is greatly needed now. . . The Van Oordts, without banners, steadily win out in these grinding postwar years. So will Holland win out. So will any country whose national character can stand the strain." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
N 30 '47 230w

"Quietly written, without bitterness and with a deep sense of human dignity this story will be a broadening experience for readers of 10 to 14." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 11 '48 220w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:155 D 6 '47 40w

"Miss de Jong went back to Holland in the summer of 1946. This book comes out of what she saw, what she felt. It is a book that American boys and girls should read."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:50 N 15 '47 320w

DE LA MARE, WALTER JOHN. Rhymes and verses; collected poems for children; with drawings by Elinore Blaisdell. 344p $3 Holt

821 Children's poetry 47-30200

Selections from the published works of this English poet. The poems are arranged under such headings as: Green grow the rushes, O!; All round about the town; All creatures great and small; Fairies—witches—phantoms; etc. Indexed by title and first line.

Booklist 43:243 Ap 1 '47

Cath World 165:381 J1 '47 220w

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 8 '47 30w

"Brought together from the various books of Walter de la Mare, this large assemblage of his verses for children will be found of special value in a reference collection. It lacks the charm and ease in handling of smaller books, but as a number of these are not readily available the advantage of an inclusive collection is evident. The illustrations, too, are lacking for the most part, in the imaginative quality of Walter de la Mare's poetry." A. M. Jordan

+ — Horn Bk 23:221 My '47 80w

Kirkus 15:163 Mr 15 '47 130w

"Although it is well printed and illustrated in black-and-white by Elinore Blaisdell, it is not as beautiful a book as Bells and Grass, Peacock Pie and some of the other smaller collections. However, some of the poems in this collection are not now in print elsewhere, and it is good to have them all together in this volume." J. D. Lindquist

Library J 72:531 Ap 1 '47 80w

"Now they are all here, in one beautifully printed volume with new pictures—the poems with which Walter De La Mare has enriched the lives, formed the literary taste, opened the eyes and charmed the minds of children." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7
Mr 16 '47 230w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:154 D 6 '47 60w

Reviewed by Eugene MacHamus

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 3 '47 100w

"In this well-designed and thoughtfully edited book is a feast that the whole family can share, rich in meaning and in beauty, and fitting into every mood."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 Ap 19 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:71 Ap '47

DE LA TORRE-BUENO, LILLIAN (MRS G. S. MCCUE), and TRUAX, CAROL. 60 minute chef. 222p $2.95 Macmillan

641.5 Cookery 47-31406

Recipes for everything from soup to cake, each of which can be prepared in an hour or less. The recipes are strung together with the authors reminiscences of past occasions when these same recipes were used. Index.

Booklist 44:85 N 1 '47

"This is a delectable book, full of mouth watering recipes, the kind of cookbook that one would say, offhand, couldn't be done. . . Here's a book for gourmets with a modicum of time."

+ Kirkus 15:358 J1 1 '47 170w

"The book suffers from the usual fault of such collections—too much anecdote and not enough food."

New Yorker 23:127 O 11 '47 60w

DE LA TORRE-BUENO, LILLIAN (MRS G. S. MCCUE), ed. Villainy detected. 243p $3 Appleton-Century

364 Crime and criminals—Great Britain

47-4840

"A collection of the most sensational true crimes and the most notorious real criminals that blotted the name of Britain in the years 1660 to 1800, by various hands; the whole collected together and embellished with observations: historical, moral and critical." (Subtitle) Partial contents: The Campden mystery (1662), by Andrew Lang; The ride of Swift Nicks, (1676), by Daniel Defoe; The Gipsy footpad, by Sir Walter Scott; Clever Tom Clinch going to be hanged, by Jonathan Swift; The first great disappearer (1753), by Edmund Pearson; The ghost of Sergeant Davies (1754), by William Roughead; Captain John Donellan (1781), by George Borrow.

"The introductions to the various chapters by Miss de la Torre are exceedingly pleasant reading, setting the stage with wit and an occasional undertone of parody. Altogether, this 'Collection of the most sensational True Crimes' . . . is a matter to delight the judicious lover of authentic wickedness." P. L. Adams

+ Atlantic 180:126 S '47 600w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 S 7 '47

650w

Kirkus 15:356 J1 1 '47 180w

New Repub 117:31 S 22 '47 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p42
D 7 '47 260w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

N Y Times p35 S 21 '47 800w

"Interesting, but very special."

New Yorker 23:88 S 6 '47 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 14 '47
60w

"Capital compilation of villainy. Required reading for aficionados. General reader may find some dull spots—but there's gore galore for all."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 S 13 '47 40w

Time 50:106 S 15 '47 550w

DE LEEUW, ADELE LOUISE. Future for sale. 211p $2 Macmillan

46-8241

Vocational story for older girls. During her sophomore year in college Joyce Andrews is suddenly faced with the necessity of earning her own living. She takes an intensive course in a fashion school in New York, and gets a place in a big department store.

Booklist 43:156 Ja 15 '47

Kirkus 14:426 S 1 '46 90w

"The story is so thoroughly detailed that one meets all sorts of customers, sees what problems are involved in their treatment, discovers what special fields open out for special talents, and follows Joyce on her own line of endeavor toward a store of her own. In deference to young readers, there is a young man who keeps romance gently simmering." M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
F 2 '47 250w

Wis Lib Bul 43:41 F '47

DE LEEUW, ADELE LOUISE. Title to happeness. 222p $2.50 Macmillan 47-11555

An ambitious young girl with her eye on a job in New York takes a summer position in the real estate office of her own town. Before many months she has made a success of her work, and has a romance and a house of her own besides.

Booklist 44:173 Ja 1 '48

Kirkus 15:504 S 15 '47 120w

"Recommended," M. A. Webb

+ Library J 72:1785 D 15 '47 80w

DELMONTE, JOHN. Technology of adhesives. 516p il $8 Reinhold 47-2661

668.3 Adhesives

"First definite book on entire subject of adhesives to cover all kinds of adhesive materials, animal, vegetable, protein, organic and inorganic with considerable weight given to synthetic resin adhesives and their combination with other materials such as rubber, proteins, cellulose, etc. Chemistry and industrial applications of these adhesives are presented with reference to plywood, metals, rubber, tape, papers, cloths and glass and other products. Historical background, bibliographies. Illustrated." Library J

"There has been a need for some time for a book dealing with the new developments in adhesives. . . Much has been written about these developments in numerous magazine articles, in patents and elsewhere in the literature. This material has been gathered together by the author and has served as background for his book." J. A. Lee

+ Eng N 54:301 My '47 260w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:813 My 15 '47 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:26 Ap '47

"The work is carefully documented and references to information found in the literature of adhesives are clearly indicated. A lengthy bibliography and a subject index add to the usefulness of this comprehensive monograph."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:212 Je '47 120w

DE MADARIAGA, SALVADOR. See Madariaga, S. de

DE MENT, JACK ANDREW, and DAKE, HENRY CARL. Rarer metals. 392p il $7.50 Chemical pub. co.

669 Metals

46-8198

"History, mineralogy, chemistry, physics, extraction from ores and technology of 20 of the less familiar elements including the metals of rare earths are briefly discussed, including some of the important practical applications of these elements. Newer tests such as microscopy and fluoroscopy are discussed. Chapter references and bibliography." Library J

Reviewed by S. C. Lind

J Phys Chem 51:1030 Jl '47 150w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:78 Ja 1 '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:64 O '46

"Suitable as a reference text or for supplementary reading in science and engineering courses."

Special Libraries 38:54 F '47

DEMETRIOS, GEORGE. When Greek meets Greek; with drawings by the author. 245p $2.75 Houghton 47-3892

Collection of short stories about Greeks in Macedonia, or about Greek immigrants in Boston. The author is better known as a sculptor than as a writer. He was born in Macedonia, but came to the United States when he was in his teens.

Booklist 43:359 Jl 15 '47

"In no sense a war book, or even one that grew out of the war, but a book that, with Greece in the news, should help readers understand the Greeks better."

+ Kirkus 15:223 Ap 15 '47 180w

"A collection of good stories, told with the simplicity of Aesop and the humanity of Saroyan." Eugene O'Neill, Jr.

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 13 '47 400w

"Twenty-five close-to-perfect pieces which [the author] points up with simple and delicate line drawings." Eugene MacHamus

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 3 '47 70w

"Often it seems that Mr. Demetrios was thinking in Greek sunlight as he wrote this book, for his quickness and clarity and ease, his immediacy, are native to that brilliant atmosphere. We can be very grateful to this storyteller who does not take himself too seriously, this artist whose stories, while he tells them and illustrates them, are more important than himself." Peter Gray

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 Ag 2 '47 400w

DE MILLE, JOHN B. Strategic minerals, a summary of uses, world output, stockpiles, procurement. 626p $7.50 McGraw

669 Mines and mineral resources 47-3303

"Strategic metals and minerals from the viewpoint of world supplies and production. Sources of strategic minerals and their application to industry in the war years. Included are properties of 76 metals and minerals with their important uses. Stockpile legislation is fully discussed." (Library J) Bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 44:112 N 15 '47

Reviewed by W. H. Voskuil

Chem & Eng N 25:2461 Ag 25 '47 320w

"While this work contains a great deal of useful information, the arrangement, choice of data and emphasis leave much to be desired. Unfortunately the facts behind the news are given in but few cases. This book is not for the layman. In very many instances a good working knowledge of the subject under discussion is needed to keep from going astray." R. B. Ladoo

— Chem Eng 54:264 O '47 600w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:33 Ap '47

DEMING, DOROTHY. Careers for nurses. 358p il $3.50 McGraw

610.73 Nurses and nursing

Med47-39

This book "is intended to give you a bird's-eye view of the various fields of work open to student nurses and graduates seeking new positions." (p.xi) Fifteen branches of nursing are discussed, giving information on preparation, duties, requirements, hours, salaries, etc. Bibliography. List of visual aids. Index.

Booklist 43:326 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1112 Ag '47 20w

DENHARDT, ROBERT MOORMAN. Horse of the Americas [with a foreword by J. Frank Dobie]. 286p il maps $5 Univ. of Okla. press

636.1 Horses

Agr47-48

The greater part of this book deals with the horses brought by the Spaniards to the New World during the years of Conquest and exploration, and tells how the descendants of these horses spread thruout Central and South America and our own Southwest. There is a short chapter on the pre-historic horse and some material on present-day breeds and stock farms. Bibliographical sketch. Index.

Booklist 44:145 D 15 '47

"Absorbing for a few, valuable reference for many is this book about the Western horse and his role in the history of the Americas." J. M. Smith

+ Library J 72:1786 D 15 '47 50w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 73:42 Ja 1 '48 20w

New Yorker 23:147 D 13 '47 90w

"Interesting as the material in 'The Horse of the Americas' is, however, the book suffers badly by poor organization and a certain infelicity of style throughout." Ruth Teiser

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 20 '47 650w

DEN HARTOG, JACOB PIETER. Mechanical vibrations. 3d ed 478p $6 McGraw 620.1123 Vibration

47-3177

"Revised to include material on recent advances, such as airplane wing flutter, helicopter ground vibrations, and electronic instruments. Technical; for large or technical library." (Booklist) For second edition see Book Review Digest 1941. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:361 J1 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:226 F 1 '47 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:40 Ap '47

DENNEY, DIANA (DIANA ROSS, pseud). Story of the little red engine; pictures by Leslie Wood. [30p] $1.80 Transatlantic arts

"Once again the hero of 'The Little Red Engine Gets a Name' triumphs over odds, as it takes admirers of the picture-book age on a train ride through the English countryside. This time the Little Red Engine, known to all the inhabitants both animal and human from Taddlecombe Junction to Dumble, is ill of a shortage of oil and consequently delayed in starting. With true British fortitude, however, it rushes along its route, and in spite of all the onlookers who insist it can't be done, completes its schedule on time." N Y Times

Booklist 43:260 Ap 15 '47

"One day the little engine is late and there is a pleasant flurry up and down the line. Rhythmic text with a flavor of the unknown to add word-play value."

+ Kirkus 15:162 Mr 15 '47 80w

"Double-spread pictures in soft colors by Leslie Wood are very attractive, although some are rather too 'primitive.' Paper covers and weak binding would necessitate rebinding, at once. This cost added to the price, would prohibit the purchase of this title by smaller libraries." A. M. Wetherell

+ — Library J 72:532 Ap 1 '47 100w

"Not so dramatic as in its first trial, the Little Red Engine nevertheless gives to small train lovers a fine sense of movement, a vicarious experience of travel which is emphasized by the fine mouth-filling sound words that describe its progress and echo the greetings of its faithful watchers. Leslie Wood's pictures in color and in half-tone are a delight to the eye and a stimulus to the imagination." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p30 Mr 23 '47 180w

DENNIS, WESLEY. Holiday; story and pictures. [61p] $2 Viking

Horses—Legends and stories

46-7878

Picture-story book about Holiday, a show horse, who eventually became tired of showing off. But before he ceased he won so many blue ribbons that the door of his stall was covered with them. For grades two to five.

Booklist 43:138 Ja 1 '47

"The ending seems a little abrupt, but perhaps in another book the author will tell us more about Holiday." A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 10 '47 190w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:39 Ja '47 40w

"I'd have liked the story better if it hadn't been told in the first person—but the pictures are enchanting. The perfect gift book for the children who saw their first horse show this year."

+ Kirkus 14:594 D 1 '46 80w

"Adults as well as children enjoy this artist's true-to-life drawings. Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 71:1808 D 15 '46 70w

"Five to 8 year olds will enjoy the slight story for the sake of the pictures, more impressionistic than Mr. Anderson's, but equally horsey in essence, full of verve and speed." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p31 Ja 26 '47 140w

"The drawings of Holiday are stunning. In the last one, he is standing under the spotlight in the Garden, fully conscious of the applause and of his fame. It is a picture that this reviewer would like to frame and hang on the wall." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:31 D 14 '46 150w

DENT, EDWARD JOSEPH. Mozart's operas; a critical study. 2d ed 276p il $5.50 Oxford

782.3 Mozart, Johann Chrysostom Wolfgang Amadeus. Opera

47-31287

"This revised edition supersedes the first, published in 1913 by Chatto and Windus, London. Offering a detailed consideration of the seven major dramatic works of Mozart's maturity, it remains the classic in English in the field. Rewritten not only to take advantage of scholarly achievements since 1913, but also to shed the light of our own day upon the problem. Generous musical illustrations aimed at the serious general reader as well as the musician." (Library J) Index.

Christian Science Monitor p17 N 1 '47 20w

"Professor Dent's book on Mozart's operas, first published almost thirty-five years ago, comes to us now in a revised edition which is a model of what such work should be. He is addressing 'the general reader rather than the musicologist,' and in calm, clear language that seldom rises to undue levels of excitement, he traces the whole work of Mozart for the theater from La Finta Semplice (written when the composer was twelve) to Die Zauberflöte. This involves a certain amount of literary scholarship on the libretti, as well as that thorough, unassuming musical knowledge which has been Professor Dent's lifelong possession; and it reposes upon deep familiarity with both Mozart's life and his other works and with the general lyric theater of the eighteenth century." Vincent Sheean

+ Commonweal 47:72 O 31 '47 750w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 72:1611 N 15 '47 80w

"'Mozart's Operas' has provided me with the occasion to read at last a book that I have long intended to read, and to discover that it is one of the great books on music. Like Tovey's writings it is the product of a scholarship that works hand in hand with aesthetic insight—the scholarship providing knowledge of Mozart's materials, problems, and methods with each opera; the aesthetic insight illuminating the completed work of art. And if it is without Tovey's flashing brilliance it is also free of the epigrammatic obscurities that Tovey's pyrotechnics of thought and statement sometimes result in—which is to say that it is written with an urbanity and clarity that make the reading of it a delight."

+ Nation 165:561 N 22 '47 150w

Reviewed by Desmond Shawe-Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 34:354 N 1 '47 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 21 '47 160w

Reviewed by C. B. Oldman

Spec 180:24 Ja 2 '48 850w

DE POLNAY, PETER. Umbrella thorn. 309p
$2.75 Creative age 47-1832

Novel of life in Kenya. David McKenna, a successful farmer, marries a young widow with an infant son, in order to protect them. The working out of the difficulties of that marriage make up the story.

"The plot, though hackneyed, is good enough, and moves at considerable speed for so slender a story. It is in the characters, however, that the book excels. De Polnay has deftly avoided the stock characters carrying the white man's burden who people most of the books set in remote parts of the British Colonial Empire. Here are characters complicated, moved by motives obscure and understandable, living under the tension of half-thwarted desires revealing themselves often in sudden flashes of reality, to the core psychologically sound."

A. E. Gasaway

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 2 '47 350w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 8 '47 350w

Kirkus 15:74 F 1 '47 170w

"Strictly bon-bon and chaise lounge reading that won't be missed in most collections."

R. E. Kingery

— Library J 72:320 F 15 '47 100w

"In David McKenna, the chivalrous but inhibited hero of his new novel, [the author] has created a laconic character exactly suited to the dry but vital style in which he writes. . . He has the economy of the true novelist who never wastes words or feeling because he is always close to life and its actualities." H. I. A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 1 '46 150w

"Aside from the intrinsic interest of the story, there are rewarding glimpses of ranch routine and native government. And David has a pair of cronies—a retired major and a garrulous recluse—in whose sundown company the reader will be happy to share the gossip of the community." David Tilden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Mr 9 '47 500w

"The people are very well drawn; but they move so slowly that one is apt to lose patience. And the climax is not quite so crashing as one is led to expect from the aura of alcohol, introspection and hot decay that pervades the book." Nancy Ladd

N Y Times p12 Mr 9 '47 500w

"Miss Elizabeth Bowen, in a review of 'The Umbrella Thorn' apparently written when the book was published in England some months ago, calls the author a striking arrival on our literary scene. I think she has spotted him correctly. He is intelligent, a skillful writer, and he knows how to tell a story. It is unreasonable to ask any novelist for more." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 23:92 Mr 1 '47 550w

"Many may feel that Peter de Polnay has collected a queer lot of hard-drinking characters under 'The Umbrella Thorn,' but to those of us who know Kenya he has told beautifully a story set against the colorful background of British-African farm life, and has vividly depicted the settlers' never-ending struggle against drought, predatory animals, and insects, and their own ineptitudes and emotions. One would believe Mr. De Polnay had lived there a lifetime, so skillfully and convincingly has he humanized his characters and their environment, the result is a literary treat for novel lovers and an excellent motion picture opportunity for some cinema company." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 Mr 22 '47 390w

"Mr. de Polnay has made a real advance as novelist, adding substance to his gifts of irony and satire, and gives promise of still better work to come."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p101 Mr 2 '46 800w

DE QUILLE, DAN, pseud. See Wright, W.

DERBIGNY, IRVING ANTONY. General education in the Negro college. 255p $3 Stanford univ. press

378 Negroes—Education 47-31435

A study of general education courses in twenty Negro colleges and a comparison of the courses with those in major education programs in the United States today. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:83 N 1 '47

Current Hist 13:356 D '47 50w

School & Society 66:350 N 1 '47

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM, ed. Dark of the moon; poems of fantasy and the macabre. ltd ed 418p $3 Arkham house

821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections 47-20299

"An anthology which is confined to poems of fantasy and the macabre, a fascinating theme in any age. . . The book is composed of border ballads and of poems by cultivated poets whose work in extending balladry into art rarely equals or surpasses the primitive minstrels. A good deal of space is given to some half dozen contributors to the magazine Weird Tales, and to some eight pages by the editor, a specialist in this field." Sat R of Lit

"Mr. Derleth quite rightly frowns on the inclusion of translations, but in as much as he uses poems from the German and Spanish, he can hardly describe his book as 'a representative collection of the best poetry of the macabre and fantastic in English.'" Milton Crane

N Y Times p27 My 18 '47 270w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 4 '47 100w

"There are a number of notable absentees who might well have enhanced the volume by replacing a number of 'weak sisters.' Yet the book is attractive enough to be worthy of private or market-place readers." Alfred Kreymborg

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:26 My 24 '47 150w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM, ed. Night side; masterpieces of the strange & terrible; with a foreword; il. by Lee Brown Coye. 372p $3 Rinehart

Short stories—Collections 47-1903

Twenty-three weird stories. Partial contents: The colour out of space, by H. P. Lovecraft; The moon-caller, by MacKinlay Kantor; Bethmoora, by Lord Dunsany; The exalted Omega, by Arthur Machen; Cheese, by A. E. Coppard; Mr. Minchin's midsummer, by Margery Lawrence; Seaton's aunt, by Walter de la Mare; Sammy calls a noobus, by H. A. Norton; Nightmare, by Marjorie Bowen.

Booklist 44:16 S 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 3 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:226 Ap 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ag 3 '47 100w

"It is good humor of the macabre order, that sustains 'The Night Side.' No more a soporific than the previous collections, its mask has more of the leer than of the tragic twist. And if one is not sufficiently chilled by the words of horror, the wild illustrations by Lee Brown Coye are well calculated to finish the job." H. B. P.

+ N Y Times p22 Jl 13 '47 350w

"It should be enough to say that Mr. Derleth is one of the few intelligent practicing anthologists and that this is probably his best collection. His extraordinary choices manage somehow to be slightly off-formula even within the essentially off-formula fantasy field. . . You can't do better." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 22 '47 150w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM, comp. The sleeping and the dead; thirty uncanny tales. 518p $3.75 Pellegrini & Cudahy

Short stories—Collections 47-11375

"Another gathering of weird tales not previously accessible in anthologies. The writers are divided about equally between the English school and the more unruly classroom which has sustained 'Weird Tales' magazine through the years." (Chicago Sun Book Week) Bibliography.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week N 14 '47 50w

Kirkus 15:585 O 15 '48 100w

"Mr. Derleth deserves well of the republic. His own story, 'Glory Hand,' seems to us to be just about perfect." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 16 '47 200w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Village day-book; a Sac Prairie journal; il. by Frank Utpatel, endpaper map by Hjalmar Skuldt. 306p $3.25 Pellegrini & Cudahy

818 47-3074

"Chronicle covering two years of life in a Wisconsin village, containing anecdotes related with frankness and affection on town social activities and feuds, lifelike portraits of town characters, gossip heard at the barber shop and philosophical discussions at the harness maker's." Library J

"What 'Village Daybook' lacks in excitement it makes up for in warmth and sentiment, in vivid descriptions of the changing seasons, in slyly pointed comments about village affairs. On the debit side of the ledger is Derleth's so-so poetry, which this reviewer at least could have done without, and an annoying tendency to repeat himself. . . In 'Village Daybook' his favorite expression is 'Cerise and saffron afterglow.' Before long you start trying to guess where 'cerise,' 'saffron' and 'afterglow,' singly or in combination, are going to pop up again. But this is petty quibbling, for 'Village Daybook' contains more good writing than bad. Moreover, for a trade-edition book it is one of the most attractive of the season. Well bound, printed in clear, readable type on excellent paper, and generously illustrated with Frank Utpatel's beautiful engravings." Ben Kartman

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 1 '47 390w

"This is a restful book, helpful in attaining the tranquil heart and contemplative mind."

+ Christian Century 64:528 Ap 23 '47 60w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 19 '47 210w

"If mediocrity and brilliance are marks of authenticity in a diary, this is thoroughly authentic. On May 16, Sac Prairie produced the phenomenon of dogs barking at a car. . . On the other hand Mr. Derleth records with rare skill the beauty and movement of nature. He never fails to please as he describes the weather, the birds, flowers, fish and animals. One who loves the outdoors will be fully rewarded with his nature passages. Mr. Derleth has affection for his townsmen and they, evidently, for him. The items of daily gossip and reminiscences add up to a comfortable completeness of village life. Unfortunately, it is largely a surface description. He has not learned to analyze and handle people as effectively as he does Mother Nature." Emerson Hynes

Commonweal 46:146 My 23 '47 450w

"Of interest to those who enjoy journals done in the manner of Thoreau, and as authentic regional material." B. B. Libaire

Library J 72:457 Mr 15 '47 130w

"In this volume you will again meet the harness maker, the village gossips, the visiting industrialist and assorted flora and fauna. And meeting them all again is like going to a reunion. At first you are glad to see everybody and for awhile you think that they are the salt of the earth, as the saying goes. Then, after a little while, the meeting begins to pall and you realize that your former friends are just old bores, after all. You want to go home. The illustrations by Frank Utpatel are still interesting, however." Alfred Kay

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 13 '47 220w

Wis Lib Bul 43:67 Ap '47

DE ROUSSY DE SALES, RAOUL JEAN JACQUES FRANCOIS. Making of yesterday [his] diaries; introd. by Walter Millis. 310p $4.50 Reynal

940.53 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. World politics. World war, 1939-1945 47-11400

"Journals kept by M. de Roussy de Sales from 1938 until his death in 1942. They contain thoughtful and often sardonic observations on American life by a man whose knowledge of the country was extensive, though his admiration for its culture was restrained. The author [was] for many years the New York correspondent of a Paris paper." (New Yorker) Reference list of names. No index.

Reviewed by Raymond Swing

Atlantic 181:119 Ja '48 1400w

Booklist 44:103 N 15 '47

"A book to read slowly for its penetrating thought rather than for its interpretation of history in the making."

Kirkus 15:452 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Of interest chiefly as a Frenchman's observations on his country's collapse." Harold Lancour

Library J 72:1265 S 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard, Sr.

Nation 165:704 D 27 '47 1350w

"He despised his own lack of action (although it was largely forced on him by his failing health) and bitterly characterized himself as an observer in an age when only action counted. But to his role he brought an extraordinary detachment and insight which the necessity of acting might have clouded. His diaries make provocative reading and seem far more timely than the numerous military journals that are appearing on the last, big campaigns of the war." A. L. Goodman

+ New Repub 117:27 N 3 '47 1200w

"I am very fond of retrospective picture books. But when I read a book like this diary I am made aware how far any photograph of a riot or breadline or 'big three' meeting is from conveying the indecision, the anguish, the tragically well-meant blundering which constitute the ultimate reality of the horrors encrusted in the history of mankind. What we went through is in this book, for it deals with the real facts which are feelings and ideas. Written out of a noble stoicism, its pages contain the source material from which the high tragedy of our time will one day be written." Lewis Galantiere

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 N 16 '47 1250w

"It is interesting chiefly as the disclosure of what the events of those four years meant to an expatriated Frenchman—for many years one of the best known French correspondents in the United States—as unusual in personal sensitiveness as in political astuteness, and what they inevitably meant was a steadily deepening heart-sickness finally verging on mind-sickness. The essential story told is of the cumulative effect of prolonged shock. Its really pervasive subject is not the making of any yesterday of the world's calendar, but rather the unmaking of Raoul de Roussy de Sales." Wilson Follett

N Y Times p20 N 23 '47 1050w

"In many ways, the book is a vivid and brilliant comment on a tortuous stretch of history."

+ New Yorker 23:112 N 1 '47 200w

Reviewed by Marvin Sargent

San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 23 '47 700w

"Simplicity and color are well combined to make the diary at once intelligible and attractive." T. V. Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 N 29 '47 850w

DESFOSSÉ, BEATRICE. Your voice and your speech; self-training for better speaking. 224p il $3.50 Cattell & co.

808.5 Voice. Oratory 47-1215

A comprehensive treatise on voice development, which demonstrates methods of fitting the voice for conversation, interviews, discussion, the telephone, the radio, and for over-coming stage and mike fright. The author has been speech consultant at Finch junior college since 1933. Bibliography. Index.

"There are constant exercises, with diagrams, and everything said is so directly related to some special need that it will be read with personal interest. It winds up with an anthology of some of the most beautiful poems in English, contemporary and classic, altogether making a sound contribution to the treatment of speaking problems."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
Mr 16 '47 170w

"This book deals with the improvement of one's human relations through better voice and speech. Written by a well-known teacher who received her training from recognized coaches and at Teachers College, Columbia University, it is reliable without being technical." J. F. Bender

+ N Y Times p39 Ap 13 '47 250w

School & Society 65:111 F 8 '47 20w

"If this simple, honest and direct book seems superficial, and has no new ideas on either theory or exercise, it may be because it covers too many subjects. To one who would use it as 'self-training for better speaking,' however, it cannot, as the doctors say, do any harm and it may do some good."

Theatre Arts 31:78 My '47 60w

DE SHERBININ, BETTY. River Plate republics: Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay. (Invitation to travel ser) 276p $4 Coward-McCann
918.2 Argentina—Description and travel. Uruguay—Description and travel. Paraguay—Description and travel 47-11670

"A volume written primarily for those intending to travel in Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay. Author does not aim to discuss political or national matters—Perón and his activities for example, are largely ignored—but concerns herself with slight historical background and much information on the peoples and the way of life in the three countries, on accommodations tourists might well expect to employ (hotels, automobile routes) and the sights they should see. Major emphasis on Argentina." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:105 N 15 '47

"A colorful, descriptive profile of the three republics. . . An informed and informative, though slightly rhapsodical tour of the region; secondarily as a guidebook."

+ Kirkus 15:565 O 1 '47 150w

Reviewed by Joseph Borome

Library J 72:1537 N 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p50 D
7 '47 350w

"This book can be compared appropriately with the 'puchero' (Argentina's equivalent of our own New England boiled dinner), which it describes. Stews—edible or literary—can be very succulent, indeed, and it is only fair to say that in the one presented by this young author there can be found some tasty tidbits. Unfortunately, however, they are too few in number and the nourishment as a whole is poorly prepared, unrewarding, and ill-assorted." Spruille Braden

— + Sat R of Lit 30:38 N 8 '47 360w

DE SOLA, ALIS. Body is faithful, and other stories, 209p $2.75 Dutton

47-1146

A collection of short stories dealing with the psychological complexities of love, sex, passion, or the emotional disturbances of childhood.

"The author's use of simple language embroidered into artful phrases produces a prose that is vital, vividly clear—a requisite for craftsmanship—which, combined with variety of original subject material, makes this collection especially enjoyable, good even for a second reading." Julie Halasa

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 2 '47
250w

"There's occasional imitation of Dorothy Parker, occasional smart bitterness, a very definite liking for and lingering over passion, but no literary virtue."

Kirkus 14:605 D 1 '46 170w

"In spite of some originality in plot and effective treatment, the stories will not have wide appeal and book is not recommended for the average library." G. W. Hill

Library J 72:161 Ja 15 '47 70w

"Alis De Sola's intense, sensitively written short stories range in setting from Venezuela to Germany, but with a few exceptions their theme is identical. . . They suffer love with a tremendous sense of urgency and fatality suggestive of the abnormal. Freud's influence is apparent, but Miss de Sola does not allow the dazzling Freudian mythology to substitute for her own psychological insights. The best of the stories is 'Portrait Through Prisms,' a perceptive study of a Venezuelan woman racked by jealousy of her husband's pet seals, rivals for his love. The story is delicate in its imagery and rhythms and yet strong in its structural lines and character delineation." Stephen Stepanchev

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
F 9 '47 500w

"This collection of short stories is an interesting failure. Along the line, there are instants of real intensity, evidences of feeling, the possibility of unrestrained passion. It is too bad that Alis de Sola is unable to give freely of herself more than once every fifty pages. At least one can be grateful for three moving stories out of a collection of fourteen and for a momentary contact or two with the writer as a living being, not as a technician engaged in the 'business of writing.' 'The Body Is Faithful' is the title of the first and best story of the collection." Patricia Page

N Y Times p14 F 9 '47 600w

"Miss de Sola's genuine talent is greatly handicapped by a devotion to what has become a formula in modern 'slick' writing of the more pretentiously artistic type. The pseudo-poetic emotional lushness infuses much of her work and is instantly recognizable as a deliberately fostered idiom. There are, however, several stories in the collection which achieve a simplicity and directness worthy of Miss de Sola's talent, a talent whose own worst enemy she is." S. H. Hay

— + Sat R of Lit 30:56 Ap 12 '47 450w

DESSART, GINA. Man died here, 244p $2.50 Harper

47-30872

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 14 '47
140w

"Plausible, readable, sustained."

+ Kirkus 15:379 Jl 15 '47 90w

New Repub 117:33 O 20 '47 30w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
N 2 '47 110w

"A first novel, 'A Man Died Here' is told with considerable insight and skill. Conveying an effective suggestion of impending tragedy, the story, at the same time, shows painstaking care for detail. Miss Dessart leaves no loose ends." Jack Glick

N Y Times p29 S 14 '47 180w

"An oblique method of handling simple material, but the book is very pleasantly written."

New Yorker 23:88 S 6 '47 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p13 S 21 '47
100w

Sat R of Lit 30:34 S 13 '47 40w

DESTLER, CHESTER MCARTHUR. American radicalism, 1865-1901; essays and documents. 276p il $3.50; pa $2.50 Conn. college bkshop
973.8 U.S.—Politics and government—1865-46-6081

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Reviewed by L. M. Hacker
Am Hist R 52:757 Jl '47 700w

Reviewed by S. F. McDowell
Am J Soc 53:150 S '47 1100w

Reviewed by P. M. Sweezy
New Eng Q 19:560 D '46 230w

"Mr. Destler has made two important contributions: he has strengthened the theory, first, that much of American radicalism is essentially indigenous; and second, that its origins are urban as well as rural. He has 'uncovered urban origins of a number of supposedly rural stereotypes and remedial proposals that Turnerians have regarded as peculiarly western.' The sum total of Destler's studies goes far to undermine the Turnerian theory that nationalist, radical democracy was a creation of the frontier. . . In helping to interpret this information he incidentally throws much light on twentieth-century progressivism and the whole difficult problem of establishing in America today a left-wing synthesis which might appeal to large groups." H. U. Faulkner

+ Pol Sci Q 62:121 Mr '47 650w

"The present volume is history for historians, but even at this stage of speaking to a limited audience, Professor Destler has made the story of the nineteenth century more exciting."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:58 Mr '47 300w

DETJEN, MRS MARY ELIZABETH (FORD), and DETJEN, ERVIN WINFRED. Your plans for the future; drawings by John L. Shailer. 294p $2 McGraw

371.42 Educational guidance. Vocational guidance 47-11638

For the high school boy or girl who has to decide whether to go on to college or to take a job. Includes chapters on choice of a college, financing a college course, home study courses, vocational training, getting and holding a first job. Bibliography at end of each chapter. Index.

"An excellent book for high school students to be used as an aid in planning their school program and their post-school years."

+ Booklist 44:173 Ja 1 '48

Reviewed by E. F. Clift
Library J 72:1693 D 1 '47 70w
School & Society 66:463 D 13 '47 10w

DEVER, JOSEPH. No lasting home. 432p $3 Bruce pub. 47-5247

"Tells of a struggling Boston Catholic family and of the attempt of the older brother, a local union official, to support his aunt, his drunken father, and genius brother. Eventually he gives up to join the priesthood." Library J

"The author has avoided most of the pitfalls of Catholic fiction, and he writes with verve, variety and a measure of wholesome satire. His humor is earth-bound but sparkling, and the vitality of even his minor characters is an index to his creative capital."

+ Cath World 166:189 N '47 200w

"Written with obvious sincerity, this first novel by the winner of the 1945 Yank short-story contest is unfortunately more of a treatise than a novel. Its characters fail to come to life but move stiffly at the author's bidding to illustrate the need for religion in daily life. Even Eddie remains merely a character, and it is difficult to believe in either his rise to leadership in a labor union or in his later happiness as a lay brother." Dorothy Sparks

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ag 31 '47 170w

"As a summarist Mr. Dever often falters in the construction of his narrative bridges, and even his skill as a builder of scenes is frequently marred by his awareness that he is 'writing.' What he has given us here is a generous outline, filled in under some headings, left tentative and dangling under others, of the novel he did not quite write. . . Not until Mr. Dever's genuine sensitiveness overmatches his weakness for literary language and the consecrated naïve will he achieve the novel's ample canvas." Riley Hughes

Commonweal 46:507 S 5 '47 330w

"Joseph Dever's initial effort as a novelist is recommended as a genuine character study. . . His story, a rewarding one, has much that is real and human, and will have a special appeal for a Catholic market."

+ Kirkus 15:438 Ag 15 '47 160w

"As an attempt at nobility and deep religious feeling this book falls short. Only redeeming factor is a good account of trade unionism. Protestants will not like it." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1193 S 1 '47 70w

DEVEREUX, JAMES PATRICK SINNOTT. Story of Wake island; with a pref. by Robert E. Sherwood. 252p il $2.75 Lippincott

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Wake island. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 47-2830

The story of the battle for Wake island in December, 1941, written by the marine officer in command of the defenders.

Reviewed by Herman Kogan
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Jl 6 '47 230w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 My 2 '47 500w

"Rarely has a leading participant in such a desperate struggle against odds as the battle for Wake Island written of it so modestly and with such a sparsity of I's. . . 'The Story of Wake Island' is simply told by a soldier who makes no pretense of being a professional author, and it gains by its simplicity. Every detail of every day is spelled out clearly, not only actual combat, but backbreaking digging, toilsome dragging of guns from one end of the island to the other, makeshift devices for keeping planes and guns in service." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 My 4 '47 800w

"Such legends as this frequently collapse when they are reduced to print. Colonel Devereux's account of the brief and bitter battle, on the contrary, adds dramatically to the heroic stature of the American defenders. A human document of valor and defeat, the book is an excellent memorial to an episode which became the symbol of some larger and necessary faith at a time when faith was all we had to go on." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 27 '47 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 29 '47 250w

Reviewed by T. C. Mendenhall
Yale R n s 37:152 autumn '47 700w

DE VOTO, BERNARD AUGUSTINE. Across the wide Missouri; il, with paintings by Alfred Jacob Miller, Charles Bodmer and George Catlin; with an account of the discovery of the Miller collection by Mae Reed Porter. 483p $10 Houghton

978 Fur trade, West—History. Indians of North America 47-11484

"Chronicles of the Rocky Mountain fur trade, which flourished in the eighteen-thirties, Mr. DeVoto . . . describes, with great relish, the murderous brawls between the 'mountain men' of rival companies, their carousals, and their behavior toward the unhappy Crows, Snakes, Gros Ventres, Nez Percés, and other Indians they ran across. He has used many sources. . . The book is illustrated with splendid reproductions of sketches made on the trail in 1837-38, by Alfred Jacob Miller, a Baltimorean of the romantic school." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Wallace Stegner
+ Atlantic 181:122 Ja '48 750w

DE VOTO, B. A.—Continued
Booklist 44:131 D 1 '47

Reviewed by E. S. Watson
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 N 9 '47
450w

Current Hist 14:37 Ja '48 120w

"Source material, which is also largely new material, in careful but colorful representation."

+ Kirkus 15:459 Ag 15 '47 150w

"Outstanding historical work, cautious of sources, expert in interpretation and fortunate in illustrations. Recommended." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:1371 O 1 '47 130w

Reviewed by Ernest Kirschstein
Nation 165:602 N 29 '47 1400w

"Although it was inevitable that Mr. DeVoto should come to grips with the fur trade sooner or later, the present book was occasioned by Mrs. Clyde Porter's interest in the all but forgotten work of Alfred Jacob Miller, a young Baltimore artist who was taken to the mountains by Captain William Drummond Stewart in 1837-'38. Some one perceived that Mr. DeVoto's knowledge of the mountain men and Mrs. Porter's plan for an album of Miller's pictures could be admirably combined, and 'Across the Wide Missouri' is the outcome."

H. N. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
N 2 '47 1500w

"This is Bernard DeVoto at his best, and when you have said that, you have said a lot. In fact, you have come pretty near to using the adjective magnificent. As he has proven repeatedly, this author has a passion as strong as a Chinook wind—as just, and as lucid, as the mountain-clearness of the original American idea. . . I defy anyone to find a more hair-raising bit of writing than his description, beginning on page thirty-six of the present volume, of a buffalo hunt. I defy anyone to find a more beautiful bit of writing than the paragraph which ends this description." Struthers Burt

+ N Y Times p1 N 2 '47 1300w

New Yorker 23:112 N 1 '47 120w

"This is the kind of thing that DeVoto does admirably. His book is documented carefully; his notes and bibliography are in themselves enough to start any interested reader off on half a lifetime of reading in the field. Mrs. Porter's account of the Miller pictures appears separately, and there is an appendix in which you may find some account of the great painters of the early West, including Charles Bodmer and George Catlin, some of whose pictures are here used to supplement Miller's." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 2 '47
1650w

"Altogether a bountiful and illuminating book. . . 'Across the Wide Missouri' would have benefited from a little tough-minded cutting. . . There are also the errors in detail which are the sad lot of anyone who attempts to organize a book out of the refractory materials of fur trade history. But this is a noble work which will have a fertilizing effect upon all future thinking and writing about the early Far West." D. L. Morgan

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 N 8 '47 1050w

DE VOTO, BERNARD AUGUSTINE. Mountain time. 357p $2.75 Little

47-30038

"Psychological romance. . . Hero and heroine respectively a surgeon in a New York hospital and the wife of an unsuccessful author, return to the western city where they had been children, to understand and recover from their neuroses, and to marry." Library J

"Mr. DeVoto tells his story with exactness and precision; behind the observation, there is always the keen mind. With Jo, perhaps, he is too precise; he has pared her down so that she sometimes seems more case study than woman, and his clinical treatment of her is apt to obscure the fact that Cy's search for his soul, and his struggle to come to terms with himself, are something quite different from her neurosis. But Cy, as Mr. DeVoto conceives him, is impressive." Richard Scowcroft

+ Atlantic 179:133 Je '47 400w

Booklist 43:170 F 1 '47

"Despite the lame conclusion 'Mountain Time' makes a considerable impact upon the reader. In these days of pachydermatous novels it is spare and terse. The dialogue, particularly in the hospital scenes, is telescoped and hard-bitten, admirably suited to the characters, and the style in general is tight and firm. In presenting his protagonists DeVoto displays considerable insight, and although the reader must often take the sanative influence of the Custis environment on faith, the contrast is nevertheless sharp. 'Mountain Time' reveals its author as a better psychologist and observer than as an architect of plot." J. T. Flanagan

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ja 26 '47
600w

"With a very modern and medical vernacular, attractive characterization, this is practised and pleasurable, and its partial serialization in Collier's indicates its popular potential."

+ Kirkus 14:579 N 15 '46 180w

"Though the materials here are often those of popular fiction—altered by sophisticated technique and gift for comic, mannered dialog—the vitality of the satirical portraits of minor characters is not unworthy of Sinclair Lewis." H. W. Hart

Library J 72:161 Ja 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ja
26 '47 1850w

"Any book Bernard DeVoto writes makes exciting reading. . . Every novelist worth his salt is, in a sense, a historian as well. Mr. DeVoto is very much the historian here. . . The time the story brings to life is the only half-believable years of 1919-1920. The atmosphere of that time, faithfully reproduced, makes credible what would not otherwise be so—the neuroses, only half realized by the reader till the end, by which the two main characters are driven and from which, at happy last, they make their escape." E. E. Mirrielees

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 26 '47 650w

"As a psychological study, the novel is of debatable importance, but for its wit, its sharpness of phrase, and, in spite of an unhappily telegraphic style, its mild intellectual stimulation, it deserves your consideration."

+ New Yorker 22:84 Ja 25 '47 170w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 9 '47
70w

"In view of Mr. DeVoto's intellectual attainments and deep knowledge of American life, one naturally expects that a novel from his pen would, even though it bore no message, at least make some social commentary. This expectation is not met. 'Mountain Time' has many of the values of first-rate fiction. Mr. DeVoto has conceived an interesting plot; he knows his central characters intimately and draws them convincingly; he depicts faithfully the mores of his locale. . . In other respects he has been less successful. The style, excessively close-packed, oblique, elliptical, without being particularly appropriate, is frequently distracting. Detracting still more seriously from the book's effectiveness is its construction. With a surprising lack of skill in building up to and away from his climaxes, 'Mountain Time' is so insufficiently modulated that it seems flat and accentless. Considering the high-powered brain that generated it, this is a novel of surprisingly low voltage." M. B. Hexter

+ Sat R of Lit 30:19 F 1 '47 750w

DEWEY, ALBERT PETER. As they were; epilogue by Geoffrey T. Hellman. 233p $2.75 Beechhurst press 940.5344 World war, 1939-1945—France.

World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives,
American 47-808

Description of the early days of the war, 1939-1940, in France, as set down in letters and excerpts from a journal kept by a thoughtful young American, Lieutenant Colonel A. Peter Dewey knew Europe, and especially

France, and these are his impressions of the reasons for the downfall of France. After a brilliant military career the author was killed in an ambush in Saigon in 1945.

Foreign Affairs 26:223 O '47 30w

Reviewed by Edward Angly

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29
Mr 9 '47 700w

"His disconnected and occasionally lush paragraphs often show an intuitive understanding of a nation that was disintegrating, in a bored way, before the first Panzer division ever crossed the border."

New Yorker 22:65 D 28 '46 100w

"This, of course, might be utter balderdash, chitchat and gossip. That it is none of these things is because Dewey was well informed, able, shrewd, understanding and perhaps just a little bit of a mystic—at any rate enough to be sensitive to the thousand-and-one overtones that even an experienced reporter might miss. It isn't possible to 'explain' his book any further than this. But I can add that if you want to see France in her most dreadful moment, and to come somewhere near understanding the way the French felt when their world toppled about their ears, you will go far before finding a book that will give you the feel of it as this one does. You'll finish reading, too, I think, with a sharp regret that Dewey was not spared to write more." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 3 '47
900w

DEWEY, EDWARD R., and DAKIN, EDWIN
FRANDEN. Cycles; the science of prediction. 255p $3 Holt

338.54 Business cycles 47-1975

"Although concerned primarily with economics and the problem of economic forecast, many incursions are made into other sciences for material and examples. Authors show that rhythm and periodicity exist in the natural world and that our economic world also displays distinct rhythms and cycles. They examine the ideas which underlie these facts, suggest implications which seem to be indicated in them and point out some meaning which such facts hold for us." (Library J) No index.

Current Hist 12:500 My '47 110w

Reviewed by W. A. Kalenich

Library J 72:158 Ja 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by J. H. Salmon

Management R 36:399 Jl '47 650w

"There is a constant struggle observable, in this book, between the necessary scientific qualifications of its predictions and findings and the natural exuberance of the authors, who have attempted to produce a book suitable to the layman's understanding. The necessary qualifications appear throughout, and very precisely stated; but the tone of the volume is so sanguine that a layman, without a proper background to permit him to evaluate these reservations, may be carried away and come to believe that here, at last, is a way to 'beat depression.'" Richard Wohl

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Je
15 '47 900w

"The ideas here set forth must, at the least, be regarded as a challenging hypothesis richly deserving of further study. Business men and students of economic dynamics alike will do well not to dismiss them lightly." A. D. Gayer

+ N Y Times p28 My 18 '47 750w

"Their findings are presented in very readable form supplemented by simple graphs suited to the non-mathematical reader. . . . The most interesting chapters are the last four concerning economic illusions, wars, and postwar trends. The predicted depression 1947-52 is based on an interesting chart, page 188, showing the 54-year general trend, the 18-year real estate cycle, and the 9-year business cycle all on the down-grade in the late forties and reaching their bottom in 1952. The authors present their findings factually with the minimum of moralizing and are extremely disdainful of any attempts to assign reasons or causes for these rhythmic phenomena." C. G. Uhr

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 13 '47
500w

Reviewed by D. C. Coyle

Sat R of Lit 30:28 My 24 '47 550w

DEWEY, THOMAS B. Draw the curtain close. (Jefferson house publication) 212p $2.50 Morrow

Detective story. 47-11466

"A thriller commendably more coherent than Dewey's preceding tale." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week O 31 '47 40w

Kirkus 15:484 S 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p62 D 7 '47 160w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 9 '47
50w

"Twelve deaths. Five murders, one police-slaying, four fogged by Mac, one by heroine, one suicide. What more could anybody want?"

Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 8 '47 40w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 16 '47
70w

DE WICK, ERNEST S., and COOPER, JOHN
H. Plastic craft. 184p il $5 Macmillan 680 Plastic materials. Handicraft 47-13

"Book prepared for handicraft use in schools and in the home shop. Directions for making a variety of useful objects ranging from simple projects to those involving special techniques and use of wood- or metal-working tools. Use of kinds of plastics, tools needed, color possibilities and processes including heat-sealing and dip dyeing are carefully described with simple directions for using tools, use of oil and tempera painting, etching and sculpture." (Library J) Lists sources of supply. No index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:226 F 1 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:66 O '46

DICHTER, ERNEST. Psychology of everyday living. 239p $2.50 Barnes & Noble

150.13 Psychology, Applied 47-4323

An analysis of some of the aspects of human behavior, which explains why we act and think as we do. The author is a consulting psychologist.

"When you pick up a copy of Look magazine, do you turn first to the sections headed 'Psychoquiz' and 'Personality Clinic'? If so, this book is for you. . . . If there is any living person above 10 years of age who finds nothing of interest in this book—he should see Dr. Dichter, or some other psychologist, at once, or as soon as he comes out from under the ether. Dr. Dichter hasn't missed many bets in this book. It will probably reach a very large audience. The intellectuals will call it corn, and all the other readers—which means nearly 99 per cent—will probably call it an interesting, down-to-earth, practical book." Wendell Johnson

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 22 '47
290w

School & Society 65:446 Je 14 '47 20w

DICKENS, MONICA. Happy prisoner. 312p $2.75 Lippincott

47-3826

The happy prisoner is a young Englishman who is confined to his bed with war wounds—a lost leg and a bad heart—and is teaching himself to accept the situation as gracefully as possible. The doings of his affectionate and versatile family and his nurse, make a pleasant story of present-day England.

Booklist 44:16 S 1 '47

DICKENS, MONICA—Continued

"Several widely differing love stories are woven into the book with a deft touch, and one bit of psychosis, seemingly inevitable in these psychotic days. Incidentally, Oliver's own love affair with Elizabeth, his pretty and efficient nurse, furnishes fair suspense and justifies the title of the book." M. P. Corcoran

+ Cath World 165:566 S '47 250w

Reviewed by George Dillon

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 31 '47 320w

"Without any effect of mawkishness Oliver North is made to radiate both happiness and good sense among his more active acquaintances, and the writing is both lively and graceful." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by Rayner Heppenstall

New Statesman & Nation 32:343 N 9 '46 300w

"Miss Dickens clearly shares with her illustrious grandfather the liking for people that makes a novelist's work enjoyable. 'The Happy Prisoner' is that none-too-common find—a full length light novel that is lively, intelligent and discerning."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p46 D 7 '47 360w

"In the obviously contrived, attenuated narrative Miss Dickens has slipped together, she has certainly not evidenced any of the exquisite plot sense, social depth, or character-sense of her paternal grandfather, Charles Dickens; but she does reveal personal wit and love of family. The real contribution of her book is the undramatic acceptance of Oliver's stump of one leg and his return to a real world as he rides away from self-pity on the petty woes of others." Florence Crowther

+ — N Y Times p17 Ag 17 '47 430w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 24 '47 250w

"Miss Dickens, like her celebrated grandfather, is adept at creating colorful and memorable characters; the reader will be charmed at her adroit and sharply delineated portraits of the people who throng in and out of Oliver's room. . . With grace and wit Miss Dickens weaves the threads of a dozen or so minor plots into a thoroughly integrated and delightful whole." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 Jl 26 '47 550w

"Readers may have the feeling that they have read it all before, but they will enjoy the quiet patrimony of English charm which the author settles on her people. The Happy Prisoner often trembles on the verge of sentimentality; what saves it from toppling over is Miss Dickens' ability to create characters who are intimately, almost tediously, convincing."

+ — Time 50:88 Jl 28 '47 280w

"The course of events would be little without Miss Dickens's comments on them. She has talent, and she is not too proud to use it to amuse. The result is an intelligent and well-written novel."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p589 N 30 '46 390w

Wis Lib Bul 43:118 Jl '47

DICKERMAN, MARION, ed. See Who's who in labor

DICKIE, ALEXANDER L. Production with safety. 242p $2.50 McGraw

658.3823 Accidents, Industrial. Accidents—Prevention 47-30569

"Book differs from others on safety in that it treats accident prevention as a business investment; i.e. by cutting high costs of accidents, production is increased. Written from the viewpoint of the safety engineer the fundamentals of accident prevention are presented to supervisors in form of 13 safety talks." (Library J) List of visual aids. Index.

Booklist 44:145 D 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1274 S 15 '47 70w

Management R 36:615 N '47 60w

"A highly informative book regarding the work of a safety engineer and the functioning of formal accident prevention programs in industrial concerns. The author has successfully presented his material in the form of conversations between a safety engineer and various members of a large manufacturing company."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:43 Jl '47

DICKINSON, THOMAS ALBERT. Experimental casting plastics. 24p il $2 Plastic research co, box 346, Alhambra, Calif.

668.4 Molds (for plastics)

"Devoted to formulae and methods of making rigid or flexible patterns, molds and casts from plastics or for use in the connection with plastics, this little book is well supplied with photographs, drawings and bibliographical references." Chem Eng

Chem Eng 54:272 O '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:56 Jl '47

DICKS, RUSSELL LESLIE. Comfort Ye my people; a manual of the pastoral ministry. 136p $1.50 Macmillan

265.8 Prayers. Sick, The 47-1161

Selected prayers and readings to be used by ministers in their pastoral visits to the sick, the aged, the dying, and the bereaved. The compiler was formerly chaplain of the Massachusetts general hospital, Boston, and is now chaplain of the Wesley memorial hospital, Chicago.

Christian Century 64:272 F 26 '47 80w

"The choice of materials is chaste and extremely useful. Of convenient pocket size, the volume will be of great use to pastors. One word of caution: the ministry to the sick and bereaved comes with more grace and effectiveness when it is immediately personal; a book in the hand while praying for the afflicted is usually less impressive than a prayer in the heart. Therefore, the inspiration of such a volume is best when it is directed to the pastor." R. E. Keighton

+ — Crozer Q 24:285 Jl '47 150w

"Pastors will find this book a valuable aid to their ministry."

+ Kirkus 15:60 F 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by H. H. Wagner

Springf'd Union p2 Je 21 '47 90w

DICKSON, MRS MARGUERITE (STOCKMAN). Lightning strikes twice; il. by Dorothy Bayley Morse. 240p $2.50 Nelson

47-2844

Vocational story for teen-age girls. Ellen Seymour, whose mother had been a dancer and who still taught in her own dance studio, knew she was expected to carry on the family career. But as a junior in high school Ellen found it hard to work in all the activities on her schedule and practice dancing too. The story is of her decision to allot her time to the important things first, and of the success which followed.

Booklist 43:335 Je 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 My 25 '47 50w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 9 '47 180w

Kirkus 15:167 Mr 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by Nellie McCalla

Library J 72:738 My 1 '47 80w

"The ballet class dominates the story, and this technique is so thoroughly involved throughout that its strongest admirers will be girls who intend to be dancers or wish they could be." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 My 18 '47 380w

"Intelligently written story... Ellen's fine relationship with her mother and her pride in her mother's dance studio... will interest every girl and particularly those who have ever had the experience of being the teacher's daughter, Ellen's reward for having sacrificed some fun for her dancing is a thrilling one which proves that planning one's time is worth while." V. H. Mathews
+ N Y Times p41 My 4 '47 200w

DIEHL, EDITH. Bookbinding, its background and technique. 1td ed 2v il pl $25 Rinehart 686 Bookbinding 47-938

"The author of this excellent work is herself a foremost American practitioner and teacher of bookbinding. From a lifetime's experience in this difficult art she has given in these volumes, to those who are interested, both a historical record and, more important, an eminently practical guide." N Y Times

"[The book] contains much good material, but this is too often placed between information which is either confusing, contradictory, or tied in too closely with the personal methods of its author. The majority of the readers of this work will not have background enough to extract those portions which are valuable. For a work announced by the publishers as 'monumental', Edith Diehl's book is disappointing." Edward McLean

+ Library Q 17:310 O '47 1900w

"The manual of bookbinding practice found in the second volume is of such high value that it seems ungracious to suggest that Miss Diehl might have done better with the organization of her historical section. Though, as it stands, it is an informative statement, it needs expansion and a more leisurely treatment. This historical essay would, indeed, have done better service as a separate work with one volume for text and another for plates." H. D. French

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32
Mr 30 '47 1050w

Reviewed by D. A. Randall
+ N Y Times p28 Ja 12 '47 900w

"These two volumes, with their clear print, fine paper, ample margins and covers of unobtrusive elegance, are a pleasure to handle and possess. . . The first volume, a short history of decorated bindings, is not so satisfactory. It begins rather irrelevantly with an account of materials used for book production in primitive times, and meanders on to modern bindings through a forest of information which is not always orderly or accurate. . . But Miss Diehl is well worth reading when she writes of subjects within her own knowledge, such as the different methods of sewing, the technical difficulty of gold-tooling, and the reason why in modern times fine binders are few and generally female."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p584 N 8 '47
550w

DIEKHOFF, JOHN SIEMON. Milton's Paradise lost; a commentary on the argument. 161p $2 Columbia univ. press

821 Milton, John—Paradise lost A46-6092

An analytical study of Paradise Lost, showing it to be a reasoned view of life. The author attempts to show "that Milton's system of ideas is consistent and sound, and that the various exceptions and objections which have been made to it are based on failure to interpret the poet precisely." (Publisher's note) Index.

"A detailed and thoughtful discussion, eminently readable and helpful." J. T. Frederick
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 5 '47
60w

"Diekhoff's reading of Milton is on the whole an excellent conservative attempt to find out what Milton meant. It comes, therefore, as more of a shock when the author permits himself an occasional tendentious sentence which weakens his case by losing the sympathy of this reader at least." J. L. B.
+ J Philos 44:695 D 4 '47 600w

"The whole idea of extracting a moral philosophy for today from Milton is slightly silly to begin with and Mr. Diekhoff's pedestrian scholarship and prose style serve only to make matters worse."

— San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 15 '46
70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p140 Mr 29
'47 480w

DIETZ, ALBERT GEORGE HENRY. Dwelling house construction. (Technical series on building construction) 371p $6 Van Nostrand 690 Building. Dwellings 47-1822

"A compact, practical manual of structural details and construction methods currently used in the building of houses has been urgently needed. Such a manual for the wooden frame house is now at hand in this work. The subject is treated in the same order as a house is built, that is the book begins with inspection of the site, proceeds to layout of the building, making the excavation, constructing the foundation, and concludes with interior finish, hardware and painting. Plumbing, heating, and electrical work are not covered, but books on these subjects are scheduled for publication in the same series." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"A much needed up-to-date practical book on frame building layout materials and construction." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:226 F 1 '47 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:57 O '46

DILLISTONE, FREDERICK WILLIAM. Holy Spirit of the life of today. 126p $1.50 Presbyterian bd.

231.3 Holy Spirit 47-18415

"With a good command of biblical scholarship and a restrained use of the historical theology with which he is evidently familiar, Principal Dillistone develops a good working description, if not a precise definition, of the nature and functions of the Holy Spirit according to the Old and New Testaments. The heart of the book is a discussion of 'the results of the Spirit's activity,' which are life, power, order and glory." (Christian Century) Index.

Christian Century 64:1366 N 12 '47 100w

"As a corrective to certain naturalistic views which regard the divine as pegged entirely within the order of the world, this volume is welcome. Its refined supernaturalism, with its strong belief in the personal activity of God, stands much more definitely within the Christian tradition than any sheer naturalism. While written primarily for the layman, the average minister and theological student will find their minds clarified by the treatment of this important phase of Christian faith and experience." G. W. Davis

+ Crozer Q 25:89 Ja '48 600w

DILLON, MYLES. Cycles of the kings. 124p $3 Oxford

891.62 Irish literature—Collections 47-6511

"Here are summarized, with full translation of important passages, representative tales from a whole cycle of ancient Irish sagas hitherto inaccessible to the general reader." Chicago Sun Book Week

"Here are some of the strangest stories in the world, of marked beauty and interest even in their abbreviated form." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 20 '47
70w

"The literary value of the texts lies in 'the incident, the motif, the folklore . . . rather than any quality of form.' This fact is apt to lessen the attraction for the general reader. Moreover, Mr. Dillon has attempted also to satisfy some of the requirements of the specialist; and it must be confessed that his scholarly paraphernalia, his array of notes and sources and references, is a trifle daunting. None the less, those whose interest in the subject leads them to persevere will be well rewarded; for the tales, which in Mr. Dillon's opinion contain much historical fact, not only recapture vividly much of the manners of ancient Ireland, but they have also the charm peculiar to all Celtic legend. Barbarous and bloodstained as they are, they yet have little of the gloomy ruthlessness of the Norse sagas; for the imaginative element in them is of a far brighter cast, and they are enlivened by many gleams of satire and humor." E. F. B.

DILLON, MYLES—Continued

Christian Science Monitor p16 My 24 '47 600w

"Dr. Dillon sets these stories forth briefly, skilfully, engagingly. On the other hand, he has quite obviously labored, and labored for years, over the oldest manuscripts; and so he has laid down for us here, I should say, the fruits of a very great scholarship and a very great love of things Irish." David Marshall

+ Commonweal 46:78 My 2 '47 180w

Reviewed by Padraic Colum

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 Mr 30 '47 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p7 Ja 4 '47 700w

DILTS, MARION MAY (MRS PAUL KOPP).

Pageant of Japanese history; il. by photographs from Japanese art and drawings by Toyojiro Onishi. new ed 418p $4 Longmans

952 Japan—History 47-11861

Revised edition of a history of Japan which first appeared ten years ago (Book Review Digest 1938). It has added chapters on the events that led to the war, and on General MacArthur's present régime. Glossary and dictionary of Japanese names. Index.

Booklist 44:158 D 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p19A D 3 '47 90w

"If the last chapters are not as detailed and as full of pageantry as the long story of feudal Japan and the beginning of the modern era at Commodore Perry's invitation, that does not prevent this book from being a must for young Americans."

Commonweal 47:156 N 21 '47 80w

"Miss Dilts' book is a good start for anyone wanting to learn the history that underlies the thought and action of the land that has suddenly become our responsibility. She presents Japanese history as a pageant without reducing it to the level of the cute and quaint." E. M. Tainton

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 4 '48 550w

Social Studies 39:47 Ja '48 10w

DILWORTH, ERNEST NEVIN, and LEUBA, WALTER. Smith unbound; a conversation piece. 180p $2.50 Macmillan

370.1 Education—Philosophy 47-1959

"In dialogue form the authors have endeavored to 'unbind' Smith (the average college freshman) from 'the shackles of mal-education.'" School & Society

"For the most part the writers seem to me more interested in displaying their own cleverness and verbal virtuosity than in any serious consideration of the plight of Smith. For the reader who survives a hundred pages of intellectual fencing, however, there is a fairly substantial reward in Chapter 3, in which we arrive at last at concrete proposals. Great books are to save the world once more, and in this case only 14 of them, instead of 50 or 100. . . This proposal as a whole seems to me to make a good deal of sense. Genuinely provocative arguments are adduced in support of it, and incidental to these is some specially discerning and original criticism both of literature and of current educational practice." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 13 '47 300w

"The liberating process is expounded in clever dialogue—almost too clever to be entirely clear at all points. . . But the book is useful for starting an argument, and that was doubtless the intention."

Christian Century 64:464 Ap 9 '47 120w

Current Hist 13:34 Jl '47 50w

"The conversation lags and one wonders why an attempt should be made to reduce to print what one should have been content to recall as a stimulating conversation between two sophisticated members of the intelligensia."

—Kirkus 15:60 F 1 '47 180w

"Appeal is limited." G. D. McDonald

Library J 72:384 Mr 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 My 4 '47 900w

"When one recalls the grace of Van Doren's 'A Liberal Education,' the sanity of Barzun's 'Teacher in America,' the simplicity of Hook's 'Education for Modern Man,' or the quiet hesitations of the Harvard report on 'General Education in a Free Society,' the precious tone of Dilworth and Leuba's 'Smith Unbound' is embarrassing." L. R. Middlebrook

N Y Times p39 Mr 16 '47 850w

Reviewed by A. C. Book

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ap 27 '47 400w

School & Society 65:197 Mr 15 '47 20w

Social Studies 38:240 My '47 30w

DINESEN, ISAK, pseud. See Bilken, K. D.DISNEY, DORIS MILES. Appointment at nine. 217p $2 Doubleday

47-2408

Detective story.

"Although its solution is spun from very little evidence, the key piece of which is withheld from the reader, Miss Disney has written an otherwise very satisfying and exceedingly quiet tale." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 30 '47 180w

Kirkus 15:46 Ja 15 '47 40w

"Miss Disney's heroine is a relief from girls who have the jitters all night and get themselves practically hanged for no good reason. This is a tale you could give a jumpy friend. Fairly simple, moderately romantic, sufficiently baffling." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Mr 30 '47 170w

"The story gets off to a good start, but the ending is far from satisfactory because too much information is withheld from the reader until the last possible moment. Armchair detectives like to have a chance to beat the detective to the solution, but how can they do that if they are not given an even break?" Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p36 Mr 30 '47 180w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ap 6 '47 60w

"Able baffler."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 Mr 29 '47 50w

DISNEY, DORIS MILES. Enduring old charms. 190p $2 Doubleday

47-11399

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week N 7 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:483 S 1 '47 60w

New Repub 117:28 N 24 '47 100w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p62 D 7 '47 140w

New Yorker 23:136 N 8 '47 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 16 '47 60w

"Grim—but good."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:45 N 1 '47 40w

DITZION, SIDNEY HERBERT. Arsenals of a democratic culture; foreword by Merle Curti. 263p $5 A.L.A.

027.4 Libraries—U.S. 47-30264

"A social history of the American public library movement in New England and the middle states from 1850 to 1900." (Subtitle) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Mona Fletcher

Am Pol Sci R 41:1036 O '47 300w

"Dr. Ditzion's valuable study provides, for the first time, a social and cultural history of the public library," R. B. Downs

+ Ann Am Acad 254:176 N '47 400w

Booklist 43:284 My 15 '47

"Ditzion's provocative analysis of the flowering of the public library movement is a major contribution to the field of American cultural history. Though not the first work on the subject, for Green's charmingly written classic and Fletcher's brief historical survey stand unrivaled, his is the first study which measures up to the standards of modern historical scholarship. . . Ditzion's volume is based upon intensive research in primary and secondary materials (63 pages of documentation). By publishing so meritorious a work in so pleasing a format, the A.L.A. has placed librarians and historians under great obligation." Joseph Borome

+ Library J 72:883 Je 1 '47 700w

Reviewed by L. W. Dunlap

Library Q 17:318 O '47 600w

School & Society 65:413 My 31 '47 20w

Springf'd Union p12 Ag 8 '47 180w

DOAN, EDWARD NEWELL. The La Follettes and the Wisconsin idea. 311p $4 Rinehart

B or 92 La Follette, Robert Marion, 1855-1925. La Follette, Robert Marion, 1895-47-6998

An account of the political careers of Senator Robert La Follette, Sr. of Wisconsin and his son, Senator Robert La Follette, Jr., combined with an analysis of the progressive movement in Wisconsin.

Reviewed by Miles McMillin

Chicago Sun Book Week D 17 '47 550w

Kirkus 15:571 O 1 '47 120w

"The outlines of the story is here. Or it might be more accurate to say that most of the raw materials have been assembled. But unfortunately they are put together in such a way that the drama of the rise of LaFolletteism never emerges." M. W. Childs

+ — N Y Times p9 Ja 4 '48 950w

"As an exposition of the Wisconsin Idea—the struggle for a progressive liberalism—the book is informative. The concluding section, however, which deals with the political career of Robert M. La Follette, Jr., sounds merely like a campaign biography."

+ — New Yorker 23:94 D 20 '47 80w

DOBB, MAURICE HERBERT. Studies in the development of capitalism. 396p $3.50 Int. pubs.

330.15 Capitalism 47-31347

Contents: Capitalism; The decline of feudalism and the growth of towns; The beginnings of the bourgeoisie; The rise of industrial capital; Capital accumulation and mercantilism; Growth of the proletariat; The industrial revolution and the nineteenth century; The period between the two wars and its sequel. Indexes.

"Individually and taken together Mr. Dobb's studies are a most valuable contribution to economic literature, and to the understanding of the problems of our time." G. D. N. Worswick

+ New Statesman & Nation 32:382 N 23 '46 1100w

"Objection after objection might be raised to Mr. Dobb's interpretation of events, but that is in part a tribute to the scope of his investigations. The wealth of material presented in these studies is immense, the impression created overwhelming."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p630 D 21 '46 2100w

DODD, CHARLES HAROLD. Bible to-day. 168p $2.50 Macmillan

220.7 Bible. Whole—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 47-3237

"This book offers an original analysis of the contemporary relevance of the Bible. The Bible, says Professor Dodd, is a collection of writings which, taken together, tell the history of a people from a particular point of view—as a course of events that reveal the working of divine providence. The Biblical interpretation of history, which Professor Dodd calls 'history as revelation,' goes deeper than either Marxism or fascism, or any other materialistic philosophy of history, because it includes important and relevant facts which they ignore. The Bible To-day examines both the Old and New Testaments in their historical settings." (Publisher's note) Index of references.

Booklist 44:3 S 1 '47

"The open lectures which Professor Dodd delivered at Cambridge, now available in book form, are more than the contribution of a distinguished scholar to Biblical studies; they are a sign of the times. They show, without polemical emphasis but quite clearly, that the era of intensive critical questionings about dates, authorships and extent of historical accuracy in the Bible has largely passed away; and that the present concern of scholars is with the message of the Bible, with its character as interpretation of human life and of God's relation to it, with its relevance to the history of today." J. K. Mozley

+ Spec 177:584 N 29 '46 750w

"The Bible To-day has many things to say that the modern world badly needs to hear. . . The best of present-day Biblical criticism—and Dr. Dodd's book is an excellent sample of it—lets the Bible speak for itself in terms intelligible to our generation. 'What happens then lies between a man and his Maker.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p26 Ja 11 '47 750w

DODD, CHARLES HAROLD. Johannine epistles. (Moffatt New Testament commentary) 168p $2.75 Harper

227.94 Bible. New Testament—St John—Epistles 48-287

Scholarly study on the three Biblical letters which bear the name of John, written by the Norris-Hulse professor of divinity in the University of Cambridge. No index.

"No student of the New Testament—minister, scholar or layman—can afford to miss this book." John Knox

+ Christian Century 64:1366 N 12 '47 420w

"This commentary sustains its author's reputation for sound scholarship and brilliant exposition." A. C. Purdy

+ Crozer Q 25:68 Ja '48 1500w

"Dr. Dodd's [book] belongs to the Moffatt Commentary; and, like his now famous commentary on Romans, it is a scholar's book for the general reader. . . The great and lasting value of Dr. Dodd's commentary is just that it is fully theological and, at the same time, carries the conviction that the theology is really the theology of 'John' found in the documents by Dodd, and not the private views of Dodd injected into 'John.' We can do with a good deal more of commentary of this kind." T. W. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 10 '46 420w

"Ever since its publication in 1932 the volume which has come to be known as 'Dodd's Romans' has been recognized as one of the outstanding achievements; and now we have a commentary on the Johannine Epistles which displays the same power of lucid exposition based on deep sympathy, penetrating insight, and first-rate scholarship."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p618 D 14 '46 1000w

DODGE, DAVID. How green was my father; a sort of travel diary; il. by Irv Koons. 217p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel. Guatemala—Description and travel 47-2391

The author, his wife, and their five-year-old daughter set out for Guatemala in their own car—boats and planes having been ruled out for lack of accommodations. This is a spritely account of their difficulties, getting thru Mexico—difficulties with the language, with non-existent roads, with lack of gasoline, tires, and other things.

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '47

Kirkus 15:149 Mr 1 '47 180w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17
Ap 27 '47 330w

"It is spontaneous, free from any trace of stodginess, and is even informative, in a distorted kind of way." H. E. Wedeck

+ N Y Times p43 My 4 '47 230w

Reviewed by Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 23 '47
550w

"By managing to hit all the rough spots and hit them real hard, the author avoids a single dull moment in his book; and his predicaments are so absurd and mostly so unnecessary, his telling of them so infected with humor, with clever bon mots and gags, that laughter bubbles from every page." Carleton Beals

Sat R of Lit 30:26 J1 5 '47 450w

DODGE, DAVID. It ain't hay. 218p $2 Simon & Schuster

47-763

Detective story.

"A thriller that, without insisting upon it very formally, makes plain by vivid illustration how appallingly nasty a weed marijuana is. And the tale is one of those rare tough ones in which the toughness is as convincing as it is unstinting. The facetiousness of the title is very grim indeed and Dodge's narrative as tight and rapid as its sound predecessors." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 12 '47
90w

"Hardmouthed, hardhitting, this is superior." + Kirkus 14:437 S 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
Ja 12 '47 230w

"Individual revenge is not an ideal motive for a detective, but in this case it makes an exciting story with enough violence and murder to satisfy the most bloodthirsty reader." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p33 Ja 19 '47 160w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 19 '47
60w

"Top brackets."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ja 18 '47 50w

DODGE, PEGGY POLSKY. Trillium and the tulips. [31p] $1.25 Messner

47-18109

Picture-story about a little girl who ate all of her mother's prize tulips, and had the indignity of having tulips spring out of her head. After a long period of loneliness, Trillium decided to help other people, and two by two the tulips disappeared.

Kirkus 15:67 F 1 '47 90w

"Very young children will find it funny. Drawings, however, are cuter than the text. Recommended for large collections of picture books." S. J. Johnson

Library J 72:531 Ap 1 '47 40w

"For sheer fun, for an absurd reasonableness, the essence of nonsense, this moral tale is to be heartily commended. There isn't much of it, because it is all a joke and a joke must not be carried too far, but it will be read more than once and enthusiastically borrowed by the little friends of any child who gets it." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Ap 13 '47 370w

Reviewed by Phyllis Fenner

N Y Times p30 Mr 9 '47 100w

DODSON, OWEN. Powerful long ladder. 103p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

811

46-6372

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"The positive achievements of 'Powerful Long Ladder' are its vividness, its solid strength in picturing pain and disgust without losing the joy of life which marks the best artist, its ethical force. And if the choruses here given from 'Divine Comedy' are any clew, perhaps Owen Dodson will make a real contribution to our poetic drama. It remains to be seen whether, in this medium and in his future work, he will display that mastery of structure and intellectual control in a really sustained work which are needed to fulfill the promise of the present volume." M. L. Rosenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Mr 16 '47 900w

"In 'Powerful Long Ladder,' our poetry is enriched once more by a compelling young man whose record in our social life is already impressive. . . . Even his lyrical poems have a dramatic tendency, notably a tragic sequence on estranged lovers, an old theme in poetry, but one now informed with fire, wisdom, and dignity." Alfred Kreymborg

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 F 1 '47 600w

"There are traces in Powerful Long Ladder of the poet's reading—everything from spirituals to Shakespeare—which are not unexpected; for an educated poet looks for inspiration to literature as well as to life. That at best he transforms these into his own secure and simple terms is the important thing; and that in the broadening years his work is increasing in rhythmic assurance, verbal precision and fidelity to character is the hopeful thing [for] those who scan the lists longingly for men of talent."

+ Theatre Arts 31:68 Mr '47 200w

"Probably the most talented Negro poet to emerge since Langston Hughes, Owen Dodson makes an advance over the colloquial idiom of his predecessors and, on the formal side, shows interest in the difficult intellectuality of the period. The Negro idiom and subject matter predominate, however, and are on the whole used with a sensitivity that in some cases is almost imperceptible except as rhythm."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 3:21 Mr '47 240w

DOGBOLT, BARNABY, pseud. See Silvette, H.

DOLLOFF, EUGENE DINSMORE. Crowded church through modern methods. 147p $1.50 Revell

250 Church work. Church attendance

47-1130

The author is professor of pastoral theology at the Gordon divinity school. The book is a manual of suggestions designed to guide ministers in their solution of their pastoral problems, especially those calling for methods to use in increasing church attendance.

"No trick devices promising magical results, but much practical sense about church administration and the legitimate ways in which a church can make friends and win people."

+ Christian Century 64:18 Ja 1 '47 30w

"The book doubtless will be read with interest by devoted laymen, as well as by pastors." E. A. F.

+ Springf'd Republican p3 Mr 18 '47 90w

DOLMAN, JOHN. Art of play production. rev ed 421p il $3.50 Harper

792 Theater. Acting. Amateur theatricals
46-5697

"Many new illustrations, both drawings and photographs, some rewriting, and revision bring up to date this manual for the serious amateur [Book Review Digest 1929]." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:55 O 15 '46

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 72:323 F 15 '47 20w

"Still invaluable for theatre students."

+ Theatre Arts 30:556 S '46 20w

DOOLITTLE, HILDA (H. D.) Flowering of the rod. 50p pa $2 Oxford

811

47-591

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"Although the significant fusion, the mutation into a new kind of experience, a new large meaning, does not take place in the body of the poem, it would be wrong to say that this ingenious, admirably sustained, and moving work fails because it does not achieve monumentality. H. D.'s is not a monumental art. Her poem remains as precise as it is ambitious." Stanley Kunitz

+ Poetry 70:36 Ap '47 1400w

"This is incantation, but an irresponsible, even perverse, kind. It plays upon stock emotions, it is wide-eyed and sweet; once in a great while it strikes off an image or a phrase that sinks into the mind; but it is really re-worked Doblen, Christmascardy; and one wonders regretfully what the result would have been if H. D.'s mysticism could have had the discipline of a Rendel Harris or a Kirsopp Lake." Dudley Fitts

+ Sat R of Lit 30:19 F 22 '47 600w

"This is a mystical vision, though done so quietly, so offhandedly, that the reader is led very gently into the strange countries where he may be surprised to find himself." Eugene Davidson

Yale R n s 36:540 spring '47 200w

DOR, ANA, pseud. See Ceder, G. D.

DOREMUS, THOMAS EDMUND. Flaw Dexter. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 298p $2.50 Little 47-3874

"The action of this diverting amalgam follows, if it can be said to follow anything, the fortunes of a successful but vaguely unhappy novelist whose background is a befuddled, almost archaic social world of Boston and New York at the end of the last war. One might mention the elderly hero's voyage to Poland in company with his son and some missionaries, his rather pathetic attempts to get to know his son, his relations with his remarkable mother, and his timid affection for a lady writer of mystery stories, but beyond that it would be foolhardy to try to outline a plot." New Yorker

"There's a certain cleverness here, but directed at such a bizarre, bijou circle of eccentrics that there is little conviction—and, for this reader anyhow, complete lack of interest."

+ Kirkus 15:225 Ap 15 '47 120w

"The writing is clever and the characterization vivid, but the plot is so slight and the satire so overdone that it leaves the reader flat. Not recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 72:960 Je 15 '47 70w

"The literary world is a fertile field for satire, but it needs a more seasoned and expert pen than Mr. Doremus's. His caricatures seem overdrawn, and his story is told with a sort of precocious drollery that at times reveals a nice sense of the ridiculous but more often wanders beyond the borders of effective lampooning into a realm of somewhat juvenile farce." R. B. Linscott

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag
3 '47 300w

"For all its supercilious brittleness and prose posturing, 'Flaw Dexter' is a highly entertaining and arresting first novel, revealing Mr. Doremus as a literate, original and witty young writer. Unlike most first novelists, he has very little to say, only a commendable passion for saying it precisely. His inspiration is obviously English rather than American—and, at his best, he is slightly reminiscent of the early Waugh. Let him become a little less leery of emotion, and he should write some exceptionally good fiction." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p5 J1 6 '47 650w

"An unusually witty, often penetrating, and sometimes brilliant satiric novel, in which, however, the satire frequently gets out of hand while the author enjoys himself at the expense of a number (far too large) of vulnerable institutions... The book almost inevitably will be compared to certain works of Evelyn Waugh, and in such a comparison neither its humor, its inventiveness, nor its perceptiveness will suffer. Nevertheless, the too diffuse satire and almost complete lack of organization of 'Flaw Dexter' make it a less successful performance than, say, 'Black Mischief.'"

+ New Yorker 23:78 Je 21 '47 270w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 J1 13 '47
100w

"Well, the Shandean novel, in which one thing suggests another, has its view of human life as anarchy, genial or otherwise, and I suppose 'Flaw Dexter' is an exercise in an existentialist set of values. We are all, the author seems to say, fundamentally absurd... 'Flaw Dexter' is emphatically not the novel démeuble, which Willa Cather demanded; and one can only remark that if this book represents the younger generation knocking at the door, they are curiously like the fantasists of the Twenties." H. M. Jones

Sat R of Lit 30:31 Je 21 '47 470w

DORIAN, FREDERICK. Musical workshop. 368p il $4 Harper

780.0711 Music—Psychology. Creation (literary, artistic, etc.). Composition (music) 47-5132

"In a dual 'workshop'—the composer's mind and his studio—music is conceived and written. How that is done is the theme of this work by the author of A History of Music in Performance, which primarily discusses the relationship between inspiration and craftsmanship, with some light on the habits and environments of great composers. Dorian uses sketches, notebooks and letters from the classic and romantic periods—well-known material." (Library J) Bibliography, Index.

Booklist 44:9 S 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

"A book whose appeal is definitely limited to students of music and to readers interested in processes of creation. This is a study of how composers saw their tasks and created their music; it is not concerned with dissection or analysis, but with genesis."

+ Kirkus 15:153 Mr 1 '47 170w

"The repetitive, sometimes shallow hyper-romantic style may repel the very students and music-lovers who need the book, although its viewpoint is sound, its plan excellent." George Hanson

+ Library J 72:1036 J1 '47 120w

"The book covers a great deal of ground, with easy assimilation of many sources. Few of these are new, but Mr. Dorian has made his own useful synthesis. And if one regrets that he has not included the workshops of the contemporary composer, Mr. Dorian says that he plans another book on this subject. More power to him." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p7 J1 13 '47 800w

Theatre Arts 32:68 Ja '48 30w

DORING, PAUL. Home book of money-saving formulas. (New home lib) 440p $1 Blakiston 602 Chemistry, Technical. Receipts 46-5028

"The formulas presented in this book have been selected with a twofold purpose: to give the reader the information necessary for preparing useful products for his home, office, or small business; and to acquaint him with some of the manufacturing processes and formulas used by large and small industries." (Foreword) Part one is devoted to simple formulas suited for home use. Part two, while of interest to the layman, is made up of formulas especially for the small business enterprise. The user is cautioned to study instructions in the section marked: How to use this book, before attempting to use the formulas. Glossary, Index.

DORING, PAUL—Continued

"Formulas for home, farm, office and commercial use are included in this book. . . How practical it is to make them in the home is open to question. Many of the ingredients sound hard to get and some equipment and labor are involved. The right kind of containers might prove to be a problem. (No mention is made of how well these home products keep.) . . . Each chapter has a section marked 'Warning' where in minute print poisonous ingredients are listed. For amateurs this type of information should have had greater emphasis." L. P.

Booklist 43:134 Ja 1 '47
N Y Times p38 N 24 '46 180w

DORSEY, FLORENCE L. (MRS AUSTIN HUBBARD WELCH). Road to the sea; the story of James B. Eads and the Mississippi river. 340p il $4 Rinehart

B or 92 Eads, James Buchanan 47-12025

"A biography of an American engineer and inventor, whose knowledge of the Mississippi and its river boats brought him international fame. James Buchanan Eads, whose record, in the 19th century, is one of a diving bell for salvaging, ironclad gunboats for the Civil War, the twelve year work of building a bridge over the Mississippi at St. Louis, and the construction of jetties at the mouth of the river to give New Orleans access to the sea. This is his career, in its technical as well as its personal and social aspects, from his early devotion to ships and his river, to his first marriage, and his growing fame as the man who understood everything about the Mississippi." (Kirkus) Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 44:171 Ja 1 '48

"A full recording of the incidents in his life, this has the energy of devotion, if not the wide appeal of a less specialized subject."

— Kirkus 15:457 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Recommended for general information about an important man, for regional interest and as an inspirational biography of triumph over difficulties." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 72:1265 S 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by E. B. Davis

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p52
D 7 '47 1000w

"Mrs. Dorsey has worked with skill and resource, marshaling obscure fact, drawing on hundreds of sources for an outstanding piece of integrated research. It is hardly likely that anyone will ever write about Eads without referring to her study; and few have managed so well to catch the flavor of the roaring, yellow-brown Mississippi, pushing relentlessly downward, dominating all the land around it, enriching some, ruining some, making fortunes, blighting lives. The lady loves her river; just as important, she knows it well. . . In the outdoor scenes her writing is crisp, barbed, rich in rhythm; when she tells of the Eads at home she turns to stock stuff." H. T. Kane

+ — N Y Times p4 D 28 '47 650w

DORTORT, DAVID. Burial of the fruit. 363p $2.75 Crown

47-360

Character study of a killer. Honey Halpern was born in Brooklyn's Brownsville section, and after a poverty-stricken childhood, grew into a vicious young man. His ability to use a gun gave him a certain sense of security, but even that failed him in the end.

"'Burial of the Fruit' is the thinly disguised story of Murder, Inc., that fantastically savage organization which was uncovered by district attorney—now mayor—O'Dwyer of New York, several years ago. As fiction it is no stranger, no more brutal, than the facts of real life upon which it is based. It is an interesting psychological study, too, of the development of a vicious criminal mind; not so pretentious or so searching as Dostoevsky's great classic, but thoroughly sound and plausible." William Lipscomb

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ja 19 '47
320w

"There are no surprises in this grim tale; the end is implicit in the first gloomy paragraph and in every subsequent description of Honey's surroundings. The language is not distinguished. It is heavy, imitative and in much need of cutting and sharpening. The author is too easily satisfied with the immediate verbal offerings of his subconscious. The interest in the book comes from watching the hero meet his inevitable end and from participating in the action which is often absorbing because the scenes are well realized and long enough to produce their effect."

Stephen Stepanchew
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ja 5 '47 450w

"This novel suffers from jabberwocky. Its pages (drenched in the vapors of its nightmare alleys) seldom bring their scenes into focus. At times, one seems to be wandering in a fog peopled with obscene ghouls. At its best, however, this true-life guignol is both fearful and compelling: two memorable scenes (a third-degree in a police basement, and a murder in a Catskill glen) are worth groping in the fog to find—if only for their uncompromising grasp of evil, and the poverty that nourishes it." James MacBride

N Y Times p12 Ja 19 '47 550w

DOSTOEVSKII, FEDOR MIKHAILOVICH. Raw youth [tr. by Constance Garnett]. 615p $3.50 Dial press

47-2415

"A reissue of Dostoevsky's complex story of Russian youth and adolescence, long out of print here. With an introduction by Alfred Kazin." New Yorker

"That it is not popular, and probably will never be, is not surprising, for the material is ill-digested, the organization and composition clumsy and sprawling, and the subject quite as unattractive as any of the author's invention. Yet 'A Raw Youth' is a significant document, portraying, as it does, the 'new' Russia of the mid-nineteenth century struggling to free herself from the trammels of the old." S. C. C.

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 14 '47
240w

Reviewed by Eleanor Clark

Nation 164:493 Ap 26 '47 900w

"'A Raw Youth' is the least read of Dostoevsky's novels, and with reason. It is occasionally tiresome, often involved, and is not controlled, like the great works, by a mastering concept. But for all this, it is inevitably captivating in the variety of character and incident, the sheer profusion and invention and life of it. I find it, incidentally, the most amusing of the longer novels. It has a lightness of tone, and a gayety and playful irony more often found in Dostoevsky's short stories. Alfred Kazin's introduction is an informative and suggestive preface to the book." John Farrelly

New Repub 117:32 Ag 4 '47 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32
Mr 23 '47 90w

Reviewed by Allen Mandelbaum

N Y Times p12 J1 20 '47 750w

New Yorker 23:110 Mr 29 '47 20w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 7 '47
90w

Time 49:106 Mr 24 '47 1000w

DOSTOEVSKII, FEDOR MIKHAILOVICH. Short stories; ed. with an introd. by William Phillips [tr. by Constance Garnett]. 614p $4 Dial press

Seventeen of this author's short stories written between 1846 and 1877. "Most of the characters are young intellectuals. They are sick, tormented by their own fears and guilts; they are lonely and seclusive. They feel a vital need for love, but they cannot love. . . Their stories of agony, of anguish, reveal to us something of the pain, the fear, the terror that is bound up with mental illness, with psychoneurosis." (N Y Times)

Booklist 43:205 Mr 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ja 19 '47
50w

Reviewed by J. T. Farrell

N Y Times p7 D 29 '46 1100w

"No single volume could better prove its author's tremendous literary range. 'Another Man's Wife or the Husband Under the Bed' is pure farce; 'An Honest Thief' is a work of unabashed sentiment; 'The Crocodile' is a strange and wonderful mixture of farce, satire, and allegory; in 'The Heavenly Christmas Tree' only the surest hand could have avoided mawkishness; and 'An Unpleasant Predicament,' in which absurdity and tragedy mingle inextricably, is a small masterpiece of characterization, atmosphere, and construction. Here is an author who, whatever devils drove him, could write just about what he chose."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 F 1 '47 160w

DOSTOEVSKII, FEDOR MIKHAILOVICH. Stavrogin's confession; tr. by Virginia Woolf and S. S. Kotliansky; with a psychoanalytic study of the author by Sigmund Freud. 136p $2.75 Lear pubs.

47-12177

"Three hitherto unpublished chapters from Dostoevsky's 'The Possessed,' dealing with Nikolai Stavrogin's rape of a little girl and her subsequent suicide—a terrible and powerful section of the story that was deleted by the author for reasons that perhaps will never be determined. The book includes a psychoanalytic essay, 'Dostoevsky and Parricide,' by Sigmund Freud." New Yorker

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:29 D 15 '47 350w

New Yorker 23:135 O 25 '47 110w

DOUGLAS, MARJORIE (STONEMAN). Everglades, river of grass; il. by Robert Fink. (Rivers of America) 46p $3.50 Rinehart

917.59 Everglades, Florida 47-11064

History of the only river of its kind in the world, a river of water and grass. Beginning with two chapters on the geological past of the Everglades, the author traces the history of the region from its discovery to the present. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:88 N 1 '47

Kirkus 15:497 S 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by E. L. Lewis

Library J 72:1537 N 1 '47 120w

"A fabulous book of fabulous Florida, certainly one of the best in the series 'Rivers of America.' Hervey Allen, the editor of the series, was inspired when he persuaded Mrs. Douglas to apply her rich and sensitive style, her gift for scholarly research, her knowledge, to the first comprehensive study of one of the strangest, most blood-stained regions of our continent." M. K. Rawlings

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 N 30 '47 1000w

"Mrs. Douglas tells the story straight, from the coming of the white man and the Spaniard and the Indian before him. The whole fascinating and intricate yarn which is the Everglades she unravels carefully and succinctly, and her prose style is artful to the extreme. Robert Fink's illustrations, despite some anachronisms, are sensitive and clean cut." James Lyons

+ N Y Times p38 N 23 '47 600w

"Miss Douglas's story is rich in folklore and its handmaiden, formal history; and there is a delightful vein of wit and humor brightening her skill as narrator, heightening her stature as a prophet; securing her place as an American fighting for preservation of this country's material, human, and spiritual values." Paul Flowers

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 D 20 '47 400w

DOW, DOROTHY MINERVA (MRS J. E. FITZGERALD). Sudden morning. 255p $2.50 Doubleday

47-4641

Alex Lake, once a successful author, then a captain in World war II, wakes up in a New York hospital and discovers that he has been suffering from amnesia for a year. From that point the author goes back over his life to discover the steps leading up to his illness. The time is from 1941 to 1945.

"There's nothing very new here, nor very high class either, in a story of the regeneration of a writer who fell for the fleshpots. But it's readable enough though it lacks the refinement demanded by conservative tastes."

Kirkus 15:225 Ap 15 '47 160w

"The story is fairly interesting but crude and immoral. Some writers present immorality in a sensitive, unoffending way, but Dorothy Dow is blunt and casual about sex and liquor. The characters are worldly and remote and fail to arouse either interest or sympathy. Not important, but will appeal to readers who want thrills rather than literary merit." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:960 Je 15 '47 80w

"The author leaves her hero wretched in righteous aspirations, but there is not quite depth enough in her narrative to banish a reader's doubts." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ag 3 '47 140w

"Miss Dow's glittering montage is the real thing; her story's unsteretyped ending is a bright and welcome surprise. . . It isn't as if Miss Dow doesn't know and doesn't have a facility with words and a certain hard, biting talent. When the author gets to work on her own rules the result ought to be interesting." Andrea Parke

N Y Times p19 Je 29 '47 300w

DOWNER, MARION. Discovering design; il. with phot. and drawings [by the author]. 104p $3 Lothrop

745.4 Design 47-30338

Photographs and brief text showing the relationship between nature and man-made design. Geometric and rhythmic designs, symmetry and balance are demonstrated as artists use them in painting, textiles, wallpapers, sculpture, etc.

Booklist 43:343 Jl 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Je 22 '47 320w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p13 S 11 '47 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:268 Jl '47 90w

"An attractive book, simply conceived—unfortunately the text has not conformed to this conception, and when the author discusses modern painting she will leave much of her audience behind."

+ Kirkus 15:286 Je 1 '47 90w

"Highly recommended." M. M. Smith

+ Library J 72:1041 Jl '47 80w

"We have had photographs showing design in natural forms, and books for children demonstrating their development in art, but this is the first time the two have been combined in one volume whose underlying idea is so clearly, successfully expressed. This book is literally an eye-opener; it cultivates the art of seeing." M. L. Becker

DOWNER, MARION—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11
My 11 '47 410w

"All this is presented so concisely and lucidly that the book has practically no age limits. A child of 9, who has the talent of observation, can grasp the essentials of the pictures and an adult will be stimulated to a keener understanding of composition. The book itself, both in thought and appearance, is a fine example of design." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p35 My 25 '47 270w
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 24 '47
50w
Sat R of Lit 30:29 Je 14 '47 90w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:245 S '47 140w

DOWNEY, FAIRFAX DAVIS. Cavalry mount; il. by Paul Brown. 227p $2.50 Dodd 47-574

Novel for older boys and girls, with the Indian wars in Texas during the 1870's as a background. One of the chief characters is a cavalry horse of the famous Morgan breed.

"It is a full-length novel for teen age, of the Indian conflicts following the Civil War—the period of turbulence, readjustment and displacement that, though not on a global scale, had its own affinities to the post-war periods of the two great world conflicts. It is this placing of the action that makes the book seem to me the best of all Fairfax Downey's stories of war and of the animals concerned with man in carrying it on. This novel has perspective; it has greater depth than a necessarily hurried sketch of a war very near to us in point of time. Yet the suspense is maintained by reality throughout. It is an excellent piece of historical fiction, but it is also mighty good entertainment." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 D
15 '46 450w

"More than an ordinary frontier venture tale, it is peopled not with types but with strongly sketched individuals who live realistically. Brightened by humor and a minor bit of romance, the book has tone and color, sound and substance." Frances Smith

+ N Y Times p30 Ja 12 '47 180w
Sat R of Lit 30:43 Mr 8 '47 40w

DOWNEY, FAIRFAX DAVIS. Our lusty forefathers; being diverse chronicles of the fervors, frolics, fights, festivities, and failings of our American ancestors; il. by John C. Wonsetler. 359p $4.50 Scribner

917.3 U.S.—Social life and customs 47-3882

Flashbacks of American history, written in semi-fiction form. A catchy title is used for each chapter, and each is introduced with a snatch of contemporary verse. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 15 '47
410w

"Definitely entertaining . . . semi-fictionalized accounts of the various aspects of American national life. . . Not as exhaustive as Holbrook's Lost Men of American History—nor as biographical, this fits into a not unlike groove of interest in little known relics of our country's past, giving actual facts and personages vitality and popular appeal."

+ Kirkus 15:155 Mr 1 '47 90w

"Author, who must have done immense amount of research, writes with gusto and, frequently, with something approaching a leer. Readable and coarse-grained popular history."

E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 72:805 My 15 '47 90w

"If the reader is not too critical, the book will furnish an hour of entertainment, and doubtless that was all that Mr. Downey intended." DeLancey Ferguson

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
My 25 '47 330w

"Our Lusty Forefathers' does not pretend to be a precisely accurate historical record; it is a frankly superficial concoction based on considerable research and intelligent curiosity—and as such is a fine, heady dish for those who enjoy the spicy fare of our vigorous past."

Dorothy Gardiner

+ N Y Times p20 Je 22 '47 550w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 15 '47
700w

School & Society 66:31 J1 12 '47 20w

DOWNES, BRIAN WESTERDALE. Ibsen; the intellectual background. 188p $3.25 Macmillan 839.8226 Ibsen, Henrik [47-3872]

"This is a thoroughgoing attempt to study Ibsen's relationship to the important decades in which his work was influential. Of particular interest is the author's last chapter, in which he shows how imperfectly Ibsen finally adapted himself to new developments at the end of the 1800's." Sat R of Lit

"What can you do with a well-educated author on Ibsen with a vast knowledge of Scandinavia who never once can get himself to refer to Catholics except by calling them 'papists?' . . . But don't let this scare you. The book is not bad. A bit plodding, humorless and rambling, but it keeps its promise to give Ibsen's intellectual background. The whole ground is covered, all is taken in, down to concise and clear statement of Kierkegaard's standpoint at his three moral spheres: the aesthetic, ethical and religious spheres; of his stern conception of Christian as undilutedly Christ-like; of his deep contempt for clergy and his almost pelagian conception of the free will." H. A. Reinhold

+ Commonweal 46:268 Je 27 '47 190w

"The book is principally for those interested in the history of thought, but offers a great deal of stimulating reading even to those whose knowledge of Ibsen hardly goes beyond 'Peer Gynt.'" P. H.-W.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 21 '47 290w

"Mr. Downes's book is only 182 pages long, and yet it is packed with fact and comment to the point where it requires the closest attention from the reader. That alone is probably sufficient to limit its audience very severely. But it is one of the indispensable books for anyone who seriously wants to understand its subject." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 165:186 Ag 23 '47 1000w

Reviewed by K. John

New Statesman & Nation 33:79 Ja 25
'47 1050w

Sat R of Lit 30:41 Je 7 '47 50w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée

Spec 178:504 My 2 '47 370w

"Professor Downes' brief but informative book on Ibsen has stimulated me beyond any other I have read to return to the study of Ibsen himself, especially those plays with which I am personally less familiar, such as Brand, The Pretenders and the penetrating and absorbingly pertinent Emperor and Galilean." Eva Le Gallienne

+ Theatre Arts 31:69 Ag '47 550w

"For all the variety of the recondite information which Mr. Downes has collected, its digestion (no light feat) will hardly embolden us to claim that we know the old Norway well enough to know Ibsen fully. However, the scholarly investigation makes plain to the general reader that the author of the social dramas . . . was not 'a sudden, causeless phenomenon' but a Norwegian rooted in the soil of the country from which he exiled himself, and shaped in many important ways by local events and literary traditions. It will place the student in a better position to estimate Ibsen's debt to Kierkegaard."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p170 Ap 12
'47 1800w

DOWSON, ERNEST CHRISTOPHER. Stories; ed. by Mark Longaker. 122p $2 Univ. of Pa. press

47-31063

The shorter works in prose of the English writer, Ernest Dowson. It consists of the five tales from Dilemmas (1895), the five prose poems from Decorations (1899), one story from The Yellow Book, and three from The Savoy. There is a critical introduction by the editor.

"Except for two inconsequential novels and a number of translations from the French, these stories represent Dowson's total achievement in prose. It is useful to have them gathered under one roof, though Dr. Longaker would be the last to assert that they are in any sense great short stories." C. B. N Y Times p20 O 12 '47 900w

"It is surprising to learn that Dowson took his prose more seriously than his verse, because these specimens show to a greater degree the same faults of pale emotion and commonplace phrasing that usually prevented his poetry from achieving first-rate distinction. You find simply the tone and the language of the fin de siècle in England without very much wit or beauty."

New Yorker 23:113 N 1 '47 100w

"Readers with a lingering taste for writing of the 'Yellow Book' period may find some enjoyment in Dowson's fin de siècle style, his Victorian decadence and his Wildean aestheticism." A. Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 26 '47 270w

DRAGUNAS, ANDREW. Creating jewelry for fun and profit. 146p il $3 Harper

739.27 Jewelry 47-30349

An introduction to the craft of handmade jewelry for the amateur. Describes and illustrates the processes and tools used, and tells something about where and how to obtain jewelry materials. Index.

Booklist 43:355 J1 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

Kirkus 15:153 Mr 1 '47 170w

"Concise and to the point. . . Photographs of completed work are stimulating and show that this craft may be profitable as well as personally gratifying."

+ Schools Arts 47:12a N '47 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:149 N '47

DRAKE, ROLLEN H. Aircraft sheet metal. 233p il $5.50 Macmillan

629.1341 Sheet metal work 47-31167

"Written in plain English. Information on metals and various methods of forming and fastening sheet metal needed to fulfill the sheet metal requirements of an aircraft mechanic's license. Information on identification and uses of metals and alloys commonly used in aircraft fabrication. Shop problems in construction and repair based on actual methods used in aircraft mechanics shops. Line drawings and photographs." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1614 N 15 '47 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:44 J1 '47

DRAKE, ROLLEN H. Aircraft welding. 254p il $4 Macmillan

629.1341 Welding 47-31168

"Written in nontechnical language and covers all phases of aircraft welding with information on characteristics and use of each type of metal and its alloys employed in aircraft fabrication, reaction to heat treatment, etc. Will prepare students or apprentices to meet CAA mechanics license requirements in welding. Illustrated. Glossary." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1376 O 1 '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:44 J1 '47

DRATLER, JAY. Pitfall. 177p $2 Crowell

47-624

"Jon Forbes was a Hollywood rarity—a writer happily and faithfully married. That was before the cop, Mac, started putting ideas in his head—ideas that led to a strange kind of love and happiness, and to a warped tragedy that demonstrated the infallibility of police methods." San Francisco Chronicle

"This novel about Hollywood low life is fast moving, nervous; which is all to the good, because it can be quickly finished. The characters are as synthetic and as one-dimensional as those in a production-line movie. Sex, violence, and sentimentality are here made as meaningless and as unprovocative as the actions of an average burlesque stripper." R. L. W.

— Canadian Forum 27:47 My '47 110w

Kirkus 14:464 S 15 '46 90w

"The beginning of the plot is a little hard to accept; the ending is only neatly twisted melodrama. But the body of the book is a hard, tense, almost nerve-wracking study of the miseries of adultery, the torments of the man who wants both wife and mistress. The picture business background is unglamorously true, and the fast, easy tempo has a disquieting impact."

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 9 '47 150w

DREISER, THEODORE. Best short stories; ed. with an introd. by Howard Fast. 349p $2.75 World pub.

47-3829

Fourteen short stories selected from Dreiser's published works. Contents: Khat; Free; St. Columba and the river; McEwen of the shining slave makers; The Shadow; A Doer of the word; Nigger Jeff; The Old neighborhood; Phantom gold; My brother Paul; The lost Phoebe; Convention; Marriage—for one; The Prince who was a thief.

New Yorker 23:110 Mr 29 '47 110w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 4 '47

60w

Time 49:114 Ap 7 '47 500w

DREISER, THEODORE. The stoic. 310p $3 Doubleday

47-11518

"The story of Frank Cowperwood's boldest venture, the building of the London subway system. Together with The Financier [Book Review Digest 1912] and The Titan [Book Review Digest 1914], The Stoic is a part of Dreiser's great trilogy of the nineteenth-century American dream of material power." Publisher's note

Booklist 44:151 D 15 '47

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Chicago Sun Book Week p4A D 3 '47 650w

Reviewed by John Hay

Commonweal 47:260 D 19 '47 200w

"Dreiser's reputation will assure a respectful press, but one questions a popular audience." Kirkus 15:514 S 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:28 D 22 '47 140w

"As a novel it is a deeply disappointing book, a twilight work that betrays the failing of a major talent. 'The Stoic' lacks the immense vitality, the power and sweep of its predecessors in the trilogy. Its impact is feeble. But, notwithstanding its ineffectiveness, 'The Stoic' has both a special interest and a bearing upon the whole body of Dreiser's fiction. . . In his posthumous novels he left a confession of spiritual need and religious affirmation as candid and poignant as any in our literature. 'The Stoic' is a testament." Lloyd Morris

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p54 D 7 '47 750w

DREISER, THEODORE—Continued

"Dreiser's last novel should have been as impressive as the two others in his trilogy; but somehow the subject failed to touch his imagination. He was unfamiliar with the London scene. . . . It would seem that Dreiser brooded so long over the clearly available facts that he ended by losing most of his interest in them. . . . A final question concerns the last few chapters of the novel. We know that Dreiser wrote more than one ending to 'The Stoic,' and we assume that his editors chose the latest and best; but still it is unsatisfactory." Malcolm Cowley

N Y Times p7 N 23 '47 1350w

"Mr. Dreiser's manner of closing out the life story of one of his most sturdy characters emphasizes the accuracy of the judgment that was generally made of him at the time of his death, nearly two years ago—that he was an ungainly writer but a man of great moral integrity."

New Yorker 23:134 N 15 '47 180w

"The final volume of Theodore Dreiser's 'trilogy of desire' makes a sadly inappropriate epitaph for the father of American naturalism. 'The Stoic' is a tired book. . . . It hurts to have to write thus about Dreiser. His contribution to American literature is as great, for all his limitations, as that of any other novelist; he fought stubbornly and often alone a battle that had to be fought. And with but one exception his earlier novels can still be read, not merely as historical landmarks, but as living fiction. 'The Stoic,' unhappily, is of value only for the unneeded light it casts on the difficulties Dreiser overcame when he wrote his great novels." John Lydenberg

Sat R of Lit 30:36 D 6 '47 900w

"Like all Dreiser's novels, it is much chewed but badly digested: the product of his slow brooding on the injustices of life, clotted with unassimilated gobbets of ideas and massive lumps of earnest social purpose. The Stoic is as dated as a three-day-old cake."

— + Time 50:116 N 10 '47 500w

DREPPERD, CARL WILLIAM. American clocks and clockmakers. 312p il $4 Doubleday 681.113 Clocks and watches 47-11517

"Beginning with an illuminating chapter on the story of time-keeping since the dawn of history, Mr. Drepperd discusses in thorough detail and entertaining style, American clocks and their makers. The book is lavishly illustrated with line drawings of clocks and their workings, and there are some thirty-two pages of photographs." (N Y Times) Bibliography.

Booklist 44:145 D 15 '47

Kirkus 15:521 S 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by R. S. Robbins

+ N Y Times p15 D 28 '47 190w

DRESSER, DAVIS (BRETT HALLIDAY, pseud). Counterfeit wife. 231p $2.50 Ziff-Davis

47-3422

Detective story.

"Easy to read, full of alarming citizens, with a plot that should hold you in your less adult moments." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
Je 8 '47 230w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p34 My 25 '47 110w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 1 '47
90w

Sat R of Lit 30:30 Je 14 '47 40w

DREWRY, JOHN ELDRIDGE, ed. See Saturday evening post (periodical). More Post bibliographies

DRIVER, CECIL HERBERT. Tory radical: the life of Richard Oastler. 597p il $5 Oxford

B or 92 Oastler, Richard 47-3386

Biography of a nineteenth century English reformer. Richard Oastler was descended from a long line of Yorkshire yeoman farmers. Until he was forty he was indifferent to the rising tide of the industrial revolution; but at that age he was shocked into realization of the working conditions of the poor, and became a national figure in the struggle. Bibliography. Index.

"The restoration of Oastler to his merited place in the factory reform movement is reason enough for Professor Driver's full-length biography, which is also the liveliest account of that movement yet written. In addition, Oastler's career and personality have much of intrinsic interest. Finally, the author has done some excellent etchings of the historical background. His sources are adequate and he uses them unobtrusively." Witt Bowden

+ Am Hist R 52:727 Jl '47 650w

"Professor Driver's book is a model of good scholarship: it is based on a thorough study of all primary and secondary sources, is fully but unobtrusively documented, and is written in a lucid and self-effacing style." Desmond Pacey

+ Canadian Forum 27:70 Je '47 290w

"This full-length, intellectual, satisfying and well-integrated biography of Oastler definitely should have been written and as definitely ought to be read by all with a curiosity about our social problems and their history." Harry Barnard

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 F 23 '47
500w

"Professor Driver's achievement is remarkable. His book is a definite 'must' for those who would understand the Britain of a century ago, and a fine piece of literature as well." H. C. F. Bell

+ Commonweal 46:145 My 23 '47 550w

Reviewed by J. L. Hammond

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 1 '47 900w

Reviewed by Hector Bolitho

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
Mr 2 '47 1200w

"It is not often that a historian's first book shows the range of learning, psychological insight and balanced judgment that are abundantly in evidence in this contribution made by Professor Cecil Driver of Yale to the massive literature on the history of British social reform. . . . Professor Driver has a decided gift for vivid characterization which contributes much to the eminent readability of his book. . . . He shows skill, and evidently takes pleasure in narrating dramatic events. . . . And permeating the whole work is the spirit of historical-mindedness. The author is never guilty of interpreting events in the distorting after-light of present-mindedness which has vitiated so much historical writing. Appreciating the complexity of historical processes, he is aware of his duty as a historian to refrain from oversimplification. He does not yield to the temptation to make the complicated simple and the crooked straight in the interest of attractive exposition." R. L. Schuyler

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 23 '47 1200w

"This book is interesting and valuable for the light which it throws on the background of and methods used in the struggle for factory legislation." Paul Knapplund

+ Pol Sci Q 62:630 D '47 650w

Springf'd Union p4 Je 4 '47 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p425 Ag 23 '47
950w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:147 Je '47 280w

Reviewed by R. L. Schuyler

+ Yale R n s 36:562 spring '47 700w

DRURY, JOHN. Historic midwest houses. 246p il $5 Univ. of Minn.

977 U.S.—Historic houses, etc. Architecture, Domestic 47-12011

Photographs of exteriors and some interiors of 87 houses in twelve of the Midwestern states. There are accounts of the people who built the houses and lived in them, which make up a social history of the district. Many of the houses are now museums. Index.

Booklist 44:131 D 1 '47

"Although this volume can well serve as a guide book, it far transcends mere utility. It is good social history. . . 'Historical Midwest Houses' reflects wide and careful research on Drury's part. He has been reluctant to accept mere legend, and when he does he so labels it. But unlike some who are faithful to fact, Drury weaves the pattern of his story with skill and well-turned phrases." B. L. Pierce

+ Chicago Sun Book Week N 18 '47 400w

"Largely regional interest."

Kirkus 15:571 O 1 '47 170w

Wis Lib Bul 43:172 D '47

DUBKIN, LEONARD. Enchanted streets [the unlikely adventures of an urban nature lover; ill. by Edouard Sandoz]. 210p $2.75 Little

574 Natural history

47-30323

The author, a poet and philosopher, lost his job as a newspaper reporter because he was too interested watching squirrels in an attic, when he was supposed to be looking for a murder suspect. His main interest being in the birds and insects living in his city, Chicago, he decided to write about his observations of their habits. The illustrations are delicate colored sketches, by Edouard Sandoz.

Booklist 43:326 Je 15 '47

"A book about nature in the city; about, as its subtitle explains, 'the unlikely adventures of an urban nature lover.' As such, then, I found 'Enchanted Streets' as exciting, as full of action and suspense, as a novel by Hemingway or Faulkner." John Drury

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 18 '47 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '47

"This is completely unorthodox, personal nature observation, with humor, wry criticism, and generally wider appeal than it would seem. Very nice of its kind."

+ Kirkus 15:207 Ap 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 18 '47 500w

"It is both an interesting and an exasperating book. The observations of the naturalist are excellent; the apologetic soul-searchings of the writer are hard to take. This reporter didn't care a hoot whether the writer ever got another job, or whether he acquired social significance. In fact, the personal story he uses as a framework for his nature observations is somewhat painful at times. The observations have a freshness and sometimes a directness that can be most gratifying." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p36 My 18 '47 320w

"[The] book opens up a whole new world for the nature lover, and makes excellent reading for almost anyone." J. G. Floyd

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 19 '47 750w

"'Enchanted Streets' is in large part a simple record of daydreams. It also displays, in particular passages, a gift for descriptive writing." L. J. Halle

Sat R of Lit 30:22 Jl 26 '47 750w

Wis Lib Bul 43:94 Je '47

DUBLIN, LOUIS ISRAEL, and others. Money value of a man. rev ed 214p $6 Ronald

368.01 Insurance, Life. Cost and standard of living. Wages—U.S. Value 46-8416

"The authors use 57 statistical tables, eight graphs and five appendices to enable the reader to solve such problems as the present value of a person's gross or net future earnings, the chances of becoming a widower (or a widow) within a year after marriage, the cost of bringing up children to the age of 18 and other mathematical abstracts of the vicissitudes of fate. This work has been and will continue to be of great value to judges, lawyers, trustees and others whose work necessitates an approach to life somewhat short of sentimental. Substantial lowering of interest rates and the five year increase in life expectancy of the average American since 1930 point up the need for the present revision." (Columbia Law R) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1930.

"This book is recommended to every public health administrator as an essential book of reference." W. G. Smilie

+ Am J Pub Health 37:469 Ap '47 320w

"The sociologist will be interested in this work as a careful evaluation, in economic terms, of the importance of the breadwinner to his family and, indirectly, to society in general. The applicability of the evaluation can be judged only within the context of a particular problem, but the authors have provided ample detail for making this judgment." R. B. Reed

+ Am J Soc 53:152 S '47 600w

Am Soc R 12:381 Je '47 70w

"Mention should be made of the great improvement in basic data between the two editions. In making their revision the authors could draw on information from the National Health Survey, the Committee on the Costs of Medical Care, and the many studies of income and family budgets of the last fifteen years. The new estimates of the money value of a man to his dependents therefore have a more substantial basis than was possible before. They are still to be regarded as estimates, based on a considerable series of assumptions, but give every evidence of being the best estimates that can be made." E. P. Hutchinson

+ Ann Am Acad 251:201 My '47 600w

Columbia Law R 47:341 Mr '47 130w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1627 N 15 '46 70w

Management R 36:121 F '47 100w

"The book is carefully done, is authoritative, and should be studied by everyone who is faced with the necessity of placing a cash value on the lives of human beings." T. L. Smith

+ Social Forces 26:104 O '47 550w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:49 Mr '47 220w

DU BOIS, MRS THEODORA (MCCORMICK). Footsteps. 189p $2 Doubleday

47-4218

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Jl 6 '47 170w

"If not up to strictest standards, at least pleasant."

Kirkus 15:202 Ap 1 '47 80w

New Repub 117:31 Ag 18 '47 30w

"It is an absorbing tale with elements that have not appeared in the earlier McNeill stories." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Je 29 '47 160w

"Well written, and often quite alarming."

+ New Yorker 23:100 Je 14 '47 50w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 22 '47 100w

"Stimulating."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Je 28 '47 50w

DUBOIS, WILLIAM, 1906- Island in the square. 391p $3 Farrar, Straus

47-6677

New York's newspaper and theatrical life forms the background for this novel about a drama critic, working on a New York paper in the twenties. The death of a veteran newspaperman in Paris in 1945 starts Larry Dodd to reviewing his own life story.

Booklist 44:172 Ja 1 '48

"A mature, wise novel of small, human grooves."

+ Kirkus 15:347 Jl 1 '47 120w

DUBOIS, WILLIAM—Continued

"Handling of feminine characters seems particularly superficial. This novel, though amusing enough, is not of sufficient merit for most collections. Theatre and newspaper collections which are reasonably exhaustive will want." George Freedley

Library J 72:1269 S 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by Richard Mealand

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
N 9 '47 550w

"Here is a well-written first novel that will appeal to many different reading tastes. Some will like it because its expertly contrived story deals with real people in real situations. Others will applaud it for its nostalgic picture of the twittering Twenties, and for its solid recreation of the life of a newspaper man and the world of the theatre. Students of the American scene will relish its light-handed sociological probings, its oblique inquiries into marriage, divorce, parental responsibility, middle-aged juvenility, alcoholism, and the frustrations that sometimes accompany a system of free enterprise." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p4 O 26 '47 900w

DU BOIS, WILLIAM EDWARD BURGHARDT.

World and Africa; an inquiry into the part which Africa has played in world history. 276p il maps $3 Viking

960 Africa—History 47-30075

"An inquiry into the part which Africa has played in world history."—Subtitle. An indictment of the treatment of colonials, of white exploitation and oppression of colored peoples, in a short history of African civilization. A timely book, but admittedly based on the work of other writers rather than research. Endpaper map." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:182 F 15 '47

Reviewed by S. I. Hayakawa

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 F 16 '47
450w

"Though Dr. DuBois is a distinguished scholar and his book is based on extensive research, the result is not sober anthropology and history, but poetry and legend. It is full of corroded passion, of anger opening into illumination, of logic dwindling to nostalgia. It moves proudly, like a pageant. This is history as Herodotus understood it. It is also special pleading which will antagonize as much as it convinces." Robert Peel

Christian Science Monitor p14 F 10 '47
550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 J1 '47

Foreign Affairs 25:708 J1 '47 30w

Kirkus 14:571 N 1 '46 170w

"This book is exceedingly timely in that the United Nations' spotlight has been turned on questions of colonies, trusteeships and human rights in Africa. . . . At once brilliant, readable and brief. Highly recommended." L. D. Reddick

+ Library J 72:158 Ja 15 '47 40w

Reviewed by Alfred Werner

Nation 164:402 Ap 5 '47 400w

"Great books of history are of two sorts—those which make monumental contributions of historical fact and those that introduce new and illuminating historical perspectives. This culminating work of Dr. Du Bois's forty-odd years of writing in the field of Negro history merits high rank in the latter category. . . . Many readers will dispute some of its conclusions and be unconvinced by some of its suggested hypotheses, but none will be able to deny that the book successfully challenges the traditional views and conventional opinions about Africa, both academic and popular." Alain Locke

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
J1 6 '47 600w

"[Dr Du Bois] does not seek exaggeration of Africa's role, but he insists that the role must not be forgotten. And his insistence is firm. It is persuasive, eloquent, moving. Considering the magnitude of the provocation, it is well-tempered, even gentle. . . . He overlooks no fragment that might bolster his thesis. But the witnesses are reputable, their affidavits relevant and valid." Saul Carson

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 9 '47 950w

"The World and Africa' would have been more convincing and would have better served his cause had Dr. Du Bois been less bitter. Imbued with such hate, no one can deal adequately or rationally with his subject." Linton Wells

Sat R of Lit 30:10 Mr 29 '47 550w

Reviewed by Alain Locke

Survey G 36:452 Ag '47 500w

Wis Lib Bul 43:95 Je '47

DU BOIS, WILLIAM PENE. Twenty-one balloons; il. by [the author]. 179p $2.50 Viking 47-2533

In the fall of 1883 Professor William Waterman Sherman, weary of forty years of teaching arithmetic to small boys, set out on a balloon expedition. He left from San Francisco. Three weeks later he was rescued from the Atlantic ocean, where he was found clinging to the wreckage of twenty balloons. The story of his adventures, as reported to the Western American explorers' club, is the subject of this humorous story for older boys and girls.

"A charming book." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 179:128 Je '47 120w

Booklist 43:296 My 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 25 '47
180w

"The author gives a rare combination of science and imagination. . . . The book is distinguished in design, the pictures are beautiful and as convincing as the text." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 D 11 '47
270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

"Mr. Du Bois has never told a better story, nor have his illustrations ever before reached this high peak of art." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:214 My '47 90w

Kirkus 15:99 F 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by G. E. Cartmell

+ Library J 72:819 My 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
My 11 '47 490w

"Much of the story, we are informed, is based on scientific principles. We'll leave that to the boys for proof and enjoy the tale for its dead-pan humor which mingles extravaganzas with the smallest practicalities into a remarkable yarn, and for the beautifully drawn illustrations which are just as imaginative and funny as the text." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p41 My 4 '47 290w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:151 D 6 '47 50w

Reviewed by E. L. Marden

San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 16 '47
210w

"There is a twinkling humor underneath every word of the story that leaves the reader wondering. In format and design it is one of the most distinguished books of the war and post-war years. The drawings are in keeping with the period and show great strength and originality. An exciting book that will be claimed by every member of the family."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 Ap 19 '47 140w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:245 S '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:85 My '47

DUCKETT, ELEANOR SHIPLEY.

Anglo-Saxon saints and scholars. 488p $5 Macmillan 274.2 Aldhelm, Saint, bp. of Sherborne, Wilfrid, Saint, bp. of York, Bede (The Venerable), Boniface, Saint, bp. of Mainz, originally Winfried 47-1276

"Four lights that blazed a path from the shifting shadows of seventh century England in Europe's Middle Ages are eloquently described: St. Aldhelm of Malmesbury, the first Englishman to achieve classical learning; St.

Wilfrid of York, who upheld the Church against kings and Celtic schismatics; St. Bede of Jarrow, the Venerable, whose Ecclesiastical History of the English People is a masterpiece; St. Boniface of Devon who went to martyrdom to convert the Old Saxons and Frisians. Author, with degrees from Cambridge and London, is professor of classical languages and literature at Smith." (Library J) Bibliography. Indexes.

"Each [person] is so depicted in his environment that the complete book forms a coherent story of the important century, A.D. 650-750, when the Teutons were establishing the ecclesiastical-monastic pattern for the western culture of the next five centuries. Though historical surveys of the period are numerous, none so emphasizes how this culture resulted from the energetic activity of a small group of men. That the group numbered many times four the author has sufficiently taken into account by occasionally side-tracking to describe the concurrent activity of others. As a result, the book will make excellent reading for undergraduate students of history and literature. . . The short (four-page) epilogue is a blot on an otherwise strong book. . . Not only are the generalizations about Old English character too sweeping to be even suggestive, but the attempt to link the Latin works with the untreated vernacular poetry suggests superficiality. . . I hope that in the next printing these four pages may be deleted." C. W. Jones

+ Am Hist R 52:715 J1 '47 950w

"The book is a series of biographies linked together into a wider biography of the times, made convincing by a skillful use of quotation from contemporary records, and made vivid by sympathetic insight. . . More books like this are needed to carry the story along the road that these men paved straight and shining, that should lead the peoples of Europe, old and new, from the gateway of the sixth century to that house of many windows that we call the Middle Ages." What the readers of this book will find is a strikingly modern note that shows that the road did not end in the Middle Ages; nor will it end, while the forces are alive that make saints and scholars." Margaret Williams

+ Cath World 165:564 S '47 750w

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 F 23 '47 360w

Christian Century 64:769 Je 18 '47 130w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore

Churchman 161:19 My 1 '47 240w

"Of special interest in the accounts of Aldhelm and the other saints in this volume is the author's pertinent use of legend. There will be page on page of scholarly narrative painstakingly annotated; then, suddenly, the whole will be pointed up with legends. These are recounted with quiet humor. Many a hagiographer could here learn the value of legends properly placed, for in writing of the saints, a nice balance must be struck." D. H. Moseley

+ Commonweal 45:500 F 28 '47 1450w

Current Hist 12:372 Ap '47 140w

"This is a scholarly study. . . It deserves attention from all students of our spiritual past."

+ Kirkus 14:499 O 1 '46 90w

"Well worth penetrating the forest of details to glimpse inspiring vistas of human effort and courage she paints. For larger libraries and mature readers of all creeds." R. J. Hurley

+ Library J 71:1712 D 1 '46 140w

+ Manchester Guardian p3 J1 8 '47 210w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 Ap 27 '47 600w

Reviewed by J. W. Chase

N Y Times p30 Mr 30 '47 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 4 '47 210w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:164 Je '47 240w

"This is an unpretentiously informative book, intelligently wrought and animated by the author's affection for her subject. Sometimes the storyteller's devices call attention to the lack of imaginative substance to which a faithful biographer is often condemned, but on the whole the account is artfully restrained and very readable. Those who are stirred to further inquiry will be grateful for the unobtrusive but impressively copious documentation." J. C. Pope

+ Yale R n s 36:758 summer '47 1150w

DUDLEY, JOHN W. Examination of industrial measurements. 113p $2 McGraw

311.2 Mathematical statistics. Industrial statistics, Factory management 47-1464

"Objective of book is to show the engineer the need for effective methods in examining the variations occurring in all types of industrial measurements with simple presentations of fundamentals of the normal probability curve and the quality control chart and adaptation of control chart limits and quartile analysis to the study of fitted curves." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"Unfortunately, the book is marred in many places by loose statements that are apt to lead to trouble. There is hardly a page without some statement that is not clear, is half true, or is incorrect. No topic is discussed in sufficient detail to serve as a safe guide to practice. The examples, most of which are presented in a way that suggests fictitious origin, do not show the dollar and cents importance of the application of statistics. It is doubtful that this book will be of much service to chemists." P. S. Olmstead

Chem & Eng N 25:1695 Je 9 '47 250w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:10 Ja '47

Reviewed by J. M. Juran

N Y Times p30 Ja 11 '48 70w

DUFFIN, DANIEL JOHN. Generators and motors and their applications. 210p il $4 McGraw

621.313 Electric generators. Electric motors 47-30339

"The first of three 'Working Manuals for Motor Repairmen' is intended to introduce the reader to the great variety of types and makes of electrical motors and generators with which he will want to become familiar before proceeding to the more specialized material of the two following manuals, which deal with d-c and a-c armature winding, respectively. . . This introductory manual should also be of use to those who are not primarily interested in armature winding as a career, but who wish to know more about the operation, maintenance, selection, characteristics, and applications of motors and generators—plant owners, dealers in electrical equipment, salesmen, maintenance men, [etc]." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 43:342 J1 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:226 F 1 '47 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:30 Ap '47

DUFRESNE, FRANK. Alaska's animals and fishes; il. by Bob Hines. (Countryman press bk) 297p $5; ltd autog ed $15 Barnes, A.S.

599 Zoology—Alaska. Fishes—Alaska 47-30211

Detailed descriptions of Alaskan animal life, their habits and habitats, with stories about them, and many illustrations. The author has lived in Alaska since 1920 and has worked for twenty-two years with the Alaska game commission. No index.

Booklist 43:129 Ja 1 '47

"The matter-of-fact title of this book might lead the reader to expect a dry and conventional presentation of facts about the animals and fishes of Alaska. The surprise is pleasant. In a sprightly style, with freshness and enthusiasm, the author writes out of first-hand experience with virtually every creature mentioned in this volume. . . Without any of the stodginess of the textbook the volume is a valuable text. It is also an adventure in reading." E. W. Teale

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p38

My 11 '47 650w

DUFRESNE, FRANK—Continued

"All are described not merely authoritatively but with vividness and sympathy. As for the sport-fish, their variety, uniquely great dimensions, and abundance are fully set forth. This important—and, in its field, unique—contribution to the literature of Alaska is greatly enhanced by the excellent illustrations—in both color and line—by Bob Hines." Ernest Gruening
+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 My 10 '47 280w

"Although this lively and informal account of the animals and fishes of Alaska is addressed primarily to general readers and sportsmen, the naturalist also will find it valuable."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:204 Je '47 320w

DUKELSKY, VLADIMIR (VERNON DUKE, pseud). See Nash, O. Musical zoo; tunes by Vernon Duke.

DULLES, ALLEN WELSH. Germany's underground. 207p $3 Macmillan

943.086 World war, 1939-1945—Germany. Hitler, Adolf 47-2566

A former head of the Swiss branch of OSS, who is a younger brother of John Foster Dulles, relates the story of the German underground, which culminated in the attempted assassination of Hitler in July, 1944. The book shows the part played by German generals, politicians, and people from church and university circles. Index.

Reviewed by O. J. Hale
Ann Am Acad 253:214 S '47 650w
Booklist 43:287 My 15 '47

Reviewed by Erik v. Kuehnelt-Leddihn
Cath World 165:469 Ag '47 210w

"The chief merit of 'Germany's Underground' lies in the author's unexcelled talent for fair-minded reporting. Strangely, however, while Dulles has some difficulty in proving that the German underground was effective, the facts that he marshals seem to indicate strongly that the movement was really inconsequential."
David Karno

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p5 My 11 '47 320w

Reviewed by Garland Downum
Christian Century 64:950 Ag 6 '47 320w

Reviewed by Charles Gratke
Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 5 '47 270w

Reviewed by John Broderick
Commonweal 46:192 Je 6 '47 1300w
Foreign Affairs 25:701 Jl '47 110w

"Dulles has the facts; many of them are new. The book is important for the record, but lacks that spark that might make it imperative reading."

+ — Kirkus 15:146 Mr 1 '47 260w

"Unemotional style of writing helps to accent dramatic quality of the events from the macabre proceedings of the People's Court to the repeatedly frustrated attempts to eliminate Hitler, and makes for more fascinating reading than many a thriller. Shows up weaknesses of German personalities, as well as Allied mistakes. Recommended." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 72:526 Ap 1 '47 130w

Reviewed by R. T. Clark
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 26 '47 600w

"Mr. Dulles tells some thrilling stories in 'Germany's Underground'—tales of daring conspiracies, of plots for assassination, and the weird accidents which brought them to naught. It is a book of facts, but of facts far more strange and exciting than the fictions invented by writers of mystery stories. It is to be hoped that Mr. Dulles's book will be widely read—though one can hardly expect that it will be recommended by those experts whose mistakes it reveals." Joseph Bornstein

+ Nation 164:575 My 17 '47 750w

Reviewed by W. H. Hale
New Repub 116:33 My 5 '47 1100w

"In 'Germany's Underground' Allen W. Dulles has written a rich, exciting and authoritative book which comes as near to supplying serious answers to these questions as we are likely to get at this time." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1
Ap 27 '47 1400w

Reviewed by Shepard Stone

N Y Times p3 My 11 '47 1000w

"The details are fascinating, but the author's theory that the conspiracy indicated a moral resistance to Nazism inside the Reich is not very convincing. After all, as Mr. Dulles' own account shows, the scheme didn't really gather momentum until its leaders became convinced that Germany was going to lose the war."

New Yorker 23:98 Ap 26 '47 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 10 '47 90w

"Into fewer than two hundred pages Allen Welsh Dulles has packed a remarkable amount of detail on this difficult subject—so much, in fact, that only the book's concise and urbane style saves the reader from being suffocated by its factual density. Even more important than this readability, perhaps, is the running analysis which controls the narrative throughout, neither belittling the physical courage of many of Hitler's German enemies nor becoming infatuated with their program. To our broadening understanding of World War II, 'Germany's Underground' is a contribution of the first magnitude." F. L. Ford

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 My 10 '47 900w

School & Society 65:384 My 24 '47 20w

Reviewed by Helmut Kuhn

Social Forces 26:108 O '47 440w

"Possibly the only weakness of Mr. Dulles' book is his overestimation of the opposition potential of the conservative wing of German society. The book is impartial in its presentation and praise of the assistance given the military plotters by the Left, but the real history of the classic German underground, the underground that formed on the first day of Hitler's usurpation of power, still awaits its historian." Paul Hagen

+ Survey G 36:552 O '47 380w

Time 49:110 Ap 21 '47 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p399 Ag 9 '47 210w

"As more information becomes available, more extended interpretations will be made, but the present volume stands as a distinguished labor in the cause of understanding the misfortunes of Germany under National Socialism."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:274 S '47 240w

"Those who expect a suspense story of hair-raising escapes and last-minute failures may be disappointed in this sober, impersonal report, presenting the evidence of conspiracy in the highest circles of the Third Reich. Yet it is just this objectivity and balanced judgment, this calm restraint and economy of style, that make the book a prize example of responsible reporting of unwritten history." Sigmund Neumann

+ Yale R n s 36:751 summer '47 440w

DUMOND, DWIGHT LOWELL. America in our time, 1896-1946. 715p $4.75 Holt

973.91 U.S.—History—20th century 47-3684

"Originally published in 1936 [Book Review Digest 1937] as a textbook under the title Roosevelt to Roosevelt this new and revised trade edition carries the story of 20th century America through 1946. Author, Professor of History at University of Michigan, presents a review of the years during which the United States developed into a great world power. These years witnessed tremendous political, economic and social changes and he has attempted to sort out the most important." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:72 O 15 '47

"Primarily useful as a text, this volume can be read with profit by the interested layman. There remains the need for stimulating interpretative studies of this vital historical period." J. H. Berthel

Library J 72:1102 Ag '47 110w

"Professor Dumond has done an admirable job of selecting and condensing his material without making his work just a bone yard of facts, and he skips only on the cultural history of the country during the period. It might have been better to have left that part out entirely."

+ New Yorker 23:79 Ag 23 '47 80w

School & Society 66:175 Ag 30 '47 40w

DUNBAR, HELEN FLANDERS. Mind and body: psychosomatic medicine. 263p $3.50 Random house

616.8 Medicine, Psychosomatic Med47-2434

Study of the theory that physical ills may be caused by emotional maladjustments. The author is a doctor and trained psychiatrist, who has been director of psychosomatic research at the Presbyterian hospital since 1932. The work contains case histories as part of the development of the theme. Index.

Booklist 44:101 N 15 '47

"One of the most intelligently presented popularizations of medical theory, this is a discussion of the new science which considers mind and body co-equally, which is based on the understanding that pain may have a mental source as well as physical."

+ Kirkus 15:415 Ag 1 '47 170w

"This book can be read with profit by laymen interested in the prevention as well as the cure of illness through better understanding of the relationship between body and mind." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 72:1188 S 1 '47 110w

"It is eminently fitting that Dr. Dunbar should now write a book for the layman, on Mind and Body. As would be expected, it is a fascinating story. . . Dr. Dunbar brings to this book not only her wide knowledge of emotion-caused and emotion-conditioned diseases, but a fund of case histories and a facility for presenting the subject simply." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p38 O 26 '47 950w

"Particularly worth while are chapters analyzing the psychogenesis of allergies, heart trouble and stomach disorders." A. Foff

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 16 '47 100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:150 N '47

DUNBAR, OLIVIA HOWARD. A house in Chicago. 288p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Moody, Harriet Converse (Tilden) 47-31169

Biography of the widow of the poet, William Vaughn Moody. Surviving her husband for many years, Mrs. Moody became the friend, hostess and helper of poets and writers, numbering among the frequent guests in her Chicago home Vachel Lindsay, Robert Frost, Tagore, Swinerton and many others. Index.

Booklist 44:49 O 1 '47

Reviewed by John Drury

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 S 14 '47 450w

"Olivia Howard Dunbar has written with deep understanding a memorable chronicle of a memorable woman, and has made a significant addition to the history of American literature during the first quarter of the present century." E. W. Bates

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 O 9 '47 750w

"Mrs. Dunbar's information is exact and close: she apparently has her material at first-hand. Sometimes her enthusiasm for her subject insists too much, and she writes with an affection which is a matter of personal rather than public interest. But the facts are here; and they are valuable both for what they tell of regional literary history and for the chapters they supply in the larger and more important histories still to be written." Henry Rago

+ Commonweal 47:380 Ja 23 '48 230w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 S 21 '47 1100w

"Miss Dunbar's (Mrs. Ridgely Torrence) chronicle of poetry and provender—two topics on which she is about equally lyrical—is ostensibly a biographical memoir of Mrs. Moody herself. Its greater justification, however, is its contribution to a chapter of American literary history made chiefly by reproducing in extenso many letters written to Mrs. Moody by poets and other authors—with the focus inevitably shifted from her to them. . . In a variety of ways the book could have benefited by firm editorial guidance that would have headed off a certain excess of emotions over facts, all that was necessary was a little insistence on the good journalist's chronic question, What actually happened?" Wilson Follett

+ N Y Times p24 S 21 '47 1100w

"A full and varied life is told with great charm and appreciation." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 S 27 '47 600w

DUNCAN, KENNETH. Funk & Wagnalls' standard primer for home builders and home buyers. 124p $3.50 Funk

643 Dwellings, Building 47-31196

"Practical authoritative book for the builder and buyer. Site selection, planning, financing, construction, landscaping, and dealings with the builder. Chapter on modernizing of old houses and appraisal of houses. Illustrated." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:146 D 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1615 N 15 '47 30w

"The style of this book is easy to read, and many of the illustrations should be a delight to anyone who is beginning to think or dream about a new house. . . The faults of the book lie not in what has been included, but in what has been left out. Unfortunately, the authors have omitted adequate discussions of such important details as electrical wiring and outlets, heating systems, closets, and roofing materials. In other cases, for example in the discussion of footings, they have told only part of the story. A short bibliography of further reading would have made up, partly for those lacks, but this, too, is absent."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:45 Jl '47

DUNCAN, ROBERT FULLER, and BLANCHARD, FESSENDEN SEAVER. Cruising guide to the New England coast; including Long Island sound and the Saint John river, New Brunswick. 3d ed 299p il maps $6 Dodd

656 Pilot guides 47-447

"This book is the outgrowth of a memorandum prepared by Robert F. Duncan in July, 1934, entitled 'Notes on Cruising Down East,' which was intended to be helpful to anyone taking a small sailboat from Woods Hole to Penobscot Bay. It was written for use on boats between 25 and 40 feet over-all, and not exceeding 6 feet draft. . . On May 1, 1936, the material was published in a mimeographed book of 169 pages. . . A second enlarged and revised edition was issued in the spring of 1938. The current volume is the third edition. It takes into account the many changes brought about by the September hurricanes of 1938 and 1944, by the war, and, last but not least, by the activity of many communities in improving their harbors. The purpose of the present document is to put into convenient form information of value to the captain of a small sailboat or motorboat cruising the New England coast." (Pref) Index.

"The book will be useful to anyone entering for the first time any of the some three hundred harbors described; and as there can be no one who has been in all of them, this is a good book to have on board along our good New England coast. . . It should not be used, as the authors specify, in place of chart or Coast Pilot, but, as an adjunct to these it should be helpful, and for many of us, during the tiresome days ashore, it is good reading." Peter Oliver

+ New Eng Q 20:278 Je '47 700w

DUNCAN, R. F.—Continued

"One of the most valuable volumes ever published for the East Coast yachtsman. It is safe to say that for those who sail for pleasure it is the best adjunct to the chart and Pilot available." Theodore Sweedy
+ N Y Times p23 Ap 6 '47 270w

DUNCAN, THOMAS WILLIAM. Gus the Great.
703p $3.50 Lippincott

47-30864

"Long, sprawling, full-blooded and intensely American chronicle of life and times of Augustus H. Burgoyne, newspaperman, elephant-fancier, and promoter, and of the many people on whom his career impinged, or exploded." Library J

"There is much vitality, much humanness, in this casual, slow-paced book. One character leads to another and the asides draw you off from the main theme for many pages at a time. But the driving force, the self-confidence, and the magnetism which are so strong in Gus's character keep leading your curiosity on despite the disproportionate length and the undistinctive style." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 180:120 O '47 360w

Booklist 44:50 O 1 '47

"Deeply hidden beneath all the fancy-shmancy writing, complex plotting, trite situations and hackneyed prose is a lot of action and drama and a story that could be far more interesting and entertaining than it is. A hard-working editor and a few able copy readers, wielding some nicely sharpened blue pencils, could have done Duncan a great service and hacked out a novel which would possibly have been as good as Marquand insists it is now." Herman Kogan
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p1 S 21 '47 1500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

"Crammed with character studies which, even when stereotyped, are full of vitality. Gus's mother is an especially appealing lost lady. September selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club, and one of its happier choices. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 72:1269 S 15 '47 110w

"In spite of obvious weaknesses, writing that is uneven, construction that is rambling, secondary characterization that sometimes borders on caricature or melodrama, the book, like Gus himself, leaves an impression of color, warmth and power." Rose Feld
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 S 21 '47 800w

"It is when people like the old-time newspaper man are around that we get the most incisive comments on the passing scene. Otherwise, we are sorry to say, the commentary is apt, more often than not, to be on the depressingly weary level of jocose remarks to the effect that the horseless carriage is just a passing fad, or warmed-over Steffens and Veblen, or suggestions that the proposal to put electric power in the street car system is dangerous, since those motors are liable to explode." Charles Poore
+ N Y Times p5 S 21 '47 800w

"The novel has been called Elizabethan by its publishers, but it could be quite as accurately described as a remote echo of James Joyce's 'Ulysses' written in the literary tradition of the Saturday Evening Post. Mr. Duncan is said to have required ten years to put down everything he wanted to say about the appetites, dreams, and financial accomplishments of his chief character and the people most intimately associated with him. It is unlikely that you will be able to match his endurance."

New Yorker 23:112 S 27 '47 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 18 '47 900w

"'Gus the Great' is an enormous canvas of people and places painted in flamboyant color. But the writing is alive with action, and humor, and human understanding. And though the story is strung upon a circus theme, its glittering facets reflect a hundred aspects of Midwestern growth and growing pains. Places and people are brought to life with almost boundless imagination, and within the pattern of Gus's career dozens of other people play out their lives. There hasn't been such a book on the bookstalls in a dog's age. If you open it, you will see why." W. D. Edmonds

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 S 20 '47 1800w

Spring'd Republican p12B O 19 '47 240w

"As a literary performance, Gus the Great is frequently slick, gassy and sentimental. But it has a kind of animal vigor about it and it is never dull. Its picture of mountebank morality is in the tradition of The Great Gatsby and Pal Joey, though Duncan is neither an F. Scott Fitzgerald nor a John O'Hara." + Time 50:104 S 22 '47 800w

Wis Lib Bul 43:175 D '47

DUNHAM, BARROWS. Man against myth. 320p
$2.50 Little

133.7 Errors, Popular

47-2131

"A logician's tilt against some of the most respectable and widely circulated beliefs of our time, among them such notions as that 'you can't change human nature,' that 'there are two sides to every question,' and that 'all problems are merely verbal.' In disposing of the last, the author presents a quiet but deadly analysis of semanticists and their aloof philosophy." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 43:267 My 1 '47

Reviewed by Edith Fowke

Canadian Forum 27:95 J1 '47 140w

Reviewed by H. J. Owens

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ap 13 '47 280w

"To the extent that it fulfills its aim of examining popular fallacies logically, this is a worthwhile book. Unfortunately, Dr. Dunham slides into apologetics for Marxist doctrine, and thus negates whatever of value there is in the ostensible aim of the book. This is not an impartial critical examination of myths, but a justification of one set of myths by a reductio ad absurdum of others. The book might serve well the purposes of teachers of courses in critical thinking; having followed Dunham's criticisms, students would be able to turn their guns against Dunham's implied views, and thus to get double value at one price." J. L. B.

+ J Philos 44:445 J1 31 '47 180w

"Invigorating, striking in examples, this has more appeal than the usual book in its field. For students of semantics as well as the intelligent layman."

+ Kirkus 15:96 F 1 '47 90w

"I'd say this was about three years too late for its market—the market being pro-war and pro-Russia. Philosophy professor Dunham is a liberal of the first water, and here he quotes obscure articles to prove that everyone who is not a liberal is a fascist. . . . Even when you agree with him, his manner antagonizes, as under the claim of logic and clarity he slants every argument into parlor pink channels. Great sport." E. L. Lewis

Library J 72:527 Ap 1 '47 90w

"He is witty and erudite in happy combination, but one suspects that some of the targets of his scorn could have an equal amount of fun examining his presuppositions."

+ New Repub 116:33 Ap 21 '47 190w

"'Man Against Myth' appears with the enthusiastic indorsement of John Dewey, Albert Einstein, J. B. S. Haldane, J. D. Bernal, Dorothy Parker, Donald Ogden Stewart. I am proud to subscribe my name below this notable sextet. Barrows Dunham had fun writing this book, and he generously shares his fun with his readers; I found these pages far more entertaining than 'The Egg and I.' But his buoyant spirit is not levity. He evinces in the highest degree the quality I praise most highly—intellectual courage." Albert Guerard
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 My 18 '47 1300w

"Mr. Dunham writes in a curious combination of charm, gaiety and oracular dogmatism. His book abounds in paradoxes and in epigrams not always as sound as they seem. The book is clearly always on the side of the common man and against the 'exploiting' classes. And he always, almost too simply I should say, sees and insists that social myths and certain philosophical myths play into the hands of reactionaries. Are there no myths that play into the hands of liberals and progressives and the extreme Left?" Irwin Edman

+ — N Y Times p3 Ap 13 '47 1100w

"Dr. Dunham, a fairly left-wing professor of philosophy, writes softly but litters the field of battle with dead and dying slogans."

New Yorker 23:113 Ap 19 '47 170w

"That such a book as this is important goes without saying. That Professor Dunham's book is extra-important is due not merely to the nature of its contents but to the lucidity of his exploration into the jungle of the common myth and his stout resistance of all temptation to be pompous. It may sound extreme to say it, but I believe this book can and may burst upon thousands of people with all the effect of a modern light on the road to Damascus." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 18 '47 900w

Wis Lib Bul 43:93 Je '47

DUNHAM, KATHERINE. Journey to Accompong; drawings by Ted Cook. 162p $2.50 Holt 917.292 Maroons. Jamaica 47-30039

"A day-by-day account of a sojourn in a Maroon village in the mountains of Jamaica, where Miss Dunham, the dancer and anthropologist, went some years ago to study native dances. The Maroons, a remnant people descended from African slaves who rebelled against the Spaniards in the sixteenth century, are reputed to be taciturn and unfriendly with white visitors, and they accepted Miss Dunham as perhaps they would not have accepted a white person." New Yorker

"Miss Dunham's account of the Maroons makes no pretension of being a full study of Jamaican life. There is occasional reference to Kingston, but the real influence of the capital on the hinterland, the rapid drift of rural dwellers to the towns, and the important economic, political, and social changes of recent years are not indicated. One cannot do everything in a month, and within the limits of this study the accomplishment is excellent." G. E. Simpson

Ann Am Acad 252:164 Jl '47 380w

Booklist 43:167 F 1 '47

"Here is a piece of careful research presented with an art as graceful and alluring as the interpretation of this same Katherine Dunham through the dance." E. R. Embree

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p16 F 9 '47 320w

"To read Katherine Dunham's Journey to Accompong is like being there. Miss Dunham's easy style and casual presentation of her theme in day-by-day notes, together with the mobile brush and ink strokes of Ted Cook's sepia illustrations, create the atmosphere. A tourist's-eye memory-view of the West Indies on the part of the reader may help a little, but only superficially." Margaret Lloyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 18 '47 360w

"In an informative way, one gets in this book a standard ethnographic job. . . The arrangement has perhaps too visible a skeleton, but it succeeds in adding solidity to the pleasant, girlish subjectivity of the connecting passages. . . The book has its faults. There is a sometimes irritatingly chatty note. The lady will tell you in an aside that six shillings equal a dollar and a half, but will make you wait fifty pages for the explanation of some bit of Maroon argot which she uses continually. The reader is rather disappointed to have so few glimpses of the African dancing he accompanies her to find." Kenyon Brooks

+ — Commonweal 45:477 F 21 '47 390w

"Excellent reading; the people all come vividly alive. Unusual format: paper cream, printing brown, illustrations brown washes, very pleasing to the eye. . . Recommended for senior high school age and adults." G. E. Cartmell

+ Library J 72:231 F 1 '47 70w

"Dancer-anthropologist Miss Dunham has made the most of her material in the 162 pages of this book. In a more comprehensive work, the material in 'Journey to Accompong' would have been compressed into a single chapter. But the keen observation of the author, professional and otherwise, plus her frequent humorous reflections, sustain the thin material to the end. After all, thirty days in a locality is not much in research and hardly affords time enough for the field-worker to scratch the surface. Therefore it is to the tremendous credit of the author that she has achieved such an entertaining book." Z. N. Hurston

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 12 '47 600w

"[Miss Dunham's] account of a month in Accompong is a vibrant and vivid one. With no straining after effect, she has drawn word-pictures of people and places that are filled with beauty, detail and emotion. 'Journey to Accompong' is, however, not only a travel book of unusual delight and simplicity but a volume containing original and fascinating material on the customs of a little-known people." Henrietta Hardman

+ N Y Times p43 Mr 2 '47 500w

"Miss Dunham writes of these people simply and effectively, and her book is enhanced by deft and spirited drawings by Ted Cook."

+ New Yorker 22:66 D 28 '46 100w

Springf'd Union p6 S 3 '47 190w

"A winning personal reminiscence and a sound contribution to anthropology."

+ Theatre Arts 31:75 My '47 160w

Wis Lib Bul 43:36 F '47

DUNLAP, KNIGHT. Personal adjustment. 446p $4 McGraw

150.13 Psychology, Applied. Mental hygiene 46-7062

"Based on lectures given to college students, this is a textbook, useful also to the general reader, on understanding the processes of learning, on habits, mental disorders, sexual and marital adjustments, and the principles of psychoanalysis. The material is derived from long experience with maladjusted persons." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:95 D 1 '46

Reviewed by H. H. Bliss

Chem Eng 54:281 F '47 200w

DUNLAP, ORRIN ELMER. Future of television. rev ed 194p il $3 Harper

621.388 Television 47-3849

Revised edition of a study of the television industry, which first appeared in 1942 (Book Review Digest 1942). The present book brings the reader up to date on recent developments. Appendix gives list of historic steps in television and list of television stations.

Booklist 43:361 Jl 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Jl 27 '47 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 17 '47 80w

DUNLOP, AGNES MARY ROBERTSON (ELISABETH KYLE, pseud). Holly hotel; a mystery; il. by Nora S. Unwin. 278p $2 Houghton

47-3620

Mystery story for boys and girls. The scene is laid in Scotland.

Booklist 44:20 S 1 '47

"Well written, full of humor and human nature, with an excellent plot and a fine outdoor background of the Scottish country which the author knows so well, this is a book to be recommended." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 S 11 '47 230w

DUNLOP, A. M. R.—Continued

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:263 Jl '47 100w

"The characters, both children and grown-ups, are thoroughly alive and the background of Scotland is very real. The mystery involving a valuable manuscript, must be taken with a good measure of the humor it invites." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 23:256 Jl '47 90w

"Plenty of action, good atmosphere, some picturesque characters, and nice details of village life, with an exciting side excursion to Glasgow."

+ Kirkus 15:219 Ap 15 '47 80w

"Enough action but not as swift-moving as an American story with the same ingredients. Black-and-white illustrations of the Scottish countryside by Nora S. Unwin are delightful. Recommended for libraries in which books by Kitty Barne and Enid Blyton are well liked." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 72:962 Je 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
Je 29 '47 400w

"The people concerned, young and old alike, are warmly alive, and Whistlestop, Doone, and Glasgow are presented with love and humor. Nora Unwin's drawings are as good as the book. Highly recommended for children from 8 to 12." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p32 Je 8 '47 150w

"This story is rather exciting. In spite of the extraordinary coincidences that help along the plot, it is entirely believable. . . . It is a good plot, and the characters are varied and well drawn. There is a convincing background of the Scotch countryside and the Glasgow slums. Nora Unwin's drawings aid greatly."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 Je 14 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:121 Jl '47

DUNLOP, AGNES MARY ROBERTSON
(ELISABETH KYLE, pseud). Mally Lee.
256p $2 Doubleday

47-5080

Detective story.

Booklist 44:33 S 15 '47

"Soundly interesting if very deliberate. . . . Miss Kyle is not above stiff exposition or whimsical changes in character; the richness of her story lies in its setting and in the portrait of Mally whose dilemma tests her compassion as well as her determination." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 17 '47
110w

"Satisfying, rather than surprising."

Kirkus 15:266 My 15 '47 90w

"Rising to a strong climax, the story is told with verve; it has character of persons and place." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 2 '47 150w

New Repub 117:33 O 20 '47 50w

"A bit far-fetched, the story is notable for its depiction of the Scotch scene and dialect." Jack Glick

N Y Times p15 Ag 3 '47 180w

"Stock characters and obvious plot written with plodding competence." Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 10 '47
50w

"Thoroughly enjoyable."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ag 9 '47 40w

"A readable and complicated story." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 178:506 My 2 '47 170w

"Miss Kyle has kept various interests in play in this light, readable book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p265 My 31 '47
300w

DUNN, ESTHER CLOUDMAN, ed. See Trollope, A. Trollope reader

DUNNE, BERT VINCENT. Play ball! introd.
by Joe Cronin. 274p il $2.50 Doubleday

796.357 Baseball 47-12048

"In 1945 the author published privately a book on baseball techniques for boys eleven to fourteen under the title Play Ball, Son. This led to his filming the teaching picture by the same name. 'This book is an advanced and more technical treatise on baseball . . . and is written for players between thirteen and seventeen years of age.' Chapters by Joe Cronin, Ted Williams, Dave Ferris, and Ty Cobb are included. . . . Models demonstrating techniques in the illustrations are boys who play on the author's American legion team." Booklist

Booklist 44:173 Ja 1 '48

Kirkus 15:568 O 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 73:41 Ja 1 '48 30w

"With special chapters on pitching by Dave Ferris, batting by Williams, base running by Cobb, it belongs on a shelf with Jack Combs' 'Baseball' as required reading for the high school or college coach who would improve his club's play." J. K. H.

+ N Y Times p22 D 14 '47 150w

DUPLAIX, GEORGES. Big brown bear; il. by Gustaf Tenggren. [52]p $1 Simon & Schuster 47-12467

Picture story book for pre-school children. It describes the adventures of a blundering big brown bear who robbed a bee's nest of honey and had to pay a heavy penalty."

Kirkus 15:577 O 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R
p30 N 16 '47 140w

"The author implies that temptation hardly pays. And since young minds are constantly pondering this problem, they are likely to enjoy this smoothly written story with jolly and mobile illustrations by Gustaf Tenggren. Light and entertaining for the pre-school age group." Lillian Gerard

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 11 '48 140w

+ Springf'd Republican p8B D 21 '47 120w

DUPUY, RICHARD ERNEST, and BREGSTEIN, HERBERT L., comps. Soldiers' album; additional text by Merrill Panitt. 173p il maps $5 Houghton

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Pictorial works 47-1669

A pictorial record of the war in Europe from D-day to the liberation.

"A comprehensive, if somewhat melancholy souvenir."

Commonweal 45:500 F 28 '47 30w

Foreign Affairs 25:698 Jl '47 30w

"Its editors, Colonel R. Ernest Dupuy and Lieutenant Colonel Herbert Bregstein, were thoroughly qualified for the task they undertook. Dupuy was in charge of SHAEF's newsroom, its most important single public-relations function; Bregstein was pictorial chief of SHAEF public relations. The result of their effort is an excellent selection of war photographs, taken from the files of G-2, Signal Corps, war correspondents and anyone with a camera." Charles Miller

+ New Repub 116:36 Mr 3 '47 470w

"As the first comprehensive pictorial history of the war in Europe, 'Soldiers' Album' is three things. It is first of all an important addition to the shelf of World War II history; second, as its title implies, it is an album of pictures that might well be treasured in years to come by the men who were there and saw the things which the book portrays, and, third, it is an unintended but fitting tribute to the handful of soldiers and sailors who, going into battle with camera primarily and with gun 'just in case,' recorded the war for press and posterity. . . . Messrs. Bregstein and Dupuy combed 100,000 pictures to find the 300 that would best tell the story. The photographs they choose do so dramatically, accurately and, considering the limitations, with remarkable thoroughness." R. L. Moore

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7
Mr 9 '47 1000w

"It's a good job well done, in spite of its increasingly antique attitude that we should spend more anger on our enemies than on our Allies." Charles Poore

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 2 '47 700w

Reviewed by Paul North
Social Studies 38:278 O '47 390w

DURAND-COUPPEL, DE SAINT-FRONT, MARIN MARIE PAUL. Wind aloft, wind slow; tr. from the French; containing narratives of his two singlehanded Atlantic crossings, under sail in the Winnibelle, and under power in the Arielle. 322p il $3.50 Scribner 910.4 Yachts and yachting. Voyages and travels. Seafaring life 47-1721

"The author, a French marine painter, has twice crossed the Atlantic all by himself—once in a small sloop and once in a motorboat. This is the story of those two hair-raising trips, plus a detailed account of how the author chose his boats and how he prepared for the voyages." New Yorker

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 F 23 '47
60w

Kirkus 15:20 Ja 1 '47 100w

"For men with a knowledge of boats and the sea. Recommended." H. A. Wooster
+ Library J 72:159 Ja 15 '47 100w

"The account of both voyages makes fascinating reading. For the professional there are historical chapters on previous singlehanded crossings, details on the two vessels and doses of an amusing nautical log. For the less restricted reader, Marin-Marie tells of disputes with other sailormen, encounters with skeptical port officials, what solitude means in the middle of an ocean, difficulties of supplies, daily routine, together with plenty of semi-philosophical ramblings which are ingenious if not profound. So entertaining and light-hearted a book that at times one is startled upon suddenly realizing that here is a story of desperate hazard and high courage."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 F
2 '47 250w

"His is no dull tale of sailing technicalities written only for the sailing man. Marin-Marie has a sense of humor that extends from practical jokes to a deriding appreciation of his own fits of temper and mental high jinks when the pressure of loneliness, high seas and difficulties becomes too great." Theodore Sweedy
+ N Y Times p23 Ap 6 '47 330w

"His prose has personality, but it appears to have been mangled in translation."
+ New Yorker 22:95 Ja 18 '47 100w

"M. Marin-Marie has an interesting narrative for all small-boat fanciers. The book is well illustrated with excellent photographs of both boats, as well as by some of the author's marine paintings." S. N.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 9 '47
170w

"To be alone at sea . . . seems a sort of felicity to be recommended with care . . . but the liveliness of [Marin-Marie's] book might persuade the indiscreet that it is anybody's cup of tea. . . . Colloquial and casual as his narrative is, deceptively vivid and moving, it is evident that Marin-Marie has been a patient and industrious student of all the details of a ship. . . . But he can tell a story as easily as he handles a tricky boat. He can relate happenings ashore at Martinique, and goings-on in New York, with the grace and humour of night west of Finisterre, dark as the prospect of eternity, blowing hard, no sights, and the noise of rising waters like the sound of doom."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p537 N 10 '45
650w

DURANT, JOHN. Story of baseball in words and pictures. 282p $3.75 Hastings house

796.357 Baseball 47-11366

An illustrated history of baseball, consisting of 312 photographs and explanatory text. Contains a brief chronology; batting and pitching averages of some star performers; and some individual batting records of the years 1901 to 1946.

Booklist 44:129 D 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 O 19 '47
20w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 73:41 Ja 1 '48 20w

"The Story of Baseball" is, in the opinion of one reasonably long-time student, the best words-and-pictures history of the game ever assembled." J. K. H.

+ N Y Times p22 D 14 '47 190w

DUSENBURY, GEORGE, and DUSENBURY, JANE. How to retire to Florida. 231p $2.50 Harper

917.59 Florida—Description and travel. Retirement (from work) 47-30111

Statistics and other information on cities and towns in Florida which would be of interest to people who might want to live in that state after retirement. There are answers to questions about cost of living, housing, recreation, and climate. Some case histories. Map on end papers. No index.

Booklist 43:203 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:12 My '47

"Though booster in tone, this is nevertheless sound advice, guidance for those older people who are contemplating a change to a milder climate."

Kirkus 14:585 N 15 '46 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
F 16 '47 210w

Wis Lib Bul 43:53 Mr '47

DU SOE, ROBERT C. Three without fear; il. by Ralph Ray, jr. 185p $2.25 Longmans 47-31170

A young American boy, victim of a shipwreck, lands on the shore of Baja California. Two other children, "Californiana," join him and together the three manage to work their way along the coast, living on the land, until they find their respective families.

Booklist 44:93 N 1 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:444 N '47 120w

Kirkus 15:397 Ag 1 '47 170w

"A remarkable adventure story for ten-year-olds." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 N
16 '47 500w

"Smoothly written story, . . . Scaled just right for youngsters 10 to 14." William Glick
+ N Y Times p44 N 16 '47 150w

"A convincing story with many fascinating details."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:48 N 15 '47 70w

School & Society 66:254 S 27 '47 20w

Wis Lib Bul 43:178 D '47

DUSTIN, AGNES BARDEN. Cabin on the Silver Tongue; il. by Henry Moore Picken. 286p $2.50 Wilde 46-7939

Story of colonial life on the New Hampshire frontier in 1780. For junior high school age.

+ Horn Bk 23:113 Mr '47 80w

"This is sure to win distinction among pioneer stories. Readable and informative. . . . Recommended for girls and boys of junior high school age." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 72:230 F 1 '47 110w

DUSTIN, A. B.—Continued

"Convincing background and characters that have humor and vitality. Exciting adventures with wild animals and Indians."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:52 N 9 '46 30w

DUVAL, MILES PERCY. And the mountains will move; the story of the building of the Panama canal. 374p il maps $5 Stanford univ. press

386.444 Panama canal 47-3139

"A very readable narrative account of the construction of the Panama canal, from the building of the Panama railroad in 1849 to the present period of the modernization. Appendix of names and bibliography." (Booklist) Index.

Reviewed by D. H. Smith

Am Hist R 53:128 O '47 550w

"The author often captures the spirit of the times. The tone is laudatory and uncritical. Although a dependable source of factual data on matters pertaining to construction, the book will be disappointing to many. There is only one casual, and uncritical, reference to the diplomatic maneuvers by which the United States came by the Canal Zone; there is no discussion of the economic and strategic significance of the Canal; no attempt is made to describe and appraise Canal Zone government and administration since the Canal's opening in 1914. But the author set out to tell about the moving of mountains, and this he has done thoroughly and well." J. H. Ferguson

+ — Am Pol Sci R 41:810 Ag '47 230w

Booklist 43:324 Je 15 '47

"In his treatment of the final phases of the canal project, after its construction was undertaken by the U.S. government, Capt. DuVal's work is eminently impartial, thorough and readable. Key personalities, from William Howard Taft and Theodore Roosevelt to Goethals and Gorgas, emerge clearly." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 1 '47 130w

"Very readable story." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:1112 Ag '47 100w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:274 S '47 270w

DUVOISIN, ROGER ANTOINE. Chanticleer; the real story of this famous rooster [il. by the author]. [40p] 50c Grosset

47-11179

A modern version of the old Chanticleer tale. This story recounts what happened when the jealous alarm clock went to Whoo, the owl, for help.

"This is a disappointment from Roger Duvoisin. . . But the gay and entertaining pictures carry the story along."

Kirkus 15:576 O 15 '47 80w

"Duvoisin seems to be the perfect artist for the whole cast of characters, who certainly come alive in the pages. Needs to be prebought for library use." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 72:1618 N 15 '47 50w

"It is [an] imaginative and whimsical tale. . . Besides the story itself, the gay, colorful illustrations of the author-artist go far toward making this a welcome addition to any child's picture-book collection." Ann Lundquist

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 16 '47 120w

DWIGHT, HERBERT BRISTOL. Tables of integrals and other mathematical data. rev ed 250p $2.50 Macmillan

517.39 Integrals 47-3753

"For advanced students of mathematics. In this revised edition a considerable number of integrals of algebraic and trigonometric functions have been added, also additional material on inverse functions of complex quantities, and on Bessel functions." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1038 Jl '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:32 Ap '47

DYER, BRAINERD. Zachary Taylor. (Southern biography ser) 455p il maps $4 La. state univ. press

B of 92 Taylor, Zachary 47-142

A biography of the twelfth president of the United States, which is both a study of his career, as a soldier and as a politician, and a study of the westward expansion of the United States. The author is associate professor of history at the University of California. Index.

"Author Dyer has written an excellent, almost a transcendent biography. He found and utilized judiciously numerous and varied sources and cites them with meticulous care. He organized his book clearly according to chronology and topics and presents his findings in a clear style, free from labored rhetoric and clichés. He generalizes and interprets within the limits of the evidence which he presents. He mildly and unobtrusively says a kind word now and then for his subject. The author has demonstrated craftsmanship of a high order. The publishers have given the book an attractive format and embellished it with a few revealing pictures and passable maps. It is practically free from errors, factual and typographical." E. B. Wesley

+ Am Hist R 52:521 Ap '47 850w

Reviewed by H. C. Nixon

Am Pol Sci R 41:373 Ap '47 260w

"This scholarly and interesting biography is a definitive account of the public career of Zachary Taylor." O. P. Chitwood

+ Ann Am Acad 250:164 Mr '47 380w

"'Old Rough and Ready' Taylor . . . is a colorful figure of perennial interest to biographers. This well-balanced and authoritative study, the ninth of Louisiana State's Southern biographies, is not the first but certainly the most satisfactory of the Taylor biographies." R. B. Nye

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 D 8 '46 500w

"Taylor has been among the least biographized of the Presidents. His brief administration was a headache to him and not a very bright spot in the nation's history, but the story of his life is well worth telling. Mr. Dyer tells it exceedingly well, with full documentation to prove his careful research and with a judicious treatment of the controversial questions of the time." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 64:1050 S 3 '47 330w

Current Hist 12:153 F '47 100w

Reviewed by Avery Craven

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14

Mr 2 '47 1000w

"A careful, detailed and scholarly life of Taylor." A. M. Schlesinger, jr.

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 12 '47 950w

"Mr. Dyer's book is a comprehensive and detailed study of the frontier fighter whose career was so tightly interwoven with the expansion and defense of the American borders during the first half of the nineteenth century. The author has supplemented the somewhat scanty material of the Taylor manuscripts by a broad investigation of the papers of contemporaries and other sources; throughout, the documentation is carefully executed. Yet the tone of the biography is inconclusive, if not unsympathetic." D. B. Goebel

+ Pol Sci Q 62:465 S '47 850w

"This is not a great biography, but it is a creditable one. Teachers of American history will find that it helps to fill one of the voids in our biographical literature. On the college level it should have a variety of uses; for the secondary school teacher its value will be less apparent." R. A. Brown

+ Social Studies 38:233 My '47 390w

"As a narrative, this biography displays much of the plainness and straightforwardness which characterized its subject's personality. It is based upon an extensive research in original materials, with ample documentation."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:36 Mr '47 280w

DYSON, GEORGE MALCOLM. New notation and enumeration system for organic compounds. 63p pa $1.75 Longmans

547.014 Chemistry—Notation. Chemistry—Nomenclature 47-3837

"A radical new system of linear ciphers for organic classification and indexing, with provision for currently unknown but possible compounds. Five volumes of Beilstein were ciphered and the system proved satisfactory." Library J

"The Dyson ciphers constitute a radical departure and, like any new and untried system, will require study and experience to determine their range of usefulness. They offer the promise, however, of a valuable additional tool for classification, indexing, sorting and communication." A. M. Patterson

+ Am Chem Soc J 69:728 Mr '47 390w

"One need not be concerned that the Dyson cipher will replace names of structural formulas in everyday use. Like any new system the cipher will rest or fall on its acceptance by the persons charged with the responsibility for classifying and indexing compounds. Even if it is not generally accepted Dr. Dyson has made a notable contribution in demonstrating that a systematic plan can be devised to describe all organic structures. While one might hope that a more logical system were conceivable, at present there is none which compares with that just reviewed." F. Y. Wiselogle Chem & Eng N 25:2175 Jl 28 '47 650w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1038 Jl '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:29 Ap '47

E

EAGLESON, HODGE MACILVAIN. Laughing into glory. 191p il $2 Stewart

B or 92 Clergy—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-3876

Reminiscences of the author's first years as a Methodist minister in a small town some forty years ago. He had worked his way thru college in part by his skill as a professional boxer. That, he found, and his sense of humor were his strongest assets in dealing with his parish.

"This preacher knew how to laugh. Many should read this book and laugh with him."

+ Kirkus 15:65 F' 1 '47 180w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Jl 6 '47 450w

"A witty chuckle-providing book written in the spirit of the author's own grandfather, who claimed he once dreamed he was preaching to his congregation and woke up to find it was true." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 11 '47 110w

"The book is filled with both humorous and heart-warming anecdotes, well seasoned with numerous examples of decidedly energetic religion in action." E. A. F.

+ Spring'd Union p11 My 30 '47 220w

Wis Lib Bul 43:114 Jl '47

EAKIN, MRS MILDRED OLIVIA (MOODY), and EAKIN, FRANK. The pastor and the children. 182p $2 Macmillan

259 Church work with children. Church schools and colleges 47-3413

Discusses the pastor's responsibility for the Sunday school and other aspects of religious education, and outlines a program to follow. Index.

Booklist 43:303 Je 1 '47

Christian Century 64:685 My 28 '47 20w

"This is a valuable book for the pastor. The authors say that they have 'lived' this book, and it is full of practical advice based on experience." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 161:16 N 1 '47 180w

"A timely and worthwhile treatise." H. B. White

+ Crozer Q 25:82 Ja '48 650w

"This is a practical book, replete with illustrations which effectively drive home the authors' arguments."

+ Kirkus 15:61 F' 1 '47 230w

"Dr. Eakin writes with sympathetic understanding a book which he says was lived by his wife. The classes taught by Mrs. Eakin in Drew Theological Seminary, the Seminary's Demonstration Church School directed by her and her long experience in Elementary Religious Education provide rich background for this authoritative book. Recommended heartily for all public and Theological Seminary libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 72:635 Ap 15 '47 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 7 '47 70w

Spring'd Republican p22 Jl 19 '47 110w

EAMES, MRS GENEVIEVE TORREY. A horse to remember; il. by Paul Brown. 146p $2.50 Messner

Horses—Legends and stories 47-31197

Story of Jarvis who lived on a ranch, and made friends with an ugly yellow colt named Joker. When the colt turned out to be a beautiful palomino and his father was going to sell Joker, Jarvis, who didn't like to ride, changed into an ardent rider in order to keep his pet.

Booklist 44:137 D 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p17A D 3 '47 40w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 15 '48 180w

"Young people who enjoy riding, swimming, fishing and other outdoor activities will find congenial company in the boys and girls whose work and play are described in this book. There are mystery, suspense and fun in this vivacious story of a family all absorbed in horse raising and training." Paul Brown is the right illustrator for it." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:40 Ja '48 120w

Kirkus 15:429 Ag 15 '47 80w

"Plenty of action, friendly, pleasing; light but not slight." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 70:1691 D 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ja 4 '48 360w

"A delightful naturalness helps to make this an appealing story for boys and girls of 10 or older." Frances Smith

+ N Y Times p41 N 16 '47 190w

"This is a delightful story that should hold the interest of youngsters in grades four through six. Paul Brown's illustrations will appeal to all horse-loving youngsters." Yvonne Poirier

+ San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 16 '47 150w

"This is the story of a horse and a boy that is well worth reading."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:54 N 15 '47 40w

Wis Lib Bul 43:157 N '47

EAMES, MRS GENEVIEVE TORREY. Pat rides the trail; il. by Dan Noonan. 146p $2 Messner

46-8403

Pat Carey saved up every penny she earned and bought a game little mare, trained her, and entered the Hundred Mile trail ride held annually at Woodstock, Vermont. This story for ten to fourteen year olds describes the ride and its dramatic ending.

Kirkus 14:386 Ag 15 '46 40w

EAMES, G. T.—Continued

"A slangy, slight tale which has good family relationships and ingredients of interest to girls to recommend it." Isabel McLaughlin

Library J 72:323 F 15 '47 70w

"The story takes hold of twelve-year-old sympathies and satisfies their sense of justice."

M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Mr 2 '47 330w

N Y Times p33 N 24 '46 140w

EARLY, ELEANOR. New Orleans holiday; drawings by John O'Hara Cosgrave II. 293p $3.75 Rinehart

917.6335 New Orleans 47-12174

Gay chapters filled with stories of life in New Orleans in the past and in the present. The author touches on many subjects from Creole architecture to the Mardi Gras celebration, and from pirates to Solari's and the present-day antique shops. Index.

Booklist 44:171 Ja 1 '48

"My favorite travel guide has written a beguiling book about New Orleans which would have to be supplemented by an orthodox guide, but which every visitor who wants to get the essential essence and flavor of New Orleans will delight to read."

+ Kirkus 15:570 O 1 '47 150w

"An animated and chatty book full of chapters like 'The Baroness Was a Gaudy Character' and 'Lives and Times of the Quadroons.' . . [It] will not be of any particular help as a guide to the city, but then no one is likely to mind." Coleman Rosenberger

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 N
30 '47 410w

"Some will find that [the author] jumps all too briskly from one subject to another. But those who do will miss something of the point of the whole thing. The localities will quibble over certain of her facts, and her dates. But what of it? Miss Early has done well what she set out to do: to give us an easy, pleasant book about New Orleans." H. T. Kane

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 11 '48 380w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 19 '47
600w

"Recommended for entertainment rather than information." G. W. Healy

Sat R of Lit 30:27 D 20 '47 450w

EASTMAN, EDWARD ROE. The destroyers; a historical novel. 250p $3 Am. agriculturist, inc. 418 Savings bank bldg, Ithaca, N.Y.

47-19786

"Tailed into a sense of false security because of the nearness of Fort Alden, the little settlement of Cherry Valley, south of the Mohawk, is suddenly attacked by marauding Indians and Tories one fall day in 1778. How young Nate and the old scout, Joel, among the few who escape this massacre, join up with General Clinton's forces to be 'eyes and ears for his army' . . . is related with authentic detail in this historical novel of the Sullivan-Clinton expedition." Bookmark

Bookmark 8:15 My '47

"Some painstaking research is evident but it is lost among the horse latitudes of stilted phraseology, tired clichés and an unreal approach to the life of the frontier. A feeble little romance limps through the story and tries, but fails, to save it from falling flat on Mr. Eastman's face." James Edin

— San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 30 '47
180w

EASTMAN, ERMON DWIGHT, and ROLLEFSON, GERHARD KROHN. Physical chemistry. 504p $4.50 McGraw

541.3 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 47-30924

"Text covering the principles of physical chemistry for third- or fourth-year college students. Discusses structure of matter in relation to its physical and chemical properties and includes first and second laws of thermodynamics and applications of these laws. Authors assume students have had previous courses in college physics and calculus." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:146 D 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1376 O 1 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:46 J1 '47

EASTMAN, FRED. Christ in the drama; a study of the influence of Christ on the drama of England and America. 174p $2.50 Macmillan

822.09 Jesus Christ in literature. English drama—History and criticism. American drama—History and criticism. Religious drama 47-4124

"The professor of biography and drama at Chicago Theological Seminary presents the influence of the Christian religion upon the drama from the medieval mysteries to modern times. . . Dr. Eastman is not looking for theology or moralizing, but his criteria are (1) are the principal characters presented as if their values and affections have been influenced by Christianity? (2) does the author demonstrate an insight concerning the spiritual life? (3) does the play send the audience away exalted in spirit, and with a deepened sense of fellowship with God and man? There follow studies of some of the plays of Shakespeare, Shaw, Galsworthy, Massfield, Emlin Williams' The Corn is Green, some modern American plays, and a helpful concluding chapter on religious drama in America and England." Churchman

Christian Century 64:877 J1 16 '47 210w

Reviewed by P. S. Malone

Churchman 161:16 Ag '47 270w

"The plays which would be of especial value to those interested in the influence of religion in the drama are so designated. This book should be invaluable to all those interested in the use of the drama for religious purposes."

+ Kirkus 15:160 Mr 15 '47 260w

"Seldom has more worthless borrowing from other writers been strung together with a series of pious platitudes by a professor who should be better able to discern the truth than this volume indicates. . . Not recommended." George Freedley

— Library J 72:1110 Ag '47 60w

Theatre Arts 31:69 S '47 80w

EASTMAN, SAMUEL MACK. Canada at Geneva; an historical survey and its lessons. 117p pa $1 Humphries

341.1 Canada—Foreign relations. League of nations [46-8155]

"Throughout the years 1925 to 1933 the author held the post of Chief of Section, Research Division, International Labour Office, Geneva, and from 1933 to 1940 that of Chief of the Extra-European Section of the same organization. During the last thirty years he has given special attention to the study of international relations and has contributed numerous articles to the reviews of various countries. At present he is Associate Professor of History and Special Lecturer in International Relations at the University of Saskatchewan." Biographical note

"This refreshingly critical book falls between the two stools of a scholarly research study and a popular presentation, and is also marred by poor organization and an inadequate analysis of the material culled from League records and other sources. It also seems regrettable that the rich experience of the author in Geneva was not directly drawn upon. There is a curious tendency to accept the 'have not' argument of the aggressor states as regards raw materials, in striking contrast to the author's realistic evaluation of Germany's demand for equality of armaments." H. G. Skilling

+ — Am Pol Sci R 41:380 Ap '47 380w

Canadian Forum 26:189 N '46 310w

EASTWOOD, TOM, ed. Soilless growth of plants. See Ellis, C.

EATON, EVELYN SYBIL MARY. Every month was May; drawings by Garth Williams. 241p $2.75 Harper

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-11516

Collection of nineteen autobiographical sketches describing the experiences of the author in England and France, during the days of her youth and early maturity. Some of the material appeared originally in the New Yorker.

+ Kirkus 15:417 Ag 1 '47 130w

"Recommended." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 72:1188 S 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
Ja 11 '48 300w

"Her book abounds in flashes of acute insight; it has atmosphere and a nostalgic loveliness. . . She has known how to convey to readers of her book lightness and sanity and genuineness—the feel and taste of France." T. R. Ybarra

+ N Y Times p38 N 23 '47 370w

EATON, JEANETTE. David Livingstone, foe of darkness; il. by Ralph Ray. 256p $3 Morrow

B or 92 Livingstone, David—Juvenile literature 47-11392

A biography of this medical missionary, explorer, and scientist, written for grades seven to nine. It charts his course from his youth in Scotland to his dramatic death in Africa some thirty years later.

Booklist 44:93 N 1 '47

"Now that Africa comes more and more into current politics and even more into our growing sense of inter-continental obligations, this story of a great-soul and explorer should be read."

+ Commonweal 47:155 N 21 '47 50w

"It is a fine contribution to biographies for young people that Jeanette Eaton makes in her moving life of Livingstone." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:446 N '47 120w

"In spite of being a trifle overlong for the pace of the action, this still ranks high in recommendation for school and public library use. And Jeanette Eaton's reputation for sound and meticulous scholarship in her biographies of little-publicized figures is well sustained."

+ — Kirkus 15:470 S 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Mary Strang

Library J 72:1785 D 15 '47 30w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Weekly Bk R p6
D 21 '47 550w

"Exciting as any adventure story, and more inspiring, this is an excellent book to put into the hands of girls and boys from 12 years up." Irene Branham

+ San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 30 '47
150w

"This is a fine book that will be widely read."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:59 N 15 '47 50w

EBERHART, MRS MIGNON (GOOD). Another woman's house. 276p $2.50 Random house

47-30112

Detective story.

Bookmark 8:16 My '47

"The other woman is in prison for life as a murderess. Her husband is not. This gambit is a good one but the plotting of the last half of the novel is cumbersome and strains probability well beyond comfort." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 2 '47
90w

Kirkus 15:15 Ja 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
Mr 2 '47 270w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 Mr 9 '47 150w

New Yorker 23:100 Mr 1 '47 120w

"For once our heroine isn't unjustly suspected on the flimsiest evidence, and her adventures are convincing. Applause to Mrs. Eberhart for forgetting her own formula." L. G. O.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 9 '47
40w

Sat R of Lit 30:68 Ap 12 '47 40w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE. Too many shoes and stockings; pictures by Walton Brashears. [34p] $1.50 McKay

47-80

A picture-story book about the bears of Honeyville, who lived like men, only without clothes. Finally one of their number made it fashionable to wear shoes and stockings. That made for any number of complications, until a bad storm came up. Then like sensible bears they abandoned their shoes and stockings.

"Good simple nonsense for five to eights."

+ Kirkus 14:384 Ag 15 '46 90w

"A story children will enjoy. Recommended." M. A. Webb

+ Library J 71:1808 D 15 '46 70w

Sat R of Lit 29:44 N 9 '46 60w

EBY, LOIS, and FLEMING, JOHN CHESTER. Hell hath no fury. 219p $2.50 Dutton

47-1268

Detective story.

"A neat little problem, nicely twisted and properly tied. But the problem is intermittent to the point of being incidental. The padding here consists in the nagging repetition of what isn't a very funny gag to begin with." James Sandoe

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 2 '47
100w

"Flighty."

Kirkus 14:626 D 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
F 23 '47 110w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 F 2 '47 140w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 F 2 '47
70w

"Time-killer."

Sat R of Lit 30:32 F 1 '47 40w

EBY, LOIS, and FLEMING, JOHN CHESTER. Velvet fleece. 224p $2.50 Dutton

47-31434

"A vain, not too bright confidence man tells in more or less picturesque hard talk how his mob tries to take over a California city ripe for the picking. Even before the first move is made, there's enough double-dealing among the members of the gang to wreck the plan, and as soon as the narrator begins to fall for a virtuous war widow he's out to swindle, the outcome is obvious." New Yorker

Kirkus 15:409 Ag 1 '47 80w

"A revolting picture." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p43 O 12 '47 150w

New Yorker 23:111 O 4 '47 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 12 '47
60w

ECHARD, MARGARET. Dark fantastic. 312p $2.50 Doubleday

47-30292

A combination of murder story and ghost story. The scene is southern Indiana in the period just after the Civil war.

Booklist 43:309 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by K. B. Taft

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Je 29 '47
270w

Kirkus 15:109 F 15 '47 170w

ETCHARD, MARGARET—Continued

"A powerful novel, not too cheerful, but superbly written." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 72:638 Ap 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13
Ag 3 '47 90w

"Judith and Abigail kill each other, and Miss Etchard brings off this feat without taxing the reader's credibility. Both women are intense, bold studies in evil. Aside from occasional carelessness in style, the author reveals a professional competence in sustaining the precarious mood of fear and suspense." Therese de Grace

+ N Y Times p16 Je 22 '47 250w

"An interesting idea, mangled by wordiness, inconsistency and a singularly unsympathetic lot of characters." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 11 '47 100w

"Very good."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 My 17 '47 40w

ECKEL, PAUL EDWARD. Far East since 1500. textbook ed 820p maps $5 Harcourt

950 East (Far East) 47-4915

"The author's intention is to furnish the college student and general reader with a basis for an understanding of Far Eastern affairs, with special reference to their social, cultural, and intellectual aspects. Part one deals with new forces, both Asiatic and Occidental, in Asia from 1500 to 1900; part two considers the twentieth century, and includes a chapter of first-hand reporting on postwar rehabilitation. Good bibliography; reading lists at end of chapters." Booklist

Booklist 44:11 S 1 '47

School & Society 66:144 Ag 23 '47 20w

Social Studies 38:335 N '47 20w

ECKERT, JOSEPHINE PAULINE. Practicing of Christopher. 246p $2.75 Dial press

47-30209

Nine-year-old Christopher is a lonely boy always in hot water and misunderstood by his father. His grown-up friend Binkie is more tolerant, but Christopher even gets in trouble with him, because he tries to take a hand in Binkie's love affair. The whole story is told as it appeared to Christopher.

Booklist 43:241 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by Elizabeth Stewart

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Mr 30 '47 320w

Library J 72:321 F 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 2 '48 90w

"Miss Eckert has captured the integrity and reasonableness of a child's outlook and the delights and sorrows that go with wholehearted absorption in the moment. She shows how exceedingly odd, from that standpoint, the behavior of grownups can be and how wise, by contrast, a child can be in accepting, if need be, or getting around, and sometimes understanding, the stock reactions of people who have already hardened into patterns." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
Ap 6 '47 390w

"There are two distinct levels in the novel—the tale of a sensitive child in search of companionship and parental understanding; and the oddities of adult behavior screened through that child's mind. Either theme could have received fuller treatment from the palpable talents of the author: the current admixture is simply a muddle." Florence Crowther

N Y Times p18 Mr 16 '47 550w

EDDINGTON, SIR ARTHUR STANLEY. Fundamental theory [ed. with a pref. by Sir Edmund T. Whittaker]. 292p $6 Macmillan

530.1 Physics—Philosophy. Relativity (physics) [47-2790]

"Published posthumously under supervision of Sir E. T. Whittaker. Replaces all author's previous writings on the constants of nature. Contains tables giving the values of the microscopic constants as calculated by Eddington's theory and a table of molar and nuclear constants, a list of and achievements of the theory in nuclear physics and the results for magnetic moments of the hydrogen atom and the neutron." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:813 My 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by P. M. S. Blackett

Manchester Guardian p3 D 31 '46 270w

Reviewed by Herbert Dingle

Spec 178:86 Ja 17 '47 800w

EDDY, GEORGE SHERWOOD. God in history. 283p $2.75 Assn. press

901 History—Philosophy. God 47-30265

"Dr. Eddy again demonstrates the scope of his intellectual interests as well as the breadth of his moral and religious outlook. He has drawn upon many authorities for the history of men's ideas of God and has applied his own interpretations to show how God himself and men's ideas of him have affected the course of history, with special attention to the modern age and the present situation." (Christian Century) Index.

Booklist 43:287 My 15 '47

Christian Century 64:560 Ap 30 '47 70w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 161:17 Je 1 '47 240w

"This is a book which appeals most strongly to liberal Protestants, but it should have a wider reading in all circles."

+ Kirkus 15:158 Mr 15 '47 330w

School & Society 66:15 J1 5 '47 40w

Reviewed by H. H. Wagner

Springf'd Union p17 Je 27 '47 170w

EDDY, ROGER W. Rimless wheel. 336p $3 Macmillan

47-2666

Novel of reminiscences in which Eben Osborne recalls the years of his youth, from the age of six when he went to live with his grandmother on a remote New England farm, to the age of twenty, after his grandmother's death. He was of an introspective turn of mind and very little made a great impression on him, except the vivid girl with whom he fell in love.

Booklist 43:309 Je 1 '47

Kirkus 15:175 Mr 15 '47 120w

"The story is slight and certainly not new. The scenes and characters, however, are invested with a nostalgic impact which gives the tale a quiet and cumulative effect. . . Roger Eddy's writing embodies the virtues of a deep feeling for the New England countryside, an insight into the ways and moods of people, and a natural way with words." Diggory Venn

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
J1 13 '47 500w

"The general construction of 'The Rimless Wheel' will possibly prevent it from rolling to best-sellerdom. But the discriminating reader will none the less delight in what it offers, and even hail its writer as a discovery. . . There is, of course, nothing startlingly original about all this as a story. But it all is well done—in its romantic aspects as well as in its Yankee quilting of nostalgia, decay, youth, contemplativeness and maturity. The book as a whole is a triumph of restrained poignancy, of poetic overtone." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p5 My 11 '47 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 S 14 '47 200w

"As a novel, 'The Rimless Wheel' has somewhat the indirection and irresolution of its hero. Its distinction and its charm lie in the leisure and grace of its style, the accuracy and detail of the author's observation, the candor and the perception with which he explores the personality of Eben Osborne. There is exhibited here a fresh and original talent, a quality of writing which is both strong and sensitive. Mr. Eddy is a young writer of undeniable ability, and his first book is an accomplishment of considerable stature." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 Je 21 '47 650w

EDDY, SAMUEL, and SURBER, THADDEUS. Northern fishes; with special reference to the upper Mississippi valley. rev ed 276p il $4 Univ. of Minn.

597 Fishes—Mississippi valley Agr47-7

Revised edition of a book which first appeared in 1943 (Book Review Digest 1943). "This revision is an attempt to bring the book up to date and to correct the various errors which somehow insist on creeping into a first edition. New records of fishes have been incorporated. . . Several illustrations which have been added were provided by Mr. Lytton Taylor, outdoors writer for the St. Paul Dispatch. Much of the material in the first fifty pages has been rearranged and expanded." (Foreword to the revised edition) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:293 My 15 '47

"An authoritative, detailed text. . . Normally, such a work has but local and limited appeal. However, the thought-provoking chapters on lake dynamics, fish populations and management of waters for fish production deserves more general attention. . . These chapters should be required reading for every fisherman before he sounds off at his local club meeting on the stupidity of Conservation Department officials in not stocking trout or bass or what-have-you in his favorite fishing hole." Herman Forster

+ N Y Times p24 My 18 '47 230w

EDDY, SHERWOOD. See Eddy, G. S.

EDEL, ABRAHAM. Theory and practice of philosophy. 475p $3 Harcourt
120 Philosophy 46-3460

"Professor Edel in this introductory textbook covers the field of philosophy from the 'Nature of Explanation' to religion and art. It is thus a compendium which could be made useful for an extraordinary variety of purposes and there are probably few philosophical questions now debated which are not considered in it. Causality, change, God, the body-mind problem, various interpretations of materialism and idealism, the various types of psychology, the self, are all treated in its pages, along with dozens of other topics which might arouse an undergraduate's doubts and fill a teacher's schedule. Though all questions are examined with exemplary objectivity and so presented as to make it not unlikely that some intelligent men might have raised them, their solutions are not avoided and the author's philosophical point of view is clearly stated." J Philos

Reviewed by A. R. Turquette
Ethics 57:152 Ja '47 280w

"In spite of certain adverse comments which could be made, Professor Edel has given us the first naturalistic textbook in philosophy. Most unprejudiced readers will agree that he has done the job with eminent success, without superficiality or carelessness. He has introduced topics from contemporary life which are a noteworthy addition to undergraduate literature. If one objects to certain details, it is because so good a book ought to be better." George Boas

+ — J Philos 44:19 Ja 2 '47 1200w

EDEN, EMILY. Semi-attached couple; introd. by Anthony Eden; il. by Susanne Suba. 249p $2.75 Houghton

47-3425

Comedy of manners first published in England in 1860, and now brought out for American readers. The introduction is by Anthony Eden, great-great-grand-nephew of the author.

The novel pictures the lives, loves, and politics of a group of aristocratic English men and women of the 1830's.

Booklist 43:347 Jl 1 '47

"This book, which ends with a wife miraculously adoring her own husband, makes a perfect gift. Send it to all lovers of Jane Austen, to intelligent or exacting friends, and of course to your deserving self." Marion Strobel
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Je 15 '47 300w

"Emily wrote with a sensitive, ironic pen. . . Here is an entirely civilized book, to purr over and to puff." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 46:242 Je 20 '47 1050w

"There's wit and gentle, genteel comedy, for those who are partisans of inimitable Jane."

+ Kirkus 15:137 Mr 1 '47 120w

"A tale that recalls Jane Austen's England, but shorter and less sentimental than Jane! For general purchase and for many readers."

K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:887 Je 1 '47 110w

"The Hon. Emily was a lady, but she missed very little, and she enjoyed it all—how cabinets are made, and marriages, weather and the seasons, the manners of high society, its servants and neighbors, its fools, parasites, and above all, its landed freedom from a lot of modern pressures. No more entertaining conversation piece is likely to come to porch or library this summer. The Hon. Emily's little novel survives its long burial, intact." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Je 15 '47 650w

"Tolerably amusing it is. It is also thoroughly permeated with Austen manner, for when it was started in the Eighteen Thirties Jane Austen was still bright in the memories of all young ladies with an itch to hold a quill pen, and the Grosvenor Square drawing rooms were filled with imitation Elizabeth Bennets. Miss Eden's characters would be quite at home in the Austen milieu. . . Like Miss Austen, Miss Eden makes good use of reportorial letters, and like her predecessor she is often at her best in delineating lesser and eccentric characters. . . One must conclude that Jane Austen's laurels are safe from usurpation. But anyone who wishes that she had had time to do another novel before she died, and is willing to accept a readable facsimile of the real article, will concede Miss Emily a well-wrought wreath of daisies." Carlos Baker

+ — N Y Times p8 Jl 6 '47 950w

"Altogether, this charming old novel provides a nice literary holiday, in completely different surroundings, among better-mannered people than you are likely to meet in your ramblings through the current fiction lists." Mollie Panter-Downes

+ New Yorker 23:64 Jl 12 '47 720w

"This is a museum piece and a fine one; a revival and an amusing one. Reading it is like finding a charming piece of Victorian furniture, a piece you had forgotten you ever had, stowed away in an attic. . . This is pleasant in its own right. Emily Eden is not Jane Austen, though she would like to be. She has her own gifts, her own charm. This is a straight bit of English nineteenth-century high-life with a dash of romance." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 Je 28 '47 750w

Springf'd Union p11 Jl 30 '47 200w

Time 49:104 Je 23 '47 500w

Wis Lib Bul 43:98 Je '47

EDGERTON, ALANSON HARRISON. Readjustment or revolution? (Whittlesey house publication) 238p $2.50 McGraw

301.15 Social problems. Veterans 46-7987

"A guide to economic, educational, and social readjustment of war veterans, ex-war workers, and oncoming youth." (Subtitle) Dr Edgerton is at present Professor of Education at the University of Wisconsin and in charge of guidance training courses there.

Current Hist 12:151 F '47 30w

EDGERTON, A. H.—Continued

"Recommended for reference shelves for schools, libraries, community planning groups."

+ Kirkus 14:511 O 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay

Library J 71:1712 D 1 '46 160w

"All must feel in accord with the fine purpose of this book. Based on deep conviction, backed by wide knowledge and replete with concrete suggestions, it should stimulate educators, employers, social workers and the general public to much-needed action." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
Mr 9 '47 700w

School & Society 65:286 Ap 19 '47 20w

"Although the author ranges far afield from his educational and occupational data, as the title forewarns, the book is likely to be most useful to those responsible for educational policy, and for translation of policy into vocational guidance."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:271 S '47 180w

EDGINTON, HELEN MARION. See Edginton, M.EDGINTON, MAY (MRS F. E. BAILY). Fruit of the tree [Eng title: Soldier and the ladies]. 283p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.

47-1994

A story of post-war adjustments among the various members of two English families. It is the author's theme that the women are largely to blame for some of the after-war personal disasters.

"Better British brand of lighter entertainment, though not May Edginton at her best."

+ — Kirkus 15:38 Ja 15 '47 160w

"All members of the Stanbro family—father, mother, son and daughter—seem prompted by selfish motives; they are not a very attractive lot. But the author manages all of their love affairs to prove to her own satisfaction that the old Victorian values of life and love hold good in a modern world. The result is light fiction with a heavy-handed air of high significance." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p24 Mr 30 '47 150w

"Plot somewhat strained but will hold an appeal for light-novel readers."

Wis Lib Bul 43:82 My '47

EDGLEY, LESLIE (ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, pseud). Angry heart. 190p $2 Doubleday

47-11398

Detective story.

Booklist 44:135 D 1 '47

"Contrived, beyond believability."

— Kirkus 15:483 S 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13
Ja 25 '48 70w

"Besides being a good mystery, this story is notable in that, although it is set in Hollywood, there are no movie actors in it." I. A.

+ N Y Times p48 N 23 '47 150w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 16 '47
70w

"High grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 8 '47 50w

EDGLEY, LESLIE (ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, pseud). False face. 214p $2 Simon & Schuster

47-1649

Detective story.

"Highly processed, if not too plausible."

Kirkus 15:81 F 1 '47 90w

"Exciting enough for any fancier of chills and thrills. As for the amateur sleuth we found him rather wry." Will Cuppy

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
Ap 13 '47 210w

"The story has a fascination that is hard to resist." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p32 Ap 13 '47 180w

"Ingenious and rather brightly written."

+ New Yorker 23:120 Ap 12 '47 90w

"Partly awkward, partly obvious; but at its best a compelling study in obsession." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 20 '47
80w

Sat R of Lit 30:31 My 17 '47 50w

EDGLEY, LESLIE (ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, pseud). Shadow of guilt. 223p $2 Doubleday

47-3658

Mystery story.

"Easy to read, hard to believe."

Kirkus 15:143 Mr 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
My 18 '47 100w

"The author has done an excellent job of keeping the reader in suspense until the final chapter." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p30 My 11 '47 150w

"Pretty fair suspense, with an improbably worked out ending."

New Yorker 23:108 My 10 '47 100w

"Opening of yarn bit hard to swallow but development and solution are ably handled, and characters are both odd and interesting. Entertaining."

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:32 My 31 '47 40w

EDMAN, IRWIN. Philosopher's quest. 275p $3 Viking

191.9 Philosophy

47-1408

Companion volume to the author's Philosopher's Holiday (Book Review Digest 1938). It is composed of essays giving Professor Edman's personal reflections and impressions in his search for the answer to the question "What is philosophy?" No index.

"This is a book which will be, for many, an inspiring and delightful Introduction to Philosophy." A. W.

+ Atlantic 179:161 Ap '47 550w

Booklist 43:216 Mr 15 '47

Bookmark 8:3 My '47

"We are not a bit surprised when the professor informs us that some of his students lose their faith as a result of his lectures." B. L. Conway

— Cath World 165:470 Ag '47 250w

"This book definitely places him in the top-drawer of American essayists even though as an intrinsic philosopher he might perhaps be rated much lower. . . This is a 'must' book. One to be read eagerly. One to be remembered with fond gratitude." J. O. Supple

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 16 '47
550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '47

J Philos 44:476 Ag 14 '47 420w

Kirkus 15:88 F 1 '47 150w

"Edman appears to be a mellow humanist with a spark of something beyond. Delightful, stimulating reading for those at all familiar with philosophical ideas, and an excellent introduction for those unfamiliar with them. Highly recommended for college and public libraries. Deserves and probably will receive, a degree of popularity." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 72:384 Mr 1 '47 110w

New Repub 116:33 Ap 21 '47 120w

"This mellow, urbane and charming apology for his own life by one of our most celebrated teachers of philosophy . . . ought to do much toward causing two lovers of learning to grow where only one grew before, wherever its stimulating influence is felt." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Mr 9 '47 900w

"The real value of such a book as this is that it quiets the fears of the timid who suspect that philosophy may bite them, and tames the scorn of those who look upon philosophy as unmanly. . . . If this is philosophy, the listeners might demand, why weren't we told of it before? If this is philosophy, let us have more of it." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 9 '47 1050w

"Dr. Edman apparently had a good deal of quiet fun writing these pieces; he goes in freely for irony and ribs such things as psychoanalysis, American publicity methods, and even philosophy itself with a sly good humor. The book makes thoughtful reading, and while it has a faint flavor of academicism, the author, who seems to be interested in everything, lets his mind wander far outside the study and the classroom."

+ New Yorker 23:101 Mr 8 '47 120w

"The reviewer is not much accustomed to penetrating such penetrabilia. He would not read the 'The Critique of Pure Reason,' unless his life depended on it. Plato, except for 'the dramatic part,' which Gibbon extolled at the expense of the Greek's theory, leaves him a little cold. But Professor Edman is a pleasant companion in a labyrinth where one can easily get lost and which is alarming on that account alone, even if, as some believe, there is little danger of encountering the Minotaur." Leonard Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 Mr 29 '47 800w

School & Society 65:286 Ap 19 '47 20w

"Professor Edman's gift for talking about philosophy has made him one of the prides of Columbia's faculty and a crowd-drawing lecturer. The same gift, at work in his good-humored essays, will endear him to readers who do not wish to put up their hands and ask searching questions. This is not philosophy; it is a pleasant defense of urbanity among teachers of philosophy."

+ Time 49:105 Mr 24 '47 300w

"Written in a vein of humane irony and humor, with both charm and skill, this volume is meant for the informed general reader."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:251 S '47 130w

Wis Lib Bul 43:93 Je '47

EDMONDS, MRS HELEN (WOODS) (ANNA KAVAN, pseud). House of sleep. 223p $2.50 Doubleday

47-5147

"In a series of soliloquies, a strangely unbalanced young girl reconstructs her distortion of normal relationships into a fearful, mysterious preoccupation with night, which Miss Kavan, who is experienced in dealing with the mentally ill, makes quite terrifying." New Yorker

Kirkus 15:263 My 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 165:291 S 20 '47 1100w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:31 Ag 11 '47 270w

"There are difficulties in the book. The swift and lucid character of the prose never entirely dispels the sense of ambiguity of meanings glimpsed and snatched away. And the 'clues' she has introduced for 'absolute clearness' are too often indirect and suggestive, transforming them into hazards. But these difficulties should not deter the reader. 'The House of Sleep' is an arresting exploration of the elusive levels of experience that lie between the conscious and the sub-conscious—and the explorer is acutely perceptive and a brilliantly disturbing writer." A. S. Morris

+ N Y Times p5 J1 20 '47 550w

"About the only useful thing a layman can say of this stream-of-consciousness narrative concerning a world of dreams and illusions is that it is beautifully written and deeply disturbing. . . . Not everybody's book, as you can see, but a few will like it very much."

+ New Yorker 23:69 J1 19 '47 100w

"It isn't that Miss Kavan can't write. She can, and when she chooses to be completely lucid, she can produce a scene as well as the next one—unless, of course, the next one happens to be Virginia Woolf or Rebecca West. But for the most part, the author is writing about highly personal experiences; the pillow-side thoughts of a mother who died when she was young, the family doctor who was not equipped to understand her problems, and her mistrust of kindness. And unless you shared like experiences (The Chronicle hopes you have not), Miss Kavan's symbols might be confusing." A. K.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 10 '47 300w

"At times, many times, it seems that Anna Kavan is using a private language. . . . This is a strange, softly terrifying book. It is difficult not to yield helplessly to its beauty, and it is impossible not to be profoundly disturbed by it. The final and most desperately-defended privacy is that of the secret, inner consciousness, that corridor of the mind through which each of us walks alone; and Anna Kavan invades that privacy brilliantly, humbly, and insistently." John Woodburn

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 Ag 23 '47 850w

EDMONDS, WALTER DUMAUX. In the hands of the Senecas. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 213p $2.50 Little

47-30040

Novel based on life in the Finger Lakes district of New York, in the 1770's, when the Indians were still giving trouble to the white settlers. The burning of the lonely settlement at Dygartsbush in 1778, and the capture of some of the inhabitants and the killing of others, begin the story. The reunion of one of the captive women with her husband, sometime later, is the close.

Booklist 43:172 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:15 Mr '47

"Edmonds' story can be summed up in one word: believable. And it doesn't need the excellent picture map of New York State in 1778, which forms the end papers of the book, to make you exclaim: 'But this isn't just fiction—it's history!'" E. S. Watson

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ja 19 '47 450w

"It is doubtful if 'In the Hands of the Senecas' is likely to receive the enthusiastic reception given to Mr. Edmonds' stories of the Erie Canal, or to 'Drums Along the Mohawk,' which it more closely resembles. It is less sustained, less substantial, though written with integrity and with fitting simplicity. It can be called an interlude or, better yet, a humanized footnote to history." W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 25 '47 270w

"Sound viewed as an American theme, but not a major work."

+ Kirkus 14:554 N 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by H. W. Hart

Library J 72:161 Ja 15 '47 70w

"If it is a relatively brief work, it still reveals the authentic touch. Like all Mr. Edmonds' historical novels, it plays tricks with your calendar. It projects a more dangerous, headier age plump into your living room, and for a few hours you find yourself battling flames and hostile savages with no aid available from fire department or police; none, either, from your immediate neighbors, for in all likelihood you have none. You have become a rugged individualist, not from choice but in order to survive. Mr Edmonds's evocative power is as real as that." Jennings Rice

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 26 '47 1200w

"There are some especially interesting vignettes of Indian life and custom, some illuminating sidelights on Indian character. Finally, though the narrative, moving as it does from heroine to heroine, lacks cumulative effect, Mr. Edmonds has in store for each of his heroines a climactic episode of A-Grade suspense or nerve-wracking intensity. And always, since that seems to be the theme of the book, the women are equal to it. The way Mr. Edmonds tells it, not many will object." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 26 '47 500w

EDMONDS, W. D.—Continued

"The adventurous stories of the captives, each treated separately, make bold and lively panels of a book that is a pleasing departure from the faded conventions of the usual historical novel."

+ New Yorker 22:85 Ja 25 '47 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 9 '47
70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:38 F '47

EDMONDS, WALTER DUMAUX. The wedding journey; drawings by Alan Tompkins. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 119p $2.50 Little 47-5530

A short novel describing a wedding journey via Erie canal boat packet in 1835. During the trip and in the days following both bride and groom learned valuable lessons: the husband gambled and lost the honeymoon money; but the bride had strength of character enough to stand the blow.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 180:136 D '47 210w
Booklist 44:108 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Chicago Sun Book Week p9 O 19 '47
320w

"Mr. Edmonds has done a good piece of work. Within the narrow form that he has chosen for 'The Wedding Journey,' he has constructed a neat, compact, and complete narrative." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 8 '47
420w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 24:68 Ja '48 50w
Kirkus 15:476 S 1 '47 80w

"The narrative, though on a small scale, is very pleasantly in scale. Alan Tompkins's color drawings round out the attractive edition." Richard Spinney

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O
26 '47 150w

"For a good many years now Walter D. Edmonds has laid tint and color upon his cyclorama of New York canal boat days; piece by piece, it has become a detailed and spacious spectacle for the enjoyment of Americans who like their history this way. Now he has given us a little novel called 'The Wedding Journey,' in whose bright luminosity familiar characters move with contemplative peace. Everything is there, but all is remote. . . . Richard Le Gallienne would have liked it. Stevenson, too." W. A. MacDonald

+ N Y Times p16 O 12 '47 500w

"A slight but altogether graceful and amusing story."

+ New Yorker 23:126 O 11 '47 80w

"Walter Edmonds has written a charming period piece in 'The Wedding Journey.' Mr. Edmonds knows the locale and the period of which he writes thoroughly; and he has caught with documentary accuracy the sights, the sounds, and the very spirit of the Erie Canal's early history." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 N 15 '47 650w

Wis Lib Bul 43:141 O '47

EDMONDS, STERLING EDWIN. Struggle for freedom; the history of Anglo-American liberty from the charter of Henry I to the present day. (Science and culture ser) 309p $4.50 Bruce pub.

323.44 Liberty. Great Britain—Constitutional history. U.S.—Constitutional history 47-1313

"The author was for many years a lecturer on constitutional law at St. Louis University. Professor Edmonds is convinced that the American people were losing control over their lives and liberties. The federal government, in his opinion, with its increasing use of boards and administrative law, constituted a threat to freedom. . . . Administrative boards rather than courts of law now direct the lives of the American people. It reminds the author of sixteenth-century England. The background material which he presents in the field of constitutional law is perhaps unsurpassed by that found in any other book." Commonweal

"This book will not secure the number of readers it deserves. It contains many unpleasant truths. To make it even more unacceptable, it presupposes a real interest in good government by the average person." Paul Kiriery
+ Commonweal 45:596 Mr 28 '47 390w

"Most timely—politically and spiritually. A morale bracer that should be out on the front shelf of the library." A. B. Lindsay

+ Library J 72:316 F 15 '47 120w

EDUCATIONAL film guide; formerly Educational film catalog; annual ed, June, 1946; pt 1: A title list of 4289 films with subject entries; pt 2: A selected, classified and annotated list of 3690 films; comp. by Dorothy E. Cook and Eva Rahbek-Smith. (Standard catalog ser) 523p price on application Willson, H.W.

371.335 Moving pictures in education—
Catalogs (40-27018)

"The Educational Film Guide is an aid to the selection of 16 mm. nontheatrical films of interest and value to schools, clubs, libraries, study groups and educational organizations of many kinds. Monthly issues, September through April, keep the Guide up to date. . . . Among the thirty-eight collaborators who have assisted in the preparation of the most recent edition of the Guide are audio-visual specialists associated with many organizations including schools, museums, societies, universities, film companies, and the Federal Government. The annotations are written by the collaborators. . . . Part 1 contains an alphabetical title and subject list of all films for which it was possible 'to gather essential information such as title, running time, whether silent or sound, availability and main source.' . . . Part 2 is an annotated list of recommended films, selected from Part 1, and arranged according to the Dewey decimal system." Subscription Bks Bul

"Libraries which catalog film collections will find the form and the abbreviations given in Part 2 to be of help in the preparation of the catalog card. . . . The need for a list of films which has been chosen by specialists is recognized by all who are charged with the responsibility of making the selection, whether for purchase or use. Despite certain minor shortcomings, the Educational Film Guide is an excellent tool for libraries, organizations or other institutions having an educational film program, whether on the elementary, adolescent or adult level, and is recommended for that purpose."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:3 Ja '47 700w

EDUCATORS guide to free films, 1945-1946; comp. by M. F. Horkheimer and J. W. Diffor. (V5-6) 2v pa ea $4 Educators progress service, box 497, Randolph, Wis.

371.335 Moving pictures in education

"Mary Foley Horkheimer is founder of Educators Progress Service and John W. Diffor is Visual Education Director of the Randolph High School, Randolph, Wisconsin. John Guy Fowlkes, Professor of Education, University of Wisconsin, acts as educational consultant. The Guide is revised annually with occasional brief supplements. . . . The second edition, 1942, was reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, July 1943 [Book Review Digest, 1943]. The 1946 edition lists 1,381 films of which 374 titles are new, according to the preface. Films are classified into these general subjects: Applied Arts, Fine Arts, Health Education, Science, Social Studies. Each group is divided into sub-topics. Brief annotations describe the film, indicate running time, number of reels, whether silent or sound, 16 or 35 mm., and state source. . . . A separate section of slide films classified in the same general groupings and carrying brief annotations follows the main section of the volume." Subscription Bks Bul

"The sixth edition is a definite improvement over earlier ones in that many of its previous shortcomings have been overcome. . . The descriptions give such a general idea of the information found in the film that it would be necessary for a teacher to preview each film to determine its suitability for his particular purpose. There is little indication of age level at which the film can best be used. . . The Guide has three indexes, subject, title, and source and availability. One defect in earlier editions is remedied in the subject index which lists all films alphabetically by broad subjects with subtopics. . . The Educators Guide to Free Films is an up-to-date compilation of free films, although the films included do not appear to have undergone the critical evaluation of those in the Educational Film Guide. . . The Educators Guide is recommended for schools, libraries and other organizations needing such materials, with the understanding that those organizations exercise discrimination in the selection of individual films for use."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 18:5 Ja '47 650w

EDWARDS, CECILE PEPIN. Luck for the Jolly Gale; il. by Harve Stein. 189p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

47-30424

Story of a long voyage on a whaling vessel, which sailed from New Bedford in 1848, and did not get back home until 1851. Twelve-year-old Andy Grant, who wanted to be a doctor, went on the voyage with his father, the captain of the Jolly Gale. Andy learned the whaling business on that trip, and then was allowed to follow his chosen profession. For ages nine to twelve.

Booklist 44:74 O 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p2a N 19 '47 140w

"A good story for sea-loving boys, well illustrated by an artist who understands the sea and the industry." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:364 S '47 110w

Kirkus 15:428 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Whaling atmosphere seems somewhat synthetic, though glossary of whaling terms and diagram of whaling vessel may be useful. Author spent considerable time in New Bedford Whaling Museum in search of material. . . Not an essential book." Gertrude Andrus

Library J 72:1197 S 1 '47 80w

Sat R of Lit 30:52 N 15 '47 40w

Wis Lib Bul 43:135 O '47

EDWARDS, NEWTON, and RICHEY, HERMAN GLENN. The school in the American social order; the dynamics of American education. 880p il $5 Houghton

370.973 Education—U.S. Public schools—U.S. 47-4351

"The history of education in any particular period or social order should be viewed against the background of the more general historical development of the period. The content of this volume conforms to this view with respect to the close relation between educational history and broad social history. In each social order studied, attention is directed first to the essential features of the social order itself, to the dominant ideology, to the social structure, to the clash of economic interests, to the sources of political power and the form of political institutions, to the workings of the prevailing economic, political, and social arrangements. This treatment of the social order is followed by a more detailed study of the educational policies and practices of the period under examination. . . The recent period in American history is given extended treatment in this volume." (Introd) Index.

"At a time when many educators and citizens seem to rate the worth of a school or a college in terms of skyrocketing enrollments and new building programs, it is encouraging to read a book which throws light on the real forces that mold our educational system." Walter Johnson

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ag 17 '47 400w

Reviewed by Benjamin Fine

N Y Times p14 S 7 '47 800w

"Here is an important book. It will be a great pity if its presumed appeal to educators is allowed to keep it from being read by laymen. It will therefore be the deliberate intent of this review to define its wide importance, leaving it to the educational journals to appraise it by their own standards. The book is important to all of us because it succeeds brilliantly in placing education in its proper context and role in American life." Ordway Tead

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 Jl 26 '47 600w

Reviewed by E. W. Knight

Social Educ 11:378 D '47 800w

Social Studies 38:379 D '47 20w

"The rich sources drawn upon, and their use as an inherent part of the text, add to the interest of the volume and offset the overpowering effect that a scholarly tome of such dimension might have. The authors' skill in organizing this massive amount of material is clearly revealed by the fact that such threads as the struggle for tax support for schools, for freedom from religious control, for compulsory education, and for states rights can be followed easily." Roma Gans

+ Survey G 36:642 N '47 600w

EGERTON, ROBERT. Legal aid; with a pref. by A. L. Goodhart. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 160p $3.75 Oxford

361.4 Legal aid 47-2962

"In Britain, the accommodation for poor people needing legal assistance has until recently been extremely limited. This small volume reviews the situation and suggests some reforms." Ann Am Acad

"Mr. Egerton, a solicitor, is the Registrar of the Cambridge House Free Legal Advice Centre, one of the largest legal aid services in England. He has done a careful job in summarizing the history of and the need for legal aid, not confining his research to Great Britain. Although he generally commends the American developments, largely philanthropic, he dares even to suggest the possibility of social insurance to finance legal needs." Geoffrey May

+ Ann Am Acad 251:206 My '47 360w

"The main part of the book is devoted to a clearly written account of the systems of legal aid in this country. This is so comprehensive and so accurate that social workers generally will find it valuable. But there is more in the book than a mere guide. There is a useful comparison with legal aid in other countries and some sound criticism of our own methods, together with interesting suggestions for the establishment of legal-aid centres." R. A. E.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 21 '45 130w

"Admirable and scholarly work." Graham Heath

+ Spec 175:442 N 9 '45 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p57 F 2 '46 900w

EGLOFF, GUSTAV. Physical constants of hydrocarbons, v4; Polynuclear aromatic hydrocarbons. (American chemical soc. Monograph ser.) 540p il $17.50 Reinhold

547.2 Hydrocarbons (39-7977)

Volume III of this reference work was entered in Book Review Digest, 1946. "The present volume was compiled in the same way, and represents an attempt to record similar data. However, since the recorded data on polynuclear aromatic hydrocarbons is scant, little information other than the formula diagram, melting point or boiling point, and literature references could be given for most of the compounds listed in this volume." N Y New Tech Bks

"The reviewer wishes to emphasize the extensive coverage of the literature which is available in this volume. At the same time, however, many readers may not agree with the author in his critical selection of best values in those few cases where the data are plentiful. . . This book is a necessity for all laboratories whose work involves polynuclear, fused-ring hydrocarbons having at least one aromatic ring. It will be invaluable as a summary of known structures and as a source of references to the literature for these compounds. The reviewer feels that every technical library should have a copy of this book." F. D. Rossini

EGLOFF, GUSTAV—Continued

! Chem & Eng N 25:1894 Je 30 '47 450w

Chem Eng 54:282 Je '47 20w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:642 Ap 15 '47 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:10 Ja '47

EHRENBERG, VICTOR. Aspects of the ancient world. 256p pl $4.50 Salloch

930 History, Ancient [47-5133]

"We have in this book a collection of essays and reviews [on ancient history] most of which have been published before, many of them in journals not well known in America. The nature of the work is such that the subjects treated range from the early history of the Etruscans to the constitutional history of the Roman Empire and from Greek geography to the life of Eduard Meyer. . . There is an index." Am Hist R

"The biography of Meyer which was published in Historische Zeitschrift is probably known to many scholars in this country. It is a good piece of work and shows full appreciation of Meyer's astounding achievement. . . There are many good things in the book. The chapter on 'The Greek Country and the Greek State' is very good and was published formerly in Die Antike, which is not generally available." T. A. Brady

+ Am Hist R 52:768 Jl '47 250w

"There is nothing strikingly original in the book, but it reflects much careful scholarship, its range is impressive and the ideas assembled are stimulating."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p116 Mr 15 '47 1100w

EHRENBURG, IL'IA GRIGOR'EVICH. European crossroad; a Soviet journalist in the Balkans; tr. from the Russian by Anya Markov. 176p $2 Knopf

914.96 Balkan states 47-1386

"The record of a postwar sentimental journey through the Balkans by the Soviet's celebrated journalist. . . The chapters on Rumania, Yugoslavia, Albania, Bulgaria, and Czechoslovakia are panegyrics with overtones of despair at what happened to the sleepy, lovely towns of the Balkans during the war." New Yorker

Reviewed by Marie Seton

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 F 23 '47 500w

"Mr. Ehrenburg's fidelity to the Communist outlook and the Kremlin's propaganda line is faultless. But his assessment of the aspirations of the people of eastern Europe is—in view of many facts of postwar history, present politics, and the reports of many other competent observers—open to most serious question." DeWitt John

Christian Science Monitor p12 F 25 '47 900w

"Useful as an elaboration of the diplomatic position of the Russians in this vital area." Recommended." Toby Cole

+ Library J 72:317 F 15 '47 100w

"This unassuming travel diary through eastern Europe has meaning for those who can read it with politically bifocal glasses. Its style is neither more taxing nor more compelling than the soundtrack of a motion-picture travelogue. . . This is a book about peasants and intellectuals. . . Second, it is anti-Fascist. . . Third, there is in this book a deep strain of sentimentality about Slavs as people and about the Red Army, and one suspects that we shall have to live with this whether we like it or not. . . Finally, this book is another illustration of the degree to which the latest version of the Communist party line is designed to take over as much as we may default to it of the nineteenth-century idea of progress." This is a book full of hope and promise." Joseph Barnes

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 9 '47 950w

"The sense of Ehrenburg's book is, unfortunately—as is the case also of a good many books written by American journalists, who err in the opposite direction—that the war happened only to Russia and the Russians. And although he uses the word 'democratic' and phrases like 'the dignity of the individual' Ehrenburg's concept of the 'new dawn' he saw breaking over Europe's crossroad is, I fear, very Red." Frank Gervasi

N Y Times p4 Mr 23 '47 1250w

"Mr. Ehrenburg has a gift for sarcastic invective and, in an appended chapter about Nuremberg, he lashes out to the Nazis in the dock in fine style."

New Yorker 23:97 Mr 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by George Gerbner

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 23 '47 550w

"He writes, as usual, in words of two syllables, and in a style that is perfectly adapted to the demands of Soviet censorship. His book, as a result, is superficial, inaccurate, maudlin, and unenlightening." Leigh White

— Sat R of Lit 30:28 Mr 29 '47 600w

EHRENSPERGER, HAROLD ADAM. Conscience on stage. 238p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury 792 Theater—Moral and religious aspects.
Amateur theatricals 47-1107

"This book is about 'conscience-catching drama' which may be used by the church in its ministry of arousing people and of stirring their intellects and emotions to build awareness and consecration requisite to genuine religious living. . . No attempt has been made to give a detailed analysis of the techniques of producing plays in the church. . . An effort has been made to point out the best authorities who have written about acting, directing, lighting, scenery, and costuming. An attempt has been made to show the ways in which church use of these specific techniques are different and how the director must make the adaptations." p. 7

"Slanted for inexperienced directors of religious drama, Conscience on Stage is a book to invigorate and delight experienced directors of any kind of plays. Frankly, the book does not put its best foot forward; the storified case study which forms the introduction is contrived and unconvincing although it may well be true. But let no reader ho-ha-hum too soon, because the author really clicks when he gets to discussing the qualities that make a religious and dramatic experience come to life on a stage. . . Practical, compendious and stimulating—the kind of book a director will be lending and wishing he had back." M. H. Bro

+ Christian Century 64:591 My 7 '47 420w

School & Society 65:93 F 1 '47 30w

"By the very nature of the breadth of its approach to drama and the church, 'Conscience on Stage' will be of equal interest to those directing educational drama. It is as highly recommended for their consideration as for church dramatic groups. The appendices are numerous and generous and include a recommended list of plays as well as complete information on stage equipment and play publishers." William Beyer

+ School & Society 66:174 Ag 30 '47 1650w

EHRMANN, HENRY WALTER. French labor from popular front to liberation. (Inst. of world affairs. Studies) 329p $4 Oxford

331.88 Labor and laboring classes—France 47-1298

Review of the development of the French trade-union movement from the crisis of the French republican institutions in 1934 to the liberation of France in 1944. Index.

Reviewed by J. B. Christopher

Am Hist R 53:162 O '47 280w

"Throughout the volume, the knowledge is mature and sure. There is complete absence of bias in the bad sense of the word. At the same time, the treatment is far from colorless. The importance of the subject is assumed from the beginning; and an eminently fair account of accomplishments and of obstacles to accomplishment contains implied but definite judgments. Dr. Ehrmann has come close to writing a model monograph." R. K. Gooch
+ Am Pol Sci R 41:576 Je '47 700w

"Dr. Ehrmann's writing is clear and his study is sound. The coverage of the period is not even nor systematically chronological, but it does admirably fill a wide gap in our knowledge of labor history." W. H. Cooke
+ Ann Am Acad 252:154 J1 '47 600w

"All in all, Mr. Ehrmann's book is an excellent record and a remarkably intelligent interpretation of a troubled period in French labor history." Adolf Sturmthal
+ J Pol Econ 55:480 O '47 1150w

"Mr. Ehrmann has produced a competent, enlightening and judicious history of the entire French trade-union movement between 1934 and 1944. A publication of the Institute of World Affairs, his volume is a worthy addition to the studies already published under the auspices of that organization. . . Only minor adverse criticism of this excellent book can be made. Stylistically pedestrian, the work could be much improved graphically by the inclusion of handy reference tables and charts similar to those contained in David Sapoos' fine study, to which this has been termed, in many respects, a sequel." R. E. F. Planck
+ — Pol Sci Q 62:313 Je '47 1000w

"Although this book is primarily labor history, there are numerous shrewd observations on the political aspect of the problems with which organized labor was concerned, and consideration of the social and economic factors as well. . . The value of the book is increased by the inclusion of documentary material and very comprehensive reference notes."
+ U S Quarterly Bk1 3:292 S '47 240w

EICHLER, ALFRED. Election by murder.
224p $2 Lantern press
47-24772
Detective story.

Kirkus 15:141 Mr 1 '47 80w

"It seems to this reviewer that Ames' detective work is just about as clumsy as the conspiracy he succeeds in exposing." I. A.
— N Y Times p21 Je 15 '47 140w

"Worthy idea and fast action; but all just a little too sensational and black-and-white to be effective as either novel or propaganda."
Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 25 '47
70w

"Murder-method is new and story pops with melodramatic action, which is retarded by 'timely' infusions of post-war politics."
Sat R of Lit 30:32 My 31 '47 40w
Springfd Republican p12B O 19 '47
120w

EIDINOFF, MAXWELL LEIGH, and RUCHLIS, HYMAN. Atomics for the millions; il. by Maurice Sendak; with an introd. by Harold C. Urey. (Whitlsey house publication) 281p $3.50 McGraw 541.2 Atomic energy 47-4683

"Written in a style that will appeal to a wide audience and making very little use of mathematics, the authors begin with a discussion of the theory of atoms as developed by the chemists in the early nineteenth century, followed by a description of the theory of gases and the work on electric discharges, the revelations of the spectroscopy, radio-activity and finally atomic structure. It is thus made clear that our ideas concerning the nature of the atom came from many branches both of physics and chemistry, and from men and women of many nations." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 44:63 O 15 '47

"Unfortunately, in the first half of the book, the authors appear to have confused the reader's assumed lack of technical background with plain juvenility. The result is a curious mixture of simplified but sound scientific explanation presented in an atmosphere of supercharged enthusiasm reminiscent of a fond momma selling her reluctant offspring on the desirability of a glass of orange juice containing a healthy jigger of castor oil. In the second half of the book, this tone is not evident. In admirably simple and lucid language the epic story of the Smyth report is told again." D. O. Myatt

+ — Chem & Eng N 25:3456 N 17 '47 550w
Reviewed by Rufus Oldenburger
Chicago Sun Book Week N 26 '47 500w
Kirkus 15:208 Ap 1 '47 100w

"Carefully and unusually well written in clear style." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 72:891 Je 1 '47 60w

"Here is an excellent text for a man with vivid memories of highschool chemistry and physics. It is really an elementary book on atomic physics, very well written and containing lucid explanations of the why and wherefore of things—of matter and energy."
+ Nation 165:263 S 13 '47 160w

"A clear and eminently readable account, embellished with many splendid drawings by Mr. Sendak, which not only explain the material dealt with in the text but also lend a touch of humor to an otherwise completely sober discussion." I. B. Cohen
+ N Y Times p4 Ag 10 '47 700w

School & Society 66:192 S 6 '47 30w

EINSTEIN, ALFRED. Music in the romantic era. 371p il $5 Norton

780.9 Music—History and criticism. Romanticism in music 47-3745

Scholarly study of the development of musical thought from the time of Schubert to the death of Wagner. In his foreword the author says: "My aim has been to show how the Romantic movement was manifested in music and how music affected the Romantic movement." He treats of such subjects as form and style; the relation of music to other arts; the changing attitude of the composer to his public; etc. Index.

Booklist 44:9 S 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

"His long chapter on Wagner, Verdi and Offenbach is a fascinating analysis of nineteenth century operatic development. Here Dr. Einstein shows himself at his best, a scholar of vast reading and experience who is yet highly susceptible to the vital impact of artistic creation. Readers may boggle at the attempted synthesis but cannot help being attracted by the author's acute musical perceptions." Roland Gelatt

+ — Commonweal 46:244 Je 20 '47 340w

"Recommended for serious readers and especially for those with some knowledge of Romantic music." C. K. Miller
+ Library J 72:1036 J1 '47 120w

"Alfred Einstein has done what perhaps no one else could have done—he has brought that musically voluminous and otherwise profuse century satisfactorily within the space of a single volume of average bulk. He throws fresh light on many of its composers and he brings stimulation, perspective, and enriched perceptions to any reader, whether he is the informed or the casual kind. Mr. Einstein's scholarship brilliantly draws together the vast movement which has so deeply colored the whole thought and endeavor of the world and found so particular and so passionate a voice in music." J. N. Burk

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Je 1 '47 850w

"Alfred Einstein is a musicologist, and his analysis of Romantic technique is somewhat more trenchant than his analysis of the philosophical and human factors that molded the Romantic mind. He is also apt, like many German writers on music, to stun his readers with the sheer weight of his scholarship, and to lose the finer points of his reasoning in foggy, facile generalizations. . . For all its faults, his book is, as far as I am aware, the only available thoroughgoing study of one of the most crucial problems confronting the art of music." Winthrop Sargeant

EINSTEIN, ALFRED—Continued

+ — N Y Times p5 J1 27 '47 1000w

"This book, which belongs to the series known as the Norton History of Music, is conceivably the most searching, compact, and beautifully written study of its particular period which has so far appeared in the English language. That statement falls into the category of enthusiastic superlatives, but it is not hastily made." Alfred Frankenstein

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 S 13 '47 460w

"It is perhaps useless to continue to protest against American translations of German books on music. . . The nadir is reached with 'accompanimental' which no adoption or grace can make English. . . There are several occasions on which the translator, without writing bad English, has obscured or perverted the sense of the original. . . These are extreme examples, but throughout the book there are passages which have to be read twice and seem even then to carry only a very doubtful and hazy meaning." Martin Cooper

— Spec 179:749 D 12 '47 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p616 N 29 '47 600w

U S Quarterly Bk1 3:230 S '47 140w

"Eloquent and stimulating book." Richard Donovan

+ Yale R n s 37:168 autumn '47 650w

EISENBERG, PHILIP. Why we act as we do; il. by Ida Scheib. 261p $3 Knopf

150.13 Psychology, Applied 47-719

This book attempts to present "some of the basic discoveries made by psychologists and social scientists about human behavior and the forces which influence our actions. It also attempts to apply this information to the major personal and social problems of our daily living." (p.9) Suggested readings, Index.

Booklist 43:248 Ap 15 '47

Kirkus 15:114 F 15 '47 170w

"As a general introduction for an adult who has done little reading in this field the book is recommended for its honesty, constructive viewpoint and interesting presentation." A. I. Bryan

Library J 72:457 Mr 15 '47 120w

School & Society 65:430 Je 7 '47 20w

EISENSCHIML, OTTO. Art of worldly wisdom. See Gracián y Morales, B.

EISENSCHIML, OTTO, and NEWMAN, RALPH, eds. American Iliad; the epic story of the Civil war as narrated by eyewitnesses and contemporaries. 720p $5 Bobbs

973.7 U.S.—History—Civil war 47-11602

An account of the Civil war, which is made up from reports by soldiers, newspapermen, and eyewitnesses from both sides. Illustrated with photographs, maps, reproductions of letters. Bibliography, Index.

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson

Atlantic 181:121 Ja '48 1100w

Booklist 44:103 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 N 2 '47 550w

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 15 '47 700w

"A very carefully prepared index makes the book useful for reference purposes, if one does not have time to read the entire book. Most readers will finish it, once they have discovered that contemporary accounts are more interesting than the accounts produced by those who are writing today about the events of 75 years ago in the South." Paul Kiniery

+ Commonwealth 47:333 Ja 9 '48 450w

"The approach to the story of the war on the battlefronts is dramatic, informative, with the human note stressed. Illustrated with maps and photographs. Recommended for general purchase." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:1265 S 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by George Soule

New Repub 117:27 D 1 '47 40w

"The editors are strictly impartial in giving equal representation to Union and Confederate testimony and in stating both sides of controversial episodes. At times, however, this very impartiality proves a weakness. . . Manifestly one volume cannot contain everything. But even in applying literally the Homeric parallel, one should remember that the Iliad includes Priam, Andromache and Astyanax as well as Hector and Achilles. . . Even on the purely military side of the conflict, sharper focus and more varied selection would have been possible. . . Yet when everything has been said in the way of censure, this is the best collection of Civil War material for the general reader which the present reviewer has encountered."

DeLancey Ferguson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 N 9 '47 1500w

"No reader will be completely satisfied with this book. Some students of Civil War history may regret the failure to make wider use of the materials from contemporary newspapers. Others will wish for greater emphasis on conditions behind the fronts. . . The arrangement of selections and the remarkable way in which they combine to present complete and vivid pictures bear testimony to the diligence and scholarship of the authors. This is a truly fascinating volume and an important addition to Civil War literature." R. A. Brown

+ — N Y Times p3 N 2 '47 950w

"The authors have done a competent job of collating this necessarily heterogeneous mass of material, and their book maintains a smart narrative pace throughout. Photographs and many helpful maps."

+ New Yorker 23:134 N 8 '47 80w

Reviewed by Alfred Kay

San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 30 '47 550w

"By the very nature of their undertaking, the compilers of this history—they specifically deny authorship—have accomplished a needed corrective to the Civil War story." Donald Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 30:19 D 13 '47 550w

EISLER, HANNS. Composing for the films. 165p $3 Oxford

781.61 Composition (music). Moving pictures, Musical 47-30771

"An experienced composer presents, not a composer's guide to moving picture music, but a critical analysis of the media, materials and methods. He discusses prejudices, functions, resources, sociological problems and problems of aesthetics, and the place of the composer in the studio organization. Eisler offers specifics to help cure the ills of the industry and the art of the cinema as well as its music and in the report on the New School's Film Music Project, a demonstration of what can be done with music and films when commercialism and attendant conformism are absent." Library J

Reviewed by Leonard Burkat

Library J 72:1272 S 15 '47 120w

"A confusing style and the fact that the few examples cited are from German films of long ago curtail the potential popular appeal of the material." D. B. B.

Springf'd Republican p8A S 21 '47 170w

EKREM, SELMA. Turkey, old and new; map by Raymond Lufkin. 186p il $2.75 Scribner

915.6 Turkey 47-30293

A popularly written study of Turkey, its customs, people, its past, and probable future. The author was born in Turkey and is now in the office of the Turkish consul in New York.

Illustrated with many photographs. Suitable for high school age or older.

Booklist 43:311 Je 1 '47

"A delightful and refreshing picture of Turkey. It is a little like a story told by a child to children—simple, incomplete, prejudiced, interesting. The author is a Turk who likes Turkey and wants other people to do the same. I think most of her readers will. . . This book, though—or because—it is incomplete, gives the reader a feeling of going on a happy holiday."

R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 9 '47
600w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:266 Jl '47 170w

"The book should prove useful as background and general interest reading, for adults as well as the upper teens for whom it is designed."

+ Kirkus 15:240 My 1 '47 110w

"Well recommended." Dorothea Dawson

+ Library J 72:894 Je 1 '47 80w

"A work that, though addressed more particularly to the high-school age, will be found the most ready and readable form of education on its subject as yet available to the family in general. Its style is rapid but unhurried, its knowledge comes from the inside, and its emotional quality, just keeping on the safe side of special pleading, gives it a steady warmth." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
My 11 '47 380w

.San Francisco Chronicle p11 Jl 6 '47
100w

"The story of [Miss Ekrem's] country, written with a tolerance, a knowledge, and an enthusiasm that make it fascinating reading. There is, quite literally, not a dull page in it. . . Her style is direct, almost personal, and there is often beauty and significance in her phrasing. . . The book is a handsome one, illustrated with very beautiful photographs so enticing that one longs to explore the originals."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 Jl 12 '47 320w

"Much has been written about the New Turkey, but Miss Selma Ekrem, a granddaughter of the patriot and poet Namik Kemal, has produced the best popular account of the changes wrought by that 'revolution from above' which was led and controlled by the illustrious Atatürk. Her book is admirably illustrated; few better photographs of the Turkish peasant at work have been published in the West."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p424 Ag 23
'47 700w

ELDRIDGE, PAUL. And thou shalt teach them.
273p $2.75 Sheridan

47-11281

Story of a city high school, told largely thru the disciplinary cases brought to the dean of boys, who is a war veteran. "Reflected here, in lurid detail, is the current crisis in public education, with its by-products of faculty, as well as student body, demoralization." (N Y Times)

Kirkus 15:554 O 1 '47 170w

"The author, in his preoccupation with the pathological succeeds in converting his material into little more than a collection of superficial case histories. . . 'And Thou Shalt Teach Them' relies for its impact primarily on its considerable shock value." Therese de Grace

— N Y Times p22 N 16 '47 270w

"If there should be a competition to discover the 'Worst Novel of the Year' here is a likely candidate for that dubious honor." E. D. D.

— San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 11 '48
120w

School & Society 66:350 N 1 '47 20w

ELLIS, CARLETON, and SWANEY, MILLER WOODSON. Soilless growth of plants; 2d ed. rev. & enl. by Tom Eastwood. 277p il col pl $4.75 Reinhold

631.58 Plants—Soilless culture Agr47-379

"For both the professional grower and hobbyist. Revised by Tom Eastwood in charge of soilless gardening operations on the Island of Aruba in the Dutch West Indies. Semi-technical information and practical directions from plans drawn from actual practice used in developing hydroponics in various places. Water, sand and gravel culture and techniques are described with detail of operation of a gravel sub-irrigation unit and its commercial applicability. Three important chapters are Technical Control, General Plant Culture and Control of Common Detriments. Selected reference list. Illustrated." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1938.

"The book as revised by Eastwood is authoritative and well written for the hobbyist or the high school or college student, as well as for the professional grower." N. W. Stuart

+ Chem & Eng N 25:3878 D 29 '47 220w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1615 N 15 '47 110w

"The new knowledge gained in these developments has been incorporated in the present edition, and the scope of the work has been enlarged in order to make it useful to the commercial grower as well as to the amateur experimenter. It now contains thorough discussions of water, sand, and gravel culture, and of the formulation, chemical control, analysis and mechanical handling of nutrient solutions. There is an illuminating chapter on special chemicals that influence plant growth but are not, strictly speaking, plant foods. The book concludes with a selected reference list of books, bulletins and periodical articles. Except for several illustrations, very little matter appears to have been carried over from the earlier edition."

N Y New Tech Bks 32:55 Jl '47

ELLIS, DOUGLAS STEWART. Elements of hydraulic engineering. 277p $3.50 Van Nostrand

532.5 Hydraulic engineering 47-1153

"The basic ideas and methods of hydraulics that are usually given in a textbook for a first course in the subject in engineering colleges are presented in the first ten chapters, after which attention is centered on the application of these principles to the commoner hydraulic machines and to some of the problems met in practice. Pumps, fans, and water wheels are studied from the point of view of the operator rather than the designer, and consideration is given to the determination of type and size for a definite duty. In this connection the author outlines the method of selecting the size of pump and turbine which he has developed, and which uses the empiric relation between delta and specific speed. Other topics that figure in the discussion are water hammer, waves and surges in open channels, hydraulic measurements, and ventilation of buildings and mines." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:531 Ap 1 '47 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:10 Ja '47

ELLIS, HENRY MILTON. How to gain pleasure and profit from stamp collecting. 224p il $2.75 Funk & Wagnalls co, 153 E. 24th st, N.Y. 10

383.22 Postage stamps 47-30266

Instructions and helpful hints for the beginning stamp collector. Partial contents: Problems in identification; Perforations and colors; Papers and watermarks; Values, varieties and world factors; Envelopes, covers and postal cards; Terms peculiar to stamp collecting;

ELLIS, H. M.—Continued
From an investment angle; Art of specializing.
Index.

Booklist 43:284 My 15 '47
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 14 '47
170w

ELLIS, VIVIAN LOCKE. Collected lyrical poems; with an introd. by Walter de la Mare.
136p $2.50 Macmillan

821 47-25165

"The first of Vivian Locke Ellis' poems appeared at the turn of the century; several volumes of his verse were published about 1910. The present volume (and this we are told on the jacket) consists of work done over the past forty years." N Y Times

"Vivian Locke Ellis' poems, written in an older idiom, lack the power of Mr. Graves' poetry; but their delicacy and gentleness will win many readers. A poem need not and should not be wholly explicit, like a mathematical proof; but, in Mr. Ellis' poetry, too much depends on the hint and the half-tone. One is delighted by such a poem as 'When the Sun Sets,' and each detail is clear enough in itself; but one is a little baffled by the meaning as a whole." P. J. H. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 1 '46
180w

Reviewed by Charles Powell

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 5 '47 150w

"Mr. Ellis' poetry has a fascination in a double sense: the verse is of an excellence unusually and consistently sustained, but the fascination exists too because it has an anonymous quality in the way that some Elizabethan songs have. And this double fascination is two-edged: the reader is held within the lovely and moody atmosphere of the poems; and yet, because of the mixture of past and present times with its hint of anachronism, the reader is released from the satisfying experience of the poems themselves and urged on toward the unsatisfying one of biographical hunger." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 17 '47 750w

"People whose taste in poetry is subject to flights of fashion will not care for the 'Collected Lyrical Poems' of Vivian Locke Ellis. They have nothing to offer except the craftsmanship of a master, a true voice, and the singularity of ear that combines the sound and sense in a simple line so that something occurs within the compass of the language not known before." Martha Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 30:22 Ag 16 '47 290w

"Mr. Vivian Locke Ellis's collection of lyrical poems represents the work of many years, and there is throughout a gentle consistency and determination in a quiet, personal mood and development."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p176 Ap 13 '46 500w

ELROY, EDWINA. Swamp willow. 278p $3
Putnam

47-30747

Portrait of a beautiful, wilful girl, born in a New Jersey tidewater town. At fifteen Holly saw her father drowned in a "fixed" race. She went to Chicago afterwards, out of gratitude to the man who paid her father's funeral expenses. When he abandoned her Holly worked her way back to her own home, bringing her illegitimate son with her. Thereafter, hardened and embittered by her experiences, she made her own way in life.

"Edwina Elroy is uncommonly talented at narration and characterization through dialogue. Yet the dialogue itself, while roughly explained by the locale and the characters involved, seems decidedly incongruous to a reader who is unfamiliar with the region. It is comparable to the dialect of the Southern mountaineers and slows the tempo of the story to some extent." P. E. Bradley

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ag 31 '47
260w

"An adequately handled story of a life, realistically, regionally framed, but not for wide sales."

+ Kirkus 15:318 Je 15 '47 170w

"'Swamp Willow' is the robust history of an impulsive, trusting and not too bright hoyden. Edwina Elroy writes with verve and a certain grace. But her novel would be better if she had exercised what the heroine utterly lacks—a little restraint." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15
S 7 '47 250w

"'Swamp Willow' is the sustained, detailed picture of an unusual woman, but the reader will have to put up with second-rate writing and the often distasteful atmosphere of the novel." Therese de Grace

+ N Y Times p30 S 14 '47 110w

ELSTON, ALLAN VAUGHAN. Hit the saddle; a western novel. 254p $2 Macrae Smith co.
47-31011

Western story.

Booklist 44:135 D 1 '47

"If not lusty, at least lively enough for most tastes."

Kirkus 15:349 Jl 1 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:142 O '47

ELTING, MARY. Trains at work; pictures by David Lyle Millard. [45p] $1 Garden City
pub. co.

656 Railroads—Juvenile literature 47-6771

Information on all kinds of trains, locomotives, and freight cars, and telling how they operate. Contains a brief list of railroad slang words. For grades three to five.

Booklist 44:138 D 1 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week D 27 '47 70w

"Clearly presented, with good diagrams and pictures, about half of them in color." R. C. Benét

+ New Yorker 23:152 D 6 '47 80w

ELTING, MARY, and GOSSETT, MARGARET.
Lollypop factory—and lots of others; pictures by Jeanne Bendick. 95p $2 Doubleday 670 Manufactures—Juvenile literature

46-11804

"With simple text and many pictures author and artist take the reader through all kinds of factories to learn how things are made. A number of basic factors of production, such as the conveyor belt and molds, are explained. Factories included are lollypop, ice cream, pencil, automobile, doll, cracker, sweater, bottle, and pop. Grades 3-5." Booklist

Booklist 43:105 D 1 '46

"A gay idea presented with brightness and verve and illustrated by lively illustrations."

+ Kirkus 14:543 N 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by J. E. Lynch

Library J 71:1808 D 15 '46 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:39 F '47

EMERY, ANNE. Bright horizons; il. by Raymond Vartanian. 218p $2.50 Putnam

47-2059

Novel for young readers. "Timothy, apprenticed to one of Boston's patriot merchants, becomes involved with the slave-running, traitorous merchant, Ezra Cobb, when his father disappears. Because of his master's position and his friendship with Paul Revere, the lad has an unusual opportunity to get inside information and help with the ratifying of the Constitution." (Library J)

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 My 25 '47
60w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 29
'47 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:265 J1 '47 160w
Kirkus 15:68 F 1 '47 150w

"Although a stirring and exciting tale, it is not wholly convincing. Usable for junior high school readers needing United States Constitutional period material." Elizabeth Burr
Library J 72:468 Mr 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
My 11 '47 380w

Reviewed by N. B. Baker
N Y Times p33 Ap 27 '47 170w

EMERY, GUY. See Emery, R. G.

EMERY, JOHN PIKE. Arthur Murphy; an eminent English dramatist of the 18th century. 224p $3.50 Univ. of Pa. press

B or 92 Murphy, Arthur 46-11923

"A scholar's study of the relatively obscure English playwright whose name is associated with the sentimental comedy of the mid-eighteenth century. Theatres had to be kept going with a constant supply of comedies, farces and skits, and Murphy was one of the prolific playwrights of the time." (Theatre Arts) Bibliography. Index.

"The chronological consideration of Murphy's varied works, his essays, his poetic satires, his dramatic ventures, . . . interspersed with narration of his acting career, his quarrels and reconciliations with Garrick, his affairs with actresses, and his associations with many of the notables of the later eighteenth century, leaves the reader with no clear-cut critical estimate of his dramatic powers. Nor are Mr. Emery's own judgments always sufficiently precise. . . . In spite of the shortcomings of the method, this is a necessary book for the student of eighteenth-century drama, and a useful book for the general student of the eighteenth century." F. E. L. P.

— + Canadian Forum 27:23 Ap '47 280w

"Professor Emery's study of Murphy brings together many facts about the writer, his acquaintances and his works, without breathing life into the account. Nor is the book more satisfactory when it deals with Murphy's plays and non-dramatic writings. Professor Emery is more concerned with the description of plots and the deduction of what he calls Murphy's 'dramatic theory' (surely too formal a characterization) than with the actual worth of Murphy's dramatic achievement. The plays become the lowest common denominator of literature: things written, neither good nor bad; published, but never played." Milton Crane
N Y Times p30 F 16 '47 320w

"Mr. Emery has made a thorough study of the writer and the lively if not dramatically brilliant theatre of his day."

+ Theatre Arts 31:69 Mr '47 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p180 Ap 19 '47 390w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:11 Mr '47 120w

EMERY, RUSSELL GUY. Adventure north; il. by Manning deV. Lee. 246p $2 Macrae Smith co.

47-2850

Adventure story for older boys. Bill Kendall's father was a mining engineer, and when he was sent to Alaska to look for radio-active mineral deposits he took Bill and a friend along. Among their other excitements the boys got in a spot of big game hunting.

"The two young heroes are real boys, and the local guide, alone, would make the book. The dialogue is exceptionally good." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 179:130 Je '47 60w

"We'd be the last to underrate the reality or importance of the struggle of the adolescent toward maturity—but it does come fairly easily in this book with gun and guide."

Kirkus 15:167 Mr 15 '47 100w

"Older boys will find this entertaining as well as full of good timely information about Alaska's value and place in the modern world." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 72:895 Je 1 '47 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 4 '47 370w

"Boys who especially like outdoor adventure, who feel the lure of the few remaining wilderness areas of the world, will thoroughly enjoy the story of a scientific expedition disguised as a hunting trip to Alaska." Frances Smith

+ N Y Times p25 J1 13 '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:100 Je '47

EMERY, RUSSELL GUY. Front for murder. 251p $2 Macrae Smith co.

47-2066

Detective story.

Booklist 43:348 J1 1 '47

Kirkus 15:45 Ja 15 '47 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p30 My 11 '47 130w

EMRICH, MARION VALLAT, and KORSON, GEORGE GERSHON, eds. Child's book of folklore; il. by John O'Hara Cosgrave, II. 240p $2.75 Dial press

398 Folklore. Folk songs

47-11876

Collection of songs and singing games, with music; folktales; tall tales; superstitions, riddles, and beliefs and customs, found in the United States. For ages six to twelve. No index.

Booklist 44:156 D 15 '47

"Should be a welcome addition to any library collection." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 72:1542 N 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:154 D 6 '47 60w

"Though it is labeled a 'child's book,' a grownup will find this a most fascinating book of American folklore." G. M. Cordts

+ San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 30 '47 150w

Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 15 '47 50w

ENGEL, LEONARD, and PILLER, EMANUEL A. World aflame; the Russian-American war of 1950. 126p $2 Dial press

47-3476

A fictional account of the Russian-American war of 1950. It pictures the terrible effects of the new warfare, with casualties numbering thirty-five millions, with England already surrendered, and with the United States wearied and worn out, but not yet defeated.

"The authors oblige their readers to consider whether atomic and bacteriological weapons may not make the next war less rather than more brief and decisive at the same time that they make it more horrible and costly. Realistic fiction like theirs will probably do more to preserve peace than sentimental history possibly can. At least it should give pause to the Bomb-Russia-Now school." Louis Gottschalk

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 1 '47 340w

Kirkus 15:220 Ap 15 '47 130w

"This book deserves wide distribution, if only to remind us of what may be in store for us and for the world." Benjamin Harrow

Nation 165:208 Ag 30 '47 220w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 20 '47 320w

ENGELDER, CARL JOHN. Fundamentals of semi-micro qualitative analysis. 385p $3.50 Wiley

544 Microchemistry. Chemistry, Analytic—Qualitative 47-823

"New arrangement of the pattern of instruction. Citations are introduced before complete systematic analysis is undertaken. Theory accompanies experimental work. Illustrative calculations and problems." Library J

"The strikingly successful integration of theory, fact and practise should greatly lighten the tasks of the teacher or student using this text. In general the organization and presentation is excellent and the scope is broad. There are a very few instances in which the wording is inaccurate, but the writing is generally clear, informative and precise. This book is well-bound, and has been clearly and carefully printed. It contains only a minimal number of misprints. It appears to be a very worthy addition to the literature of elementary inorganic analysis." L. K. Nash

Am Chem Soc J 69:1839 J1 '47 600w

"Professor Engelder has rearranged the qualitative course to permit closer correlation of student progress in classroom and laboratory. In both places (theory and practice) the text will fulfill the requisites of a guide in an exceedingly important undergraduate subject."

+ Chem Eng 54:280 S '47 70w

Reviewed by G. B. Heisig

J Phys Chem 51:1216 S '47 500w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:79 Ja 1 '47 40w

Reviewed by James Stokley

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p33 My 4 '47 150w

ENGLISH, RICHARD. Sugarplum staircase. 218p $2 Simon & Schuster

47-11922

Mystery story.

"The nervous briskness and the bright wisecracking of the tale are neither of them dazzling enough to blind the reader to the sagging of the artifice. It's a good enough stock piece, but not for the carriage trade." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week N 21 '47 140w

Kirkus 15:517 S 15 '47 70w

New Repub 117:29 D 22 '47 10w

"This is the funniest of recent mysteries and a satisfactory guessing game to boot, marred only by careless prose." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 30 '47 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p62 D 7 '47 160w

"Screw-ball but pleasant." E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 30 '47 120w

"Dagwood-Blondie treatment of yarn, although it frequently gets out of hand, has its points, both amusing and exciting. Lively."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 22 '47 50w

ENGSTRAND, STUART DAVID. Sling and the arrow. 354p $3 Creative age

47-3533

A supposedly normal man, who had been married for several years, begins to show signs of schizophrenia. Eventually his repressed homosexuality results in his murder of his wife.

"A sensational exploitation of scientific case history material, this is unnecessary."

— Kirkus 15:171 Mr 15 '47 120w

"Dagwood parallels Charles Jackson's The Fall of Valor in subject and plot but not in finesse of treatment. Puts heavy reliance on details more appropriate to clinical case histories . . . is unnecessarily brutal in the telling, and is largely pointless. We have here a book that does not belong in public libraries. I say this reluctantly, but I am convinced, after long thought, that no library can stock this until it has been read word by word." R. E. Kingery

— Library J 72:638 Ap 15 '47 170w

"Mr. Engstrand is an able writer, and so far as this reviewer's knowledge goes has here drawn a clinically exact portrait of the agonized disintegration of a schizophrenic in a society that willfully prefers to ignore what it does not want to believe. He has delved into abnormal psychology with great thoroughness, and has provided us with an extensive background for his case. . . . However, Mr. Engstrand forgets that he is telling us a story about people. We follow Herbert Dawes down his dark road of violence, fear and compulsive hatred. But always we are uncomfortably aware of the clinical text beside Mr. Engstrand's and our, elbow. . . . The result is, of course, that we are never moved with pity and terror." Hiram Haydn

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10

My 4 '47 1050w

"This honest, clinical novel will be compared with Charles Jackson's The Fall of Valor . . . if for no better reason than the fact that we have so few novels of homosexuality in English. . . . If Mr. Jackson's novel was on the one hand more tightly composed and graceful, on the other hand we must give Mr. Engstrand the credit that is due his book for being more extensive and more courageous." Helen Eustis

N Y Times p5 My 11 '47 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 My 4 '47

100w

Spring'd Union p4 Ag 23 '47 110w

ENRIGHT, WALTER JOSEPH PAT. Alligator and how he learned to play the banjo; pictures by [the author]. 98p $2.50 Dodd

47-31039

Tale about old Uncle Joe who taught a young Florida alligator to play the banjo and sing. After a time in the circus, they retired to the swamps to make an animal and bird refuge.

"Quite unimportant." M. B. Snow

Library J 72:1473 O 15 '47 70w

"Children will like this book. The illustrations and humor will also appeal to comic book readers. At one time, the author-illustrator published a comic strip and is known for his editorial cartoons." Florence Kaplin

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 30 '47 180w

"An amusing fantasy. . . . Fascinating illustrations of the native animals printed in warm brown and deep green."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 15 '47 70w

EPSTEIN, ISRAEL. Unfinished revolution in China. 442p maps $3.50 Little 951.0425 China—History. China—Politics and government 47-4043

The author "has taken the title of his book from the will of Sun Yat-sen, and he has written a long and provocative commentary on the stormy course of Chinese history since the foundation of the Republic, with particular attention to American foreign policy as applied to China." (New Repub) Index.

Booklist 43:357 J1 15 '47

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 29 '47 480w

Reviewed by H. S. Hayward

Christian Science Monitor p14 J1 2 '47 550w

"A bitter and angry book, packing a terrific punch—presenting an enormous amount of information, frequently colored—almost inevitably—by the evident bias of the author, but perhaps for that very reason challenging the interest."

+ Kirkus 15:232 Ap 15 '47 260w

"Informative, challenging, controversial. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:958 Je 15 '47 110w

"The book is an interesting and valuable contribution to American knowledge of what is going on in the East and is particularly to be recommended to readers of Thunder Out of China as additional homework." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 116:27 Je 23 '47 750w

Reviewed by Adie Suehsdorf

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Je 29 '47 1450w

"Mr. Epstein has lived in China since boyhood; he knows the language well; his knowledge of people is exceptionally wide even for a newspaperman. The amount of territory he has covered in China is astonishing, even though correspondents got about during the war more than they ever did before. Most important of all, he can write with clarity and style. When he summarizes, foreground and background are in proportion. He analyzes neatly and swiftly. And when he pleads his case—which is the purpose of the book—the arguments pile up like a wedge, cutting edge ahead and mass packed in behind." Owen Lattimore

+ N Y Times p5 Je 22 '47 700w

"This throughgoing study of the Chinese Revolution is both a work of scholarship and a polemic."

New Yorker 23:70 Jl 19 '47 160w

EPSTEIN, SAMUEL, and DEARMAND, DAVID W. How to develop, print and enlarge pictures. 95p il pa $1.25 Crown

770 Photography 47-4083

Explanations for the beginning amateur photographer, showing the necessary steps in printing and enlarging pictures. Contents: Let's do it ourselves; Developing film; Contact printing; Enlarging; You can make it; So you want to get technical!

"Among the many books on the fundamentals of amateur photography, there is none better."

+ Christian Century 64:306 Mr 5 '47 70w
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

ERDMAN, LOULA GRACE. Years of the locust. 234p $2.75 Dodd

47-30737

The novel begins on the day Old Dade Kenzie died, and continues for three days. During that time relatives and friends, or just people he had befriended, remembered their contacts with Old Dade. And from their memories a picture of his life is built up—as successful Missouri farmer, head of his large clan, a little wild as a young man but after his marriage to his beloved Ellie a man of principle, kindness, and goodwill.

Booklist 44:68 O 15 '47

Cath World 166:285 D '47 200w

"The book is a charming, but not very disturbing picture of Missouri farm life, and the little lives of little people." Olive Carruthers
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 S 21 '47 140w

"A good, though not a spectacular, piece of work. Greatest merit of all lies in the large company of clearly realized characters that people its pages." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 O 8 '47 480w

Reviewed by M. G. Scoggin

Horn Bk 24:68 Ja '48 30w

"The Years of the Locust" is American in the best tradition—honest, hopeful, homespun." George Conrad

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 O 26 '47 230w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p22 S 7 '47 500w

"As novels run these days, 'The Years of the Locust' is a short novel. The reason is that the author, Loula Grace Erdman, has not thought it necessary to overcrowd her canvas. She has highlighted Old Dade and close about him she has ranged those who were closest to him. And she has done a superb job." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 7 '47 850w

"Wholesome as the smell of home-made bread just out of the oven and warm as geraniums blooming in a kitchen window. . . This is no novel for the supersophisticated and cynical; it bears no trace of that curse of modern America, the fear of 'being a sucker' or 'sticking your neck out.' Here are the simple virtues, neighborliness, kindness, domestic devotion, sturdy endurance." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 S 20 '47 550w

Wis Lib Bul 43:141 O '47

ERICKSON, CLIFFORD ERIC, and SMITH, GLENN ERLE. Organization and administration of guidance services. 276p $3 McGraw

371.42 Personnel service in education 47-4350

"Text offers specific and practical detailed suggestions for the establishment of a complete guidance program. The plan suggesting initiation of a school's program through use of faculty committees has been successfully tried in many Missouri high schools." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1038 Jl '47 40w

"The volume as a whole represents a thorough and detailed treatment of an area in guidance that heretofore has been much neglected. It will prove to be of inestimable value to administrators who are attempting to place their guidance services on a sound and effective basis." O. D. Froe

+ School R 55:559 N '47 1200w

ERNEST, EDWARD. Peter's birthday party [pictures by] Pelagie Doane. [32p] $1 Oxford 47-1873

Picture story book for four-year-olds describing the delights of a small boy on his birthday.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 27 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:127 Mr 1 '47 60w

"Gay and attractive little book for four-year-olds. Appropriate gift for a birthday and a pleasing story to read aloud at a birthday party. It probably will not wear long on public library shelves and should be reinforced. Recommended." M. A. Webb

+ Library J 72:466 Mr 15 '47 60w

"From the special rapture a very small child feels when he finds his own birthday, his own time of life, actually pictured, I know this merry, homelike little book will have an instant welcome from its special audience." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 27 '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:70 Ap '47

ERNST, CLAYTON HOLT (DEEP-RIVER JIM, pseud), ed. Deep-river Jim's outdoors guide. 240p il $2.50; pa $1.95 Didier

799 Outdoor life Agr47-267

A useful guide for those interested in camping, fishing, hunting, and boating. Contains diagrams and line drawings but no index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '47

Kirkus 15:115 F 15 '47 80w

"With something in the way of an index to serve as key, this pocket-size volume would be a more worthwhile addition to the shelf of outdoor books. As it is would provide entertaining pick-up reading for the sportsman or camper."

+ Wis Lib Bul 43:114 Jl '47

ERSKINE, JOHN. Memory of certain persons. 439p $4 Lippincott

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-30199

Autobiography of a well-known American scholar, writer, teacher and musician. John Erskine was born in New York city, and except for a period of teaching at Amherst, has lived in or near the city most of his life. His book is teeming with anecdotes of his friends and associates. Index of names.

ERSKINE, JOHN—Continued

Booklist 43:240 Ap 1 '47

"A book that has integrity and interest, as the author sums up his activities in education, music and writing. There is little introspection, yet the record shows a likable man on good terms with the world." D. G. Bennett
+ Cath World 165:278 Je '47 340w

Reviewed by D. K. Aldis

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ap 13 '47 550w

"Even those who have some knowledge of Erskine's career probably will be surprised, when they read this record, at the variety and extent of his activity in the several fields which he embraced so successfully. And if in retrospect his days may occasionally seem somewhat more than life-size in their spaciousness, the charm of their recounting is completely disarming, and the scattered anecdotes are nuggets of pure gold." C. C. Mish
+ Library J 72:458 Mr 15 '47 100w

"This charming autobiography is the record of a fortunate and happy life gratefully recalled."

+ New Repub 116:29 Je 2 '47 180w

"Altogether it is a charming book, the product of an alert, witty and highly cultivated man observing the world with tolerant understanding and the true artist's appreciation of beauty." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ap 6 '47 1050w

"The index, which is entirely made up of the names of persons, lists, I estimate, at least 750 names of those living and dead with whom Professor Erskine has made contact and concerning whom he has something to say. And what he has to say is always urbane, always agreeable. To have moved about, to have met interesting people, to remember anecdotes about them and about one's self in connection with them—here (if there is any such thing) is the formula for 'reader interest' in autobiography." H. M. Jones

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 6 '47 950w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ap 27 '47 550w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 30:11 My 17 '47 1000w
School & Society 65:318 Ap 26 '47 20w
Springf'd Union p4 Je 11 '47 210w
U S Quarterly BkL 3:257 S '47 240w
Wis Lib Bul 43:67 Ap '47

ERSKINE, MARGARET, pseud. See Williams, W.

ERTZ, SUSAN (MRS J. R. MCCRINDLE). Mary Hallam [Eng title: Two names upon the shore]. 265p $2.75 Harper

47-30176

Mary Hallam, a young English woman was driven to despair by her unhappy home life and an accident to her hand which prevented her from becoming a concert pianist. In France where she fled from another difficulty, she tried to commit suicide. She was taken care of by a quiet young Englishman, and went home to a happier life. The time is just before and during World war II.

Booklist 43:223 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by A. E. Gasaway

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 23 '47 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

"This seems, on many counts, to be a rather amateurish performance for a tried novelist of Susan Ertz' standing, but the fact that it is a relatively wholesome love story, with an odd twist to it, will recommend it in many quarters. Critical judgment commends the smoothness of the style, but will question what seems the irrelevancies of the double plot. . . Oddly old-fashioned despite an effort towards modernism."

Kirkus 15:43 Ja 15 '47 260w

"The book is smoothly written and many women will enjoy watching Mary develop in a happier environment, though a wealthy kind-hearted Boston spinster almost steals the show." Margaret Owen

Library J 72:387 Mr 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 18 '47 180w

"This novel is written with Miss Ertz's usual competence though she sometimes appears as unexcited by her leading lady as the reader is likely to be. Her descriptive passages are uninspired and the dialogue has a passive quality." J. W. Chase

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Mr 16 '47 400w

"As Miss Ertz seems to be far more at home in London drawing room than country cottage, the first half of 'Mary Hallam,' with its admirably acid portrait, is by far the better. . . Unfortunately. . . Mary's regeneration is summarily and not too convincingly explained. Thin and light, 'Mary Hallam' is consistently readable, but apt to disappoint those who have come to expect more substantial fare from Susan Ertz." Mary McGrory

+ — N Y Times p20 Mr 16 '47 400w

"The first half of 'Mary Hallam' is an altogether stunning performance. I had not read Miss Ertz before, and I wondered, until I was halfway through her book, if I had not missed one of the really fine novelists of our time. She isn't that, by a wide margin, but she is a better writer on almost every count than several of her contemporaries who have managed to acquire larger and noisier reputations. . . Had Miss Ertz let Mary drown, she would have had something of a minor masterpiece. As it is, she just has another novel with a happy ending." Hamilton Basso

+ — New Yorker 23:114 Mr 15 '47 550w

"The events preceding the finale are varied, rambling, melodramatic, and cluttered with so many characters as to form a kaleidoscope of personalities. Surely some of these supernumeraries could be tossed overboard without affecting the ballast. Simplicity of treatment and detail would make the problem more poignant. As it is, we tend to lose sight of Mary's quest in a maze of action. . . Miss Ertz has written a serviceable enough story, but has given the semblance rather than essence of despair." C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ap 12 '47 420w

"Miss Ertz, with her usual skill, has brought off this tour de force here, in this reader's opinion; and if her welcome happy ending is almost too good to be true, it does nevertheless conform with the rules of common sense and is based on the true values of the human heart. Framing the touching central story there is agreeable humour, and minor characters and episodes fit easily and gracefully into their places." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 178:506 My 2 '47 170w

Springf'd Republican p12B O 19 '47 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p181 Ap 19 '47 360w

Wis Lib Bul 43:82 My '47

ESCO FOUNDATION FOR PALESTINE, INCORPORATED. Palestine; a study of Jewish, Arab, and British policies. 2v $12 Yale univ. press

956.9 Palestine—Politics and government. Zionism. Palestine—Jewish-Arab problem

47-2569

"These two volumes bring together the story of modern Palestine in all its main political, economic, cultural, and social elements. The material has been contributed by scholars in the various fields, from the middle of the nineteenth century through the Balfour Declaration up to the present time, and the interplay of Jewish, British, and Arab forces is made clear." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by M. J. Cohen

Ann Am Acad 254:200 N '47 440w

Booklist 43:344 J1 1 '47

"The work is written from a definitely Zionist point of view, but it is done conscientiously and accurately. Any reader who is intelligent enough to be interested in such a book can distinguish at once between its statements of fact, upon which he can safely rely, and its opinions and evaluations, about which he is entitled to exercise his own judgment. There is an accompanying portfolio of very fine large-scale maps." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 64:741 Je 11 '47 850w

Geog R 37:524 J1 '47 180w

Reviewed by E. A. Speiser

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
My 25 '47 850w

"The founders of the Esco Foundation, 'realizing the importance of having objective, factual and comprehensive material on the subject of Palestine available . . . undertook to make this study possible.' In many ways the results should be gratifying to the sponsors. Unquestionably factual, the study is as comprehensive and objective as can be achieved by an exhaustive use of documents, and will doubtless remain for some time to come the definitive source book in the field of Palestinian affairs. As a historical analysis of the Zionist development in Palestine, this study is far less satisfactory than as a reference work. In spite of its formidable bulk and detailed treatment of the subject, it presents a coherent and, within individual sections, a readable account. But its extreme reliance on documents at once gives it an air of authority and distorts the total impression which it creates." E. W. Fox

+ N Y Times p6 My 18 '47 1000w

"As compared with Barbour's succinct, readable style, the Esco study is ponderous and repetitious. The chapters covering the period through the early thirties are distinctly superior to those concerned with the subsequent years. The various sections, moreover, are of uneven quality; this perhaps could not have been avoided, since the contributors did not all possess equal competence. Of particular merit are William Foxwell Albright's discussion of the Christian communities in Palestine and their attitudes toward Muslims and Jews, and Gustave E. von Grünebaum's treatment of the social and religious structure of the Arab world, the history of Arab nationalism, and minorities under the Arabs. . . . Because of its forbidding length, it is destined to find its proper place on reference shelves, to be used by students and scholars rather than to provide literary fare for the layman." Jay Hurewitz

Sat R of Lit 30:12 My 17 '47 360w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:172 Je '47 350w

ESIPOV, BORIS PETROVICH. See Yesipov, B. P.

ESKELUND, KARL. My Danish father; il. by Robert P. Hooton. 255p $2.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Eskelund, Niels

The author of My Chinese Wife (Book Review Digest 1945) here tells the story of his father's varied life. Niels Eskelund was a Danish dentist who fled his conventional life in Denmark and went to Siam and then to Shanghai, plying his profession in both places, helping princes and peasants alike, and always he was in and out of love. Both sides of his father's life receive full attention from his son.

Booklist 43:358 J1 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '47

"Niels Eskelund's story is, for all its professional and amatory aspects, modestly told, gently philosophical, quietly amusing. The audience that found My Chinese Wife diverting will want to know more of the Eskelund family and will not be disappointed."

+ Kirkus 15:233 Ap 15 '47 100w

"[Niels Eskelund's] comments on human nature as viewed from an international dentist's chair, are refreshing and amusing. He expresses scorn for the racial prejudices of the Europeans who exploit Orientals, while treating them with contempt. Much of the piquancy of the book lies in the racy accounts of amatory adventures reflecting a philosophy which many will find objectionable." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:958 Je 15 '47 120w

"This book is full of the sadness and good sense of an old man, and his appreciation of the comic variety in human conduct, his freedom from cant and pride in his profession rather than in his financial success. We are grateful to the son who sets it all down. Incidentally, I hope the account of fireflies that perform to music will not be spoiled by some doubting scientist." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Je 22 '47 900w

"Actually if he had devoted less space to his father's amours and more to his humorous dental experience . . . the story would have been much more entertaining. But Niels Eskelund, with his fixation, becomes something of a bore—even in his Bohemian setting." Margaret Halligan

+ N Y Times p24 Ag 3 '47 270w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 J1 27 '47 350w

"It is a colorful and entertaining narrative, even though some of Father's escapades seem to verge more on the sordid than the glamorous." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 30:10 J1 12 '47 700w

Time 50:92 J1 7 '47 600w

ESPEY, JOHN JENKINS. Tales out of school. 204p $2.50 Knopf

B or 92

47-30926

Sketches of life in an American boarding school in Kuling, China, where the author spent three years. He was the son of American missionary parents, and when it was discovered that the air of Shanghai did not agree with him, he was sent to Kuling. Many of the sketches appeared originally in the New Yorker.

Booklist 44:48 O 1 '47

"Son of a Presbyterian missionary, and conditioned to isolation by recurrent asthma, Espey's non-italicized story of complications of youngsters' worlds within worlds is a pleasure to read, and enjoyment to be savored."

+ Kirkus 15:381 J1 15 '47 110w

"The psychology of the eleven year old (and his companions) is a valuable contribution to this popular subject although John Espey certainly did not intend to have his comments anything but a pleasant and diverting record of his early life in China. Recommended for general purchase." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:1188 S 1 47 90w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
S 14 '47 550w

"Mr. Espey, now a teacher of English at Occidental College, California, has a gift for writing which the Kuling American School may perhaps be allotted some honors for nurturing. Seldom in recent years have such graceful and entertaining phrases rejoiced ears long conditioned to harsher fare." G. S. Stevens

+ N Y Times p10 D 28 '47 600w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p20 S 11 '47 550w

"Twenty urbane and charming little stories. . . . It is to Mr. Espey's credit that they wear equally well, if not better, on second reading. If you have a sick friend, the tales will speed the convalescence. But be sure to read the book yourself before sending it off. You are assured of an evening of quiet delight." Mark Gayn

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 O 18 '47 550w

ESSAYS in rheology; a contribution to the literature of a new science, based on the 1944 Oxford conf. of the British rheologists' club; pub. under the general editorship of the Club committee. 103p $3 Pitman

541.341 Rheology

"Published under the general editorship of a committee of the British Rheologist's Club, this little book is a contribution to the literature of a new science—the study of the deformation and flow of matter. Based on a conference at Oxford, it contains six chapters which cover rheology of metals, polymers, and liquids; relationship between compression and shear tests; nomenclature; and applications in medicine, naval problems and in the fine arts." (Chem Eng) Indexes.

"A most striking feature of these essays is the diversity of the subjects covered. But in spite of the diversity and the brevity, some of them penetrate deeply into the advanced and difficult theoretical aspects of their subjects. In order to achieve this quick penetration, it was obviously necessary to assume considerable knowledge of rheology on the part of the reader. . . Regarding the general merits and failings of this book, it can be said without danger of dissent that the book is full of cogent and stimulating remarks and full of misprints and errors in the mathematics and figures, probably not too important in a book of this type." M. Mooney

+ Chem & Eng N 25:3820 D 22 '47 650w
Chem Eng 54:282 Je '47 70w

ESTES, MRS ELEANOR. Echoing green. 263p $3 Macmillan

47-11773

Traces the character development of the girl Jemmie during the first twenty-odd years of her life. Her father drank himself to death, and after that the mother and children struggled thru a wretched existence, until Jemmie was old enough to get work in a museum. After her mother's death Jemmie is off to New York to a new job and a new life.

"Beautifully written—but not for a wide market."

+ Kirkus 15:480 S 1 '47 160w

"Good characterization of Jemmie who is deeply torn between affection for her parents, shame because of their surroundings and her dreams of an easier, more rewarding way of life." M. A. Johnson

Library J 72:1469 O 15 '47 110w

"In this warm, well-realized characterization, the novelist reveals her understanding of children and considerable competence in exploring, and dramatizing, the rawest wounds and tenderest attachments of a sensitive child mind." Therese De Grace

+ N Y Times p22 N 30 '47 500w

Spring'd Republican p10B N 30 '47 120w

ESTES, MRS HARLOW (WILSON) So joined. 278p $2.50 Rinehart

47-23974

Against the background of present-day New England is told the story of five marriages. Rhoda Westley, a newly remarried divorcee is the central figure. Her effort to justify her own conscience because she broke up a marriage of twenty years duration in order to get the man she wanted, almost disrupts the lives of some of her best friends.

Kirkus 15:264 My 15 '47 130w

"It is only after the book has ended that the realization comes of how little the characters develop—only the events change. . . Subject matter and style should be popular with the novel-reading housewife." C. W. Roth

Library J 72:1033 J1 '47 80w

"Harlow Estes knows how to take the fundamentals of everyday living and weave them together in the kind of story women understand and approve. . . The author succeeds in giving her characters the kind of virtues and frailties that make them seem as familiar as the family next door. And while her approach to the female trouble-maker is on the light side, she manages to treat the problems of marriage and divorce in a realistic, unsensational manner." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p14 J1 27 '47 180w

ESTRIN, MICHAEL, ed. Treasury of hobbies and crafts; art production by Betty Sweetgall. (Hobby bk. mart) 160p il $1.98 Knickerbocker

680 Handicraft

47-412

Instructions and pictures describe hobbies and handicrafts for beginners. Contents: Whittling as a hobby; Let's make magic, by W. B. Gibson; Make gardening your hobby, by P. D. Christensen and H. S. Kahm; Let's start a model railroad, by G. K. Zern; Basketry, by M. R. Hutchins; Wood-working as a hobby; Drawing is fun, by Walter Willoughby; Doll and miniature furniture, by A. E. Jensen; Dolls and animals to make, by Marjorie Adams; Soap sculpture; Photography, by A. J. Ezickson; Plastic craft; Leather craft; Metal craft, by M. R. Hutchins.

Booklist 43:200 Mr 1 '47

"In choice of subjects and method of presentation should appeal to the Scout age as well as to camps and occupational therapy students."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29 Mr 9 '47 120w

ETS, MRS MARIE (HALL). Oley, the sea monster [il. by the author]. [32p] $1.50 Viking

47-30113

Oley, the "terrible sea monster" which frightened the people of Chicago, was in reality only a sad little seal lonesome for his mother. How he got into the waters of Lake Michigan and how he finally got back to the Atlantic ocean is told here in brief text and many pictures.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 179:126 Je '47 120w

Booklist 43:209 Mr 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 My 25 '47 60w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:211 My '47 70w

"There's some conflict in age level here—the story level is about five, the pictures are definitely more advanced, hitting at the comic strip appeal age round about eight and nine." Kirkus 15:66 F 1 '47 160w

"A picture book which young children will ask for again and again." M. A. Webb

+ Library J 72:739 My 1 '47 80w

"Unattractive book designated on the order of the comics. . . Not recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

— Library J 72:739 My 1 '47 20w

"The story is told in neat short sentences, each of which is the caption of a drawing; as there are no fewer than 140 of these, six to a page—the pages are large—the lure of the comic is felt from the first, but if the comics were as good as this we'd have no quarrel with them." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Mr 16 '47 230w

"Not until the reader has become accustomed to [the] picture arrangement and stops to see the details in each drawing is the story fully appreciated. Drawings which, at first glance, seem only to advance the action, show on second and third examination real humor and fun. . . Interpretations of the caretaker at the aquarium, where Oley lives for a while, and of the people who come to admire Oley's swimming are very human and true to life. There is just the right amount of text with each of the pictures to add to the story told by the drawings." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p40 Ap 13 '47 210w

"The story is bound in bright rose and black and is a joy in every possible way. Children will love it and their parents will read it from cover to cover."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 Ap 19 '47 180w

"Here is a different sort of 'comic' book—excellent fun for beginning readers."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:245 S '47 100w
Wis Lib Bul 43:100 Je '47

ETTENBERG, EUGENE M. Type for books and advertising. 160p·il $6 Van Nostrand

655.24 Type and type founding. Printing, Practical 47-4284

"All mechanical details of type setting and construction and important aspects of type are described. Outlines fundamentals of typography, tools of the typographer and examples of past and present day designers for use in improving skill with type faces, better layouts and design in books, magazines, newspapers, publication advertising, direct mail advertising and catalogs. Description by twenty well known type men, on forms in printing art. Lists schools teaching printing and art, books for the type man and glossary of terms." Library J

Booklist 44:6 S 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:813 My 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by Edith James
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 15 '47 60w

EUNSON, DALE. The day they gave babies away; il. by Fritz Kredel. 39p $2 Farrar, Straus

818 47-11077

The fiction editor of the Cosmopolitan tells the story of Christmas in 1868. On that day his father, then aged twelve, parcelled out his five younger orphaned brothers and sisters to some surprised but willing families in the little Wisconsin town where they lived. Later events proved how unerring the twelve-year-old's judgment was.

Kirkus 15:418 Ag 1 '47 120w

"Recommended for general purchase." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 72:1188 S 1 '47 70w

"Sentiment here is carefully underplayed, as befits the Scots protagonist. There is no drama, no last-minute reprieve. The partings are stoically casual, so that the story is almost over before you realize what has happened, and therein lies its punch. The approach is adult, without the coyness or condescension which is so often maddening when a writer tries to reach two generations. And it is especially moving because it is true." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p50 D 7 '47 270w

EVANS, MRS EDNA (HOFFMAN). Sunstar and Pepper, scouting with Jeb Stuart; il. by A. E. Park. 294p $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press 47-4639

Civil war story for older boys and girls. Pepper is a sixteen-year-old Virginia boy who left his home in 1862 to join General Jeb Stuart's brigade. He and another boy become personal couriers for the general, and Pepper's horse, Sunstar, has an important part in the book.

"Boys, 12-16, will enjoy this thought-provoking, well-written book with its brave deeds and daring escapades. Recommended." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 72:819 My 15 '47 80w

"This is a rousing good story, with a background historically accurate except for discrepancies included in the interests of good story-telling and conscientiously acknowledged by the author. But if the book is intended to show the futility of war, as Pepper's friendship with a young Yankee soldier seems to indicate, it is considerably weakened by the fact that it is a romantic rather than a realistic treatment of the subject." Elizabeth Hodges

+ — N Y Times p27 Je 15 '47 110w

Sat R of Lit 30:35 S 6 '47 150w

EVANS, MRS EVA (KNOX). All about us; il. by Vana Earle. 95p $2 Capitol pub.

572 Ethnology—Juvenile literature 47-30347

The story of the races of mankind written for grades three to seven. It describes the beginnings of the races, their changes in skin coloration, in customs, and in language, due to different early environments.

Booklist 43:349 Jl 1 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week N 8 '47 230w

"Significant in its import and unusual in its simplicity, this bit of propaganda is illustrated with amusing drawings." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:268 Jl '47 90w

"A deeply satisfying book in that rare combination of scientific truth, historical insight, zippy, humorous writing applied to a difficult, burning theme."

+ Kirkus 15:284 Je 1 '47 120w

"The book is reminiscent of Munro Leaf's clever books in treatment; scientifically accurate yet filled with chuckles. Professor Einstein's foreword calls it a courageous effort to bring about an unprejudiced attitude toward the often misunderstood facts of human existence. Of interest to all grades above the fourth. An important and extremely useful book." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 72:962 Je 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hodges
N Y Times p25 Ag 10 '47 200w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed
San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 16 '47 260w

"The style is informal, with the frequent use of idiom—even of slang. The object is to break down race prejudice. It makes no attempt to be scientific and is easily understood by even little children."

Sat R of Lit 30:35 Jl 12 '47 80w

Springf'd Union p5 Ag 18 '47 90w

EVANS, MRS EVA (KNOX). Skookum; il. by Raffaello Busoni. 78p $2 Putnam

46-8277

"Story of an Alaskan sled dog for the younger readers. As he grew from puppyhood, Skookum gave every evidence of being a natural sled dog. But unfortunately he kept on growing until he had outgrown his house, harness collar, shoes, and finally, his dog team. The solution to his dilemma—a one-dog team—brings happiness to both Skookum and Jimmy Tobuk, his new owner and driver. Grades 2-3." Booklist

Booklist 43:228 Mr 15 '47

"A friendly, understanding story of a puppy... Although the vocabulary is unusual, there is plenty of repetition so that young self-readers won't have much trouble."

Kirkus 14:345 Ag 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 F 9 '47 250w

EVANS, JOHN, pseud. See Browne, Howard

EVANS, ULICK RICHARDSON. Metallic corrosion, passivity and protection; with an app. by A. B. Winterbottom. 2d ed 863p $14 Longmans

620.1122 Corrosion and anti-corrosives 46-6740

"Revision of a standard reference book by an English authority on this subject. Study of effects of electrochemical action; thin films; oxidation at high temperatures; moisture; non-oxidizing corrosion; stress; contacts and crevices; water inhibition; chemical treatment; paints; enamels; metallic coatings and tests. Appendix by A. R. Winterbottom on optical measurements of thin films. Chapters deal with theoretical, practical and quantitative aspects. References." (Library J) Indexes. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1937.

EVANS, U. R.—Continued

Library J 71:1052 Ag '46 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:64 O '46

EVERETT, JOHN RUTHERFORD. Religion in economics; a study of John Bates Clark, Richard T. Ely, Simon N. Patten. 160p pa $2.50 King's crown press

330.192 Economics. Church and social problems. Clark, John Bates. Ely, Richard Theodore. Patten, Simon Nelson A47-1171

Discussion of the religious views of the American economists of the title, all three of whom came from pious New England families of middle-class background, although only Clark was reared in New England. All were influential at the turn of the century, and the book shows how economics and religion joined in their fundamental philosophies. Selected bibliography. No index.

"This is a good book and deserves reading." C. C. Zimmerman

+ Am Soc R 12:240 Ap '47 300w

"To read this book is to gain new insight into the beginnings of the scientific study of economics and new appreciation of the pioneers in the field of social science." J. W. Thomas

+ Crozer Q 24:378 O '47 200w

EVERNDEN, MARGERY. Secret of the porcelain fish; il. by Thomas Handforth. 150p $2.25 Random house

47-30267

In a Chinese city famous for its porcelain lived the boy Yuan Fu, apprenticed to the finest porcelain maker. Fu had a beautiful jade amulet, given him by his dying father. There is a mystery about the amulet, and also about a fine porcelain bowl, both of which are solved in this story for grades four to six.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 179:130 Je '47 110w

Booklist 43:296 My 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 25 '47 60w

"The wash drawings, Chinese in feeling, have about them a decorative and imaginative quality which enhances the charming story." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 27 '47 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

+ Horn BK 23:265 JI '47 120w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

+ Horn BK 23:255 JI '47 280w

"A nice story and an unusual one in its content."

+ Kirkus 15:218 Ap 15 '47 100w

"Recommended." Helen Kremer

+ Library J 72:818 My 15 '47 110w

"Through this gentle fantasy drawings with the charm of Chinoiserie take their way, their fantastic attitudes in keeping with the spirit of the text." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 My 11 '47 320w

"It isn't every author who could make the subject of Chinese porcelains alive and exciting for 9 to 12 year olds. Yet Miss Evernden, whose first book this is, has, by a skillful compound of mystery, suspense and evocative writing, done just that in this story of China in the days of the Mings." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p33 My 18 '47 230w

"Thomas Handforth's drawings would make this book memorable. But the story, too, is a good one. . . It is an exciting plot, and some of the phrasing in the story is a joy to read. Well designed and printed, it should reach a wide age-range."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 My 17 '47 90w

EVERS, HELEN, and EVERS, ALF. Sloppy Joe [il. by the authors]. [41p] 60c Rand McNally

47-1533

Picture story book for the very young. It describes the antics of a small puppy who was never tidy like the other puppies, and what happened when his mischief made trouble for all of them.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 179:126 Je '47 30w

"The drawings are as broadly engaging as anything this team has ever done."

+ Kirkus 15:162 Mr 15 '47 80w

"Another fast-paced Evers etiquette book for the youngest listeners." Elizabeth Sussendorff

+ Library J 72:531 Ap 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Je 15 '47 150w

"It's highly probable that the picture book public will take Sloppy Joe to its heart just because of his reprehensible habits, for he obviously has such a good time gobbling his meals, rolling in puddles, investigating the kitchen table's store of condiments." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 16 '47 100w

EWEN, DAVID. Haydn: a good life; il. by Marion Kohs. 245p $2.75 Holt

B or 92 Haydn, Franz Joseph—Juvenile literature 46-11803

A simply written account of the life of the great composer. Includes a list of Haydn's works and recordings; some extracts from familiar works of the composer; and a chronology of contemporary events. For junior and senior high schools. Index.

Booklist 43:104 D 1 '46

"A beautifully made book with inviting line drawings." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn BK 23:44 Ja '47 50w

"A good biography of the composer. . . Some of the musical details are a bit advanced for the average reader, though they would be important and interesting to music students."

+ Kirkus 14:225 My 1 '46 80w

"Written in a clear and readable style especially well suited for young readers. . . Recommended for ages 12-16." S. J. Robinson

+ Library J 71:181 D 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 F 2 '47 160w

Wis Lib Bul 43:58 Mr '47

EWEN, DAVID, ed. Songs of America; a cavalcade of popular songs; with commentaries; arrangement by Mischa and Wesley Portnoff. 246p $5 Ziff-Davis

784.4 Songs, American 47-11556

History of popular songs in America, from the days of the pilgrims to modern swing music. Includes words and music for 58 representative songs and ballads. No index.

Kirkus 15:573 O 1 '47 170w

"With all the will in the world, no one can cover the songs of something over 300 years in less than a page a year and do the subject justice. Mr. Ewen has made the try, however, and in fairness it should be noted that although the necessary condensing gives his book a good deal of the flavor of the doctoral dissertation, he does come up with sound judgments and a surprising number of interesting odds and ends about American song." J. H. Jackson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 N 9 '47 600w

"The final results are rather disappointing. There will inevitably be disagreement as to which melody was more popular at a particular time, but the author does not sufficiently explain what the songs were like or why they achieved popularity. There are rewarding pages for the nostalgic reader, but he will have to have an exceptional memory." W. G. Tyrrell

+ N Y Times p56 N 23 '47 220w

"Mr. Ewen's book has its merits, though it suggests a dissertation written for a Master's, let's say. That's because, for whatever reason, Mr. Ewen didn't really give himself a chance. A matter of 246 pages, including 58 songs, is just not enough in which to tell the story he sets out to tell." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 22 '47
470w

EWERS, JOHN KEITH. Written in sand; il. by Avery Johnson. 160p $2.50 Dutton
Folklore, Australian 47-4736

"Folk tales from the Wonkonguru tribe in the 'Dead Heart of Australia.' Woma, the carpet snake, Yerumba, the honey-ant, and others tell the boy, Ngangan, such legends as 'How the First Rains Came,' 'Why the Black Swan's Beak is Edged with Red.'" Library J

Booklist 44:74 O 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p3a N 19 '47
100w

"Most of the stories are humorous, all of them have the fascination of primitive imagination. Avery Johnson's drawings make a fitting accompaniment." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:357 S '47 90w

Kirkus 15:336 J1 1 '47 170w

"Not a first purchase necessity but a good addition to the folklore collection." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 72:1197 S 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O
5 '47 280w

"John Ewers, an Australian, has, with only very rare lapses into modern thought, presented these tales with what seems to an outlander a remarkable fidelity to their primitive spirit. This is an unusual book for 7- to 10-year-olds, with striking illustrations." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p36 O 12 '47 200w

Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 15 '47 1100w

EWING, ALFRED CYRIL. The individual, the state and world government. 322p $4 Macmillan

320 State, The. Individualism, Democracy, International cooperation 47-1232

A philosophical study of the outstanding problems of today—the relations between the individual and society or the state, the meanings of democracy, totalitarianism, international cooperation. The author is lecturer in moral science in the University of Cambridge. Index.

"There is much of value in the book, and it is pervaded by a realization of social necessities and a recognition of ethical imperatives. However, it cannot be considered an important contribution to political philosophy." M. E. Oatman

Am Pol Sci R 41:1208 D '47 700w

"Mr. Ewing's statement of the case for democracy is both moderate and judicious." G. F. Thomas

+ Ann Am Acad 253:204 S '47 700w

"Written by a distinguished British philosopher, this book deals with some of the most crucial problems of our time. . . Although the language is occasionally abstruse, the book presents an enlightened discussion of vital issues which can be read with profit by anyone interested in public affairs." E. McN. Burns

+ Christian Century 64:590 My 7 '47 800w

Current Hist 12:500 My '47 60w

Reviewed by M. W. Gross

J Philos 45:22 Ja 1 '48 1500w

Kirkus 14:633 D 15 '46 150w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay

+ Library J 72:384 Mr 1 '47 120w

Manchester Guardian p3 O 3 '47 420w

"It is only in his concluding chapter on 'International Government and the Prevention of War' that Dr. Ewing deals concretely with definite issues of modern politics. . . 'The Individual, the State, and World Government' is worth close reading as a statement of views held widely by philosophers and laymen in Great Britain." Robert Strausz-Hupé

N Y Times p16 Ag 24 '47 700w

School & Society 66:15 J1 5 '47 30w

Social Studies 38:240 My '47 20w

Reviewed by M. R. Blake

Survey G 36:491 S '47 900w

EWING, ANNEMARIE. Little Gate. 278p $2.75 Rinehart

47-2898

"A lively narrative of the jazz era, its swing of fortune as well as its swing of sound. It traces the career of Joe Geddes from his home town in Iowa to Chicago and New York, a struggle for success with inspiring as well as sordid notes." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Kirkus 15:138 Mr 1 '47 120w

"Tender, convincing, worth-while." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 72:732 My 1 '47 80w

"If it is reminiscent of other stories in the same vein, the fault is not the author's but the theme's limitations." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26
My 25 '47 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 27 '47
120w

EWING, CLAUDE H., and HARRIS, HARVEY

A. Practical instruction for paper hanging; complete textbook covering tools, processes and elements for hanging paper on walls, ceilings, and panels. 223p il $2 Drake, F. J. 698.6 Paper hanging 46-7364

"Five parts of this textbook are arranged as 'jobs' or lessons each one of which is meant to teach an operation in the hanging of wall paper. The sixth part, straightforward exposition, deals with the preparation of walls and ceilings to receive paper. The book is intended for use in organized courses in trade schools. On the other hand, the homeowner who hangs his own wall paper may find in it many 'pointers.' A considerable portion of the book was published by McGraw-Hill in 1930-31 under the title: Instruction Manuals for Paper Hangers." (N Y New Tech Bks) No index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:227 F 1 '47 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:54 J1 '47

EWING, CORTEZ ARTHUR MILTON. Congressional elections, 1896-1944; the sectional basis of political democracy in the House of representatives. 110p $2 Univ. of Okla. press

328.73 U.S. Congress. House of representatives 47-31040

"A statistical study of contests for seats in the lower house of the national legislature during the last forty-eight years and an attempt to draw conclusions from that study concerning the effect of sectional influences on the country's political complexion." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"In spite of lapses in the narrative, political scientists may well find the book a handy reference work for important as well as merely unusual figures in the elections of the past fifty years." H. R. Penniman

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1224 D '47 1000w

Reviewed by Harry Baehr

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p39
N 23 '47 310w

Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger

N Y Times p12 Ja 18 '48 550w

EWING, C. A. M.—Continued

"Clear charts and graphs, accompanied by a readable and perceptive commentary, Dr. Ewing has assembled every conceivable type of statistic dealing with the congressional elections of the past 50 years—invaluable data for anyone concerned with such questions as the nature of sectional representation, the function of the Solid South, or the role of third parties." A. P. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 9 '47 70w

EWING, MRS JULIANA HORATIA (GATTY).
Brownies; adapted from the story; with pictures by Katherine Milhous. 50p $1.50 Scribner

An adaptation of Mrs Ewing's famous story about the Brownies, first published in 1870 as the title story in a book of children's stories. It is here published separately, with a preface by the National director of girl scouts, who states that Brownie Scouts should feel this story belongs to them, and that their name was suggested by it.

Booklist 43:140 Ja 1 '47

"A lively story." Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 16 '47 150w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p5 Ag 26 '47 180w

Kirkus 14:523 O 15 '46 90w

"Attractive format with many illustrations in color by Katherine Milhous. Recommended." Ruth Bostwick

+ Library J 72:83 Ja 1 '47 90w

EYSSSEN, MRS MARGUERITE. Go-devil. 314p $2.50 Doubleday

47-1747

A story of the opening up of the oil country in Western Pennsylvania nearly a century ago.

Reviewed by Clinton Textor

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 23 '47 270w

Kirkus 14:623 D 15 '46 170w

"Miss Eyssen's plot is flamboyant and so is her style." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 Mr 30 '47 180w

"Mrs. Eyssen's novel leaves Rand Bole temporarily triumphant over Rockefeller. But even as a prettied-up romantic novel, it is a good, vigorous story she tells, tapping the resources of raw power that created industrial America." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p12 F 23 '47 700w

"The Pennsylvania oil boom of nearly a century ago, a subject which Miss Eyssen gives every indication of knowing thoroughly, is the real hero of this novel. Unfortunately, the story is overloaded with strong, untamed men and suffering women, and all that gushes is not oil." Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 16 '47 50w

EZEKIEL, MORDECAI JOSEPH BRILL, ed.
Towards world prosperity; through industrial and agricultural development and expansion; contributors: Nathan M. Becker [and others]. 455p $5.50 Harper

330.9 Economic conditions 47-1976

"This symposium affords the framework and most of the design and coloring for anyone to prepare a reasonable facsimile of an architect's drawing of prosperity, and for all to cooperate in the actual construction, so that any more wars will be 'built out.' Here are the views of twenty experienced investigators, economists, authors who are familiar with the industrial and agricultural fields of the countries about which they write." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by P. S. Peirce

Ann Am Acad 253:224 S '47 550w

Current Hist 12:584 Je '47 30w

Foreign Affairs 26:221 O '47 50w

"Splendid survey and source book of international trade conditions." A. B. Lindsay

+ Library J 72:385 Mr 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by George Soule

Nation 164:690 Je 7 '47 750w

New Repub 117:32 S 15 '47 380w

"Mr. Ezekiel's essayists have produced a volume that drips information of great value, but which is nevertheless deficient in the political astuteness that would have made the assessments truly realistic. . . . But, if you like facts, here they are in rather unusual abundance. You, as reader, however, will have to assess their meaning." C. H. Grattan

— + N Y Times p32 My 25 '47 750w

Reviewed by C. G. Uhr

San Francisco Chronicle p29 Je 8 '47 450w

"'Toward World Prosperity' will be a guide and stimulant to those anxious to plan a world in which there can be no World War III. . . . The volume insists upon the interdependence of peace and prosperity. . . . But there remain some difficult questions. Will efforts to develop the most backward countries be frustrated by more increases in population? Can we improve our methods of measuring the cost of development? Do we have very precise tests of the feasibility of development both as to speed and pattern? The book will have served well if it mobilizes thought and skill on these questions, and urges us along the only available road to world prosperity and stability." A. R. Burns

+ Survey G 36:492 S '47 600w

"The book is not altogether objective; some of the articles bear the stamps of their authors' political and social philosophies. Suggestive of the general direction of slant is the editor's statement of his hope that this work will contribute toward making the 'Century of the Common Man' a reality. Nevertheless, the book serves as a good introduction to the many countries and regions considered, and everyone interested in examining the problems and hopes of the world will find something of value in the papers."

+ — U S Quarterly BkI 3:264 S '47 240w

FFABRES, ALICE. Anne and Maryke, holidays in Holland; pictures by Oscar Fabres. 94p $2 Winston

47-22175

Anne, who was six, and her sister Maryke, who was four, lived in Holland in the days when ladies wore leg-of-mutton sleeves, and the peasants wore picturesque costumes and wooden shoes. This is the story of a summer holiday the two small girls spent on a farm in the lowlands.

Booklist 43:364 Jl 15 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:262 Jl '47 50w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 23:435 N '47 80w

Kirkus 15:283 Je 1 '47 80w

"As life on a farm is much the same the world over, this is not an exciting story but one of everyday things. Anne and Maryke are very real children. Girls 6-9 will enjoy meeting them. Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 72:962 Je 15 '47 60w

"If you gather from its title that this is to be another of those wooden-shoe stories spotted with dikes and tulips, you will be pleasantly surprised. . . . Everything seems close, warm and friendly because the children are so much like happy, loving little girls almost anywhere, and their adventures, however different in setting, are so close to those of their age elsewhere that our little children feel at home in Holland. It may be because the story is an evocation of the author's own childhood." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 25 '47 380w

Reviewed by S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p25 Ag 10 '47 150w

"An amusing story with many expressive drawings."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:35 Jl 12 '47 50w

FABRICIUS, JOHAN WIGMORE. Hotel Vesuvius; a gay novel of grapes, wine and sunshine; tr. from the Dutch by M. S. Stephens; with il. by the author. 240p $2.50 Rinehart

47-1634

A light-hearted novel of Capri in the late summer of 1939. The chief character is a ne'er-do-well, pseudo-Fascist who fancies himself as a Don Juan. Finally his escapades bring down upon him the combined wrath of his fellow townsmen and he is forced to leave, perhaps to join the Duce's African army—perhaps not.

Booklist 43:241 Ap 1 '47

"It is a slight story, scarcely more than a novella, of small people nearing the abyss their fascist leaders are preparing. It has a certain charm and poetry, but less substance than one associates with the author of such books as The Son of Marietta."

Kirkus 14:624 D 15 '46 170w

"Author is in sympathy with the unwarlike lower-class Italians, and this novelette is charming. Recommended." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 72:319 F 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by H. I. A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p3 O 12 '45 90w

"This is not so much a novel as a short story, somewhat dragged out, but the author succeeds in his main endeavor—to present familiar characters and a familiar setting under the stress of new and swiftly changing events. Mr. Fabricius has illustrated the book himself with pleasant if undistinguished drawings." J. D. Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Mr 2 '47 600w

"In 'Hotel Vesuvius,' besides the text, the illustrations are the handiwork of the author. Mr. Fabricius' drawings, which are numerous, remind one of a cross between modern language textbook decorations and wax crayon color-ins for the kiddies. A reading seems to show, in all fairness, that the book will do its best to duplicate them by being simple-hearted and simple-minded; the prose style, far from euphuistic, suggests that the original Dutch must have been plain as a pair of wooden shoes and about as monotonous to the foot." B. V. W.

— N Y Times p46 Ap 13 '47 270w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 16 '47 110w

"This light novel about Capri makes pleasant reading. It is well translated from the Dutch, and illustrated by pen-and-ink sketches by the author." L. G. White

Sat R of Lit 30:15 Mr 15 '47 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p485 O 13 '45 300w

FAHSBENDER, MYRTLE. Residential lighting. 269p il $10 Van Nostrand

621.32 Electric lighting. Lighting 47-11056

"Comprehensive book with facts, figures and details of arrangement and design of home lighting in large and small houses and apartments both in new building, remodeling, and decorating. It describes various types of lighting fixture equipment, explains the influence of period furniture on lighting fixtures. Covers illumination requirements, home wiring including the necessary National Electric Code, light, vision, and color in the home. Includes historical notes on incandescent light sources.

569 illustrations." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:128 D 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1377 O 1 '47 70w

"The text is accompanied by a large number of attractive illustrations. The book should be read widely by homeowners, but the selling price will tend to restrict it to public libraries and to the office libraries of interior decorators and architects."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:48 Jl '47

FAIR, A. A., pseud. See Gardner, E. S.

FAIRCHILD, DAVID GRANDISON. World grows round my door; the story of the Kampong, a home on the edge of the tropics. 347p il $5 Scribner

B or 92 Plant introduction. Florida—Description and travel 47-30235

"Author of The World Was My Garden [Book Review Digest 1938] now writes of 'The Kampong,' his home in Coconut Grove, where he has introduced into his garden many fruits, plants and ornamental trees collected from tropical regions all over the world. In presenting the picture of his Florida home he is led to describe houses in which he has lived in other parts of the United States, in Europe and in the Pacific area. This volume combines autobiography with a summing up of Dr. Fairchild's professional accomplishments in connection with the Seed and Plant Introduction Section of the U. S. Department of agriculture and will be of interest to persons sharing his scientific, gastronomic and architectural enthusiasms." (Library J) Index.

"His mind is inquiring and imaginative, so trained in nature and so unbiased and adventurous in matters of smell, taste, and the appreciation of beauty that he is distressed when others so obviously miss the pleasures he enjoys. Those of like spirit, with imagination and without prejudice, whether plant lovers or not, will relish this book. The 123 excellent photographs, most of them by the author, and not by any means confined to south Florida, bear captions that, in themselves, form a considerable text, adding enormously to the worth of the book." Alfred Kidder

+ Atlantic 180:124 Jl '47 550w

Booklist 43:270 My 1 '47

"Botanists, naturalists, or anyone with a desire to know more about faraway lands and places, will enjoy this book of personal and enlightening reminiscences."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 My 11 '47 120w

"Lacking some of the drama of 'The World Was My Garden,' his new book also is a revelation of the joys and vicissitudes of a plant-explorer's life and of his own personality, and one that prompts the reader of even limited surroundings to closer observation of the world around his own door. There are 80 pages of unusual illustrations." W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p16 My 14 '47 600w

Reviewed by B. B. Libaire

Library J 72:527 Ap 1 '47 130w

"One reason why it is such a pleasure to read this book is that it displays a way of life, belonging to the age of confident serenity, which two world wars have done much to upset. Unlike so many of us who try to put our roots down among city bricks in time of earthquake, Mr. Fairchild found rich and firm soil for his roots. He had to be the man he was, of course, to take such good advantage of it. You can hardly follow him in his artless and pleasantly rambling account without feeling that life is, at bottom, a very good thing indeed, whether plant or human." L. J. Halle

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 11 '47 900w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 7 '47 450w

Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 270w

FALES, WALTER. Wisdom and responsibility. 166p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

121 Philosophy

A47-368

"An Essay on the Motivation of Thought and Action, with some . . . philosophy and consideration of the causes which move the human to seek certain ends. Fales illustrates his arguments by simple analogies in the animal kingdom, without the impediment of intricate phraseology." Current Hist

"The arguments are not too clearly set forth and it is difficult to evaluate [the author's] main concepts. Nonetheless, the book is interesting for the many fascinating suggestions which the author puts in his discussion." C. E. Batten

+ Crozer Q 24:370 O '47 430w

Current Hist 11:511 D '46 60w

"This book contains a good deal of wisdom on a variety of topics; it contains, indeed, more of wisdom than about wisdom. In the end, however, the book proves difficult to understand, not perhaps, because the reader is unable or unwilling to follow the arguments but because the arguments themselves are not so clearly defined, articulated, and evidenced as they might be. And no doubt the demand is met less easily by descriptive treatments, like the present, than by dialectical." Arthur Child

Ethics 57:147 Ja '47 440w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:29 Mr '47 250w

FALLAW, WESNER. Modern parent and the teaching church. 228p $2.50 Macmillan

268 Religious education

47-1262

"There is today a resurgent concern with religious education and a general dissatisfaction with its present status. Author re-examines subject, presenting the thesis that effective religious education and training must, in the last analysis, be largely a product of the home and the development of a comprehensive educational program in which the church and family closely cooperate." (Library J) The author is an associate professor in Andover Newton Theological school. Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 64:81 Ja 15 '47 110w

"Every pastor and religious educator will find this book full of helpful suggestions, and of warnings against the errors of our usual methods." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 161:16 Ap 1 '47 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

"Today there is much talk of the failure of the home, the church, and the public school in training children religiously. The author faces these questions fairly and places responsibility where it belongs. Often ministers are requested by parents to suggest books in the field of family religion. Here is a volume that can be recommended with the assurance that it will be of real help." C. E. Batten

+ Crozer Q 24:364 O '47 420w

"Mr. Fallaw gives us a book which will be interesting and stimulating to progressive minds within Protestantism. . . Thoughtful parents as well as ministers and religious educators would find a reading of this book helpful."

+ Kirkus 14:549 N 1 '46 120w

"Thoughtful and competent contribution to the growing literature on this important subject. Should interest all educators, secular as well as religious, and all responsible parents. Highly recommended." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 71:1712 D 1 '46 130w

School & Society 65:16 Ja 4 '47 20w

Reviewed by Edward Chandler

Survey 83:189 Je '47 400w

FALVEY, HAL. Ten seconds that will change your life. 96p $1.75 Wilcox & Follett

131.3 Mental hygiene

Med46-166

A small book which advocates the possibility of making the unconscious pave the way for less wear and tear on our nerves, thus proving a panacea for phobias, and ending in peace and well-being.

"I'm going right out and buy ten copies for my 'normal' friends." E. R. J.

+ Churchman 161:16 Ja 15 '47 120w

+ Springfield Union p10 Mr 27 '47 100w

FANNING, LEONARD, M. American oil operations abroad. 270p il $5 McGraw 338.2728 Petroleum industry and trade

47-3609

"Factual account of the scope and extent of America's interest in foreign petroleum, our geologists' search for oil in nearly every country and development of markets by Americans in foreign countries. Illustrated." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:891 Je 1 '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:34 Ap '47

FARALLA, DANA. Magnificent Barb; decorations by Paul Laune. 203p $2.50 Messner

47-30236

A story of an Irish-American family living in Georgia, a family of horse lovers from the oldest, Sean Fitzgerald, to the youngest, Sean's grandson Kevin. Particularly the story deals with Kevin and his love and care of the horse, the Magnificent Barb.

Booklist 43:274 My 1 '47

Cath World 165:381 Jl '47 100w

"It is well done. There's a feel of the countryside—and an earthiness. . . There's romance too."

+ Kirkus 15:6 Ja 1 '47 180w

"Poetically written with one deft character, but total effect seems forced. Irish vocabulary has been sprinkled about with the light touch of the steam roller. Howsoever, romantic young people may find this good for a day dream or two and adults will be no more bored than at the movie which author seems to be aiming at." E. L. Lewis

Library J 72:462 Mr 15 '47 80w

"Miss Faralla's tale has a familiar ring to it: You might almost say it was just so much 'National Velvet.' It is, however, to be commended for presenting horses in the light of physical beauty and taut action—and leaving the complication of thinking to the humans." Florence Crowther

N Y Times p20 My 11 '47 500w

Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:98 Je '47

FARLEY, WALTER. Son of the black stallion; il. by Milton Menasco. 330p $2 Random house

Horses—Legends and stories

47-3369

Continues the story of the black stallion begun in The Black Stallion, and The Black Stallion Returns (Book Review Digest 1941 and 1945). This story describes Alec Ramsey's adventures with the Black's first son.

"A good horse story which acquires a reality its predecessors never had. Slow readers in senior high will enjoy it."

Booklist 44:19 S 1 '47

Kirkus 15:432 Ag 15 '47 90w

"A complete story in itself, it will delight children who are always asking for a good horse story. Those who have read the previous books will read this as a matter of course. Recommended for general purchase for children's rooms." M. D. Read

+ Library J 72:1475 O 15 '47 70w

"A thrill-packed book. . . Undistinguished from a literary standpoint, the story follows in the action-crammed tradition of its predecessors." William Glick

+ N Y Times p37 N 2 '47 200w

FARNOL, JEFFERY. Heritage perilous. 312p $2.75 McBride

47-11681

A romantic novel of England in the early days of the nineteenth century. It is the story of a brave young seaman who inherits a title and a huge fortune, but before he can claim his heritage he has to outwit a wicked uncle and his son and rescue a lovely lady.

Booklist 44:151 D 15 '47

"'Heritage Perilous' is Farnol as he has always been and, we hope, as he will ever be. Here are no deep emotional conflicts, frustrations, or complexes. . . [It] is a swashbuckling novel, as refreshing as sea breezes and as honest as the steak-and-kidney pudding which Andromeda cooked over her campfire. 'Heritage Perilous' is nostalgic, too—the kind of nostalgia that brings back a robust past, with all its vitality intact." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p24 N 30 '47 380w

FARRELL, JAMES THOMAS. Life adventurous, and other stories. 313p $3 Vanguard

47-11610

Twenty short stories, stories of artists, of college professors, of young people, of parlor Communists, of athletes, and youthful hoodlums.

Reviewed by Nelson Olmsted

Chicago Sun Book Week N 13 '47 470w

Kirkus 15:404 Ag 1 '47 80w

"Farrell is no uplifter, but he knows his people, and he can write of them gently. The best story in this volume is 'Father Timothy Joyce,' a glimpse into the secret heart of a young Chicago priest, told with insight, understanding and—believe it or not—sympathy." Richard Match

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 O 19 '47 550w

"Farrell has taken no interest in developing his medium. He apparently never thinks about words at all. The result has been not merely the dreariness and ugliness of much of his work—which we would be willing to put up with in the interests of truth and a better social order—but a more serious limitation that affects the validity of what he is saying." R. G. Davis

N Y Times p7 N 2 '47 800w

"Although Mr. Farrell's latest collection of stories substantiates everything that has ever been said about his serious purpose, your pleasure in finding him still at his guns may be limited by his continued lack of interest in the possible syntactical variations of the English language."

New Yorker 23:132 N 8 '47 120w

Reviewed by William Peden

Sat R of Lit 30:15 D 20 '47 480w

FARRELL, JAMES THOMAS. Literature and morality. 304p $3 Vanguard

804 Literature. Books—Reviews 47-4577

"Second collection of essays by the author of Studs Lonigan. Title essay is an attack on the admirers and followers of Henry James; others criticize Hollywood's moral code and some recent movies, and the American literary left (Farrell calls himself a 'Marxist anti-Stalinist'). An advocate of the naturalistic novel, Farrell pays tribute to Zola and Dreiser, and analyzes, in several essays, Tolstoy as a realist and a moralist." Library J

"Literature and Morality is a very partisan and very personal book. It is difficult to see how it can attract those who are not already disposed to Marxism. It indicates no concern for the artistic values of literature and betrays constantly the mentality of ideological debate. On the other hand it provides considerable insight into the literary philosophy of one of America's best-known creative writers." F. X. Connolly

Cath World 166:88 O '47 450w

Reviewed by H. C. Webster

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ag 3 '47 700w

Commonweal 46:407 Ag 8 '47 1900w

"Direct, sometimes controversial, always provocative, criticism."

Kirkus 15:252 My 1 '47 160w

"Though a few of these papers are from pretty far down in the drawer, they all show Farrell's honesty, bluntness and integrity, and are significant expressions from an important literary career." H. W. Hart

Library J 72:958 Je 15 '47 120w

"Possibly no one will agree with all that Farrell writes here; he would doubtless be disappointed if anyone did. His own pragmatism and materialism, his awe before Mead's rather simple philosophy, his frequently plodding manner will irritate or alienate many. But if his book does little else, it will dispel any doubt of his sincerity. Here is an honest man and one who writes with both clarity and power, literary virtues not common in his time." Harry Sylvester

+ New Repub 117:26 O 6 '47 1500w

"Mr. Farrell as a critic is a serious and hardworking student of literature. His readers, it is true, would be happier if he would quit fighting the Communists, and if he would relieve his style of a tendency to heavy dogmatism. But no one may put aside lightly material which throws light on the values of a man who, through his novels, has a place as one of our chief contemporary writers." G. L. Joughin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 10 '47 850w

"It is strange how negligent is Farrell's watch over the medium to which he has dedicated his life. In these essays, he never analyzes technique or form, but always content and social correlations. He pushes out his own words as if the words themselves mattered not at all. He writes 'equation' for 'equating,' 'causation' for 'causes,' 'vigorously' for 'vigor,' or 'more inevitable' for 'whatever he may have been trying to say. . . As with almost all creative artists, Mr. Farrell's critical system is a projection and justification of his own creative work. The best of his own stories sustain the judgment of his own court. If its statutes are at once too narrow and too loose, they have never been degraded by fraud or corruption." James Burnham

N Y Times p4 Jl 13 '47 1000w

"Mr. Farrell is an erratic and often exasperating critic; sometimes he is sharp and intuitive, and at other times he lambastes the dearest of dogs and seems to be writing in a foreign language. This book is about fifty-fifty."

New Yorker 23:68 Jl 12 '47 120w

Reviewed by A. Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 9 '47 200w

"I wish most emphatically to be just to Mr. Farrell, whose zeal for goodness is excellent, who has the courage to talk about righteousness in a corrupt and evil time. I am open from his point of view to the charge of being a sinful member of the bourgeoisie. I think he is right to cry out in the market place against Hollywood, against commercialism, against vanity. But a world, if he will forgive me, for which he selected the books would be a very dull world, indeed." H. M. Jones

Sat R of Lit 30:18 S 6 '47 1900w

Discussion by J. T. Farrell

Sat R of Lit 30:21 D 20 '47 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 43:138 O '47

FARRINGTON, SELWYN KIP. Book of fishes; il. by Lynn Bogue Hunt. 88p $2 Blakiston

597 Fishes Agr47-70

Illustrations in color, accompanied by brief descriptive text, introduce the reader to more than eighty underwater inhabitants of oceans, lakes, rivers and ponds.

Booklist 43:218 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 72:86 Ja 1 '47 70w

FARRINGTON, S. K.—Continued

"A handy but elementary guide to fresh and salt water angling in American waters." S. A. + San Francisco Chronicle p11 Mr 16 '47 160w

FARWELL, MARTHA. Fiesta colt; il. by Robert Frankenberg. 178p $2.25 Rinehart
Horses—Legends and stories 47-22176
Mystery story for boys and girls of eight to ten. The scene is California.

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 7 '47 60w

"A fast-moving story, with sound if modest values."
+ Kirkus 15:310 Je 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 26 '47 270w

"The adventures of Christy and Ramon and the way they surmount their obstacles make a convincingly human story. The fine feeling between the Pan-American friends is portrayed in a simple and moving manner." W. J. Glick
+ N Y Times p20 Ag 17 '47 180w
Wis Lib Bul 43:135 O '47

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN. Children. 190p $2.50
Duell 47-2531

A story of a group of children living in a New York city slum. The story was written more than a decade ago and first published in Story magazine in 1937.

"Perhaps the author's chief achievement in this book is to make us accept and be fond of these children despite the terrible things they do—to make us feel indeed that we are responsible for them and to ask ourselves whether under similar circumstances we would have done as well with our own families. It is a powerful book." G. D. G.

+ Canadian Forum 27:70 Je '47 210w
Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ap 13 '47 70w

"Even to a public hardened to Farrell and Caroline Slade, this short novel by Howard Fast will have repercussions. The average reader will find it profoundly shocking, not only in its virtually unrelieved sordidness and what will be called 'honesty' and 'frankness' but in its clinical expose of the effect of poverty on the children. . . Language, at back fence scratching level, no vestige of relief in humor, combine to increase the bad taste left by the story itself."

— Kirkus 15:40 Ja 15 '47 240w

"The book will be praised and condemned—perhaps banned—with equal vehemence, as were Strange Fruit and Native Son. But it will be read and each library will have to determine its own obligation." E. P. Nichols

Library J 72:462 Mr 15 '47 80w

"Written, as Mr. Fast says in a foreword, 'with bitterness and hate for what our society does to children,' this book is clearly not Fast in his present expression. But as an early work of a deeply rebellious writer who has turned from the personal to the historical scene, it is interesting and moving. One doubts, however, that, apart from his significant theme, it will add literary stature to its author." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 Mr 23 '47 600w

"The story is told in four-letter dialogue, a dese-dem-and-dosing dialogue that evokes no real picture of New York street argot; in between, we have some weird bursts of poetry as Ishky (now presumably come to man's estate) remembers his tortured youth. Obviously, Mr. Fast's over-all point is that Ishky, and the other denizens of his block, were never really young, that children of the slums will always come to maturity with warped souls. It is a point that cannot be made too often, in novels or elsewhere. Yet if it is to be stated in fictional terms, it must at least arouse the reader's emotions if it is to have value." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p10 Mr 23 '47 650w

"Mr. Fast's indictment of a society that neglects its children would be more effective if he had a subtler feeling for the style and form of his narrative. In spite of sprawling construction and over-writing, however, the bitter story has a considerable wallop."

+ New Yorker 23:114 Mr 22 '47 80w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle
San Francisco Chronicle p13 My 4 '47 300w

"A social document with a moral. . . Beyond that, it is a slice of vivid, sometimes unbearable reality. I think that the brutality and drama of several years have been compressed into a few days, for the sake of story unity. And the character of Ishky, dreamer and romantic in the midst of the muck, is a little too literary for psychological accuracy. . . Yet the story holds. It is essentially true stuff, and therefore effective and unforgettable." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:59 Ap 12 '47 250w

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN. Clarkton; a novel. 239p $2.75 Duell 47-31432

Story of a strike in a Massachusetts mill town written from a Marxist point of view.

Booklist 44:68 O 15 '47

"If you have any Communist friends, this book would undoubtedly make an acceptable Christmas present for them—if they haven't already bought it. Anyone else probably wouldn't thank you for it. . . Howard Fast has written some good proletarian novels, but Clarkton indicates that he has degenerated into a mere party hack." E. Fowke

— Canadian Forum 27:213 D '47 420w

"There's plenty that readers will find distasteful. A tract perhaps, definitely controversial and not negligible."

+ Kirkus 15:377 J1 15 '47 160w

Reviewed by R. E. Kingery
Library J 72:1193 S 1 '47 140w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 117:28 N 3 '47 700w

Reviewed by Richard Spinney
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 O 12 '47 600w

"Beneath the surface of Mr. Fast's easy melodrama, the red undershirt is plain as the rising sun. Since this is still presumably a free country, it is Mr. Fast's privilege to insist that the red undershirt is also a suit of shining mail, that the American worker is doomed without it. It is also our privilege to note that he has failed to prove this point. . . Clarkton, like most of Mr. Fast's output, is continuously readable—and, in spots, even engrossing. But when you've closed this slim philippic, you'll wonder why you ever stayed the distance." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p4 S 28 '47 700w

"Mr. Fast handles this contemporary story . . . with considerably more grace and subtlety than you might expect. Instead of making use of the occasion to issue a packet of Marxist bulls, he keeps an extremely firm grip on himself as a novelist and treats the disparate members of the social group under study—a number of Communists, a professional strikebreaker, a bewildered industrialist, and a Catholic priest—with very nearly equal deference and understanding. A nicely turned, convincing performance."

+ New Yorker 23:104 O 4 '47 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 23 '47 470w

"Granted that the novel is a flexible medium, and that the American novel is in need of some new blood, then Mr. Fast may be considered to have made an original contribution. But it seems to me that in parodying the contemporary Soviet manner with no more of a smile than you might expect of Vishinsky, he may mislead some of his younger readers into taking Clarkton seriously." Harry Bull

Sat R of Lit 30:33 N 1 '47 400w

FAST, JULIUS. Walk in shadow; a novel.
244p $2.50 Rinehart

47-31431

Psychological study of a man who murders to avenge a friend, and then becomes mentally unbalanced from evading the results of his act. When the woman for whom the murder was done lets him down he kills her, too.

Kirkus 15:375 J1 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by J. W. Rogers

Library J 72:1107 Ag '47 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 N
23 '47 180w

"Julius Fast has previously written two successful detective stories. This book does not belong in that category. It is a profoundly moving novel of crime and punishment—of the downfall of a once honorable man who became a murderer." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p40 O 5 '47 280w

"Mr. Fast's prose is mature, but his moral is at best adolescent."

New Yorker 23:125 O 11 '47 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 12 '47
60w

Sat R of Lit 30:41 O 25 '47 40w

FAULKNER, EDWARD HUBERT. Second look. 193p $2 Univ. of Okla. press

631.45 Soil conservation. Soils Agr47-261

"The author of the now famous 'Plowman's Folly,' has written another book. . . In it he re-examines, elaborates, or modifies parts of 'Plowman's Folly' and sets forth new evidence. But the book is by no means a sequel or a repeat performance; it is an extension of the earlier book and stands quite on its own largely because of the great emphasis placed upon organic material as the fundamental of a good agriculture." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 44:6 S 1 '47

"An excellent job of restatement and clarification. Essentially a revision and amplification of the famous 'Plowman's Folly,' the new book is fully as controversial and original as its predecessor, but is free from the ambiguities and vagaries." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Je 22 '47
600w

Christian Science Monitor p12 J1 15 '47
550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 J1 '47

"Faulkner in his way has done a lot of good. For the first time he has made many people aware of the danger of erosion and of the superiority of trash cultivation. His book will be read both by those who like and dislike it. It should have a success comparable to his first one." Angus McDonald

+ New Repub 117:31 S 22 '47 550w

Reviewed by P. M. Wagner

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 J1
27 '47 850w

"It would be astonishing and unfortunate if the wide array of readers this book should reach regard all such preachments and sallies as irrefutable. But it would be a far greater loss not to have Ed Faulkner doing his thinking and questioning and needling. His new book is an even better book, by and large, than 'Plowman's Folly.'" Russell Lord

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 3 '47 750w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 11 '47
650w

"Provocative, stimulating, and controversial book." Louis Bromfield

+ Sat R of Lit 30:19 J1 5 '47 950w

"Although A Second Look may be considered a defense of the earlier work, most readers will agree that the author has put forth courageously ideas about the use of land which are definitely related to the well-being of people everywhere."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:298 S '47 280w

FAULKNER, HAROLD UNDERWOOD, and KEPNER, TYLER. America: its history and people. 4th ed 949p il $4 Harper

973 U.S.—History

47-1433

"Revised (fourth) edition of this history, brought up to 1946 by inclusion of an outline of activities in World War II, and the preliminary negotiations for peace and world organization." (Current Hist) For earlier editions see Book Review Digest 1935, 1938.

"From the pedagogical standpoint, this is an excellent book. The illustrations are numerous, varied, and in general are wisely selected and presented. The teaching aids are numerous, many of them are adaptable to different age and ability levels, and there is variety and suggestiveness throughout the different units. . . While this volume has been prepared as a textbook, the publishers are also advertising it as an excellent reference book for the home. The volume of sales that they may realize in this manner is hard to forecast, but the book would seem amply to justify the publishers' claim for its value as a home-reference work."

R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 18
'47 600w

Current Hist 12:371 Ap '47 50w

"This reviewer feels that the merits of America: Its History and People are quite sufficient to account for the popularity which it has attained." M. P. Allen

+ Social Educ 11:285 O '47 450w

"In the reviewer's opinion the advantages the new edition has to offer over the widely used former edition are an improved general appearance, better suggested activities and reading lists, and some significant new interpretations."

+ Social Studies 38:277 O '47 240w

FAURE, RAOUL COHEN. Mister St. John.
279p $2.75 Harper

47-4219

On the night that was to be his last Dr Elian, famous head surgeon of a large hospital, reviewed his thirty years of success, and wondered if he had made a mistake to rule out love. At that point the Devil, disguised as a human being with the name, Mister St John, appeared. In a dream the doctor is a young man again, and this time he makes up for the pleasures he had lost.

"A time fantasy of some spiritual seriousness, this in its mountain scenes has a certain glow, that is not sustained throughout the rest of the book. Not of widest appeal."

Kirkus 15:193 Ap 1 '47 170w

"Author of The Spear in the Sand has contrived an ingenious fantasy but most readers will find it slow, hard going." H. G. Kelley

Library J 72:887 Je 1 '47 70w

"The rich talent which Mr. Faure showed in 'The Spear in the Sand' is evident on every page of 'Mister St. John,' yet the book is more a brilliant exercise in prose and imagination, more a display of sheer talent, than the fine novel it might have been had Mr. St. John tiptoed out on Page 65 and left Dr. Elian to make his way alone against the peak of his great mistake. Even so, it is a book which gives delight and stimulation throughout its brief length; its author is one of the recent writers of genuine tales." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je
22 '47 750w

"The love scenes are highly erotic and, though intense and vivid and credible, have perhaps more of the common touch than other elements in the book. And, like some other scenes, they are carried on a little too long. Nevertheless, the very prolongation of these strange and intensely felt visions gives the reader time to enter fully into Raoul Faure's imaginative world. It is a peculiar and limited world—and yet one that so extends and illuminates some aspects of ordinary experience that it becomes an enlargement of life itself."

R. G. Davis

+ N Y Times p7 Je 8 '47 700w

FAURE, R. C.—Continued

Reviewed by Hamilton Basso

New Yorker 23:94 Je 14 '47 160w

"Faure's new novel bears out everything the critics said of his first. Wholly unlike that earlier novel, it is as well done, as imaginative, in every way as fine a piece of work. And, like that earlier novel, it will remind you of nothing you've ever read before. Faure is what you could call an 'original,' and no doubt about it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 19 '47 600w

"About what Mr. Faure has to say: he has much to say and it's almost all well worth saying. But the unfortunate manner in which he has chosen to speak his heart and mind annihilates, almost completely, the value of his thought. . . Mr. Faure, next time you tell the truth please make it less of a bore. Don't confuse it with bad stage management. Remember that you are an artist and a novelist. If you want to tell the truth in a novel, write a novel—the kind of novel you know how to write so brilliantly. Please do not give us a series of turgid dialogues." Leo Lerman

— + Sat R of Lit 30:21 Je 21 '47 950w

FAUS, WILLIAM ARTHUR. Genius of the prophets. 190p $1.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury
224 Bible. Old Testament—Prophetical books 46-20665

"Current studies of the [Hebrew] prophets vary in approach from historical accounts of the successive individuals, to serious studies of prophecy as a religious phenomenon, and weighty expositions of prophetic theology. Faus' book takes a sort of medial position. He arranges most of his material on five aspects of the activity of the prophets: they were 'realists . . . men of hope . . . confessors . . . men of vision . . . (and) preachers.' The treatment throughout is made vital with an obvious enthusiasm, and is embellished with references to the literary features of the prophets, and with sketches of 'life situations' (until perhaps one grows a trifle weary of the phrase!). There is here no effort to provide a rounded picture of these remarkable ancient figures, but only to consider chosen sidelights on their character, and most of all to employ such insights for their religious relevance." Crozer Q

"The theme of the message of the prophets has been treated often, but Dr. Faus has found a new approach. Thoroughly acquainted as he is with the academic approach to the Bible, he has nevertheless been able to achieve a life-situation approach. He strikes the proper balance between the idealism of the prophets and their sense of reality." J. A. Maynard

+ Churchman 161:16 Ap 1 '47 120w

"The book is open to some measure of adverse appraisal, on the grounds of its treatment of critical questions. Apart from such routine matters as acceptance of 'Second' and Third Isaiah, there is an astonishing lack of discrimination among the contents of the prophetic books. . . Rather better is the treatment of the problem of ecstasy; Faus wisely limits it rigidly, so far as the writing prophets were concerned, although even so he is in doubtful position in ascribing it to Amos, and to Zechariah. Obviously the acceptance of Ezekiel's psychic abnormality is also but a part of the failure of critical discrimination just now mentioned. Rather more serious is one's feeling of some disappointment with the actual structure and content of the exposition of the prophets. . . The book has much that is commendable, and, it is to be hoped, will serve to make more real many phases of the prophets' life and faith." W. A. Irwin

+ — Crozer Q 24:267 Ji '47 650w

"A treatment of the prophets that should prove of special help to religious workers and 'the average Bible student' who have neither time nor occasion to engage in a detailed study of these heroes of faith. For his presentation the author has skillfully used the large technical literature dealing with the life and work of the prophets." H. K. Ladwig

+ J Religion 27:305 O '47 200w

FAUSSET, HUGH L'ANSON. Poets and pundits; a collection of essays. 319p $3.50 Yale univ. press

824

"A volume of critical essays. . . The various essays have a clear unity of method and purpose deriving from Mr. Fausset's view of the individual's life and the general life of Western man since the Renaissance. In both he sees an original integrity broken by the divisions of self-consciousness, and he believes that 'destruction of the Negation and redemption of the Contraries' is the task to which humanity is now called if it is not to destroy itself. The last part of the book touches on the mystical, as distinct from poetic, experience through which he believes this task may be achieved." Manchester Guardian

"Mr. Fausset's rare gifts and fine scholarship make him competent to cope with questions of craftsmanship, but his passionate concern is with the ideas that are to save or sink us. This is an age whose literature is journalism, but one believes that even so, many readers will be found for a book written in a style so precise, so beautiful, so crystal, and revealing such deep, spiritual insights." Margaret Meagher

+ Cath World 166:89 O '47 600w

Reviewed by R. H. Goodale

Christian Century 64:877 Jl 16 '47 950w

"If these essays are for the most part rewarding appraisals of literature, they also tend to reveal some fatal flaws of contemporary critical practice. Since he lacks the critical genius of a Dryden or a Doctor Johnson, it is not to be expected that Mr. Fausset's opinions are equally valuable on all phases and periods of literature." F. X. Connolly

+ — Commonweal 46:578 S 26 '47 290w

Manchester Guardian p3 F 11 '47 300w

"To all but the arrant, or craven, materialist Mr. Fausset's book will afford pleasure, satisfaction, and cause for rejoicing—a heartening collection." Rolfe Humphries

+ Nation 165:208 Ag 30 '47 230w

"For myself, though I found enjoyment in many of the articles, the most interesting, at least on the first reading, was that entitled 'The Augustan Citadel,' in which Mr. Fausset makes an attempt to revitalise the eighteenth century. . . From this point Mr. Fausset passes on to discuss Pope. . . Everyone should read what Mr. Fausset has to say about Tom Paine—at first sight an even prosier performer than Pope himself: this essay reveals liberal and comprehensive study. As to the rest of the work, it contains much to interest even people like me, to whom mysticism is a closed book; and every now and then it stirs admiration." E. E. Kellett

+ New Statesman & Nation 33:220 Mr 29 '47 700w

"It is a strange sensation, these days, to read a book which discusses writers as if they were people, instead of psychiatric cases; which is based on the premise that people have souls, instead of complexes. The explanation of this oddity is that Mr. Fausset is a Christian and believes that life without religion is self-defeated and self-doomed." Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 S 14 '47 600w

"Mr. Fausset is an essayist whose knowledge has not made him lose heart. So often literary specialists, diving deeper and deeper into their studies, seem to weary of it all; to relinquish all feeling, all admiration. But Mr. Fausset has gusto. Perhaps it is the very range of his interests which keeps him so fresh and readable. . . Occasionally one feels that a great deal has been left out, as in the studies of Rilke, whose sensuous side remains untouched—and of whom, in any case, almost all is lost in the English translation. But it is refreshing to have these writers treated seriously; to have an argument face to face with them as it were, instead of seeing them relegated to a dim period or considered merely as artists in words. This is a solemn but warm-hearted book." Gwendolen Freeman

+ Spec 178:312 Mr 21 '47 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p104 Mr 8 '47 1100w

FAUST, FREDERICK (MAX BRAND, pseud). Valley of vanishing men. 199p $2 Dodd Western story.

Booklist 43:207 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p42
My 11 '47 70w

FEARON, ETHELIND E. Happiest of men; with decorations by Bernard Reynolds [Eng title: Most happy husbandman]. 301p $3 Crown

630.1 Country life 47-31041

Account of life on a farm in southern England, partly family anecdote and reminiscence, partly history and philosophical musings. The chronicle follows roughly the events of one year—from harvest to harvest—during the recent war.

Booklist 44:101 N 15 '47

"The book has reach and color and personality, yet it is so personal and so human that it also has trivia, dull spots and humor that can be cruel as well as delightful. Four or five of its chapters are superb. Two or three chapters are commonplace. But the whole book is the work of a man who can write with distinction." Hal Borland

+ — N Y Times p16 O 12 '47 550w

"Mr. Fearon makes the life of a farmer seem so delightful that the reader is bound to wonder if anything ever went wrong at the Fearon place. The author's style, however, is rather irritating and his humor is often heavy-footed."

+ — New Yorker 23:115 S 27 '47 90w

FEIBLEMAN, JAMES KERN. Introduction to Peirce's philosophy interpreted as a system; with a foreword by Bertrand Russell. 503p $5 Harper

191.9 Peirce, Charles Santiago Sanders. Philosophy, American 46-8096

"Charles Sanders Peirce, who died all but unknown in 1914, a sick, frustrated, poverty-ridden man, is slowly coming to be recognized as one of the greatest philosophers and perhaps the most original intelligence America has yet produced. . . . Dr. Feibleman's book performs the much needed service of presenting all Peirce's ideas in orderly sequence—something Peirce never got around to doing himself. It is therefore a valuable document, comparable in method and function to Campbell and Robinson's 'A Skeleton Key to Finnegans Wake.'" N Y Times

"A comprehensive book on the philosophy of Peirce was badly needed, but the book which Mr. Feibleman has written is less useful than its merits warrant. . . . For thoroughness and system it could hardly be better; but for clarity it could be greatly improved on, though this is Peirce's fault more than Mr. Feibleman's. Worst of all, however, there is no criticism at all." D. J. O'Connor

+ — Ethics 57:233 Ap '47 600w

Reviewed by Justus Buchler

J Philos 44:306 My 22 '47 600w

"Attempts such as Mr. Feibleman's to win assent to Peirce's philosophy in an all-or-nothing fashion, and to rivet everything in Peirce to his speculative metaphysics, are not doing service to what is vital and permanently valuable in Peirce's thought." Ernest Nagel

Nation 164:521 My 3 '47 1550w

"This book remains in its major part and primary endeavor a laudably careful systematization of an American philosopher who is of greater importance than his reputation as the mere forerunner of James and Royce and Dewey." R. W. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23
Mr 9 '47 1150w

"William James described Peirce's lectures as 'flashes of brilliant light relieved against Cimmerian darkness,' and confessed he could not understand them. Every man sees different flashes; Dr. Feibleman, without pretending to understand the whole, presents all the parts fairly and in what seems to be due proportion. In so doing he has thrown a certain illumination, however dim, on the grand structure of Peirce's thought. For this we owe him thanks." J. M. Morse

+ N Y Times p8 D 22 '46 1450w

"Peirce was nothing if not cryptic, and his passion for system often led him to create verbal schemes which remain empty of any real content. This real content may have been present in Peirce's own thought, but lacking commentary, it is not present in the mere bringing together of Peirce's utterances on similar subjects. In spite of this negative criticism, the present work is important as additional evidence of the far-ranging character of Peirce's thought, the acuteness of his observations, and his profound criticism of much that passed for philosophy in his own day and since. Perhaps the most valuable part of the book is the brief section comparing Peirce and Whitehead."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:29 Mr '47 320w

FEIBLEMAN, JAMES KERN. Revival of realism; critical studies in contemporary philosophy. 333p $4 Univ. of N.C. press

190 Philosophy, Modern. Realism 47-5002

"A study of the shift of philosophy from nominalism to realism, with particular attention to the vestiges of Greek thought which still persist. The author is Professor of Philosophy at Tulane and considers the theories of the old savants as well as those of Dewey, Lovejoy, Whitehead and others. Psychoanalysis and its position in the study of philosophy is included." (Current Hist) Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ap 6 '47
140w

Current Hist 12:501 My '47 70w

Reviewed by Glenn Negley

Ethics 57:303 Jl '47 900w

Reviewed by Arthur Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 18 '47
250w

FEIBLEMAN, JAMES KERN. Theory of human culture. 361p $5; text ed $3.75 Duell

301 Culture 46-7988

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946

"Dr. Feibleman confuses the social and the cultural despite a considerable body of literature that makes a distinction between a science of society (sociology) and a science of culture (culturology) clear. . . . Sociology and cultural anthropology need all the support and guidance they can get. Philosophy may well have a contribution to make. But it will have to be something better than The Theory of Human Culture." L. A. White

Am Soc R 12:235 Ap '47 800w

"Unfortunately the volume appears to the reviewer to be little more than a record of cultivated garrulities. It abounds in classifications which are entirely arbitrary and functionless. Its method is admittedly 'one of evocation rather than of demonstration.' It is opinionated and toplofty in its judgments, many of which have a peculiarly dated quality about them, such as, for instance, that the work of McDougall 'is typical of the best of contemporary efforts,' and that 'the history of a culture . . . is in essence the history of the controlling guidance of a few great ideas.' The greatest fault of the book lies in its murky obscurity. . . . Although the author's favorite phrase, the 'implicit dominant ontology,' recurs throughout the book, it unlocks no secrets and clarifies no problems. Nor does the book as a whole." B. J. Stern

— Ann Am Acad 252:160 Jl '47 280w

Current Hist 12:240 Mr '47 70w

Reviewed by Gregory Bateson

Pol Sci Q 62:428 S '47 1350w

School & Society 65:183 Mr 8 '47 10w

Reviewed by John Gillin

Social Forces 26:99 O '47 800w

FEIKEMA, FEIKE FREDERICK. This is the year. 623p $3 Doubleday

47-2430

"The unhappy chronicle of a Frisian farmer in Iowa. An ignorant, stubborn, headstrong man, he works ceaselessly but will accept no advice. Always looking forward to the year of the bumper crops, he finally faces the reality of his eroded and ruined land." Library J

Booklist 43:290 My 15 '47

"Feikema's talent is genuine. His first novel, 'The Golden Bowl,' showed his mastery of the farm scene and a poetic feeling for the land. His second, 'Boy Almighty,' was a partly autobiographical account of a long struggle in a sanatorium against tuberculosis. 'This Is the Year' suggests that with a greater sense of artistic proportion and with a profounder view of character Feikema may become a major American novelist." J. T. Flanagan

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Mr 23 '47 950w

Kirkus 15:40 Ja 15 '47 170w

"The farmer is a well-drawn, living character. Psychological details are excessively numerous." J. L. Ross

+ — Library J 72:462 Mr 15 '47 60w

"This Is the Year is a large, expansive, pretentious and sincere novel." John Farrelly
New Repub 116:35 Ap 14 '47 200w

"Though it has unfailing vitality the novel is overlong—with endlessly detailed farm chores and rambling barnyard conversations. Often it has the plodding sequence of the farm tasks and the slow passing of seasons. Yet there is variety. . . . Through it all bad luck alternates with good luck, and there is the time-old, ever repeated hope that the next year will be better than the last. This, they say at the new season's beginning, is the year. Mr. Feikema's story is full of breeding and birthing, and it has a central symbolism that likens the earth to a woman." Walter Havighurst

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Mr 23 '47 800w

Reviewed by Nona Balakian

N Y Times p20 Mr 30 '47 600w

"Mr. Feikema's long record of one man's passion for the earth has in it more weather than anything this side of the Old Farmer's Almanac, but it is by no means just another back-to-the-earth novel. . . . The author is a relentless realist, and when a cow calves or the thermometer moves up or down, he is not one to pass over the event lightly. If you don't mind putting up with the exceedingly slow tempo of the novel, it will introduce you to a rich, though rather harsh, talent."

+ New Yorker 23:106 Mr 29 '47 130w

"Mr. Feikema works too hard at his story, but the novel more than justifies the Regional Writing Fellowship given to Mr. Feikema by the University of Minnesota for its completion." E. J.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p13 My 4 '47 150w

"It would be hard to follow so dismal a story through over 600 pages if there was no relief, for the pattern it follows is familiar. . . . It is the reality of the men and women the author has created, the simple earthy language in which the book is written that gives this book its vitality and its fascination. In his moments of exuberance and affection when he is aware that he strides the earth like a man meant to toil and love Pier is a figure to be remembered." Harrison Smith

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:16 Mr 29 '47 1050w

"The theme is large, simple and an incitement to soil conservation. At times the treatment has an earthy swell and eloquence. But Author Feikema works his lesson so hard that before readers reach the end of the book, they will be worn out. . . . Author Feikema excels in descriptions of plowing, cultivating, reaping, threshing. Sometimes sensitively, sometimes awkwardly, sometimes with embarrassing rhetoric he has written a unique regional novel."

+ — Time 49:105 Mr 31 '47 650w

Wis Lib Bul 43:118 Jl '47

FEILING, KEITH GRAHAME. Life of Neville Chamberlain. 475p il $6 Macmillan

B or 92 Chamberlain, Neville [47-1182]

A biography of the English statesman who was prime minister during the fateful years 1938 and 1939. The work is based on extensive use of private papers, letters and journals, turned over to the author by Mr Chamberlain's family.

"[This biography] is friendly, but not uncritical, sympathetic but not sentimental towards its subject. The reader should not let himself be discouraged by the excesses of the author's over-labored style—the unfortunate metaphors, the overloaded sentences, the grammatical lapses, the habit of referring to Chamberlain as 'he' in all contexts, even at the beginning of a chapter and at other places where the identity of the 'he' is completely ambiguous; such irritations become less frequent as the work progresses. Where Professor Feiling has laid all future historians heavily in his debt is in the frequent and extensive quotations from Chamberlain's diaries and his letters to his sisters. These give a running account of his doings and his thoughts with a wealth of detail and a frankness that is at times quite damaging both to Chamberlain and to his friends. Apart from this, the book is without documentation, though the depth of the reading which has gone into its preparation is unmistakable." C. L. Mowat

+ — Am Hist R 52:728 Jl '47 900w

"One of the most interesting biographies of the year. It is not definitive, of course, since much more material must be made available before anything final can be written. . . . In the meantime, Professor Feiling has written a distinguished book, one which every student of politics will profit from reading." T. P. Peardon

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:572 Je '47 700w

Reviewed by Preston Slosson

Ann Am Acad 252:136 Jl '47 550w

Reviewed by Charles Gratke

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 4 '47 550w

"This badly-written volume, completed in 1944, is, thus, a quasi-official biography, peculiarly lacking in perspective. But it is valuable for its use of Chamberlain's diaries and journals and of his weekly letters of political commentary to his sisters." M. A. Fitzsimmons

+ — Commonweal 46:171 My 30 '47 600w

"[Professor Feiling's] work is dispassionate and balanced, and on the whole the delineation of his subject as loyal, hardworking but unimaginative is not likely to be altered as new sources become available."

Foreign Affairs 25:704 Jl '47 80w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 33:33 Ja 11 '47 2650w

"A very sympathetic biography of the English statesman that is, in a way, an apology for his life and works. The author, drawing heavily on Chamberlain's letters and journals, presents quite an attractive person—a man of taste and culture, good humor, and integrity. Perhaps unwittingly, he also presents another kind of person—a man who completely misunderstood the forces he had to deal with and who could write with sincerity that 'appeasement . . . alone can save the world from chaos.'"

+ New Yorker 23:118 Mr 15 '47 150w

"It is unfair to Neville Chamberlain's memory that he should be judged so predominantly as he is by his part in Munich, still more that he should be judged in the light of events that might well have turned out otherwise. Professor Feiling's book presents a fuller and a juster picture of the man and his career. But it is a biography with many limitations. Its author is the possessor of a style which varies from the bad to the occasionally atrocious, calculated to flatten out a much more inspiring subject than he had to his hand. He did not, moreover, know Chamberlain personally, and he has no experience of the Chamber in which Neville's life centred for twenty years. These are serious disabilities, and the book suffers undisguisedly from them." Wilson Harris

+ — Spec 177:710 D 27 '46 900w

"Professor Felling has chosen the right moment for a dispassionate narrative of Neville Chamberlain's career, and his chief defect is of style, not substance. Like most contemporary biographers, he assumes that his reader's attention can be kept by means of highly artificial devices, designed to startle him at frequent intervals. . . . Against such irritations must be set the author's detailed knowledge of British and European politics between the wars and the sympathetic but discriminating insight into Chamberlain's character."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p609 D 14 '46 5900w

FEIS, HERBERT. Seen from E. A.; three international episodes. 313p $2.75 Knopf

338 Petroleum industry and trade. Rubber industry. U.S.—Foreign relations 47-230

"Author, an economist, was Advisor on International Affairs to the Department of State over the period covered, 1931-1944. . . . Narratives of three significant episodes in the American search for national security before the war, in which all the elements that shaped American behavior displayed themselves clearly.' Episodes were: rubber control before Pearl Harbor; government attention to the oil of the Middle East; oil for Italy: a study in the decay of international trust. An effort to find an explanation and analyze the events and motives in the course of negotiations, in European governments, the League, but especially in our own government vis à vis the others." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by T. C. Cochran

Am Hist R 53:140 O '47 370w

Reviewed by F. L. Hadsel

Am Pol Sci R 41:1006 O '47 650w

"The book is of interest to students of foreign affairs. It has perhaps less grist for the analytical economist, since so much of it concerns politics, with common sense rather than the discipline of economics applied to foreign affairs. . . . The volume has a great deal to offer to the student of business behavior." C. P. Kindleberger

Ann Am Acad 252:144 J1 '47 500w

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ja 19 '47 100w

Current Hist 12:375 Ap '47 70w

Foreign Affairs 25:523 Ap '47 110w

"This excellent and eloquently written book should be made required reading alike for our statesmen and other responsible government officers and for all students of international affairs." J. W. Angell

+ J Pol Econ 55:585 D '47 800w

"Chiefly of documentary value."

Kirkus 14:612 D 1 '46 90w

"Clear, discerning, objective." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 72:73 Ja 1 '47 120w

"Herbert Feis is at great pains not to be indignant, but rather to show in detail the process of failure resulting from an intricate combination of irresolution, political compromise, personal frailty, private greed, official timidity and international mistrust. The effect of his method is often that of baffling circumlocution, and his account does not inspire any jaunty confidence in the future of democracy. It is a sad book, without the refreshing bite of the satirist or the zest of the fighter. It is, nevertheless, remarkably honest and discerning. . . . Careful study of this book will repay any historian or political scientist." George Soule

+ — New Repub 116:35 F 17 '47 1100w

Reviewed by H. L. Ickes

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ja 19 '47 2000w

"The same fine, fiery contempt for stupidity that has characterized most of Dr. Herbert Feis' public life runs through the pages of his latest book. He has slightly concealed it by a sort of tongue-in-cheek naïveté which will deceive no reader familiar with his impatient, unswerving and often unpopular efforts to arouse the policy-makers of our Government to the danger of world war in the critical years when it still might have been avoided." H. B. Hinton

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 19 '47 900w

"Mr. Feis, the former Adviser on International Economic Affairs to the Department of State, has written a very instructive book. He gives the authoritative and intimate picture of three episodes with regard to economic warfare; in the background of each there is a keen analysis of the international situation in general and of the complex domestic problems in particular. Between the lines of these stories one might even find a philosophy of economic warfare between democracies and totalitarian régimes." Antonin Basch

+ Pol Sci Q 62:609 D '47 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p412 Ag 16 '47 1200w

FELDT, ERIC AUGUSTUS. Coastwatchers. 264p $3.50 Oxford

940.548694 World war, 1939-1945—Secret service. World war, 1939-1945—Pacific ocean 46-8420

Twenty or more years ago the Australians realized that some day the Japanese would strike. With this in mind the Australian navy formed a loose organization of watchers, made up of planters, miners, missionaries and government men, living on isolated Pacific islands, who served as unpaid, un-uniformed helpers to the government. This is an account of the work of these men in the recent war. Maps on end-papers. Index.

Booklist 43:152 Ja 15 '47

Bookmark 8:10 My '47

"Commander Feldt writes in restrained fashion, almost concealing the heroism, sacrifice and inestimable worth of as brave a band as fought in the war. . . . 'The Coast Watchers' is a stirring narrative." P. J. Seales

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ja 26 '47 1050w

FELLER, ROBERT WILLIAM ANDREW. Strikeout story. 258p il $2.75 Barnes, A.S.

B or 92 Baseball 47-30294

The life story to date of the farm boy who became pitcher for the Cleveland Indians, and has made so many records in the American League. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 43:308 Je 1 '47

Kirkus 15:254 My 1 '47 100w

"Although it is not an exceptional book, boys from ten up will want to read it." Helen Brogan

Library J 72:896 Je 1 '47 70w

"Bob Feller is, in fact, in his field of endeavor, a great man. He'll go down in the record books as a great pitcher. But this 'autobiography,' unfortunately, does not put him in his proper background. There are only occasional flashes of what goes on behind the scenes in the big leagues. There's little or no warmth in the descriptions of the personalities that make baseball. As a matter of fact, there are few accounts of anything more than the high lights in Feller's pitching career, a sort of enlarged record book." Irving Marsh

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 My 18 '47 430w

"As an athlete, finely coordinated in mind and body to accomplish a purpose, he has no superiors in his own field. As an individual he apparently has the good nature and some of the charm of a Mathewson or Ruth, and the instinct to make a good business man as well. For those who love their baseball, this recital of Feller's will make good reading." Russell Owen

+ N Y Times p27 Je 8 '47 550w

Reviewed by Ace Baillie

San Francisco Chronicle p29 Je 8 '47 190w

FELLNER, WILLIAM JOHN. Monetary policies and full employment. 268p $3.50 Univ. of Calif.

330.1 Economic policy. Unemployment A46-4751

"A whole system of doctrines has stemmed from the late Lord Keynes' suggestion that there was a possibility of a number of equilibrium positions in an economy and that none of them would necessarily be the equilibrium of the neo-classical school. . . . The present volume is a critical essay on the issues involved in that controversy. Mr. Fellner is a member of the Bureau of Business and Economic Research at the University of California, and the study is a product of that Bureau. The book, however, expresses Mr. Fellner's views and not those of the Bureau. The study undertakes to do three things: it provides a critical analysis of the equilibrium principle; it challenges the thesis that there is a trend toward stagnation in mature economies; and it furnishes a discussion of policies that a governmental monetary authority may use to attain a reasonably satisfactory level of employment. On the last, the author maintains the fairly optimistic view that a monetary authority can successfully maintain a level of employment which would prevent abrupt institutional changes of an unpredictable character." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

"The study is replete with charts and statistical data which are not easily comprehensible to the novice in contemporary economic materials. Apart from that material, there is an excellent discussion of the accomplishments that may be expected from the various financial devices available to a monetary authority. Another great merit of the study is its treatment of the problems that can be expected to grow out of the politically powerful groups in modern society. The treatment of direct controls as an alternative to the indirect controls through monetary policy could be expanded and be made more useful to students of politics. On the whole, however, the volume will be welcome to those who want a greater comprehension of the intersection of politics and economics in its contemporary setting." C. B. Hagan

— Am Pol Sci R 40:1188 D '46 700w

Reviewed by W. F. Stolper

Ann Am Acad 252:150 J1 '47 600w

Foreign Affairs 25:524 Ap '47 90w

"The book is obviously written for professional economists, and many of them will find it hard reading. The methods used are highly technical, and the style is somewhat ponderous and tedious. But the contribution of the book to an understanding of an important problem of public policy is substantial."

— U S Quarterly Bkl 2:201 S '46 360w

FELSEN, GREGOR. Bertie comes through; il. by Jane Toan. 212p $2.50 Dutton

47-5731

Story of Bertie Poddle, who was not built for an athlete—he was too fat—but who was geared to good sportsmanship. After many failures Bertie won the affection of his whole high school crowd. For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 44:93 N 1 '47

"A sensitive, sympathetic and funny book which will appeal to every adolescent."

+ Kirkus 15:396 Ag 1 '47 150w

"If the boys can live through all his many failures, they will share the affection of Heeble High for Bertie and, perhaps, give the fellows on the scrub teams a little more recognition." Mary Strang

+ Library J 72:1620 N 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by T. C. Dahlin

San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 30 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:178 D '47

FELSEN, GREGOR. Flying correspondent; a Seth Rantoul story; il. by Woodi Ishmael. 218p $2.50 Dutton

47-1830

Adventures of two young Americans in the Pacific battle areas during the last month of the war. For older boys.

"The story of the reporter for a Marine publication who falls into the hands of the Japanese and is saved by the atomic bomb is wildly exciting, and probably not a bit more implausible than the things that really happened. We particularly enjoyed the dialogue, which was amusing and natural, and a great improvement on the heroics to which we were accustomed when the Boy Allies were at Liège." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 179:130 Je '47 120w

"A good tight yarn."

+ Kirkus 15:218 Ap 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by Sonja Wennerblad

Library J 72:738 My 1 '47 80w

FELSEN, HENRY GREGOR. See Felsen, G.

FELTON, HAROLD W., ed. Legends of Paul Bunyan; il. by Richard Bennett. 418p $5 Knopf

398.21 Bunyan, Paul. Folklore, American 47-30871

"This volume contains more than 100 Paul Bunyan tales, selected by Mr. Felton from thousands, each told by whoever, in Mr. Felton's judgment, told it best. Some are from James Stevens' own book; some are from Esther Shepard's volume. Dozens of others are by different writers, men and women who have heard the tales and told them in print well enough so that Mr. Felton liked them for his book. The result [is] embellished with drawings by Richard Bennett and supported by an extraordinarily full bibliography." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 44:28 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Walter Blair

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 S 21 '47 380w

"This is a book for the whole family. Children will enjoy these tales, perhaps even more than adults, for wonders in quantity can grow tiresome; and there isn't a lubricious line in the book. Certainly, students of folklore will be grateful both for the convenience of the collection, and the help of its fine bibliography." R. M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 15 '47 600w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn BK 23:440 N '47 130w

"This sort of book belongs in adult collections of folklore, as well as among books for story telling and reading aloud. It should have long term value for reference in Americana collections, for here is a good selection from the multiplicity of yarns, timberland lore, that have grown up around the legendary Paul Bunyan and his blue ox."

+ Kirkus 15:501 S 15 '47 170w

"Less interesting to children than to professional folklorist and storyteller. It is recommended, therefore, only for large libraries with very well-developed folklore collections." Clara Adams

+ Library J 72:1383 O 1 '47 100w

"The Paul Bunyan Bibliography published at the end of this mammoth volume is worthy of its subject. It was a prodigious and Bunyanesque job, and Mr. Felton has done it up brown, with the finality of Paul himself. It immediately takes its place as a standard reference list. As for the anthology itself, much less can be said." Carl Carmer

— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 S 21 '47 700w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

N Y Times p13 D 28 '47 400w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
 + San Francisco Chronicle p20 S 10 '47
 650w
 Sat R of Lit 30:42 N 15 '47 250w
 Wis Lib Bul 43:148 N '47

FENELON, FRANCOIS DE SALIGNAC DE LA MOTHE, abb. Christian perfection; ed. and prefaced by Charles F. Whiston; tr. by Mildred Whitney Stillman. 208p $1.75 Harper
 248 Spiritual life 47-2077

"For his Lenten Book the Presiding Bishop has gone back to the seventeenth century. These 'instructions,' edited by Charles F. Whiston, and beautifully translated by Mildred W. Stillman into readable English with no 'quaintness,' are offered for devotional reading. They deal with the fundamental problems of the religious and moral life, The Use of Time, Recreation, Temptation, Prayer, Suffering, etc." Churchman

Christian Century 64:306 Mr 5 '47 80w

"While few of us can go the whole way with him, [the book] should prove a wholesome reaction against the self-sufficiency, the 'activism' and the frantic haste of the modern spirit. The reader, however, is warned against sharing the curiosity of the reviewer who wished to know more about Fenelon, and consulted the Encyclopedia Britannica, where he is portrayed as a puzzling enigma, and one is not quite certain that he was a saint." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 161:16 Ap 1 '47 180w

Reviewed by R. W. Schloerb
 Crozer Q 24:284 Jl '47 150w

"A valuable addition to our devotional literature—not a book to be read through at a sitting. . . Christians of all creeds would find these Meditations universal in nature and appeal."

+ Kirkus 15:59 F 1 '47 150w

FENNER, PHYLLIS REID, ed. Fools and funny fellows; more "time to laugh" tales; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 185p $2.50 Knopf 47-6433

Collection of twenty-one humorous folk tales, selected from books already published.

Booklist 44:138 D 1 '47

"Valuable asset for Public Library storytellers, and for family read-aloud hours."

+ Kirkus 15:599 N 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. A. Herr

Library J 72:1691 D 1 '47 80w

"'Fools and Funny Fellows' is one of those volumes always in demand, that can be depended upon as a source of innocent merriment for the young. Old or new, its stories are samples of the food for fun that wise storytellers keep on hand." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 N 16 '47 140w

"A real addition to the library of both young and old, this selection of folk tales includes a Paul Bunyan story, plus one about Old Stormalong, either of which is reason enough for wanting to own the book." R. A. G.

+ N Y Times p45 N 16 '47 110w

Wis Lib Bul 43:178 D '47

FENTON, EDWARD. Double darkness. 309p $2.75 Doubleday

47-4220

An English soldier, wounded in a street fight in liberated Athens, recovers consciousness but not complete memory of who he is or why he is where he is. He drops his English identity and wanders thru Athens for several days, at times in company with underground fighters, but eventually, thru another exchange of identities, he escapes from Athens in a ship leaving port.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 29 '47
 200w

"The talent here is distinct—there is a sharp sense of place, of mood, an imagery touched off by realism. . . A book for literary, perhaps, rather than popular appreciation."

+ Kirkus 15:223 Ap 15 '47 160w

"Characterizations are exceptionally well done, the writing brutally frank at times. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:887 Je 1 '47 80w

"One cannot promise that the author will resolve his secrets or even tie up his story ends in the ordinary way. Call it an experiment, with unusual and timely background."

Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Je 29 '47 130w

"It is possible that a skilled writer could have built a convincing story around this slender thread of plot, particularly if an attempt had been made to focus our attention on the serious implications of the KKE resistance. But Mr. Fenton leaves the reader almost as befuddled as his hero. The Athenian setting is well enough handled. . . The story as a whole, however, is pointless, despite its pretentious underwriting, and marred by a clumsy, repetitious, over-earthy style." J. W. Chase

+ N Y Times p12 Je 22 '47 380w

— San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 17 '47
 100w

FENTON, EDWARD. Us and the Duchess; il. by Reisle Lonette. 209p $2 Doubleday

Dogs—Legends and stories 47-31028

A beautiful English setter found and cared for by the Evans family is the heroine. The mystery of the Duchess' origin is solved by Ellen, who is studying dancing in New York, and who loved the Duchess as much as her brothers did. For ages ten to fourteen.

Booklist 44:94 N 1 '47

"Not only a good dog story but a warm-hearted tale of family life with well-drawn, appealing characters." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 D 11 '47
 210w

Kirkus 15:395 Ag 1 '47 120w

"Splendid dog story with very real background of an average American family. Well written with a plausible plot nicely developed."

E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 72:1473 O 15 '47 40w

"Edward Fenton's first book for children has the workmanship of an experienced novelist, understanding of small boys, a gift for family conversation and a dog that jumps off the page into your affections." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 N 16 '47 360w

"Actually, the narrative, as such, is a little thin, but there are a freshness and humor in its telling, an immediacy of the children's thoughts and emotions and a happy sense of family life—even in its difficulties—which add up to an appealing whole for readers of the middle years." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p37 N 2 '47 180w

"A good dog story."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:55 N 15 '47 50w

Wis Lib Bul 43:178 D '47

FENWICK, ELIZABETH. Long wing. 246p $2.75 Rinehart

47-1205

Novel of family life, the scene of which is St. Louis. The Maclouds were a singularly possessive family, and the story is of Malcolm Macloud's return to St. Louis, after many years of absence, bringing his daughter Nora, whom the family had never seen. Nora at eighteen was a naive, unsophisticated child, and the impact of the assembled Maclouds upon her almost proved her undoing.

"The young author's prose is admirably handled and suggests intensive study. She effectively creates emotional and physical atmosphere and her characterizations are credible.

FENWICK, ELIZABETH—Continued

Unfortunately, no personality in the book excites much of either the sympathy or interest that makes a work of fiction live in the memory." Helen Long

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 10 '47 320w

Kirkus 14:607 D 1 '46 160w

Library J 72:225 F 1 '47 30w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 F 23 '47 230w

"Miss Fenwick writes with the curious detachment of a very old lady, who still retains a certain acuity—but is too tired to analyze, too tired to feel. What is most sadening about this bloodless novel is that Miss Fenwick is actually a very young writer." Patricia Page

N Y Times p18 Mr 2 '47 270w

"The author, a very young woman with a restraint rare in youthful writers, makes you sense more than she tells about a wealthy St. Louis household that is comfortably affectionate on the surface and furiously disunited underneath. A series of quite ordinary events, made sharply significant by their revelation of character, precipitates a climax that Miss Fenwick handles very neatly."

+ New Yorker 22:97 F 8 '47 110w

"Miss Fenwick has gotten everything out of it, with the sure, bare touch of understatement. It seems to me an excellent and beautiful treatment of a demanding subject." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 Ap 19 '47 550w

"Quietly written, with even less 'plot' and hardly more fictional fireworks than might be found in an Elizabeth Bowen story, it is perceptive, skillful, and now and then witty... A modest, sometimes wan little book, The Long Wing is unlikely to cause much ruckus in the lending libraries, but it is as able a first novel as the season has shown thus far."

+ Time 49:104 F 10 '47 400w

FERBER, EDNA. One basket; thirty-one short stories. 581p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

47-30149

Contents: The woman who tried to be good; The gay old dog; That's marriage; Farmer in the dell; Un morro doo pang; Long distance; The maternal feminine; Old Man Minick; The afternoon of a faun; Old Lady Mandle; Gigolo; Home girl; The sudden sixties; Classified; Holiday; Our very best people; Mother knows best; Every other Thursday; Blue blood; Hey! Taxi!; The light touch; They brought their women; Glamour; Keep it holy; Blue glasses; Trees die at the top; Nobody's in town; No room at the inn; You're not the type; Grandma isn't playing; The barn cuts off the view.

Booklist 43:223 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by Nelson Olmsted

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 F 16 '47 420w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 7 '47 240w

Kirkus 14:607 D 1 '46 180w

"The stories in 'One Basket,' a selective rather than an inclusive collection, are dated from 1913 down to 1942, the latest one being a frankly propagandistic tale of the home front during World War II. Written originally for magazine publication—though, with a single exception, never to order—they reflect with integrity their author's personal slant on life. Compassionate, sometimes astringent, often, though by no means always, with a happy ending, they reveal her pride in the growth of America, the strength of the roots that bind her to her native Northwest, her understanding of simple people." Jennings Rice

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 F 16 '47 800w

"Selected by the author herself from over a hundred published items, the stories in this volume will repay the closest study of the fledgling who would go and do likewise. For the confirmed novel-reader who shuns slick paper, they are vigorous examples of an author at the top of her form—a virtuoso lightness of phrasing, a shrewd ear for dialogue, plus real understanding of the standard problems Americans have faced in the past and must go on facing. Those who have found Miss Ferber's full-length output a bit ciné-colored of late should take pleasure in rediscovering her at her best." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p3 F 16 '47 470w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 23 '47 200w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 30:32 My 10 '47 70w

"In several ways, this is an extremely interesting collection of short stories. It throws much light on the development of Miss Ferber's style; it shows her almost constant concern with the fears, the frustrations, and the unromantic yet dramatic moments in the lives of the humble, the insignificant, and the poor; and finally, it gives repeated evidence of its author's awareness of the similarities and differences between the Americas of which she writes."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:240 S '47 210w

Wis Lib Bul 43:55 Mr '47

FERGUSON, JOHN HENRY, and MCHENRY, DEAN EUGENE. American federal government. 818p maps $3.75 McGraw

342.73 U.S.—Politics and government—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 47-4053

"This book is offered as a contribution to those who covet new and fresh materials for teaching, studying, and understanding the American Federal government. A larger volume, soon to appear under the title of The American System of Government, will encompass government at all levels—national, state, and local. The federal section, here presented, is intended primarily for use in college courses." (Pref) Selected references at end of each chapter. List of visual aids. Index.

"On the whole, the book is as readable and as good as almost any other text now available. It has the usual number of errors in fact, some of which have been perpetuated so long in introductory texts that it is too bad they cannot become fact." R. F. Harvey

+ Ann Am Acad 254:183 N '47 370w

Booklist 44:4 S 1 '47

FERGUSON, WALTER DEWEY. Journey through the Bible; with an introd. by Walter Russell Bowie. 364p $3.50 Harper

220.95 Bible. Whole—History of biblical events 47-30954

An introduction to the Bible for the adult reader. In his first chapter the author says: "It is the purpose of these chapters to examine some of the large sections of the Bible as critics examine books today in the hope that new readers may be attracted to the Book of Books and that veterans may catch a new zest in the old enterprise."

Booklist 44:177 Ja 15 '48

"No truer brief description of this book can be written than that given in the first sentence of the publisher's blurb on the jacket: 'What the better Bible story books do for the young reader, this fascinating book will do for the average mature reader.' It is essentially a Bible story book for intelligent grownups, and it is fascinating." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 64:1303 O 29 '47 280w

Kirkus 15:671 D 1 '47 250w

"Valuable addition to the many books about the Bible written for laymen. Highly recommended, especially for public libraries." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 72:1188 S 1 '47 110w

FERGUSON, HARVEY. People and power; a study of political behavior in America. 241p $3 Morrow

973.91 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Liberty. Politics, Practical 47-31126

"Here is a book which tells us how we may continue to develop big government and still preserve and extend both democracy and liberty. According to Harvey Fergusson—novelist and author of such books as 'Modern Man' and 'Home in the West'—the basic fact of political life is group conflict and compromise. He points out that it is natural for people in similar economic and social circumstances, on the basis of interest and needs, to organize voluntary associations to influence and control government." N Y Times

Kirkus 15:487 S 1 '47 240w

"His neglect of the dramatic element in the acquisition and exercise of power is the one great omission in Mr. Fergusson's work. He declares flatly that organization is power and power is organization. That is not quite true. Dramaturgy is power, also, and dramaturgy rests not upon logic, deductive, inductive or intuitive, but upon emotion. . . To the extent that it is guilty of this sin of omission, 'People and Power' is misleading, but for all that it is a valuable treatise." G. W. Johnson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 S 21 '47 1000w

"The fundamental idea in this book—that group conflict and compromise is the very essence of politics—is, of course, not new. . . Nevertheless, this book makes a distinct contribution because of its systematic approach, the logical lengths to which it goes, its practical application of the basic idea to present-day realities, its often eloquent and epigrammatic style." W. G. Carleton

+ — N Y Times p7 O 5 '47 850w

"Mr. Fergusson opines that there is much room for study of political behavior in the United States from the standpoint of the individual, as distinct from the commonly institutional approach. And, for all the substance of his book, there is still plenty of room. . . Perhaps the book's best chapter is on 'The Logic of Everyday Life,' in which he appeals to us to do our thinking in an inductive practical way, confining ourselves to the things about which we know, instead of in a deductive, abstracted and bigoted way." Luther Nichols

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 21 '47 950w

FERRE, NELS FREDERICK SOLOMON. Evil and the Christian faith. (Reason and the Christian faith) 173p $2.50 Harper

233.2 Good and evil, Christianity 47-2122

"This is the second book of the series which Dr. Ferré plans to be his lifework: 'Reason and the Christian Faith.' As the Professor of Christian Theology at Andover Newton Theological Seminary, the author is fast gaining the reputation of being one of America's most influential theologians. 'This volume gives the very heart of my theology,' he says, 'the meaning of experience, history and nature in relation to God's eternal purpose.' Here is a modern theologian coming to grips with the ancient and bewildering problem of evil, discussing evil and freedom, evil and sin, evil and nature, God and suffering, evil and history, evil and the ultimate." (Kirkus) Index.

Christian Century 64:495 Ap 16 '47 10w

"Christ alone solved the problem of evil for himself and for us by his full surrender in life and death in order to be raised to the fullness of life. 'The problem of evil has always been my central problem.' Well, here is a carefully reasoned solution by a young man intensely absorbed by his theological world and vigorously challenged by its central problem." A. L. Murray

+ Churchman 161:19 Jl '47 80w

"Ferré's discussion is a significant religious treatment of the problems and deserves serious consideration. His warm and confident piety is profound and inclusive. His desire to synthesize faith and reason in a practical whole-response is impressive. And his insight that the problems cannot be solved on an impersonal plane is thoroughly vindicated. And yet, there are several persistent difficulties which prevent his argument from being fully persuasive. In the first place, he arbitrarily identifies the speculative with the philosophical approach and then subordinates speculation and philosophy to the existential or practical religious viewpoint. It may be argued, on the other hand, that 'faith' for Ferré is more speculative in its method of handling the attributes of God, for example, than is empirical philosophy. Indeed, Ferré rather summarily dismisses the level of fact and of the 'here and now actual.' Can the existential perspective dare to do this?" W. G. Mueider

+ — Crozer Q 25:64 Ja '48 2900w

"This is definitely a book for theologians and philosophers. Others will find it hard reading."

Kirkus 15:159 Mr 15 '47 120w

FETTER, ELIZABETH (HEAD) (HANNAH LEES, pseud). Dark device. 261p $2.50 Harper

47-11294

Mystery story.

Booklist 44:109 N 15 '47

Kirkus 15:441 Ag 15 '47 80w

New Repub 117:33 O 20 '47 50w

"We recommend this mystery to fans who could do with a quick general view of Freudian doctrines and can't be bothered to take it straight. . . The story is well ahead of most of the so-called psychological offerings of last year's plague." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29 N 5 '47 190w

"Miss Lees' clever ear for dialogue and her shrewd sense of timing have produced an enjoyable evening's reading. Were her continuity and psychiatric puzzles worked out more thoroughly her story would have been still better." J. G.

+ N Y Times p36 N 2 '47 150w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 26 '47 150w

"Very good."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:41 O 25 '47 40w

FEUCHTWANGER, LION. Proud destiny [tr. by Moray Firth]. 625p $3.50 Viking

Franklin, Benjamin—Fiction 47-30905

Historical novel dealing with the years Benjamin Franklin spent in Paris trying to get Louis XVI and his ministers to send help to the American revolutionists.

Reviewed by R. M. Gay

Atlantic 180:170 N '47 550w

Booklist 44:50 O 1 '47

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 S 14 '47 1700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

"A long and leisurely book, history absorbingly presented but without romantic fictionalization. As history it is meticulously fashioned, with so convincingly detailed a picture of the court of Louis XVI and Antoinette, so specific a rationalization of the machinations in favor of and against participation in the American cause that one feels that Feuchtwanger must have had an observer on the inside."

+ Kirkus 15:437 Ag 15 '47 260w

"Strongly recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:1193 S 1 '47 110w

"As a novel this account of Benjamin Franklin's visit to Louis XVI's court is tedious, cheap, and insufferably long." Irving Howe

— Nation 165:348 O 4 '47 800w

"In the first line of his new book, Lion Feuchtwanger intones: 'Here begins the novel Proud Destiny.' After 625 pages of close type, he admits: 'Here ends the . . . novel Proud Destiny. . . Those are the two statements in the book with which no one should quarrel. What comes between them is another matter.'" John Farrelly

— New Repub 117:31 S 22 '47 320w

"There are objections that might be raised against 'Proud Destiny.' . . But how easy it is to overlook such defects—if defects they are —in a book that has no dark, savage, hellbound hero and no dark, wanton, hellbound heroine—no pair, in short, whose bedroom encounters can make wars pause and great events cool their heels in the anteroom. What are a few flaws beside the virtues of a really distinguished historical novel that renders unto history the things that are history's?" Milton Rugoff

FEUCHTWANGER, LION—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 S 14 '47 1050w

"A rarely excellent work of humanized history and high entertainment, brilliant in all of its component parts." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p3 S 14 '47 1800w

"A long-winded novel. . . Why Mr. Feuchtwanger has thought fit to go over this bit of history, which has already been recounted so many times, is not clear."

— New Yorker 23:100 S 20 '47 120w

"The creation of the character of Franklin is extremely well done. It is a creation that continues pretty much throughout the book. In fact, it isn't entirely completed until the last page in the book. . . The characterization is superb. The characters as human beings soar freely from their burden of history." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 28 '47 800w

"Costumes, customs, and all the other technicolor paraphernalia are relegated by Mr. Feuchtwanger to their proper place and proportions. And instead of having his heroes dash through continents and over the seven seas from one adventurous incident to another, the author of 'Proud Destiny' accomplishes the feat of building up suspense and making the reader feel the mighty pulse of history in motion in spite of the fact that the most important of his characters, Benjamin Franklin, plays throughout the whole novel an extremely slow game, waiting and waiting for the time to become ripe for the Great Alliance between America and France. But perhaps it is not in spite but because of this admirably described genius for waiting that the story gains suspense and momentum as it progresses." F. C. Weiskopf

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 S 13 '47 1250w

Springf'd Republican p9B N 9 '47 550w
Time 50:104 S 22 '47 600w

FIELD, JAMES A. Japanese at Leyte gulf: the Shō operation. 162p il $2.50 Princeton univ. press

940.545 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations 47-4956

"A detailed description of the Shō Operation, Japan's last, desperate naval gamble to escape defeat. Mr. Field, after V-J Day, interrogated many of the Japanese commanders involved in the four-day battle for Leyte Gulf, and he records the enemy's view of what may have been the last great naval battle in history. . . Many maps and illustrations." New Yorker

"This book is a valuable study of what the author calls 'by any standard the greatest sea fight of all time.' Whether the greatest or not, the battle for Leyte Gulf is unquestionably the biggest, probably the most complex, and bids fair to become one of the most controversial sea battles on record. Of the many historians who will write of it, none is likely to enjoy more advantages than Mr. Field, who not only took part in the battle, but a year later participated in interrogating Japanese officers in responsible command." C. V. Woodward

+ Am Hist R 53:82 O '47 650w

Booklist 44:11 S 1 '47

"A few months ago Mr. C. Vann Woodward brought out a remarkable book on the battle for Leyte Gulf, in which careful research, straight thinking and a highly literate style were happily blended to produce something like a definitive work. The present volume annotates, expands and in some cases corrects the earlier one. . . Mr. Field has furnished one more document in the demonstration that the history of war is not the narrative of events but of personalities in action." Fletcher Pratt

+ N Y Times p3 J1 6 '47 800w

"Mr. Field gets pretty technical here and there and has little literary grace, but the story of the suicide of a whole fleet is dramatic and significant."

+ — New Yorker 23:80 Je 28 '47 100w

Reviewed by Stanleigh Arnold

San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 14 '47 500w

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:275 S '47 260w

FIELD, PETER, pseud. Trail from Needle Rock; a Powder Valley western. (Jefferson house publication) 220p $2 Morrow

47-18371

Western story.

Booklist 43:348 J1 1 '47

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30
My 25 '47 70w

FIELDS, VICTOR ALEXANDER. Training the singing voice; an analysis of the working concepts contained in recent contributions to vocal pedagogy. 337p $4 King's crown press

784.93 Singing and voice culture 47-2599

"A compendium of vocal science, art and opinion. It does not deal with interpretation or musicianship but covers vocal production as understood by many singers and pedagogues. In the index you find reference to practically any aspect of the subject, and in the body of the work the authorities for the various interpretations and conclusions are given. Some sixty-two pages of Annotated Bibliography locate the sources for us—books and magazine articles on the subject of voice published within the period from 1928 to 1942." (Library J) Index.

"A basic volume for teachers and students of singing, likely to prove indispensable." P. L. Miller

+ Library J 72:640 Ap 15 '47 100w

"Dr. Fields gives the floor to each faction in turn, then gravely counts the votes and posts the results. Obviously no conclusions are reached; but the symposium is stimulating and the moderator unobtrusive." P. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 29 '47 200w

School & Society 65:367 My 17 '47 10w

FINCH, ANNE. Essay on marriage. 35p $1 Rinehart

821

47-1136

A poem embodying comments on modern love and marriage by a young English poet.

Kirkus 14:613 D 1 '46 110w

"The book fails for two reasons. First, the author is unable to sustain her happiest tone. Insight is constantly yielding to rhetoric, persuasiveness to flat statement. Secondly, she is not sufficiently in control of her medium. Except for a brief introduction, the piece is cast in octosyllabic couplets—an excellent idea, evoking the traditional tone of satiric and didactic verse, but a dangerous idea if the metric gets out of hand. And Miss Finch's does." Dudley Pitts

— + N Y Times p26 F 23 '47 400w

"An unpretentious but refreshingly crisp and adult survey, in well-written satiric couplets, of modern love."

+ New Yorker 22:87 Ja 11 '47 70w

"If Anne Finch does not find a wholly satisfactory answer to the question she poses, it may be because the evidence is outside her carefully chosen limits. To her, marriages are not made in heaven, but by collective bargaining. The lack of the spiritual leaves a large void in a poem which reveals fine talent, and keen philosophic wit." A. M. Sullivan

Sat R of Lit 30:37 Mr 22 '47 60w

FINCH, EDITH. Carey Thomas of Bryn Mawr. 342p il $3.50 Harper

B or 92 Thomas, Martha Carey 47-11592
Biography of this American educator whose life was dedicated to the task of showing that women were the mental equals of men, and entitled to education. She was first dean of Bryn Mawr college and then its president for nearly thirty years. Index.

Booklist 44:182 Ja 15 '48

"A thorough and painstaking record of the life of Bryn Mawr's second president."
+ Kirkus 15:458 Ag 15 '47 130w

"Her sex will find great inspiration in this well-presented biography of a notable woman. . . Edith Finch, drawing on subject's diaries, salty family letters, the recollections of associates, relatives and friends, sets down with authority yet with impartiality the turbulent course of this indomitable educator." Marion King

+ Library J 72:1265 S 15 '47 130w
School & Society 66:384 N 15 '47 30w
Wis Lib Bul 43:173 D '47

FINE, BENJAMIN. Our children are cheated; the crisis in American education. 244p $3 Holt

370.973 Education—U.S. 47-11477

"Reprint, somewhat expanded, of a series of twelve articles from The New York Times, February 10-21, 1947, previously reprinted as a ten-cent pamphlet (now out of print) titled The Crisis in American Education. Fine, education editor of the Times holds a Ph.D. from Columbia Teachers College. Here he reports on the findings of the six-month survey he conducted for his newspaper. These reveal the serious effects which the acute teacher shortage, lowered morale, inadequate equipment and loss of confidence have had on the American public school system." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:100 N 15 '47

Reviewed by D. J. Heffernan
Chicago Sun Book Week p8X D 21 '47 450w

"While most of his remarks are directed to primary and secondary schools, many of them are pertinent to colleges and universities, and he makes it plain that there is similar need there for improvement in finances and qualifications. The importance of the question is well put in his final word: 'To make democracy work, it is necessary that we maintain a strong system of free public schools. Nothing less will do.' Dr. Fine's contribution to the task is a praiseworthy one." Roy Hilbrook

+ Current Hist 13:354 D '47 400w

"A serious, shocking exposé of an all-affecting situation, this will probably be read only in educational circles, though it should reach a much wider market."

+ Kirkus 15:422 Ag 1 '47 180w

"The impact of these well-timed articles upon public thinking during the critical days last spring was significant." H. A. Lancour
+ Library J 72:1188 S 1 '47 130w

Reviewed by H. M. Jones
N Y Times p10 O 26 '47 650w

Reviewed by W. R. White
San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 14 '47 650w

Reviewed by Rudolf Neuburger
School & Society 67:14 Ja 3 '48 750w

"In 'Our Children are Cheated' Benjamin Fine has taken a first and most important step toward . . . making the public face up to its educational responsibilities. The book should be required reading for all Americans." M. S. Lewisohn

+ Survey G 36:705 D '47 500w
Wis Lib Bul 43:169 D '47

FINER, HERMAN. America's destiny. 407p $5 Macmillan

940.55 World politics. U.S.—Foreign policy 47-12363

"Author's thesis is that as the one great power it is America's responsibility to develop a peaceful world. He discusses our difficult position in an aggregation of nations, and the several means of working toward the goal; views the current stress and strain as revealed through United Nations assemblages and emphasizes the absolute need for full mutual confidence and agreement, open negotiations, elimination of fear and suspicion to reach the true basis of common grounds for security." (Library J) Index.

"An admirable book. . . . Finer has made a notable contribution to the literature of power politics and world peace." Kenneth Colegrove
+ Chicago Sun Book Week D 2 '47 450w

"Here is a tremendous book for brave readers in a time of crisis." K. M. Chworowsky
Churchman 162:17 Ja 15 '48 180w
Kirkus 15:523 S 15 '47 120w

"A book to be studied remembering that individuals count and can control national action if determined to establish peace—yet that the price of peace is the cost of continuing power. Should help the reader to clarify his thinking by analyzing the alternatives so well presented." A. B. Lindsay

+ Library J 72:1465 O 15 '47 140w

"This is a long book, which might have benefited by considerable editorial pruning. The main lines of the argument are sometimes obscured by masses of illustrative factual details. And although Professor Finer can express himself vividly and pungently, his style is often clumsy and occasionally ungrammatical. These weaknesses of presentation seem especially regrettable in view of the quite unusual value of what Professor Finer has to say." H. B. Parkes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9
Ja 18 '48 900w

"Herman Finer's book deserves the widest attention. In it Dr. Finer, Professor of Political Science at the University of Chicago, gives us the ripe fruits of long reflection on a subject that outweighs in practical importance any other in the whole range of our national interests. He has the competence that comes from thorough scholarship, an unflinching sincerity, and a wide experience of political affairs. His sense of crisis gives a sharp edge to his words, and while they may not always be aptly chosen they are always significant." R. M. MacIver

+ N Y Times p4 D 7 '47 1500w

"Professor Finer puts his case well and writes lucidly, if didactically."

+ New Yorker 23:93 D 20 '47 150w

Reviewed by Asher Brynes

— Sat R of Lit 30:16 D 13 '47 1400w

FINK, DONALD G. Radar engineering. 644p il $7 McGraw

621.38 Radar 47-2969

"Engineering text for electronic engineers treating radar, components, circuits and structures used in radar equipment, including description of military radar systems, showing practical possibilities of radar as a navigation aid with exact necessary details on how to design equipment for radio detecting and ranging of objects." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 70w

"Material which was highly classified during the war and could not be revealed to unauthorized persons without liability of heavy penalties is here given in detail. The author is a well known writer on electronic engineering who was connected during the war with the radiation laboratory of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, chief center of radar development." James Stokley

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21
My 18 '47 150w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:36 Ap '47

FINK, D. G.—Continued

"Although many of the techniques described will be found in the numerous recent articles describing particular contributions, and in several books on special techniques such as servomechanisms and microwave circuits and propagation, the features of these important to radar are here summarized and coordinated with each other in a single volume."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 3:317 S '47 240w

FINLAY, LUCILE. The coat I wore. 354p $3
Scribner

47-2343

Historical novel about a little-known aspect of the American Revolution, British sympathizers in Louisiana. The hero is Colonel Hastings who leads a small group of settlers from the Carolinas to Natchez. He returns to England for help and at the same time rescues his illegitimate son from a cruel mother.

"The story is many faceted melodrama, fairly superficial on score of characterization and plot."

Kirkus 15:44 Ja 15 '47 170w

"Part historical novel, part modern-manner triangle. Recommended." L. R. Miller
+ Library J 72:462 Mr 15 '47 110w

"The hero of Miss Finlay's first novel lacks the stereotyped swagger and glamour, which is a virtue in itself."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
Ap 6 '47 270w

"Miss Finlay's achievement in spinning a good tale at the same time she is spinning good history is the more apparent if we realize that even the goings and comings of her protagonist are dictated by considerations of actuality. Neither Miss Finlay nor her publisher says so, but Anthony Hastings is a more than reasonable facsimile of a very real Anthony Hutchins, who, in public life at least, did all the things narrated by Miss Finlay. . . It is perhaps not a bad thing to fight the Revolution from the other side for a change and to be reminded that even in Seventy-six not all the courage and probity were on one side." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 16 '47 750w

Wis Lib Bul 43:68 Ap '47

FINN, WILLIAM JOSEPH. Sharps and flats in five decades; an autobiography. 342p $3.75
Harper

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-11837

Autobiography of the Catholic priest who was the founder and long-time conductor of the Paulist choristers. Index.

Booklist 44:171 Ja 1 '48

"In fascinating language, formal and informal, serious and witty, sublime and simple, subtle and frank, the book takes you into the recesses of a musician's spirit." J. C. Selner

+ Cath World 166:277 D '47 650w

"All told in breezy style, with spice and humor which keeps it from being heavy. His musings about people and music—here and abroad—are entertaining. But the market for this rather specialized sort of musical memoir is small."

+ Kirkus 15:489 S 1 '47 120w

"The audience for this book will be found chiefly among Catholic lay persons of musical inclination and to them it may be highly recommended." Leonard Burkat

+ Library J 72:1272 S 15 '47 80w

FINNEGAN, ROBERT. Bandaged nude. 242p
$2 Simon & Schuster

47-1677

Detective story.

"The narrative itself is light and swift, absorbing in spite of a tendency to fray at the last. The first half of the novel is exceptionally well planned, easy and teasing. Thereafter its way is still able if more conventional." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 30 '47
180w

Kirkus 14:560 N 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
Mr 23 '47 270w

"The story abounds in lively action and good sleuthing." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p38 Mr 23 '47 140w

"Mr. Finnegan has something affirmative and warming to say about people, and he says it here even better than before." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 30 '47
120w

"Plenty of movement and violent activity in tale of vanished paintings and artists' loose lives in California—but it rambles."

Sat R of Lit 30:68 Ap 12 '47 50w

FINNEY, ROSS LEE. Game of harmony. 167p
$3 Harcourt

781.3 Harmony

47-30268

The principles of harmony set forth for junior and senior high school pupils, by a composer who is also a professor of music. "Care has been taken throughout to select and organize material with the child's capacity constantly in mind. A certain amount of background is assumed. The ability to read music is taken for granted. A year or two of instrumental training is certainly advisable." (p.166)

Booklist 43:297 My 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '47

"Young musicians with an inclination toward composition will find here the rules of harmony, stated in terms of their understanding. Professor Finney, himself a composer, believes that a reader who has followed his directions should be able to write simple melodies for voice or piano. Many musical illustrations clarify this stimulating arrangement of harmonic materials." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:222 My '47 70w

"An engaging and informative book."

+ Kirkus 15:166 Mr 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 72:641 Ap 15 '47 110w

Sat R of Lit 30:28 Je 14 '47 40w

FINNEY, THEODORE MITCHELL. History of music. new rev ed 720p $4.50; text ed $3.50
Harcourt

780.9 Music—History and criticism 47-6193

"Mr. Finney has brought his history of music to date by means of a careful revision. An important addition has been the expanding of the history of American music from one to four chapters. The eight parts into which the book is divided are prefaced by a prologue, which gives an idea of the historical background of the period under consideration, as well as a sense of the time spirit. Rather than placing the emphasis on individual composers, Mr. Finney follows the evolution of music itself, its growth and development. Each chapter has its own bibliography." (San Francisco Chronicle) Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1935.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 10 '47
120w

School & Society 66:128 Ag 16 '47 10w

FIREY, WALTER IRVING. Land use in central Boston. 367p maps $5 Harvard univ. press

333.77 Real property. Boston—Social conditions 47-781

"This study is an incisive analysis and criticism of the spatial theories of human ecologists based on data drawn from selected areas in central Boston. The author identifies three classes of spatial theories: (1) idealized descriptive schemes, including E. W. Burgess' concentric theory and Homer Hoyt's sector theory; (2) empirically rationalistic theories, represented in the work of R. M. Hurd, R. M. Haig, R. E. Park, R. D. McKenzie, J. A. Quinn, and others; and (3) methodologically rationalistic theories as put forth by Alfred Weber, Oskar Engländer, and Andreas Predöhl." Am Soc R

"This excellent study of land utilization, originally prepared as a doctoral thesis, deserves a place on the required reading list of every human ecologist. It contains penetrating concrete analyses of selected areas in central Boston, which analyses are valuable in themselves, but whose deeper significance lies in their use as a basis for negative criticisms of traditional points of view and as a springboard for positive formulations of ecological theory. . . . If the reader of this volume will focus his attention on its concrete and constructive aspects, he may discover a significant core of theory on which most, if not all, human ecologists can agree. It is on such contributions that the sound development of ecological theory must depend." J. A. Quinn

+ Am J Soc 53:154 S '47 1000w

"Land Use in Central Boston is a significant contribution to the literature of human ecology and to that of urban land economics as well. The author's careful analysis of specific processes of land use distribution yields much valuable knowledge. . . . All who read the book are certain to look to Dr. Firey for further contributions to that development." A. H. Hawley

+ Am Soc R 12:358 Je '47 1600w

"This book falls far short of the development of a general theory of land use and a reconstruction of ecological science—though such claims appear both on the dust cover and, by implication, in the text. But the author does present an interesting description and interpretation of land use in Boston which extends our understanding of the nonrational factors in land-use determination." R. U. Ratcliff

J Pol Econ 55:581 D '47 900w

"Mr. Firey presents in this book a very careful study of the ecological pattern of the city of Boston. The study of Boston is used as a vehicle to present a thesis that land use is determined by social values in various ways which have been largely ignored by other students of ecology. In so doing, Mr. Firey gives a very good, though hardly fair, summary of ecological theories. . . . The book is a commendable effort and makes a worthwhile contribution to the science of human ecology. However, it will prove a provocative and perhaps irritating book to many students of ecology because it makes most of the mistakes so often made in presenting a supposedly new thesis." H. W. Gilmore

+ Social Forces 26:230 D '47 1500w

U S Quarterly BkI 3:292 S '47 360w

FISCHER, BRUNO. More deaths than one. 240p $2.50 Ziff-Davis

47-24774

Detective story.

"By devoting a chapter to each of the suspects and the detective, Bruno Fischer has contrived seven different and contradictory views of this homicidal enigma. This innovation is both refreshing and successful in that it reveals the working of each suspect's mind yet still keeps the culprit a shrouded specter until the last chapter." Jack Glick

N Y Times p19 JI 27 '47 250w

"A novel outstanding for its middle-class realism, its understanding of the petty complexity of human emotions, its adroit handling of a Freudian motive, and above all for its full-length, three-dimensional characterization of a woman not unworthy of George Kelly." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 JI 20 '47 140w

"Although practically all characters are outrageously overdrawn and sleuth is no great shakes, story holds interest by unflagging exuberance."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 16 '47 40w

FISCHER, HELENE. Skiing . . . east and west, photographed [photographic collaboration by Erita Herrán; text by James Laughlin; layout and typography by Alvin Lustig]. [112p] $5 Hastings house

796.93 Skis and ski running. Photographic books 47-834

Collection of photographs showing ski runs and skiing in various parts of the United States. The photographer is a native of Switzerland and started her own skiing as a child. Captions are by ski writer James Laughlin.

+ Kirkus 15:96 F 1 '47 70w

"Miss Fischer's pictures are reproduced well. It is unfortunate that their effect is often marred by scrappy and undistinguished make-up, and an excessive, if not wanton, use of white space. Nevertheless such picture collections are a joy to the skier." Digory Venn

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 F 23 '47 380w

"An admirable volume. . . . A superb collection of photographs of the winter world of snow, sun and speed." Frank Elkins

+ N Y Times p40 Mr 2 '47 90w

"An avid skier and expert photographer, Miss Fischer has made her book one well worth having." J. G. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 16 '47 100w

FISCHER, JOHN. Why they behave like Russians [Eng title: The scared men of the Kremlin]. 262p $2.75 Harper

914.7 Russia—Social conditions. National characteristics, Russian. Communism—Russia 47-30248

"This book is an outgrowth of a study of Russian history and power relationships which began at Oxford in 1933. . . . The on-the-ground material was gathered during an assignment of slightly more than two months with an UNRRA mission to the Ukraine in the spring of 1946. These impressions were supplemented by later investigations in Berlin, London, and Washington. . . . The book is not intended to be either a defense or a criticism of the Soviet system. Rather it is an attempt to estimate how that system is likely to behave under the pressure of a new and still unstable balance of power." Foreword

Reviewed by Bernard Pares
Atlantic 180:120 JI '47 410w

Booklist 43:270 My 1 '47

"This a very attractive and readable book. . . . Mr. Fischer's book, in fact, sketches out the essential basis of the Marshall plan." F. H. Underhill

+ Canadian Forum 27:212 D '47 420w

Reviewed by Louis Gottschalk

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Ap 27 '47 950w

"This book will go unusually far to help Americans understand the Russians. It has the benefit of some of the changes and corrections suggested by Mr. MacDuffie, who saw the text in proof. Mr. Fischer has set a good mark. Let us hope that any books by other members of the Commission as well as the UNRRA reports themselves, will be even more informative, accurate, and readable." DeWitt John

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 1 '47 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 JI '47

Reviewed by Edward Skillin

Commonweal 46:123 My 16 '47 350w

Foreign Affairs 26:228 O '47 70w

Kirkus 15:179 Mr 15 '47 320w

"A delightfully readable and honestly informative book. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:635 Ap 15 '47 110w

FISCHER, JOHN—Continued

Reviewed by M. P. Price

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 15 '47 650w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 164:484 Ap 26 '47 1000w

"His book is strikingly objective, fair-minded and sympathetic." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 116:31 Ap 28 '47 1200w

"Among books on Soviet Russia this volume is one of the most readable as well as one of the most unprejudiced that has appeared since the close of the war. Its descriptive chapters are lively and colorful, packed with amusing character sketches and personal anecdotes, and they also reveal both shrewd observation and penetrating insight. . . Here is a book, in short, that deserves and should have the widest possible reading by all Americans concerned with their own country's foreign policy in these troubled times." F. R. Dulles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ap 27 '47 1350w

Reviewed by H. E. Salisbury

N Y Times p1 Ap 27 '47 1000w

"A very instructive, quietly written book of observations on the U.S.S.R."

+ New Yorker 23:118 My 3 '47 180w

Reviewed by Marvin Sargent

San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 15 '47 800w

"John Fischer takes a middle-of-the-road position in his book 'Why They Behave Like Russians.' He has not weighted it heavily in favor of the Soviets as have the Webbs or Ella Winter or Lauterbach or Albert Rhys Williams. On the other hand he does not reveal the extreme bitterness and one-sidedness of Barmine and Kravchenko. On this account his book will undoubtedly receive serious criticism from extremes on both the right and left." Julien Bryan

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 Ap 26 '47 1350w

Discussion by Cord Meyer

Sat R of Lit 30:14 N 1 '47 750w

Reviewed by Paul Winterton

Spec 178:534 My 9 '47 850w

Springfd Union p3 J1 5 '47 180w

Time 49:105 My 5 '47 1800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p247 My 24 '47 480w

Wis Lib Bul 43:95 Je '47

"In addition to recording his personal impressions, Mr. Fischer has attempted an interpretation of Soviet domestic and foreign policies. Many of his judgments I believe to be correct and well-founded. . . On the other hand, many students of Russian affairs would question the validity of his assertion that 'the peasants have profited from the Revolution more than any other group.' And when he speaks of how the average Soviet citizen feels towards his government or how 'the whole country' reacted to this or that event, the reader naturally asks on what evidence he bases his conclusions. Neither does one know by what means he could ascertain the existence of 'sharp divisions of opinion within the Politbureau,' to which he refers as if it were an established fact." Michael Karpovich

+ Yale R n s 37:144 autumn '47 750w

FISCHER, LOUIS. Gandhi and Stalin; two signs at the world's crossroads. 183p $2.50 Harper

940.55 World politics. Stalin, Iosif. Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand 47-11024

